Am J Soc 59:591 My '54 650w

"The lack of agreement on subject matter, methods, and objectives of sociology (by the authors of various chapters) and the failure to distinguish between theology, social philosophy, social action, and social science make criticisms of the theories presented less noteworthy than they might have been. . . . One of the positive contributions to sociological theory which might be expected to further agreement, the realistic approach to the study of society, receives little attention either from the historical or the critical viewpoint. Bibliographical references not common in other textbooks on sociological theory, however, should stimulate further investigation of the possibilities in a realistic orientation." J. M. Finley

Am Soc R 18:728 D '53 260w

"The book is a collaborative enterprise. Each treatment, however, is scholarly, comprehensive, and well-written. The last chapter on 'The Future of Sociological Theory' is a precise and accurate account of present trends and careful extrapolation of future outlooks. For its scope it is a good book and should be useful for students in other than Catholic institutions." J. B. Gittler

+ Social Forces 32:198 D '53 400w

MIKESELL, RAYMOND FRECH. Foreign exchange in the postwar world. 658p $5 Twentieth century fund

332.45 Foreign exchange

54-7606

"This study is the first detailed examination of trade and financial policies and practices, and currency and exchange controls as they have developed throughout the world in the postwar years." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"I find relatively little to disagree with in Mikesell's analysis of the causes of the pattern of restrictions that confines the world's trade, in his stress on the need for structural adjustments, or even in his statement of the underlying requirements for these adjustments. Is he not, however, unduly cautious in his approach to convertibility, especially if convertibility of sterling and the leading European currencies were accompanied by the adoption of flexible exchange rates? . . . A more significant issue is whether, with the rapid increase in population in the underdeveloped countries, increased domestic production of foodstuffs can meet requirements. . . . But these criticisms are relatively minor. Mikesell has written a scholarly book which sheds much light on an important and complex subject." P. T. Ellsworth

MIKESELL, R. F.—Continued

+ — Am Econ R 44:975 D '54 1200w

"The author's remarkable enterprise merits the warmest praise, and the sustained lucidity of his writing will appeal to a wide audience of students and specialists." A. L. Horniker

+ Ann Am Acad 296:166 N '54 500w

Foreign Affairs 33:158 O '54 30w

MILHOUS, KATHERINE. Appolonia's valentine. [28p] col il $2 Scribner

54-7248

Picture-storybook about the children in a small Pennsylvania school who are making cut-out valentines. Appolonia, Apple for short, was very clumsy with scissors, but she could paint. The story shows how Apple made the prize Valentine. For ages 6 to 10.

Booklist 50:262 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:162 Ap '54 10w

"It would be hard to imagine a nicer valentine for a child than this book itself." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 F 7 '54 130w

"Children's librarians, storytellers, teachers—all know how welcome this will be. There never has been just the right book for Valentine's Day, but here it is at last, and well worth waiting for." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:30 F '54 150w

+ Kirkus 22:63 F 1 '54 100w

"Recommended." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:460 Mr 1 '54 80w

"It is a charming picture book, printed in lovely colors, sure to inspire a lot of lovely valentine making in 1954 and for years to come." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 31 '54 190w

N Y Times p22 Ja 31 '54 170w

"This is a distinguished picture-book."

+ Sat R 37:52 F 13 '54 250w

Wis Lib Bul 50:76 Mr '54

MILLAR, KENNETH (JOHN ROSS MACDONALD, pseud). Find a victim. 215p $2.75 Knopf 53-9478

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 1 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:349 Je 1 '54 90w

"The sexual dosages are more insistent than compulsive, the editorial attitudinizing a nervous tic, but the narrative is lively as a fox scurrying for shelter from the pack." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 5 '54 70w

"The writing is as incisive and perceptive as ever, and the action as forceful and fast-paced; and the plot is more powerful and personal than earlier Archer stories—a strange and haunting blend of professional crime and private psychological complexities. This is, in fact, so much more satisfactory, whether as a thriller or as a novel, than most other private-eye books that it seems to belong to an entirely different genre of its own." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 1 '54 230w

"Written with Macdonald's usual understanding of human tragedy, this nevertheless falls somewhat below his best work, since these particular people seem more sordid than pitiable." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 29 '54 90w

"Macdonald's blend of sex and sadism includes marijuana, incest and adultery. That the mixture stops well this side of disgust is a tribute to his nice sense of realism, an adult way of conveying that life is sometimes like this, but no need to leer at it."

Time 64:82 Jl 26 '54 270w

MILLAR, MARGARET (MRS KENNETH MILLAR). Wives and lovers. 308p $3 Random house

54-5961

A writer of mystery stories here gives a straight novel of love and hate, fidelity and betrayal, in a community of middle class people in a California coast town.

Kirkus 22:244 Ap 1 '54 90w

"When 'Sons and Lovers' analyzed the disharmonies of personal relations, the theories of Dr. Freud, of Vienna, were fairly esoteric. Now when Margaret Millar gives a knowledgeable treatment to the same theme, she is dealing in super-market platitudes. They are none the less worth saying." C. H. Tunstall

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 13 '54 270w

"A touching and amusing story." Lewis Vogler

+ N Y Times p13 My 30 '54 430w

"'Wives and Lovers' is not exactly a tragedy. If its dilemmas are resolved only temporarily or on the surface, that is how life actually works out, most of the time. For all its lightness of touch, it is not a comedy, except as all our blundering preoccupations are pitifully comic. It is simply real." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 28 '54 650w

MILLAY, EDNA ST VINCENT. Mine the harvest. 140p $3 Harper

811

54-6290

"Most of the poems in this posthumously published collection were written between 1939 and 1950, the year of the poet's death. In selecting and arranging them for publication, Norma Millay has tried to carry out her sister's wishes as far as possible. Some poems have seen magazine publication; others, taken from working notebooks, show signs of being in an unfinished state, with their exclamations, crowded rhymes, and imprecise phrasing." Booklist

Booklist 50:269; 337 Mr 15 '54; My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:183 My '54 50w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy

Cath World 179:478 S '54 250w

"In this posthumous collection of her work, not too happily edited by her sister, Norma Millay, the title, 'Mine the Harvest,' is a misnomer. These random, and too often relaxed, pieces are the pale stubble, with here and there a tuft of flowers, from fields already gleaned. Her harvest was in the early books and the often magical poems. The poems in this volume have the old lineaments but not the old life." J. S. Untermeyer

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 25 '54 390w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

"What an unforeseen, what an unpredictable pleasure is this volume of verse which Edna St. Vincent Millay was preparing for publication just prior to her death in 1950. Without doubt it will be the most distinguished volume of poems to be published this year."

+ Kirkus 22:171 Mr 1 '54 240w

"It has some of the old-time glory of the pure lyricist and only a few pieces which seem inadequate." G. D. McDonald

+ — Library J 79:1232 Je 15 '54 110w

"One is delighted to note in them that the save-the-world rhetoric of Miss Millay's poems of the thirties is largely gone from these. And especially delighted to find flashes of power. The talent, nevertheless, remains self-dramatizing." John Ciardi

+ — Nation 178:445 My 22 '54 400w

"These late poems, with the several earlier ones, give us in unmistakable utterance so much of Millay that almost in entirety she is here: the 'happy child' she was, though underlaid by dolor and the deep fatalistic somberness which was her inheritance; overlaid with wit; stiffened by staunchness to withstand the senses' never-ceasing shock." L. T. Nicholl

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 23 '54 750w

"On the whole, 'Mine the Harvest' is the finest of Edna Millay's books. It [is] edited by her sister, Norma Millay, who also contributes an informative preface. The clear sayings, the sure and unpretentious metrical technique, the singing lines bring the poet back from death in the full stature of her genius." Robert Hillyer

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 25 '54 700w

"Although the tone in general is melancholy and nostalgic, signs of a more energetic irony show up—in several sonnets and 'The Strawberry Shrub,' for example—and her true lyric talent, her moments of perception, and her love of human values are evident throughout."

+ New Yorker 30:104 My 29 '54 100w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 18 '54 90w

"Because they are her last poems, there is a poignance and a tragic significance about the volume which moves the reader even beyond some of the poems themselves. It is not, sad to say, all in all her best book. Whatever it was, as she grew older, that so often oppressed and gnarled the pure lyric burgeoning of her poetry, is evidenced here." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R 37:20 Je 5 '54 750w

"Like Whitman and Lawrence, she often gives the impression of thinking out loud, her thoughts falling into loose patterns of verse as if they were casually writing themselves. She is certainly more herself, and more truly lyrical, in freer verse than when using more conventional forms; but she lacks either Whitman's rhythmic power or Lawrence's piercing originality, and is frequently ill-disciplined or obscure. She is also open to charges of sentimentality and naivety, but these are redeemed by a nice irony and a warm human sympathy."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p674 O 22 '54 650w

Wis Lib Bul 50:131 My '54

MILLER, GEORGE LESLIE, Zirconium. (Metallurgy of the rarer metals) 382p il $7.50 Academic press

669.7 Zirconium 54-1044

"The broad scope of this book is indicated by the chapter titles. Each chapter is essentially a literature digest, with all important statements keyed to the accompanying bibliography. It is written in a compact style, with liberal use made of tabular presentation; consequently the subject is covered in considerably more detail than the number of pages might indicate. Addressed mainly to graduate metallurgists, it will prove valuable as both a survey and a reference volume on zirconium and its alloys. The author is associated with the research laboratories of Murex, Ltd." N Y New Tech Bks

"It is an up-to-date, exhaustive collection of information in readable form. Attention is called to the very good sections on physical properties, reactions with gases, zirconium alloys and particularly to the theoretical portions dealing with binary systems. This book should be of real value to all interested in the preparation and properties of zirconium. It is suitable for reference work or as a text for well advanced students." J. W. Marden

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:6213 D 5 '54 450w

Chem & Eng N 32:1267 Mr 29 '54 20w

"This book is sufficiently comprehensive and carefully written that it should be valuable to specialists in rare metal metallurgy. It is also clearly enough written to be useful to the novice." L. V. McCarty

+ Chem Eng 61:360 N '54 500w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:48 My '54

MILLER, HARRY. Communist menace in Malaya [Eng title: Menace in Malaya]. 248p il $3.50 Praeger

959.5 Malaya—Politics and government. Communism—Malaya

"Account of the Communist-created 'emergency' in Malaya. . . The most important section of the book is probably that dealing with the rise of the Malayan Communist Party—whose secretary-general proved to be a double if not treble agent and certainly betrayed most of the other leaders to the Japanese—and with the British government's dealings with it, both during and immediately after the war." Spec

Kirkus 22:694 O 1 '54 170w

"Recommended for the study of important current affairs." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 79:2445 D 15 '54 200w

"Less has been written about the jungle war in Malaya than about most of the other areas of conflict. In what has been written there has been relatively little space given to the origins and inception of the struggle. Harry Miller, a veteran Singapore newspaper man, has filled an important gap in our information with a book that is sound, thorough and absorbingly interesting." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p10 D 5 '54 400w

"This book is not nearly as lurid as its title and dust-cover would suggest. . . Even those who hope—or fear—to find additional fuel for current controversy are likely to be disappointed, for the first two hundred out of two hundred and thirty-eight pages cover the period before the appointment of General Templer, a period whose occasional feuds and bitter feelings have now lost their immediate passionate content. It is probably the more valuable in the long run for this historical perspective. Mr. Harry Miller is admirably equipped to write such a book. He has the good journalist's capacity to interpret the viewpoint of different communities—of which there are so many in Malaya—and to present at the same time a narrative that is both clear and interesting to readers with a limited background knowledge of the country." Alec Peterson

+ Spec p292 S 3 '54 700w

"Mr. Miller's book ought to be read by everyone in Britain who wants to understand how the Communist insurrection in Malaya started, what lies behind it, and why it has not yet been suppressed. As the author frankly says, it is not a political book; it is a straightforward factual narrative."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p567 S 10 '54 750w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). No tears for Christmas. 72p $2.25 Longmans

54-11441

The Yankees take over the stricken Hunter plantation on the eve of Christmas, 1863. One Hunter son is dead, the other is wounded and in hiding. The younger children look forward to Christmas, but their mother is in despair. How the Christmas spirit conquered is the basis of this little book.

Booklist 51:2; 133 S 1 '54; N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:458 Jl 15 '54 90w

"It is more lachrymose than literary. But in view of its function, this will be held more a merit than a flaw; there are times when sentimentality is its own excuse for being."

MILLER, H. T.—Continued

Charles Lee

N Y Times p36 N 21 '54 300w

Sat R 37:56 D 4 '54 150w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING), and TOPPING, JOHN DEWEY. Rebellion road. 287p $3 Bobbs

54-6497

Story of a young Civil war veteran and his struggle to make a living on his run down plantation in Alabama after the war.

Booklist 50:421 J1 1 '54

"An admirable beginning of a series. Story outlined and started by Mrs. Miller's brother before his death. Highly recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1052 Je 1 '54 130w

"The novel is rich with the color and excitement of the reconstruction period. It is moreover, a study of the events and motivations that caused a cold war of turbulent struggle for riches in a bitter period of Southern history." B. F. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C S 12 '54 50w

MILLER, KENNETH DEXTER. Man and God in the city. 179p $2; pa $1.25 Friendship press

266 Church and social problems. Missions 54-6890

"The author discusses the needs of the city dweller and the position of the church in filling those needs. Illuminating examples of what churches are doing to meet the needs of the city population are given. Dr. Miller explores the various methods churches might use in making their resources available. Dr. Miller is executive director of the New York City Mission Society, a nondenominational Protestant agency concerned with services to urban areas through community-serving churches and interdenominational enterprises." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 50:411 J1 1 '54

"A small book, but one that should be brought to thoughtful attention of many readers."

+ Kirkus 22:176 Mr 1 '54 260w

Wis Lib Bul 50:126 My '54

MILLER, MERLE. Reunion. 345p $3.95 Viking 54-9880

"A reunion of eight members of the same company during the war, eight years later, enables an extensive reconnaissance of their lives up to this point, and beyond that, of the personal and social situations they represent." Kirkus

Booklist 51:53; 63 O 1 '54

Kirkus 22:503 Ag 1 '54 240w

"Unfailingly readable variation on a hackneyed theme—cf, Kaufman-Ferber Dinner at Eight, Scott Fitzgerald's May Day, etc., etc. Will make a slick film. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:1825 O 1 '54 140w

"The texture of Miller's prose is, as usual, brilliant: sentences like scattered glass glinting beneath the flash of wit. There is, however, too much surface; a reader may well feel that while racing through this rapid and competent work he is missing something which should be examined more slowly, perhaps even with more difficulty. The impression of superficiality remains even in Miller's satire, which is always barbed and often savage. . . Miller's satire extends to his attempts at compassion, and the result is a sneer which seems to have become a posture he requires in order to function effectively. . . Only when Merle Miller is able to work on the level where the 'easily predictable' people are not predictable at all, will he reach beyond brilliant but limited pyrotechnics." Stanley Cooperman

+ — Nation 179:344 O 16 '54 500w

"Although most of Mr. Miller's characters drink a great deal, covet the neighbor's wife—or husband—and have their share of neuroses, these pages are refreshingly free of the decadence, whether avant-garde Spillane or second-hand Faulkner, still so fashionable in our fiction. In 'Reunion' Mr. Miller again makes clear that he is one of the most reliable as well as interesting chroniclers of contemporary America." Milton Rugoff

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 10 '54 550w

"Despite the fact that 'Reunion' comes to us in the affirmative tense (no fashionable fuzziness or avant garde despair), there's something here for almost anybody with a reasonable interest in the present. One guesses that Mr. Miller has accomplished just about what he set out to do—and given us a seductive novel besides." James Kelly

+ N Y Times p4 O 10 '54 700w

"An enormously worked-over, confusing, and tedious novel."

New Yorker 30:162 O 16 '54 40w

"Miller is a yarn-spinner and a first-rate one, and this novel will give you some fine reading. If he will only let his basic humanity show through and keep down the admittedly expert trimmings next time, he'll be the novelist a lot of people, including this reviewer, have felt he could be." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 22 '54 650w

"In 'Reunion' Merle Miller has written his finest novel to date and should probably be accorded the privilege of slugging anyone who hereafter refers to him as a writer of promise rather than of performance. . . It is an exciting book about living people and how they get the courage to go on about living." Al Hine

+ Sat R 37:15 O 9 '54 550w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 150w

"Miller relentlessly records everything—the brand of cigarettes they smoke, the way they like their Martinis, the jobs they had, the girls they missed, how their houses are furnished, how they take a bath. This may not really add up to a novel, but readers will have some fun 'recognizing' themselves or their friends in some of the meticulous sketches."

Time 64:134 O 11 '54 250w

MILLER, NOLAN. Why I am so beat. 213p $3 Putnam

54-5484

The account of one week end in the life of a college freshman at a large city university. Mark is worried about the draft, and his non-existent sex life, among other things.

"A poignant, funny story which deserves the publisher's comparison with J. D. Salinger's 'The Catcher in the Rye'. . . This is an admirable piece of writing. And if you are confused by the language or the tone of the story, just relax—it'll get through to you." D. R. McD.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 29 '54 350w

"The general effect: a nervous charade which is too flippant to take seriously and too serious to take flippantly. . . 'Why I Am So Beat' has its faults, but dullness is not among them. Even parents who start this racy memoir will stay dazedly to the end." James Kelly

+ — Sat R 37:33 F 27 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 2 '54 40w

MILLER, PERRY GILBERT EDDY. New England mind: from colony to province. 513p $6.50 Harvard univ. press

974 [917.4] New England—Intellectual life 53-5072

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Many readers will find much new material in this book, some of which may provoke vigorous dissent. Mr. Miller is penetrating; he is sometimes pungent; he is firm—and occasionally free—in his opinions. His book treats an oft-neglected era with freshness and authority." R. P. Stearns

+ Am Hist R 59:937 J1 '54 500w

"Any intellectual history which is of much use has to be written in the idiom of the age which it depicts. Professor Miller's study meets this requirement admirably. He appraises the Salem witchcraft debacle, the inoculation controversy, and countless other developments in the light of contemporary standards. He has written with sympathy and understanding of men whose tastes and ways of thinking are obviously remote from his own, and has succeeded in being profound without being heavy. This is a highly significant study. Anyone interested in American intellectual development will ignore it at his peril." Leonidas Dodson

+ Ann Am Acad 292:159 Mr '54 400w

"It is possible to criticize [certain] things in this notable book, such as the amplexness and occasional extravagance of Mr. Miller's writing and his insistence on drawing topical allusions. But these are matters of taste, and if some object to references to 'a bad security risk,' 'the late Mayor of New York,' and, obliquely, McCarthyism, every reader must be impressed by the virility of Mr. Miller's prose, its vivid imagery, and its capacity for conveying excitement amid complex theological discussions. The New England Mind: From Colony to Province is an impressive, original interpretation of one of the important transitions in American history. Perry Miller continues to alter, greatly to improve, our image of colonial origins." Bernard Bailyn

+ New Eng Q 27:112 Mr '54 2400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p526 Ag 29 '54 650w

"It is impossible in short compass to do justice to the subtlety and penetration of the author's interpretations of particular episodes, casting a fresh light on such old themes as Salem witchcraft, the inoculation controversy, and the antiministerial campaign of James Franklin, Benjamin's elder brother."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:30 Mr '54 250w

MILLER, PERRY GILBERT EDDY. Roger Williams: his contribution to the American tradition. (Makers of the American tradition ser) 273p $3 Bobbs

B or 92 Williams, Roger 53-8574

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Am Hist R 59:639 Ap '54 140w

Reviewed by S. G. Brown

New Eng Q 26:540 D '53 1200w

"Long a scholarly and penetrating student of the New England colonial mind, the author of this volume brings to his task a happy combination of discernment, sympathetic understanding and facility of style. This book represents the richness of true scholarship, and whether in the editorial interpretation or the intelligently chosen and edited selections from Williams' writings, the reader comes to know, perhaps for the first time, a magnificent shaper of our tradition." R. A. Brown

+ Social Educ 18:92 F '54 200w

"Like the other volumes in this series, neither a biography nor an anthology, Roger Williams combines most successfully extracts from Williams' own writings with Dr. Miller's comments upon them, to show what the Rhode Island theologian contributed to the American heritage. Here is, indeed, an interpretation of the past that will help many persons find a way through current difficulties."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:67 Mr '54 200w

MILLER, PERRY GILBERT EDDY, and others. Religion and freedom of thought. See Religion and freedom of thought

MILLIKAN, MAX FRANKLIN, ed. Income stabilization for a developing democracy; a study of the politics and economics of high employment without inflation. (Studies in national policy) 730p $5 Yale univ. press

333.91 Economic policy. U.S.—Economic policy. Income 52-12073

"A meaty symposium of essays by 15 economists, political scientists and professors of law dealing with the political and economic problems involved in achieving high employment without inflation." Foreign Affairs

"The reader will find in this volume very little that is not already known to specialists in the various fields that are covered. It contains new empirical data and no new contributions to economic theory. Political scientists and lawyers would probably say the same for their fields. Nevertheless, it is a valuable addition to the literature on economic stabilization. It is a good example of what may be accomplished through interdisciplinary cooperation. It brings together and makes easily available in one place many types of materials that were previously widely scattered. In general, the individual chapters are well conceived, clearly reasoned, and attractively presented. . . . This book should be highly useful in both upperclass and graduate courses dealing with stabilization problems and policies, and to professional economists who are interested primarily in policy aspects rather than in the advanced theory of national income behavior and stabilization." L. V. Chandler

+ Am Econ R 44:184 Mr '54 1050w

Foreign Affairs 32:333 Ja '54 20w

"The list of contributors is impressive. The editor was remarkably successful in eliciting the participation of competent authors, most of them already eminent scholars in the fields represented by their contributions to the volume. . . . Moreover, the book is written not primarily for the technical reader or specialized scholar, but rather for what might be called the intelligent and thoughtful lay reader. That is all to the good." P. W. McCracken

+ Harvard Law R 68:390 D '54 1100w

MILLIN, SARAH GERTRUDE (LIEBSON) (MRS PHILIP MILLIN). People of South Africa. 237p $4.50 Knopf

965 South Africa—Race question 53-6853

A history of South Africa from its discovery by the Portuguese near the end of the fifteenth century to the latest political developments. "Based on a book, called 'The South Africans,' which first appeared in 1926 [Book Review Digest 1927]. . . . The book of 1954 is half again as long as the book of 1926. Four fifths of it is new." (Pref)

Booklist 50:281 Mr 15 '54

Reviewed by Roi Otley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 14 '54 190w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 18 '54 600w

"The People of South Africa' is based on a book called 'The South Africans,' which, when first published in 1926, was the best general account of the Union's many racial groups. The 1954 edition is not nearly so good, in part because the facts are dated despite extensive rewriting. But more serious is the failure to keep abreast of the greatly expanding body of knowledge regarding the various races in South Africa and race in general. Some statements that might have been acceptable to many people in 1926 now have an antiquarian flavor." E. S. Munger

+ Geog R 44:614 O '54 300w

Kirkus 21:606 D 15 '53 180w

"One could wish for clearer, less disconnected writing. Recommended for libraries claiming coverage on South Africa." R. S. Taylor

Library J 75:202 F 1 '54 90w

Nation 178:244 Mr 20 '54 200w

MILLIN, S. G. L.—Continued

"Mrs. Sarah Millin has given us the first definitive study of the peoples and politics of her country. . . Mrs. Millin, who writes in a delightful tongue-in-cheek manner, tells the story of a land wrenched by strife not only among white, black and yellow men, but between the whites themselves." D. M. Friedenberg

+ New Repub 130:17 Mr 22 '54 850w

"This is a terrible and compelling book, terrible because it concerns a question which, the author feels, is 'beyond solution'; compelling because its problems are so bound up with the whole history and destiny of our civilization." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 F 14 '54 1000w

"Since Americans now have their interest so firmly fixed on South Africa, they cannot do better than acquire the real facts of South African life through this book. It is a brilliant exposition of a complex story, presented in a prose of rare distinction. If Mrs. Millin offers no panacea it is because there is none." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p18 F 14 '54 500w

"A compelling book, and one of great beauty."

+ New Yorker 29:114 F 13 '54 200w

Reviewed by Emory Ross

Sat R 37:20 F 27 '54 1050w

Springf'd Republican p5C F 14 '54 170w

Wis Lib Bul 50:135 My '54

MILLS, EDWARD DAVID. New architecture in Great Britain, 1946-1953; with a foreword by Sir William Holford. 209p 450il $9 Reinhold

720.942 Architecture—Great Britain. Architecture, Modern 54-3734

"Post-World-War II architecture in Great Britain lacks some of the spectacular features of architectural developments in the United States of America and some other countries. Even so, there is a 'new' British architecture which commands respect for both its esthetic and structural qualities. This book is a cross-section presented in the form of critical analyses of 15 examples. For each example, there are photographic views, floor plans, in some cases site plans, a capsule biography of the architect, and a discussion of planning, technical, economic and esthetic considerations. Finally, there is a critical comment by the author of the volume. Structural materials and features are covered under 'Technical Considerations' which is usually one of the longer subsections. Picture captions are in three languages: English, French and German." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 39:34 My '54

"The photographs and drawings are well chosen and arranged and the descriptive text is thorough."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p138 F 26 '54 350w

MILNE, LORUS JOHNSON, and MILNE, MARGERY JOAN (GREENE). Mating instinct; il. by Olaus J. Murie. 243p $4.50 Little

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of. Sex. Reproduction 54-5134

"With the stated purpose of giving man a better perspective on sex, these biologists present for the general reader a survey of sex as displayed in the animal world. A majority of the animals whose habits they describe are from classes lower than the mammals, such as various insects, birds, fish and reptiles. The discussion follows an informal arrangement in chapters on pursuit, combat, courtship, conquest and even parental care. A useful table lists about 50 animals with names of male, female, desexed and young." Library J

Booklist 50:314 Ap 15 '54

Christian Century 71:792 Je 30 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:56 Ja 15 '54 120w

"Undoubtedly this book will be read and many interesting facts learned from it. The style is witty and expert enough to carry the reader's interest through the mass of detail. One misses here however the philosophical charm of Sex and the Nature of Things, by N. J. Berrill. Recommended." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:547 Mr 15 '54 150w

"The Mating Instinct,' though relatively short, is not a book to be devoured in an evening, but rather to be read in instalments. A well-indexed and illustrated work, it also deserves a place of reference on any stretch of bookshelf devoted to the wonders of creation and the glories of nature, and in a position a good deal closer to Rachel Carson's 'The Sea Around Us' than to Dr. Kinsey's volumes." J. M. Flagler

+ Sat R 37:24 Je 26 '54 700w

Reviewed by L. D. Otis

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 11 '54 80w

MILNER, MRS LUCILLE (BERNHEIMER). Education of an American liberal; introduction by Alvin Johnson. 318p $3.95 Horizon press

B or 92 American civil liberties union 54-7897

"An account of the crusade for freedom in the United States and of the personalities who engaged in it, written by a woman who was one of the founders of the Civil Liberties Union, was Executive Secretary of this Union for twenty-five years, and participated in the key cases which made civil rights history during the administrations of Presidents Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover, Roosevelt and Truman." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:399 Je 15 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 11 '54 40w

"One of the few books that have a legitimate claim to the much abused term 'inspirational.'"

+ New Yorker 30:83 Ag 28 '54 130w

MILTON, JOHN. Complete prose works [Don M. Wolfe; general ed]. v 1, 1624-1642. 1089p $12.50 Yale univ. press

828 (52-5371)

The first volume of an eight volume edition of the complete prose works of John Milton.

Reviewed by H. I.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p6 My 7 '54 150w

"This is the definitive set for scholars, and for serious students who experience a magnetic pull towards Milton, no doubt about it. I found it, frankly, hard going for myself, who 'am no scholar, nor was meant to be.' In this respect Milton's line isn't of the simplest variety either." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p45 N 8 '53 240w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R 36:38 Ja 9 '54 50w

"Mr. Wolfe, in his introduction to the volume, maintains a fine and firm judgement as a literary critic. He is even a little hard on Milton the prose-writer. The other scholars who provide the prefaces, notes, and where necessary, the translations, to each separate work, never let their enthusiasm take precedence over their literary judgement in the way I have done in this review. The volume is therefore a model of cool scholarship, extracting the full historical value from the pamphlets and from that great mine of Milton's ideas, his Commonplace Book." Walter Taplin

+ Spec p690 Je 4 '54 800w

"A monument indeed of transatlantic scholarship, a massive sepulchral slab which will keep the poet's minor prose works safely and for ever dead. . . The mere mechanical human labour which has gone into this pyramid of otiose erudition is indeed terrifying. Nothing is too irrelevant, no allusion too recondite, no observation too trivial for these methodical commentators."

Times [London] Lit Sup p484 Jl 30 '54 850w

"Volume I demonstrates anew the wisdom of cooperative research, for Milton's antiprelatical pamphlets make unusual demands upon knowledge of general seventeenth century culture as well as of the complex political religious controversy with the bishops. The exegesis bears comparison for usefulness with anything in recent scholarship; the volume as a whole contributes profoundly to the understanding of Milton's thought and intellectual relationships."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:190 Je '54 240w

MINER, HORACE MITCHELL. Primitive city of Timbuctoo. 297p il $5 Princeton univ. press 966.2 [916.62] Society, Primitive. Timbukt 52-13144

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Viewed as an ethnographic account, Miner's description of Timbuctoo is acceptable within the limitations of time available to him and the handicaps of wartime conditions. Parts of it are fascinating reading. Were this all the author purported to do, this review could close on a commendatory note. But Miner also offers his book as a study in comparative urbanism. As such it is open to serious theoretical and methodological objections." R. L. Beals

+ — Am Anthropol 56:307 Ap '54 1200w

"This excellent book has some defects. The war forced the Miners, husband and wife, to leave the field after just seven months. . . A more pervasive defect is the not infrequent failure to indicate whether or not the description of a custom or practice is of the ideal or the actual. . . These defects and questions, and a few others that might be cited, bulk small in comparison to the substantial contributions of the book." A. T. Hansen

+ — Am J Soc 59:501 Mr '54 750w

Reviewed by D. B. Stout

Am Soc R 19:367 Je '54 330w

Reviewed by J. K. Anthony

Social Educ 18:41 Ja '54 500w

MINER, OPAL IRENE SEVREY. True book of policemen and firemen; pictures by [the author] and Mary Salem [prepared under the direction of Illa Podendorf]. 44p $2 Childrens press

352.2 Police—Juvenile literature. Firemen—Juvenile literature 54-8738

Factual material on the training and duties of policemen and firemen. For first graders.

Booklist 50:328 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 22:231 Ap 1 '54 60w

"This is a must for school libraries because of the need for this kind of material on community helpers for first grade." E. C. Alexander

+ Library J 79:780 Ap 15 '54 40w

Reviewed by Jeanne Massey

N Y Times p20 Jl 25 '54 60w

Wis Lib Bul 50:140 My '54

MIRSKY, JEANNETTE (MRS EDWARD B. GINSBERG). Elisha Kent Kane and the seafaring frontier. (Library of American biography) 201p $3 Little

B or 92 Kane, Elisha Kent. Arctic regions 54-6886

The life story of a famous American Arctic explorer, a romantic and respected figure in his own day. Altho he was the victim of poor health Kane became a doctor and was fearless as an explorer. Tho his two expeditions to the Arctic did not accomplish their purpose—to find Sir John Franklin—he did discover that there was an open polar sea, and that one could live in the Arctic. Kane died in 1857. Index.

"Our American heroes of the Arctic have been pretty much forgotten. This vivid, absorbing, fast-paced narrative will restore to living memory the career of one of them, Elisha Kent Kane." Fulmer Mood

+ Am Hist R 60:194 O '54 300w

Booklist 51:39 S 15 '54

"Miss Mirsky tells this life story with warmth and admiration and with a steady narrative pace. . . Elisha Kent Kane is here presented as a representative of America's seafaring tradition—a tradition which would be poorer without the record of his valiant life." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 4 '54 290w

Christian Century 71:927 Ag 4 '54 240w

Kirkus 22:226 Mr 15 '54 110w

"All libraries with any sort of Arctic shelf should have this book." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 79:980 My 15 '54 160w

"Jeannette Mirsky has written a vivid and thought-provoking account of the conversion of an eccentric Philadelphia socialite into a pioneer of scientific polar exploration."

+ Nation 178:528 Je 19 '54 230w

"Miss Mirsky is remarkable in combining scientific and factual matter with literary flavor. Here is a fascinating story admirably told." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Je 6 '54 480w

Reviewed by Trevor Lloyd

N Y Times p22 Je 27 '54 320w

"Miss Mirsky has kept her book, a new volume in the Library of American Biography, short, which would be commendable if it did not give one a hankering for more details."

New Yorker 30:90 Je 26 '54 160w

"Jeannette Mirsky . . . has chosen to present . . . an inspirational sketch of Kane's life at the same time that she exhibits the explorer as an example of the American pioneer instinct, seafaring division. Let it be said at the outset that Miss Mirsky's choice has resulted in an incomplete and not entirely satisfactory biography and has left the point, if there was one, about Kane as a seafaring pioneer rather shakily made. Yet since the point is relatively unimportant and there is a definitive biography of Kane elsewhere in progress, and since Miss Mirsky writes well and intelligently, her book is by no means waste motion. Her subject gives her plenty of cooperation. It would be impossible to write an uninteresting book about Kane." Raymond Holden

+ — Sat R 37:11 Jl 3 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p5C Jl 4 '54 320w

Wis Lib Bul 50:177 Jl '54

MIRVISH, ROBERT FRANKLIN. Long watch. 343p $3.50 Sloane

54-8069

A tale of the merchant marine and the people who man the ships. The Morning Pride is a worn-out freighter. Ray Halder, the "sparks" of the ship had come down in the world because of his alcoholism. This is the story of an overloaded ship, the relations between captain and crew, a beautiful woman who brings dissension in her wake, and a final decision for Ray Halder.

"Mirvish packages tough men and their weaknesses, tough ships and ports and weather into a sea-worthy story."

+ Kirkus 22:370 Je 15 '54 230w

"It is a brawling, boozing saga, overdrawn in spots, uneven, and not always credible, but fast-moving and interesting."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 5 '54 160w

"In his latest novel, Robert F. Mirvish continues to improve in his handling of language, but in other respects falters. Conflict rages, exotic scenes unfold. But the people of the story, except in glimmers, do not really come to life." E. B. Garside

+ — N Y Times p6 S 5 '54 550w

"Mr. Mirvish builds an unexpectedly subtle and sympathetic portrait of Captain Moore, but loses the rest of his characters in the gratuitous violence of his plot." T. E. Cooney

Sat R 37:62 O 2 '54 300w

"The author develops the three main characters with skill and the story abounds with

MIRVISH, R. F.—Continued
vivid scenes which build to a sensational climax in a very interesting tale of the sea."
J. F. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54
40w

MIRVISH, ROBERT F. Texana. 279p $3.50
Sloane 54-5805

A story of an Indian-Irish girl, a former prostitute, and the men who love her. The scene of the story is a Texas Gulf-port town and the climax of the tale comes when two powder ships in the harbor blow up and rain destruction over the city.

"As a social documentary this is rather for a Farrell audience than a general reading public although its matter of fact reporting has its own shock, but not sensational, appeal."
Kirkus 22:39 Ja 15 '54 210w

"This is an unusual novel, as simple and true as a folk song, a haunting thing. Perhaps Mr. Mirvish as yet is not a master of language, and at times, when he struggles a little, one is moved to wonder how, for example, a Colette would have handled such a powerful theme. At the same time, his people are the very stuff of life and his insights into the human heart are invariably convincing. Too, he feels the poetry of place, the weight of muggy Texas heat, the glare of Texas sun." E. B. Garside
+ N Y Times p24 Mr 7 '54 600w

Reviewed by James Kelly
Sat R 37:55 Mr 20 '54 320w

"Robert Mirvish, author of 'The Eternal Voyagers,' has sharpened and expanded his previous work and in 'Texana' has combined personality and circumstances in an unforgettable climax." G. B. A.
+ Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 90w

MITCHELL, JOHN, ed. See Organic analysis

MITFORD, NANCY. Madame de Pompadour.
324p il $4.75 Random house
B or 92 Pompadour, Jeanne Antoinette (Poisson), marquise de 54-5957

"Madame la Marquise de Pompadour, born Jeanne-Antoinette Poisson, became the mistress of Louis XV of France and reigned for twenty eventful years at Versailles. In this biography, the merry, pointless Ancien Régime comes alive—with its amours, gambling, hunting and lavish official entertainments." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:449 Jl 15 '54

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 6 '54
330w

"For those who are anticipating the tender malice of her novels—there is none here—her sympathies are wholly engaged, and her native appreciation of grace and elegance is a happy complement."

+ Kirkus 22:173 Mr 1 '54 250w

"Written so well that it will rival Lelia in popularity. For general purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1314 Jl '54 60w

"Perhaps life at Versailles did not in reality resemble so closely that in an English country house; and perhaps the Bourbons were harsher and less eccentric than amiable country peers. But it would be churlish to grudge Miss Mitford her innocent pleasures. This is a book that provides high entertainment—much of it deliberate—from the first page to the last. Certainly no historian could write a novel half as good as Miss Mitford's work of history. Of course he might not try." A. J. P. Taylor
+ Manchester Guardian p6 Mr 12 '54
420w

"Pleasant reading with fascinating sidelights on the court life of the period, but not to be taken too seriously as history."

Nation 179:178 Ag 28 '54 100w

"As one might foresee, this is not one of our solemn, heavy-footed biographies; but neither is it in any degree a flight of fancy. The portrait of Madame de Pompadour is lively and sympathetic, yet based on truth. Every conversation and statement can be vouched for by reference to contemporary documents. Apart from Miss Mitford's special interests in the fun and fashion department, one may admire most her power to condense and explain the most complicated events." Ralph Partridge
+ New Statesman & Nation 47:412 Mr 27 '54 750w

"Candid and sophisticated biography of the Pompadour... It is, as such biographies go, a superior performance, and it will please the increasing circle of readers who are rediscovering the eighteenth century and its fascination... Others have done it before, with more scholarship and documentation, but seldom with a more pleasing style." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 6 '54
800w

Reviewed by Frances Winwar
N Y Times p10 Je 6 '54 750w

"The extraordinary rise of this extraordinary woman has been perhaps more definitively charted elsewhere, but seldom with such easy and captivating elegance."

+ New Yorker 30:73 Jl 10 '54 210w

"Miss Mitford likes and admires her. She gives a beguiling picture of this kind, beautiful, self-assured woman who held the official position of king's mistress for almost 20 years." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 4 '54
800w

"It is fitting that something should be said for the victims of prejudice, and Miss Mitford, with her well-known charm of style, wit and sophisticated intelligence, says it persuasively, endowing the stage and the players with life and color, tastefully refurbishing the faded glories of Versailles court life. Her account of the vivacious and utterly charming Madame de Pompadour, is perceptive, tender, and above all, gallant." Leo Gershow

Sat R 37:19 Ag 7 '54 850w

Reviewed by Margaret Crosland
Spec p470 Ap 16 '54 650w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Springf'd Republican p9C Jl 11 '54
270w

Time 63:114 Je 7 '54 1400w

"Miss Mitford's felicity lies less in argument than in capturing the spirit of a society and an age. This—to those who have not lived in it—she appears to do triumphantly, helped by her lavish and excellent illustrations."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 19 '54
950w

MITTELHOLZER, EDGAR. Life and death of Sylvia. 316p $4 Day 54-5014

Novel based on the life of a British Guianan girl, daughter of a cockney engineer and a colored native.

Reviewed by Milton Crane
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 10 '54
300w

"The Life and Death of Sylvia is meant to be the pitiful story of a born victim. But mere victims are seldom interesting. Sylvia's tragedy would be more readable had she learned that, if she wasn't exactly the captain of her soul, she could at least make the boat rock a little." Edwin Kennebeck

Commonweal 59:455 F 5 '53 550w

Kirkus 21:714 N 1 '53 190w

"Unfamiliar background adds zest and flavor to the story, but unconvincing characterization and situations seem to weigh it with a monotonous drabness. Strong language in the book may render it objectionable to library users." E. P. Nichols

Library J 79:146 Ja 15 '54 130w

"Mr Mittelholzer knows his British Guiana colour problems thoroughly, but is so set to evoke the subtropical tide of fleshly lusts, in so loose and sprawling a style, that his heroine has no more individuality or appeal than a bubble adrift." H. I.A. Fausset

— + Manchester Guardian p6 My 15 '53 110w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott

New Statesman & Nation 45:651 My 30 '53 70w

"A strangely fascinating story. . . Despite the vividness and strangeness of the story, it is the bewildering array of individuals that dominates it. Mr. Mittelholzer makes real the almost endless variety of persons about Sylvia and the development and cataclysmic adolescence of the child herself. The result is a novel that is both unusual and moving." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 31 '54 500w

"Sylvia's story is literally the gradual death of an ardent, idealistic spirit in a body that lacks the strength and will power to go on living. As such it is melancholy and not wholly convincing, but the setting is full of life and color and peopled by characters of immense vitality and humanity." Nancie Matthews

+ — N Y Times p28 Ja 10 '54 360w

New Yorker 29:88 Ja 9 '54 110w

"A deep understanding of and sympathy with Sylvia would be needed before one could get up any interest in her fate. Unluckily, Mittelholzer, for all the subjective writing in the book, has never got inside his heroine's mind. It's quite possible that if he had, he would have found himself in a vacuum." L. G. O.

— San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 7 '54 210w

"The novel has a curiously fascinating vitality about it, though the reader may wonder what has become of the old saying that virtue is its own reward and may wonder why Sylvia could not have been granted some slight reward for her long search for unblemished happiness." Harrison Smith

Sat R 37:20 Ja 9 '54 700w

"This story of a potentially good girl dogged by ill-fortune in the fantastically mixed colony of British Guiana is sociologically informative but never gathers itself up into anything more than a prolonged character-study." Marghanita Laski

Spec p652 My 15 '53 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 100w

Time 63:84 Ja 11 '54 850w

"The background of social life in Georgetown is absolutely authentic. The Life and Death of Sylvia is a deeply unsatisfactory book. Mr. Mittelholzer is a masculine writer who seems unable to penetrate intuitively into the mind of a woman."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p313 My 15 '53 140w

MIX, FLOYD M., and PRITCHARD, E. C. All about house wiring. 176p $2.50 Goodheart-Willcox

621.328 Electric wiring, Interior 54-10161

"Concise treatment of electrical requirements, codes and techniques of installation for the layman. Unusually clear illustrations. Review questions, index." Bookmark

Booklist 51:7 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:6 O '54 10w

MOATS, ALICE LEONE. At home abroad; decorations by Joe Krush. 186p $2.95 Viking

910.2 Travel 54-7981

Not a guidebook, but a volume of expert advice on what to do and how to do it on a trip abroad.

Booklist 50:417 J1 1 '54

Bookmark 13:216 Je '54 20w

Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 15 '54 170w

"Worthwhile."

+ Kirkus 22:219 Mr 15 '54 140w

"Too many Americans return home with little more than a collection of photographs and a list of places they have visited. Miss Moats tells this type of tourist how to get something more valuable out of his trip—if he will but heed her advice. . . Every prospective tourist should read this book and follow the advice given if he wants to make a good impression on his hosts and enjoy his trip."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 6 '54 280w

Springf'd Republican p12D J1 18 '54 120w

MOBERG, VILHELM. Unto a good land; tr. from the Swedish by Gustaf Lannestock. 371p $3.95 Simon & Schuster

54-9057

"A sequel to 'The Emigrants' [Book Review Digest 1951], and the second volume of a trilogy by the Swedish author, Vilhelm Moberg. It tells how farmer Karl Oskar Nilsson, his wife and children, and ten other peasants from his own parish in the province of Smaland, sailed in the brig Charlotta in the spring of 1850 to North America, landing ten weeks later at the East River Pier in New York on a sweltering June day and how, by river-boat and steam-wagon, on foot and in an ox-drawn cart, Karl Oskar and his family reach at last the shore of the Minnesota lake where out of the great trees he finds there he hews himself a home." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:452 J1 15 '54

"Unto a Good Land is a work of rare distinction and one warmly to be recommended." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 180:72 O '54 320w

"'Unto a Good Land' is impressive in its sheer factualness. The author himself might have been one of the emigrants, living every moment with them, suffering with them, but recording with Olympian detachment only what all-seeing eyes might have seen, not what an all-suffering heart might have felt. 'Unto a Good Land' is a masterpiece of understatement." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 1 '54 490w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 5 '54 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

"A story that has stature not dependent on pace of plot or mounting crises."

+ Kirkus 22:320 My 15 '54 120w

"As in the first volume, the author's extraordinary powers of imagination and recreation give the narrative the quality of history, strengthened by accuracy of detail and documentation. . . This is all the more remarkable storytelling, as the author never immigrated and gained his knowledge of America from books and newspapers and his American relatives. It is an earthy story, frank in detail." Mary Barrett

+ Library J 79:1310 J1 '54 200w

"Whether Mr. Moberg's immigrants are characteristic, in their terrifying innocence, of their country, class, and time, or whether he has thus endowed them in order to underscore the poignancy of his tale, it is hard to know. But the portrait of Minnesota is authentic." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 1 '54 700w

"Moberg brings to his novel a kind of wide-eyed wonder that is refreshing in this day of super-polish and cynicism. Whether he is describing the Battery in 1850, Broadway, the taste of fresh rolls, the river boat to Albany, the steam wagon from Albany to Buffalo, a steamer on the Great Lakes, or the birth of a child in a rude frontier cabin, he brings to his pages an endearing artlessness. His style is ponderous, his prose phlegmatic, his imagination pedestrian. But all of this he overcomes with his abiding love for the land and his dogged communication of that love." V. P. Hass

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 1 '54 450w

"A solid, leisurely, and very readable book."

+ New Yorker 30:82 Ag 14 '54 50w

MOBERG, VILHELM—Continued

"The scope of the whole undertaking is impressive. Meticulous documentation lies behind this chronicle of immigration in the 1850's, and in these first two volumes an essential humanity suffuses the panorama of mixed ugliness, beauty, joy, and despair." R. B. Vowles
+ Sat R 37:12 J1 31 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 160w

Wis Lib Bul 50:211 O '54

MOCKRIDGE, NORTON, and PRALL, ROBERT H. Big fix. 337p $3.95 Holt

364.9747 Corruption (in politics). Gross, Harry. New York (city)—Politics and government 54-9655

"Norton Mockridge and Robert H. Prall, New York reporters, have recapitulated the entire Gross case and the official corruption it uncovered. They have gone extensively into Gross' personal history, as well as that of Mayor William O'Dwyer and many of his aides and police cronies." N Y Times

"A well written factual account of graft and corruption in the world's largest city." V. W. Peterson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 12 '54 270w

"An aggressive, and in a sense, exhaustive review of an old news beat with doubtful current interest."

Kirkus 22:285 Ap 15 '54 150w

"Unfortunately the authors are apt to portray all of the protagonists in black and white with little subtlety for varying nuances of character, and are apt to build too much on isolated incidents and passing conversation. More sensational than informative, this should have more than considerable reader appeal. Fast reading for popular collections." Leon Crain

Library J 79:1050 Je 1 '54 120w

"It is a detailed and largely accurate book, larded with occasional semi-fictional passages to give it popular appeal. It provides an interesting summary of recent municipal corruption." Emanuel Perlmutter

+ N Y Times p43 N 21 '54 450w

"Here is the real thing. Replete with the realities no writer can dream up, it tells the oft-told (in newspapers) tale of Harry Gross, the pudgily handsome Brooklyn bookmaker whose connections in the New York City police force went straight to the top... The writers weaken the impact of their book by an attitude of hero-worship toward McDonald, but it is all here, pulled together in a way to make the average crime novel seem tame." Allen Churchill

+ — Sat R 37:27 D 25 '54 290w

MOLONEY, JAMES CLARK. Understanding the Japanese mind. 252p $3.50 Philosophical lib.

136.4 National characteristics, Japanese. Japan—Intellectual life 54-7959

"Dr. Moloney, a psychoanalyst, investigates psychoanalysis as practiced in Japan since its introduction there in 1912. To illustrate and to interpret standards of conduct and patterns of behavior which resulted in a 'superindividual' nation where the individual himself, under a system of rigid conformity, was de-emphasized, he delves into history, anthropology, sociology, and religion. To support his findings, he quotes frequently and lengthily from works of others, including Japanese psychoanalysts. He concludes that, despite some evidence to the contrary, goals of psychoanalysis in Japan are still opposite those in the West, where 'growth, maturation, and expansiveness' of the individual are sought." Library J

Reviewed by Iwao Ishino

Am Anthropol 56:1144 D '54 950w

"In its logical progress from historical facts to psychoanalytically based tendencies, this is one of the most fascinating of modern books."

T. T. Brumbaugh

+ Christian Century 71:674 Je 2 '54 500w

"Interesting and readable, but perhaps best judged by other scientists and when the full impact of the recent war and occupation has been analyzed." H. P. Linton

Library J 79:624 Ap 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by Guy Wint

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 22 '54 350w

MONELLI, PAOLO. Mussolini: an intimate life [tr. from the Italian by Brigid Maxwell]. 304p il $4 Vanguard

B or 92 Mussolini, Benito. Fascism—Italy 54-6996

"This is not a full-length historical biography, but a pen-portrait of the human being Mussolini—an enlarged version of original Italian edition well translated by Piccolo Borghese. Author, Italian journalist formerly associated with such important newspapers as Gazzetta del Popolo and Corriere della Sera, observed the dictator at fairly close range and gathered material from many sources, including information from the people around Mussolini." Library J

"This is the fullest biography of Mussolini published in English to date, and I found it thoroughly absorbing." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:82 S '54 470w

Booklist 51:39 S 15 '54

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzsimons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 22 '54 410w

Foreign Affairs 33:163 O '54 20w

"The picture he presents is depressing indeed, though he avoids cheap exaggerations. Especially gripping is the story of Il Duce's end. Extensive bibliographic notes; interesting illustrations. Recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 79:454 Mr 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by Cecil Sprigge

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 25 '53 600w

"His life of Mussolini is both well documented and superficial. It is a treatment which admirably suits its subject matter. . . I was appalled and fascinated by every page of Monelli's book and I suspect that it gives us the most vivid and accurate picture we possess of the Fascist Emperor showing his new clothes off to the fawning statesmen of the Western democracies." R. H. S. Crossman

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:169 F 6 '54 200w

"Mr. Monelli is a graceful writer, and his book is consistently entertaining. His final chapters, indeed, which deal with the period after Mussolini's fall in 1943, deserve higher praise than that. The deterioration of the Duce's character in his last years is described in skillful strokes." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p3 J1 11 '54 850w

Reviewed by Paolo Milano

N Y Times p14 J1 11 '54 750w

New Yorker 30:79 S 4 '54 170w

"The book is well written, based on much conscientious study and research that put it in the category of serious and useful works of biography and history." René Albrecht-Carrié

+ Sat R 37:11 Ag 14 '54 700w

Time 64:78 Ag 23 '54 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p594 S 18 '53 110w

MONSELL, HELEN ALBEE. Susan Anthony, girl who dared; il. by Paul Laune. (Childhood of famous Americans ser) 192p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Anthony, Susan Brownell—Juvenile literature 54-6062

"This is the story of Susan Anthony from a little girl of five in her Western Massachusetts home, helping her mother, learning long division in the little country school, moving to a new home, teaching school herself while still in her teens, and finally as a woman addressing the Women's Right Convention of 1853 in New York City." Springf'd Republican

"Susan Anthony introduces an eager child, primarily full of initiative and the pioneer spirit, a fine example of self-reliance, helpfulness, and unselfishness. . . Here is a means of awakening children to understand a new kind of pioneering." Millicent Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 60w

Reviewed by D. M. Blasco
Library J 79:1326 J1 '54 40w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 120w

MONTAGU, ELIZABETH. Waiting for Camilla. 260p $3.50 Lippincott

54-8745

Camilla Slesinger's sister lay dying, and Camilla had been sent for. As the story progresses the meaning of Camilla's return to each of several people is traced: to her sister's husband; to Camilla's own ex-husband; to a former lover; to her sister's lifelong companion; and to Camilla's young niece. Gradually the truth unfolds; Camilla is not the person each has pictured her.

Reviewed by Isabel Quigly

Manchester Guardian p4 O 23 '53 120w

"The management of this difficult, because largely static, narrative is often jerky. But [where the author] is outstanding is in her grasp of her characters. Not only are they many-faceted, but through one facet explicitly revealed she draws one's eyes firmly across to another, totally different. She notices the kind of things that people notice, and out of some little emotion teases a whole attitude of being. And her metaphor is nearly always shrewd and delightful." Derwent May

+ — New Statesman & Nation 46:609 N 14 '53 360w

"This first novel by a new English writer is a subtle and admirable one, though not entirely successful. Miss Montagu has attempted a great deal, and has come close enough to bringing it off to interest the reader thoroughly even if all of the book's characters are not entirely satisfying." Barbara Klaw

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 19 '54 230w

"Mature, sure-footed, and most satisfying. Judged by the test of the sentence or short passage that wins our trust, Miss Montagu scores again and again." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p522 N 6 '53 100w

"A good first novel. . . The actors become steadily more real as the story proceeds, and at the end we leave them with regret."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p689 O 30 '53 200w

MONTAGU, EWEN EDWARD SAMUEL. Man who never was; with a foreword by Lord Ismay. 160p il $2.75 Lippincott

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Secret service 54-5594

A detailed account of a British plan to mislead the Germans about the invasion of Sicily during World War II. Map, photographs.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 193:78 Mr '54 300w

Booklist 50:220 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:106 F '54 20w

Cath World 179:160 My '54 250w

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ja 31 '54 300w

Reviewed by Josephine Ripley

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 29 '54 190w

"The strongest point in the book is its careful, calm detailing of the footwork involved in the preparation. There is no parallel in the violent action of fiction, nor even in the exploits of the famous Yeo-Thomas. . . In the detailing may lie a weakness, either of the book or the reviewer, for the plot involves such heady stuff that one could wish for more side-lights on the people involved, more discussion of the plans outlined and discarded, more of the highlighting and shadowing that puts depth in a story. There are faults in the telling as well. . . Mr. Montagu narrates in a style which might seem the embodiment of our idea of British temperament. His is an honest accounting, touched by humor." Catherine Spurr

+ — Commonweal 60:75 Ap 23 '54 700w

Foreign Affairs 32:672 J1 '54 30w

"Fast, simple reading for all adventure lovers."

+ Horn Bk 30:193 Je '54 80w

"This is a remarkable document written by the person most intimately involved in Operation Mincemeat. For all libraries." L. C. Crain

+ Library J 79:206 F 1 '54 140w

"It is a fascinating story and eminently a 'success story.' . . 'The Man Who Never Was' leaves one question unanswered. The identity of 'Major Martin' is still not known. But the purpose of the book is. It poses a new question, for another enemy intelligence service of the future. And that question will be: Does this book explain the workings of the British mind, or does it only tell of the workings of one individual mind in a nation of individualists? Perhaps the best thing about this book is that it leaves the reader guessing." Terence Prittie

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 22 '53 300w
Nation 178:153 F 20 '54 140w

Reviewed by S. E. Morison

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 14 '54 220w

"There is no crescendo of tension in the book, even in the submarine sequence of the releasing of the body, for the outcome is known from the start. And yet there is a pervading climate of suspense that hangs over the pages. By his very lack of literary pretension—by the clarity and simplicity of his reporting—Ewen Montagu makes the full impact of the story come through. He makes it clear that the stakes involved were survival-stakes." Burke Wilkinson

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 31 '54 1000w

"Astonishing and wonderfully exciting narrative."

+ New Yorker 29:101 Ja 30 '54 240w

"This is in its way a thriller; you'll finish it at a sitting, I believe. But you'll also remember something else—the extraordinary, beyond-the-call-of-duty patriotism that must have animated the dead man's family who allowed his body to be so used. Wisely, the true name is withheld, but 'Major Martin' was buried in Spain, on his headstone the classic line 'Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori.'" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ja 26 '54 700w

"A fascinating book. . . This is a moving and true spy story told by a writer with touches of the Eric Ambler skill. It is, perhaps, the best book of its kind to come out of the war. It is also wonderfully refreshing to read of real professional spy masters and spy catchers because they act so totally different from the self-styled brand and the amateur investigators we have met so often in fiction during the past years." Kurt Singer

+ Sat R 37:11 Ja 30 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Ludovic Kennedy

Spec p376 O 2 '53 250w

Springf'd Republican p5C F 14 '54 300w

Time 63:76 F 1 '54 850w

"Lieutenant-Commander Montagu's book is still well worth reading."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p584 S 11 '53 350w

MONTROSS, LYNN. Cavalry of the sky; the story of the U.S. marine combat helicopters. 270p il $3 Harper

629.1335 Helicopters. Korean war, 1950—
Aerial operations. U.S. Marine corps.
54-6287

A history of the Marine corps helicopters in the Korean war, from the beginnings in 1947 to the giant new transport helicopters of 1954. The work is based on official records. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 50:445 Jl 15 '54

"This is a story that should be told. Under Mr. Montross's meticulous pen it has become one of those books of permanent record. It is both the account of new exploits in war and the chronicle of the development, under the test of battle, of a useful machine which became more and more useful each time it was employed in new tasks." Roland Sawyer

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 4 '54
650w

Kirkus 22:281 Ap 15 '54 110w

"Recommended for all public and college libraries." J. R. Willingham

+ Library J 79:1314 Jl '54 90w

"Written without dramatics and in full statistical detail, 'Cavalry of the Sky' condenses the voluminous source material on the helicopter's tactical development into a convenient handbook for the amateur and professional military student." Fendall Yerxa

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 4 '54
650w

"Mr. Montross is meticulous in his research, and for the detail-hungry, date-careful scholar there is an answer for practically every question having any remote bearing on the young career of the noisy, little, vertical wing aircraft." George Barrett

+ N Y Times p3 Je 27 '54 700w

Wis Lib Bul 50:205 O '54

MOODY, JOSEPH NESTOR, and others, eds. Church and society; Catholic social and political thought and movements, 1789-1950. 914p $12 Arts

282.09 Catholic church—History. Church and social problems. Church and state 53-10712

"An extensive symposium on Catholic political and social thought since the French Revolution. Following a chapter on the Papacy, there are sections on France, Belgium, Germany, Central Europe, Spain and Latin America, England and the United States." Foreign Affairs

"The book as a whole is selective, rather than inclusive. Within its limits, however, it is an excellent book. Its authors are competent, and they write clearly and interestingly. They try to be objective, and they make no obvious effort to gloss over the more unflattering aspects of Catholic social history. Probably most readers, like the present reviewer, will disagree with their interpretations here and there. Yet all in all they do succeed in showing how the Catholic attitude toward the modern economic and political situation has crystallized since the time of the French Revolution: and this, after all, was the original purpose of the book." P. H. Fursey

+ Ann Am Acad 294:213 Jl '54 550w

"Church and Society is a volume that can hardly henceforth be ignored by anyone seriously interested in the Church's solicitous attitude on the social problems of these troubled times." E. S. Skillin

+ Commonweal 60:446 Ag 6 '54 600w

Foreign Affairs 32:507 Ap '54 30w

"Thoroughly objective, this work should prove of inestimable value to students of the subject. Recommended for college and larger libraries." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 78:1933 N 1 '53 150w

"This new volume is both welcome and useful. Mr. Moody and his collaborators have sought to survey, as objectively as their Catholic faith will permit, the social and political activity of Catholics in the major Western nations during the last two centuries. Most of the essays rest on broad and solid documentation. A vast amount of information is packed into the book." Gordon Wright

+ Pol Sci Q 69:303 Je '54 900w

MOORE, MRS ALMA (CHESNUT). Friendly forests; il. by Matthew Kalmenoff. 96p $2.50 Viking

634.9 Forests and forestry—Juvenile literature
54-12936

An account of America's ancient forests and the need for conservation of forests in the present. For ages nine to thirteen.

Horn Bk 30:438 D '54 140w

Kirkus 22:486 Ag 1 '54 110w

"A beautifully illustrated nature story, this should appeal particularly to children familiar with the outdoors, for it will supply them with many answers to their questions, and give them the basic knowledge that will mean lasting pleasure on forest trips. The artist is with the American Museum of Natural History and has made many expeditions to see the subjects he draws so well."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 14 '54
40w

MOORE, BARRINGTON. Terror and progress USSR; some sources of change and stability in the Soviet dictatorship. 261p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

947.085 Russia—Social conditions. Communism—Russia
54-5995

"The method of attack is to seek the elements of strength and weakness in the Soviet system 'by viewing it in terms of a series of situations and a series of people' and by noting the various inter-relationships. Mr. Moore begins by examining the techniques used and the problems faced 'by those who manipulate the control levers.' Then he examines the situations in industry, agriculture, science and the arts. The penultimate chapter discusses the instrument of the terror, and the final chapter sets forth Mr. Moore's evaluations and expectations." N Y Times

Reviewed by George Denicke

Ann Am Acad 295:194 S '54 400w

Booklist 50:317 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 18 '54
310w

"The writing is restrained, and the judgments are cautiously worded. Of interest to the general reader, as well as the political scientist and sociologist."

+ Current Hist 26:376 Je '54 120w

Foreign Affairs 32:678 Jl '54 60w

"Sound speculation for the already well-informed inquiring mind."

+ Kirkus 22:57 Ja 15 '54 150w

"Well-known specialist on Soviet Russia has given us thoughtful study of the present day Soviet Russian regime and its stability." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:547 Mr 15 '54 140w

"Professor Moore has done a highly useful job, if only by indicating fields in which discussion can be carried on profitably. The territory, however, has already been explored by such scholars as Isaac Deutscher and Merle Fainsod, often with more satisfactory results. What I think Moore has done is to demonstrate that speculation, if hedged excessively with 'ifs' and 'howevers,' may confuse more than enlighten." Mark Gayn

+ Nation 178:546 Je 26 '54 1200w

"The great merit of Mr. Moore's study is that it enables the reader to cut through two widely accepted and simplified pictures of the operation of the Soviet system. . . In applying the concept of ■ regulated tension as the driving force in the Soviet system, Mr. Moore has drawn upon a wide range of illustrative material gathered from printed sources and has supplemented this by statements gathered from ex-Soviet witnesses. What is more important, Moore has succeeded, in very large measure, in 'thinking himself' into the situation of the Soviet factory manager, collective farm chairman, research scientist and artist and thus in making sense of the tensions and adjustments which form the pattern of daily life under ■ dictatorship." P. E. Mosely

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 18 '54 550w

"The book is strongest in the chapters dealing with the rulers, with industry and with agriculture; less sure when dealing with science and the arts. High on the credit side is the skillful use of material garnered from interviews with former Soviet citizens. This is particularly valuable because this source is not generally available." W. B. Walsh
+ — N Y Times p23 Ap 11 '54 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 31 '54 150w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe
Sat R 37:20 Jl 17 '54 950w

MOORE, CLIFFORD B. Ways of mammals, in fact and fancy. 273p $3.50 Ronald

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of. Mammals 53-10465

"The Director of the Forest Park Museum, Springfield, Massachusetts, has brought together here information which answers questions frequently asked about animal behavior. Many strange beliefs, legends, and superstitions are presented and explained. There is carefully documented material dealing with mammals from elephants to monkeys; a few chapters are entirely written by other scientists. In addition to misconceptions about specific animals, there are also chapters on such general beliefs as animals as weather prophets, human children reared by wild animals, and other folklore." Library J

"Not as popular in style as This Fascinating Animal World (Devoe) or Animal Facts and Fallacies (Breland), the amount of literature cited and bibliography compiled make this book a useful reference for teachers, librarians and students." E. M. Cole
+ Library J 79:63 Ja 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by John Pfeiffer
Sat R 37:56 Ap 10 '54 320w

"Let it not be thought that this book is of interest to teachers alone, for the general reader will find here absorbing stories of the creatures of the fields and the forests, the mountains and the jungles, the rivers and the seas. He will read this book with delight and will be surprised to learn that mammal facts are themselves so amazing that one does not need to embellish them with fanciful beliefs of any kind." L. D. Otis

+ Springf'd Republican p7C N 29 '53 120w

MOORE, FRANK C., and others. Handcrafts for elementary schools: a handbook of practical suggestions for teachers [il. by Anna-Laura Kingzett]. 324p $5 Heath

372.5 Handicraft—Study and teaching

"Chock full of ideas for teachers, this abundantly illustrated volume can be used effectively in elementary schools, junior high schools, homes, playgrounds, and camps. Chapters on paper crafts, woodcrafts, novelty crafts, ceramic, metal, textile, leather, and graphic art crafts, are preceded by four very fine chapters on handicrafts in the elementary school, in the home, classroom organization and general suggestions to teachers. The materials used are easily available: spools, corks, paper, potatoes, linoleum, and the like." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 50:29 S 15 '53

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 20 '54 150w

"Experienced or inexperienced teachers in Grades I-VI should find Handcrafts for Elementary Schools a useful reference book, handbook, and general guide for teaching hand-crafts as an integrated part of the curriculum. It should also be helpful for in-service training of teachers who have had little or no training in handcrafts." E. C. Wittick

+ El School J 54:307 Ja '54 320w

MOORE, GEORGE EDWARD. Some main problems of philosophy. 380p $4.50 Macmillan (N Y)

104 Philosophy

53-12843

"These twenty lectures, given at Morley College in London in 1910-11, might well have been given the title of a celebrated paper which appeared nearly fifteen years later, 'A Defence of Common Sense.' For one of the main purposes governing the consideration of those problems of philosophy which Professor Moore treats is to defend common-sense beliefs against philosophical attacks. . . . Moore's unique gift is, as Professor John Wisdom comments in his Foreword to the book, the ability to make one feel those problems, even those which the plain man might consider too remote to be of any interest: problems concerning the external world and problems concerning general ideas." J Philos

Reviewed by G. W. Cunningham
Ethics 64:331 Jl '54 400w

"As one reads these lectures one appreciates the privilege which that audience of more than forty years ago had in hearing them. The sources of many of the later papers which had so great an influence on contemporary philosophy are to be found here; and not only this, the lectures provide an example of a philosopher who plainly considered that obscurity is a sign, not of profundity, but of confusion." Alice Ambrose

+ J Philos 51:328 My 27 '54 1650w

Reviewed by Richard Wollheim
New Statesman & Nation 46:646 N 21 '53 1000w

"[The essays] exhibit in their treatment of the traditional puzzles of sense-perception, existence and universals the qualities Moore has always possessed—freshness and honesty of thought, insistence upon concrete cases and examples, the capacity to bring problems to life. These in themselves are sufficient to make reading this book a philosophical experience." Patrick Gardiner

+ Spec p434 O 16 '53 750w

"It was a bold step to publish these lectures given by Professor Moore in London more than 40 years ago. Has there not since, one might think, been a spate of work by Moore himself and those who learnt from him, which quite supersedes them? But the boldness was justified. The book takes its place as a part of the history of philosophy, as representing supremely well an attitude, a method and a set of doctrines which were of the greatest importance in the recent past of the subject and are therefore still of the greatest importance to the understanding of its present condition."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p61 Ja 22 '54 1350w

MOORE, GERALD. Singer and accompanist: the performance of fifty songs. 232p $3.75 Macmillan (N Y)

784.9 Singing and voice culture 54-2985

"These 50 separate discussions of individual art songs (ranging from Haydn to living British composers) reflect the thought of the artist generally conceded to be the ranking accompanist of the day. Through his abiding concern with detail—dynamics, phrasing, meaning of the words, etc.—he reveals his own imagination, elasticity and humor." Library J

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:1592 S 15 '54 60w

"It seems almost unfair that a man who really can play the piano as beautifully as Gerald Moore . . . can also write with such wit and élan. . . . Moore's willingness to champion certain lesser settings of noted poems when they offer high virtues not found in the better-known music of Debussy, Warlock, or Fauré, makes his book valuable and entertaining. Its value is at least equal to singer and pianist." Paul Hume

MOORE, GERALD—Continued

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:564 S '54 380w

"Singer and Accompanist is a fascinating book, filled with good sense, clear thinking, imagination, and technical 'secrets' (how Mr. Moore manages Erikönig, for example, or how he discreetly revises Brahms's markings). The lists of gramophone records would be more useful if they discriminated between collectors' rarities, and the ordinary discs which anyone can buy." Andrew Porter

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:534 O 31 '53 600w

"It is said so often, and with such an abundance of accessible proof, that being a fine musician has nothing to do with ordinary intelligence, that it is good, now and again, to have a demonstration that the opposite is not necessarily against the laws of nature. Those who have long admired as well as enjoyed the work of Gerald Moore as pianistic collaborator with a host of superior soloists, will be reassured to discover, from his current volume, 'Singer and Accompanist,' that he is articulate, urbane, well-versed in the foibles of the people with whom he works, as well as more entitled to star billing than many of them. . . . Not everyone can go to London and seek the personal counsel of Gerald Moore, but he has succeeded in making an almost perfect medium for the reverse with this singular volume." Irving Kolodin

+ Sat R 37:21 J1 31 '54 800w

"Written with the passionate devotion and the all too rare practical clarity of the expert, this book will also command the attention of the general reader whose musical appreciation perhaps outstrips his knowledge. He will discover the humour and humility of great artistry and will wonder how our Victorian forbears could have been so musically insensitive as to rate the art of accompanying no higher than a drawing-room pastime which would not tax the abilities of elegant young ladies of leisure." D. G.

+ Spec p616 N 20 '53 180w

Springf'd Republican p9C S 19 '54 210w

Times [London] Lit Sup p688 O 30 '53 550w

MOORE, GLOVER. Missouri controversy, 1819-1821. 383p il $6 Univ. of Ky. press

973.5 Missouri compromise, U.S.—Politics and government—1817-1825 53-5518

"Deals with our first major flare-up of sectional feeling, that which attended Missouri's entrance into the Union as a slave state. To manage this and appease aggravated Northerners, Congress, at the same time, took in Maine as a free state, and created the famous line of 36°30'; above which no new states were to be admitted unless they were free. This compromise held until 1850, when Henry Clay, who had pushed through the Missouri Compromise, made his last personal effort to hold the Union together with another compromise." Sat R

"This volume should take its place on bookshelves with Floyd Shoemaker's excellent study (Missouri's Struggle for Statehood, 1804-1821) published in 1916, and supersede Mrs. Archibald Dixon's study of 1899. His judicious selection of materials, his lucid style, and his sympathetic understanding of both sides present a readable and detached exposition of Missouri's struggle for statehood." W. E. Smith

+ Am Hist 59:642 Ap '54 420w

Reviewed by E. M. Coulter

Ann Am Acad 294:186 J1 '54 550w

"Excellent monograph. . . . Professor Moore might have expressed some thoughts on compromises in general, to stimulate present-day readers; but his book, valuable though it is, is not the kind of book which does this," Louis Filler

+ Sat R 36:42 O M '53 320w

"The first major work on the Missouri question to appear in many years, this is by far the most comprehensive treatment of the subject ever undertaken. The well-known story of the struggle over the admission of Missouri to the Union is told here with considerable detail and, in places, in rather vigorous fashion."

+ U S Quarterly Bk 10:31 Mr '54 250w

MOORE, GUY W. Case of Mrs Surratt: her controversial trial and execution for conspiracy in the Lincoln assassination. 142p $3 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Surratt, Mary Eugenia (Jenkins). Lincoln, Abraham—Assassination 54-5928

"The first American woman to be executed, Mary Eugenia Surratt was condemned with men involved in the assassination of Lincoln, chiefly because the conspirators had met at her boarding-house. Important evidence and pleas for clemency were suppressed; the judge in her case was a 'hanging judge'; and she should probably have been tried by a civil court, not a military commission. Mr. Moore sets forth the record, so far as it is known, with clarity and impartiality." Library J

"The story of Mrs. Surratt, her life, trial, and execution, has been told many times, but never has it been told so well as by Mr. Moore. He has meticulously reviewed the old and familiar records; he has carefully examined materials until recently unavailable or sequestered, or expurgated; he has contrasted statements, confirming some, impeaching others; and has attained an extraordinary objectivity in a relation which, at other hands, has been uneasy with passion, presupposition, or special pleading. And more than this: with admirable documentation and fastidious neatness, he has reported his findings in a style so scrupulously clear as to invest the little book with qualities of literary achievement." D. C. Mearns

+ Am Hist R 59:1025 J1 '54 250w

Reviewed by Ella Lonn

Ann Am Acad 294:187 J1 '54 600w

Booklist 50:276 Mr 15 '54

"Most of his conclusions are on matters not germane to his stated purpose, and with some of them—such as the now undisputed facts concerning Mrs. Surratt's ill treatment by War Secretary Stanton's inquisitors—this reviewer takes sharp issue." S. J. Frank

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 7 '54 200w

Current Hist 26:378 Je '54 70w

"Necessary to all collections on Lincoln and the Civil War." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:454 Mr 1 '54 140w

"The brevity of this book should not belie its excellence, for not only is it the result of persistent research, but it has also demanded an analysis of baffling personalities and a study of obscure motives." B. P. Thomas

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk 11 p6 F 14 '54 650w

"Mrs. Surratt was not guilty beyond reasonable doubt and Guy W. Moore once again proves it. Since this is the generally held conclusion of historians, here is clearly not a book that can change minds or stir up trouble. But, as a retelling, it has the value of bringing the details up to date with the most recent scholarly evidence." H. F. Graff

+ N Y Times p23 F 14 '54 500w

"The restrained objectivity with which Guy W. Moore reexamines the evidence in 'The Case of Mrs. Surratt' is highly commendable. Rather than solving the mystery, however, Mr. Moore tends to leave it even a bit more tantalizing than it was on that humid day eighty-nine years ago." E. S. Miers

+ Sat 37:16 J1 10 '54 320w

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:177 Je '54 120w

MOORE, MRS LILIAN. Important pockets of Paul; il. by William D. Hayes. 73p $2.75 McKay

54-9094

A story about the important things found in a small boy's pockets, and about the lucky penny which helped Paul to learn to swim.

Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 10w

"A sympathetically told story small boys are sure to like and understand." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 4 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:154 Mr 1 '54 60w

"Recommended for school and public libraries." Margaret McFate

+ Library J 79:1410 Ag '54 70w

"Not recommended." E. J. Bowland

— Library J 79:1410 Ag '54 100w

MOORE, MARIANNE, tr. See La Fontaine. Fables

MOORE, PATRICK. Guide to the planets. 254p il $4.95 Norton

523.2 Solar system. Planets 54-13043

"A companion volume to the author's A Guide to the Moon [Book Review Digest 1953]. Gives an authoritative and interestingly informative review of the solar system and discusses in light of current knowledge the possibility of life on the various planets and use of other planets for future space travel. Includes information on amateur observing and astronomy societies, and a bibliography." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 51:147 D 1 '54

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p15 D 2 '54 320w

"A Guide to the Planets,' companion book to his 'A Guide to the Moon,' has many illustrations, some in color, and diagrams. Not least valuable are its five appendixes. As to its authenticity, Patrick Moore is among the foremost astronomers; he is council member of the British Astronomical Association and a member of several other such specialized groups." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '54 360w

MOORE, VIRGINIA. Unicorn; William Butler Yeats' search for reality. 519p $6.50 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Yeats, William Butler 54-9962

"Critics of the writings of Yeats differ on many points and his religious and philosophical beliefs, bound up as they were with the supernatural, have often been a bone of contention. Dr. Moore's study examines these beliefs. . . . She approaches the Irish backgrounds, Hermeticism, Rosicrucianism and Spiritism with a general, though not uncritical, sympathy, and gives a picture of Yeats valuable for its use of hitherto unused sources. There is also new material on Yeats' relationship with Maud Gonne and on his great book, A Vision." Library J

Booklist 50:399 Je 15 '54

"Resolving her speculations on some of the main tenets of Christian belief, the author feels confident in asserting that, however unorthodox and eclectic, Yeats is certainly to be considered a 'Christian' poet, though she utterly rejects attempts that have been made to include him within the great body of Catholic tradition. A scholarly, readable and comprehensive study as well as a boon to future students, it will dim none of the delight of reading the 'Wild Swans at Coole.'" M. P. Brody

+ Cath World 179:317 Jl '54 350w

"Her examination is both intensive (it is explicitly documented) and perceptive to the highest degree, and while limited to a special and perhaps esoteric market—makes a definite contribution."

+ Kirkus 22:181 Mr 1 '54 110w

"A fascinating study. . . . For college, university and larger public collections." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:858 My 1 '54 140w

"Thoroughly documented and much more readable than one might expect, this book will certainly have to be reckoned with in any attempt to understand Yeats—though for most readers the images are not improved as poetry when they are explained in terms of his preposterous science."

Nation 179:96 Jl 31 '54 270w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 18 '54 430w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory

N Y Times p6 My 30 '54 700w

New Yorker 30:84 Ag 28 '54 150w

Reviewed by R. A. Brower

Yale R n s 44:290 winter '55 320w

MOORE, WARD. Bring the jubilee. 194p $2 Farrar, Straus; pa 35c Ballantine

53-10417

An imaginative novel in which the central fact is: what would have happened if the South had won the Civil war. Supposing the South to have won the war, a New York printer's apprentice in 1938 tells the story.

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 14 '54 140w

Kirkus 21:505 Ag 1 '53 110w

Nation 178:56 Ja 16 '54 240w

"It sure is worth reading. All in all, however, the book is not as humorous as I had hoped it would be. Mr. Moore is downright serious, even philosophical, at times. But I wanted to laugh, not think." James Street

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 3 '54 650w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 18 '53 250w

"The first satisfying time-travel story in years." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 37:61 F 20 '54 30w

"An excellent science-fiction novel. . . . It is a well-told and interesting yarn with a little philosophy and social comment tossed in to make things nourishingly debatable." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C O 25 '53 60w

MOOREHEAD, ALAN. Rum jungle. 181p il $3.50 Scribner

994 [191.4] Australia—Description and travel 54-5920

"Mr Moorehead left Australia for Europe in 1936 to drink at the sources of a cultural heritage manifest in his native land only in second-best forms. Yet, in spite of the literary success which came to him in an older, more sophisticated world, he carried with him, one guesses, the nagging awareness of an Australian might-have-been. When he returned in 1952 he found Australia in process of becoming something quite different from anything dreamt of in his youthful philosophy. . . . Disconcerted, he fled into the bush in quest of his youth. But the escape is never complete. There is a rum jungle of emotive forces. . . . His rediscovery of Australia ends with the sentence 'Just my sense of guilt remains.'" Manchester Guardian

Booklist 50:338 My 1 '54

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 4 '54 230w

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 1 '54 650w

Horn Bk 30:361 O '54 80w

Kirkus 21:817 D 15 '53 240w

MOOREHEAD, ALAN—Continued

"The uranium mine at Rum Jungle gives the book its title, but the author's reference to the future of atomic power in Australia and the significance of Woomera is only formal. It is the doomed, incongruous Australia of the past which fascinates him, as it will fascinate the reader." Douglas Wilkie

+ Manchester Guardian p7 N 27 '53 500w

"More vividly than most travel books this collection of casual impressions illuminates a little-known and fascinating corner of the world."

+ Nation 178:389 My 1 '54 120w

"I greatly admired some of the separate chapters when I read them last year in 'The New Yorker.' They seemed to me reporting at its very best and they appear to even greater advantage in the book, linked and given depth by the author's sensitive awareness that, even for Australians, prosperity is not enough." P. L. Travers

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p5 Mr 21 '54 700w

"A happy thing when an old dream comes true—and also a little bit saddening—as the author makes clear. As the situation suggests, it's precisely this play of the feelings, the urbane yet vivid and lively reportage on the one hand, the spiritual creeping off to the silent bush on the other; the combination of travel with autobiography, and over all the brooding Australian strangeness, which make 'Rum Jungle' an effective and entertaining book." W. M. Teller

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 14 '54 800w

"It is one of the best travel books—though it is a good deal more than just that—I have read in many years." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 26 '54 600w

"The reader can quite vividly see the country through which Mr. Moorehead passed; and he skilfully lets one know how he felt about it. As journalism, his book is out of the topmost drawer. It is excellent reading, but the implication that the country he traveled is under-reported is certainly not accurate." C. H. Grattan

+ — Sat R 37:19 My 8 '54 700w

"Mr. Moorehead is an entertaining writer. . . His correspondent's eye sweeps crisply over his native land; and he is nostalgic for the 'days when everything was an experiment and a discovery.'" David Stone

+ Spec p677 D 4 '53 380w

"Here is a form of modern journalism we are familiar with: it seizes the reader's interest; it is vigorous, it does not bore. It is glossily easy to read. It is ideal for a tedious train journey. But it rarely dips beneath the surface patina and it is by no means a rediscovery by Mr. Moorehead of his native land. The land he writes of is the journalist's land."

Times [London] Lit Sup p664 O 16 '53 850w

MOOSDORF, JOHANNA. Flight to Africa; tr. from the German by Richard and Clara Winston. 256p $3.50 Harcourt

54-7900

A novel of Europeans in Africa, and particularly of the French doctor, Marcel Lebrun, and his search for the reasons lying behind his wife's suicide.

"Miss Moosdorf's novel is sometimes clumsy in style and fuzzy in characterizations and implications. It is most successful in its description of Germany, least so in its account of Africa. There is no clear impression of the social framework in which Suzanne Lebrun lived and died, or of the relationship between natives and colonists as there is, for example, in Forster's and Orwell's stories of India." Jean Holzhauer

+ — Commonweal 60:468 Ag 13 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:403 J1 1 '54 210w

"Whether this is a tale of war's aftermath, of the white man's proverbial weakness or of blackest magic, or whether all three themes were in the author's mind, 'Flight to Africa' remains full of unspoken hints and implications, a suggestion for a story rather than the lucid entity itself. And although a reader enjoys legitimate suspense, he may balk when mystified until the end." Virgilia Peterson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 15 '54 650w

"This European novel of Africa is a distinct change of pace from the realistic fiction Africans themselves are writing nowadays. . . The author writes with a certain dark eloquence reminiscent at its best of Joseph Conrad. This style is an impressive instrument. In a story more fully within the author's grasp it should show to real advantage." John Barkham

+ — N Y Times p24 S 19 '54 240w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springfd Republican p5C S 5 '54 370w

Wis Lib Bul 50:211 O '54

MORAIN, LLOYD, and MORAIN, MARY. Humanism as the next step; an introduction for liberal Protestants, Catholics, and Jews. 118p $2 Beacon press

144 Humanism

54-6161

"In this book the president of the American Humanist Association and his wife, who is a director of the International Humanist and Ethical Union, states the case for the organized religious and philosophical movement known as Humanism. . . The authors point out that 'the Humanism described in this book is not to be confused with the 'literary Humanism' associated with the name of Irving Babbitt in the 1920s. Religious Humanism as an organized movement in America is new, but as a philosophical point of view it is as old as Protogoras.'" Publisher's note

Booklist 50:311 Ap 15 '54

Christian Century 71:852 J1 14 '54 40w

Reviewed by J. A. Torres

Ethics 64:332 J1 '54 170w

MORAN, EUGENE FRANCIS. Famous harbors of the world; il. by Elton C. Fax. (Gateway bk) 99p $1.75 Random house

387.1 Harbors—Juvenile literature 53-6275

Contents: About harbors and men; Liverpool: a port made by man; Hamburg: seaport on a river highway; Sydney: gateway and playground; Hong Kong: trading post in the Pacific; New York: the big port. Index.

"Not remarkable in either scope or writing but useful and interesting. Illustrated with drawings and photographs. Grades 4-7."

Booklist 50:244 F 15 '54

Kirkus 21:535 Ag 15 '53 80w

Reviewed by Anne Izard

Library J 78:1548 S 15 '53 60w

N Y Times p28 F 7 '54 50w

MORAN, MABEL (O'CONNELL) (MABEL O'MORAN, pseud). State boy. 182p $2.75 Lip-pincott

54-8106

Story of two reform school boys who are adopted by sturdy, loving Mom, and taught to be good members of society. For ages twelve to fourteen.

"It makes unforgettable reading, warm with homely details of rural living, a variety of credible people, and natural conversation. A wholesome and provocative book for the thoughtful young person." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:436 D '54 120w

"An exhausting eye-opener to the real problems of juvenile delinquency and an unsentimental picture of an altruistic personality."

+ Kirkus 22:488 Ag 1 '54 230w

"A warm-hearted story with real characters and unusual plot. Good picture of farm life. Recommended for ages 12-15." R. H. Urban

+ Library J 79:1673 S 15 '54 70w

"Undoubtedly the author's message—that wayward boys can be reclaimed and remade by love—is a fine one, but Mom's unceasing sweetness drowns it in whipped cream and treacle. Not for me and, I do believe, not for the 12-16-year-olds for whom it is labeled." M. C. Scoggin

— N Y Times p44 O 24 '54 200w

MORECROFT, ANNIE. Fragile chain. 308p $3.50 Dodd

54-6123

Story of an American girl who marries into a family of Italian immigrants.

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 11 '54 280w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 S 7 '54 150w

Reviewed by Mary Scrutton

New Statesman & Nation 48:302 S 11 '54 240w

"Miss Morecroft has told her story with great honesty, sparing neither of the civilizations she examines, and yet it reads like an intellectual exercise. All the passions flourish within it, and yet these people are passionless. Miss Morecroft sees tragedy, but she does not feel it. And none of her characters feels it either, which is why we cannot care greatly about them." Sylvia Stallings

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 21 '54 550w

"This first novel rates high as a smooth, mature performance. At times, however, 'The Fragile Chain' all but snaps under the harsh tensions of modern first-generation family life. The narrative would have hewed to a tauter line if the author had been less partial to Jamesian analyses." A. F. Wolfe

+ — N Y Times p23 Mr 28 '54 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p621 O 1 '54 180w

MORENUS, RICHARD. Northland adventure. 250p $2.50 Dodd

54-6655

The adventures of a fifteen-year-old boy scout and his family in the Canadian bush. Randy solves a mystery and goes thru some dangerous experiences before the trading post becomes a safe place for the Freemans.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 22 90w

"'Northland Adventure' is well told. Scotty is my favorite, an outstanding character, a devotee of Burns and hot porridge, always good for a laugh. Junior readers will like Randy and Ahmik without reservation. Best of all, however, is the bush. In this book you are really there." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 My 13 '54 280w

Reviewed by Ann Nelson

Library J 79:1327 J1 '54 70w

"To an exciting plot the author has brought a rich background of northland lore." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p31 Je 6 '54 120w

MORETTI, UGO. Rogue wind; tr. from the Italian by Giuseppina T. Salvadori and Bernice L. Lewis. 217p $2.95 Prentice-Hall

53-9628

Character study of a nameless young Italian, called Vento, making a precarious living in Mussolini's Italy. "Fundamentally, Vento is the classic figure of Harlequin, the swindling, sly, audacious chaser of girls, mooning for his Columbine outside the house where she is locked from him. However, as the author presents him, he is more various than that: he is several possible men, as a man is several possible masks." (N Y Times)

Booklist 50:241 F 15 '54

Kirkus 21:450 J1 15 '53 210w

"Unfortunately, style is everything in such a tale; the idiom must be right. It cannot be said that this translation assists the book. Its language is American slang. We cannot believe in Vento when he exclaims 'Phooey!' " Donald Barr

N Y Times p39 N 8 '53 180w

"The book has its faults, as all first novels must. There is too much action, there are too many figures for the size of the canvas. Here and there an excessive sentimentality appears and the ending is contrived and unconvincing. Yet the book's virtues, I think, outweigh its faults. Unlike most of his contemporaries and, indeed, unlike some of the older novelists of greater repute, Moretti does know how to tell a story and to keep his narrative moving along." T. G. Bergin

+ — Sat R 36:26 O 3 '53 650w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 10 '54 30w

MORGAN, BRIAN STANFORD. Business at Blanche Capel. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 292p $3.75 Little

53-7317

A novel about bacterial warfare and espionage in England. The scene of most of the action is a virus research station in Essex, where an eminent biologist and his beautiful and enigmatical associate, Alma Schwartz, are employed. When a flask filled with a deadly virus is stolen the two set out to pursue the thief across the continent of Europe.

"A superbly told story, whose remarkable pace and suspense more than make up for its minor implausibilities. Most important—and in this respect Morgan strongly resembles Eric Ambler—it deals seriously with matters of overwhelming gravity without losing anything of its power as popular fiction." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 7 '54 300w

Kirkus 21:767 D 1 '53 210w

"Though some of the people at the station are types, most of them live and breathe on the printed page, from the ineffectual, idealistic Director, to the hapless young couple who commit suicide. An outstandingly good British thriller, well-written, exciting, convincing in its treatment of Communist conspirators." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:205 F 1 '54 130w

"A straightforward, workmanlike, and again immensely filmable thriller, with far fetched but credible situations, good dialogue, and characters you can care about." Isabel Quigly

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 12 '54 130w

"Mr. Morgan's story avoids the dramatic cliché in a good many instances, and it is doubly convincing for this very reason." Anne Brooks

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 7 '54 280w

"It is shallow as a novel and inept as a thriller." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p14 F 7 '54 90w

"A serious problem is neatly indicated under the story's genuine thrills." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 28 '54 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:34 Mr 27 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 70w

MORGAN, CHARLES. Burning glass; a play, with a pref: On power over nature. 155p $2.50 St Martins

822

54-1356

"Intended for study rather than the stage, this philosophic drama states a dilemma every scientist faces when one of his discoveries threatens to subvert nature and annihilate mankind. Christopher Terriford, a young British scientist, has invented a machine that can burn up the earth or any part of it by harnessing the power of the sun. After a long debate with himself, his family, and the Prime Minister, he decides to keep his discovery a secret except in the emergency of war. Using his characters as mouthpieces, the dramatist argues brilliantly about ■ problem that troubles the conscience of many scientists in our time." Booklist

MORGAN, CHARLES—Continued

Booklist 50:294 Ap 1 '54

"The atomic subject matter will attract community theatres as timely. Recommended to the libraries which service them." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1233 Je 15 '54 50w

"A grave and fascinating drama." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p5 Mr 28 '54 420w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 4 '54 180w

"The Burning Glass is a more compelling story than any other that Mr. Morgan has written for the theatre.

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p115 F 19 '54 800w

MORGAN, DALE LOWELL. Jedediah Smith; and the opening of the West. 458p il $4.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Smith, Jedediah Strong. Fur trade. West—History 53-10550

"Jedediah Smith was one of the Mountain Men—that 'reckless breed' which, ahead of maps, dared into the Rocky Mountains and beyond. He was different from his fellows. He never rioted, never, so far as is known, lived with a squaw, did not smoke, probably did not laugh. He called himself, and was, a Christian. He was not reckless, but he seemed unable to rest except when pitting himself against the wilderness. He was highly intelligent, responsible, generous. After eight years of hunting, he cashed in for what was at the time a fortune, then set out as a Santa Fe trader. When still only 32, he was killed by Comanches in 1831." (N Y Times) Index.

"Dale Morgan, a westerner, a Mormon, and the author of two excellent works, The Humboldt and The Great Salt Lake, has given us now a scholarly and well-written volume on Jedediah Smith, which may well serve as a base for a complete history of the fur trade of the West. Few have attempted and none has achieved such a task." A. P. Nasatir

+ Am Hist R 59:943 Jl '54 550w

Booklist 50:203 Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:83 Ja '54 30w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 27 '53 350w

"A distinguished work of historical scholarship, based on an absolute command of the sources (including much unpublished material that has recently become accessible), well written, and notable for its analytical depth." H. N. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7.D 6 '53 900w

"'Jedediah Smith and the Opening of the West' is both more and less than a biography. It is less simply because not enough is known about Smith to fill out the portrait. It is more because of the sketches of other Mountain Men and of the vast and hostile land they moved over. The chapters are alive with characters; the geography of the region is overexplained. Maps, which are not furnished beyond end papers, could have saved pages of exposition. Dale Morgan is a scholar who knows how to write." J. F. Dobie

+ N Y Times p16 D 27 '53 320w

"Mr. Morgan has tracked down every scrap of information about Smith (all his known letters are appended to the text) and has done a full-scale reconstruction of a commanding figure and a period of great ferment and vitality."

+ New Yorker 29:90 Ja 9 '54 220w

"Someone, certainly, was due to write the detailed, documented and authentic story of Jedediah Smith. Mr. Morgan has done it. This is the book on one of the true great men of his era." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 D 7 '53 650w

Springf'd Republican p5C F 7 '53 550w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:9 Mr '54 250w

MORGAN, DAVID. True adventures of rail-roaders; il. by W. A. Akin, jr. 209p $2.75 Little

385 Railroads—Juvenile literature 54-5119

"Tells true tales of men, but also gives a dramatic introduction to railroading in all its aspects. This is the book for the boy of ten to fourteen who is beginning to study freight cars or haunt the round-house, or collect railroad books. It is brief and lively, and it speaks as man to man." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by Virginia Haviland

Library J 79:1409 Ag '54 70w

"His is the best book on this subject we have read, on an age level below that of Mr. Beebe's noble, big tomes." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 2 '54 50w

"In spite of many books on railroading, young readers' interest seems as inexhaustible as the subject-matter, and these stories offer fresh and varied fare. Adults may find the slick, rather hopped-up style irritating, but most teen-agers will probably like it." Iris Vinton

+ — N Y Times p18 Je 27 '54 50w

MORGAN, KENNETH WILLIAM, ed. Religion of the Hindus; contributors: D. S. Sarma [and others]. 434p $5 Ronald

294.5 Hinduism 53-10466

"Seven Hindu scholars (all living in India) discuss aspects of the Hindu religion: Nature and history of Hinduism; Hindu concept of God; Hindu concept of the natural world; Role of man in Hinduism; Hindu religious practices; and, Hindu religious thought. Included are representative selections from the Hindu sacred writings." (Library J) Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

Cath World 179:400 Ag '54 150w

"The authors, with their differing viewpoints, highlight the unity of Hinduism even as they demonstrate its variety. The introductory chapter by D. S. Sarma is a masterpiece." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p50 D 6 '53 40w

"Among many books on the Eastern religions addressed to Western readers, this one has distinctive characteristics which make it singularly attractive. In the first place, though the text was written by devout adherents of the Hindu religion, the work was not designed for any propagandist or apologetic purpose. . . The seven Hindu contributors are all scholars connected with one or another of the Indian universities. . . For the Christian reader who wants to get in one volume the clearest possible view of what Hinduism is and how it looks from the inside, this is the book."

+ Christian Century 70:1501 D 23 '53 240w

"There is a valuable map of India on the end papers showing the location of the major Hindu shrines. There is an excellent glossary—a distinct necessity, since the writers use many Sanskrit terms. And there is a good, though by no means exhaustive, bibliography. Altogether this is an excellent book and one that should prove very useful in courses on the history of religion. We should have books of this kind from other religions as well as Hinduism." C. S. Braden

+ Christian Century 71:147 F 3 '53 550w

Reviewed by Betty Heimann

Hibbert J 52:304 Ap '54 1000w

"For students of religion and culture, The Religion of the Hindus should prove that rare good book which treats a subject so adequately that its usefulness will extend far into the future as a basic reference work. . . As a teaching tool, this volume fills a real need in bridging the gap between the short Western summary and the patient multi-volumed Eastern approach to the subject of Hinduism. It further distinguishes itself by being neither a Westerner's view of Hinduism nor an Easterner's estimate as to what might interest the Western mind on the subject. . . The editing shows careful and painstaking work, with only minor inconsistencies in capitalization and italicization proving exceptions to an otherwise sound job. In addition to the pronunciation guide and glossary, a bibliography and an index further increase the value of the book." J. J. Fussell

+ J Religion 34:219 J1 '54 900w

"An authoritative and admirably clear introduction to a complex subject, of value to student and layman alike. Highly recommended." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 78:1682 O 1 '53 70w

"The Religion of the Hindus is undoubtedly the most important book about Hinduism ever to appear in English, or for that matter any foreign language that I know. It is concise, compact, and comprehensive, but perhaps its chief distinction for the uninitiated reader is the fact that Indians themselves are writing about their religion, instead of the more usual practice of foreigners describing quaint and curious customs of the alien." Faubion Bowers

+ New Repub 130:20 Ja 18 '54 700w

MORGAN, MURRAY CROMWELL. The dam. 162p il $3.50 Viking

627.8 Grand Coulee dam 54-9881

A popularly written account of the Grand Coulee dam in Washington, climaxed by the story of one day in March, 1952, when a wrong button was pushed and disaster nearly overwhelmed the dam.

Booklist 51:7 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:7 O '54 10w

Kirkus 22:423 J1 1 '54 170w

"Morgan's style fits his treatment of the subject—reportorial and editorial, it stimulates interest with pithy description and generous use of 'action-words.' Superior illustrations. Warmly recommended for all but the smallest libraries." Clarence Gorchels

+ Library J 79:1509 S 1 '54 130w

"The story of the Grand Coulee is told by Murray Morgan in a style that brings to mind George R. Stewart's splendid documentary stories, 'Fire' and 'Storm.' It is never dull, and at some points is as exciting as a Western thriller." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 S 5 '54 500w

"A great reporter's tall but true tale of a new frontier in our Far West." Russell Lord

+ N Y Times p24 Ag 22 '54 400w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 300w

MORGENTHAU, HANS JOACHIM. Politics among nations; the struggle for power and peace. 2d ed rev & enl 600p maps $7.50; text ed $5.75 Knopf

341 World politics. International relations 53-12241

"In 1947 Hans Morgenthau produced a book, Politics Among Nations [Book Review Digest 1948, 1949] which may fairly be described as bringing Machiavelli up to date. Six years of further observation on the international scene have led Professor Morgenthau to bring himself up to date. This second edition is completely revised, with especial view to colonial revolutionism and the various efforts of governments to make supra-governmental agreements both within and without the UN." (New Repub) Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

"Only by a lifetime of devotion to his discipline could Professor Morgenthau have made his convincing judgments on the actual distribution of political power today and in the hopes for various types of restraint on that power. But, supposing we look at power from outside his discipline for a moment, let us consider what a student of 'psychological man' might have to say. One hesitates to tear down a political scientist's last best hope, yet is not the idea of enlightened self-interest very close to a dream?" Priscilla Robertson

+ New Repub 130:19 My 31 '54 1300w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R 37:37 Ag 14 '54 90w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. By land and by sea; essays and addresses. 359p $5 Knopf 973.04 U.S.—History—Addresses, essays, lectures 52-12210

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"The final word is one of commendation for a type of book that too often seems musty and jejune. If I were teaching a course in methodology I should, with the publisher's and author's approval, make some of these essays required reading." G. S. Ford

+ Am Hist R 59:446 Ja '54 400w

"This brilliant collection of essays and addresses proves beyond doubt that neither the art of essay-writing nor the day of leisurely, reflective historian is past."

+ Current Hist 26:61 Ja '54 100w

Foreign Affairs 32:509 Ap '54 10w

"By Land and By Sea is truly—as William Bentinck-Smith described it in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin—'history that speaks to the heart.'" W. M. Whitehill

+ New Eng Q 27:108 Mr '54 1300w

"Having finished work on his monumental History of U. S. Naval Operations in World War II, Admiral Morison has now collected sixteen of his articles and addresses published since 1920. They would confirm, if confirmation were needed, his reputation for wide research, trenchant summarizing, and a vigorous, manly style."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:407 D '53 240w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. History of United States naval operations in World war II; v9, Sicily, Salerno, Anzio, January 1943-June 1944. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 413p il maps $6 Little

940.545973 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. U.S. Navy (47-1571)

Volume nine of this history of World war II covers the period of the opening of the second front in the Mediterranean area, beginning with the Casablanca Conference of January 1943. Index.

Booklist 51:172 D 15 '54

Reviewed by Lloyd Wendt

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 31 '54 390w

Reviewed by F. L. Oliver

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 9 '54 600w

Kirkus 22:565 Ag 15 '54 210w

"A few high ranking officers occasionally disagree with Morison and his staff, but the work as a whole is important, balanced and painstaking, and graced in this instance with allusions to naval operations which took place on these legendary shores time out of mind." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:1888 O 15 '54 140w

"It has the same saltily literate style, the thoughtful analysis of the prior strategy and planning, the careful attention to the details of execution with the names and exploits of the men and the ships, the sense of scene and color always under the curb of fact, the final evaluation of the wisdom or unwisdom of what was planned and what was done. The detail will be of imperishable value to all those who were there." Walter Millis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 31 '54 1100w

"'Sicily-Salerno-Anzio' is a book that is marred for the lay reader by its inevitable repetitiousness; landing after landing and technique after technique are described in detail. It has other faults; Mr[Morison is overkind to the Italians—and particularly to their Navy. Occasionally he is overemphatic in his judgments. But the stimulating and controversial opinions, the skillful flashes of dramatic color and the carefully woven detail will have tremendous interest for strategists and historians—and for all who fought in what Mussolini proudly used to call 'Mare Nostrum.'" H. W. Baldwin

MORISON, S. E.—Continued

+ — N Y Times p32 N 14 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Scott Newhall

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 21 '54 1400w

Time 64:92 O 25 '54 500w

MORRIS, JEAN. A man and two gods. 250p $3 Viking

54-5704

"The problem: 'what is justice?' is central to this low-key story of international intrigue. When Richard Bering kills Radaev on orders of another soldier he is condemned as a murderer, but a turn in events makes his a heroic act. The dilemma of the individual in search for pure justice without the element of mercy is complicated by the group morality of international politics." Library J

Booklist 50:260 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:231 Je '54 220w

"The climate and conflict of this story are admirable, and the characterization is adequate. Miriam, the daughter of Richard's lawyer, being a gentle foil for the almost too odious Bronya. This is indeed a notable attempt to combine in fictionalized form the exterior excitement of a contemporary dilemma with the greater tension of an eternal interior drama." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 60:182 My 21 '54 800w

"Preoccupation with justice divorced from human fallibility, and with the parallel of Orestes and his fate, and the distance of a coolly skilled style will keep this within a cerebral and classic-minded audience."

Kirkus 22:9 Ja 1 '54 160w

"The description passages are on the florid side though the tone of the book is monotonous; yet, because of the challenge of its ideas, the book is recommended." Jerome Cushman

Library J 79:205 F 1 '54 120w

"A remarkable first novel." H. I.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 25 '53 200w

"Miss Morris's two imaginary European countries are very thinly rendered, names without local habitations, and her characters are lifeless except in the most superficial way. The problem she has stated remains abstract for lack of flesh and blood." Walter Allen

— New Statesman & Nation 46:354 S 26 '53 140w

"Miss Morris writes very well indeed to make all this seem even fairly plausible. . . What 'A Man and Two Gods' suffers from is probably inherent in its genre—a sense of unreality due to being fixed in neither identifiable place nor time, and this, doubtless, for reasons calculated by the author." James Hilton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 7 '54 700w

"With her intuitive grasp of plotting and construction, so rare in a first novel, and her skill in fusing an abstract ethical theme with a compelling personal narrative. Jean Morris is obviously a girl to watch—and you'd better start watching right now." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p28 F 28 '54 200w

"Miss Morris, a cold writer, presses hard in her determination to prove an analogy between Bering's dilemma and the dilemma of Orestes, both heroes having acted under one moral code and been judged under another, but the giant framework of the Greek tragedy proves a little overpowering for her flimsy work, which is, after all, only a very artificial and inconclusive, although clever, piece."

New Yorker 30:115 F 27 '54 140w

"While Miss Morris has shown a fine understanding of the main intellectual problem with which she is dealing, she has failed to make the characters of her novel come alive with its complexities. One has the feeling of never quite meeting the chief character, although several others . . . are given substance to prove their ephemeral relation to the question at hand." R. S. Israel

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 19 '54 650w

Reviewed by H. C. Webster

Sat R 37:18 Mr 20 '54 490w

Reviewed by Stevie Smith

Spec p310 S 18 '53 340w

Times [London] Lit Sup p657 O 16 '53 170w

MORRIS, RICHARD BRANDON, ed. Encyclopedia of American history [Henry Steele Commager, chief consultant editor]. 776p maps $6; text ed $4.50; 2v ed $8.50 Harper 973.03 U.S.—History—Dictionaries 53-5384

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"As a one-volume reference work, the Encyclopedia of American History will undoubtedly become one of the standard reference books in its field. It is authoritative, comprehensive, and well-organized. Its format is good, and its price, compared to similar works, is low. For these reasons, the Encyclopedia of American History is recommended for home use, and for public, school, and college libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 24:64 O '53 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p550 S '54 330w

MORRIS, WRIGHT. Huge season. 306p $3.75 Viking

54-10858

On a train ride from Philadelphia to New York in 1952 Peter Foley reviewed the effects of the jazz age on himself and his friends. Their exploits in college, in Paris, and in love, are studied, intermingling the past and the present, and the picture of a generation is the result.

Booklist 51:30; 63 S 15 '54; O 1 '54

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 3 '54 600w

"I rather think that Wright Morris will have to crown his career with a more substantial book than this before The Huge Season, retroactively, will be much sought after." P. F. Quinn

Commonweal 61:72 O 22 '54 1200w

"This new novel may well be the one that brings Morris a popular audience as well as critical notice. . . Morris is alternately sardonic, ironic, straightforward, impressionistic. If he is less quirky, if his wit is not as sharp as his observation, if the novel is quite a bit less perfect than his last, he is trying a bigger thing in time, space and meaning. No one should be disappointed."

+ — Kirkus 22:543 Ag 15 '54 270w

"Morris has written a wonderful novel. It has power, meaning, freshness, vitality and style. Certainly, it is one of the most important novels of the year, and I would like to think it is a major contribution to our literature. Highly recommended for all fiction collections."

W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1825 O 1 '54 170w

Reviewed by Stanley Cooperman

Nation 179:344 O 16 '54 270w

"Mr. Morris is one of the most entertaining of our serious novelists: he has a sharp eye and a sharp tongue. He is also an ambitious novelist, and in 'The Huge Season' he has tackled a big subject in a fascinating way."

Arthur Mizener

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p8 O 10 '54 650w

"The execution is brilliant. A master of the comic and deeply sensitive to the most inarticulate of American sorrows, Morris' work is moving as only truly original work can be. . . Many more readers than he has had so far owe themselves the extraordinary pleasures of Wright Morris' novels." Mark Schorer

+ N Y Times p4 O 3 '54 950w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 30:175 O 9 '54 450w

"With increasing skill and insight, the serious (not solemn) contemporary novelist is evaluating our time of cold war and anxiety by juxtaposing characters and situations of our own and earlier decades. . . Mr. Morrison, an expert photographer as well as an expert craftsman, makes you see and feel as well as think. He always has; and one wonders why he is not more generally recognized as one of America's leading novelists." H. C. Webster

+ Sat R 37:29 O 2 '54 800w

• Time 64:92 O 25 '54 250w

"Almost any attempt to describe 'The Huge Season' briefly is doomed to failure, for the book is complex in a way few current novels are. Wright Morris has been growing steadily as a writer. His work is difficult, partly because it has a deceptively innocent air of having been dashed off with no particular attention and of requiring little of the reader; partly because Morris does not use formulas or push ideologies. . . Nevertheless, 'The Huge Season' is a lively and imaginative novel, well worth reading." Paul Pickrel

+ — Yale R n s 44:317 winter '55 280w

MORRISON, HERBERT STANLEY. Government and Parliament. 363p $3.40 Oxford

342.42 Great Britain. Parliament. Great Britain—Politics and government 54-3794

"Subtitled 'A Survey From the Inside,' this is a guide to the main features of the British Constitution written by a man who has been prominent in English politics since the late 20s, being at various times, under various governments, Minister of Supply, Home Secretary and Minister of Security, and Deputy Prime Minister. The chief features discussed in the book are: the Monarchy, the Cabinet and its Committees, the House of Commons, political parties, the House of Lords and certain major aspects of British administration. Mr. Morrison also gives his views on such things as the 'Overlords' experiment and the future of the House of Lords." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Should one not legitimately expect from a political figure like Mr. Morrison who has entitled his book Government and Parliament, A Survey from the Inside more than one would get from a study of the same subject by an outsider? Tried on this score Mr. Morrison is found wanting. Apart from a few valuable personal reflections and accounts . . . there is little in this book which has not already been described by other writers. . . This is not to say that it is not a good book. It is, as good as most standard textbooks on British government. . . But the pity is that in spite of the author's peculiar advantages the book is no better than the average text. It is as unexciting, and worse in its repetitive style. Much of it is elementary. One doesn't need to be told half a dozen times that ministers are responsible for everything that occurs in their departments." P. W. Fox

+ — Canadian Forum 34:161 O '54 700w

"Mr. Morrison's book [has] immediate and vital interest. Here is one who speaks with authority, and not as the scribes." Walter Elliot

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:566 My 1 '54 850w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 24 '54 70w

"Mr. Morrison is a jovial guide. There was a risk that in writing a book on such a subject he might have become enmeshed in the verbiage of committees and rules of procedure, but he has kept himself remarkably free. The authentic Morrison speaks on every page. A difficult problem becomes a 'headache.' And the staggering assurance of the Londoner who refuses to be put down by anybody or anything (except perhaps the Foreign Office) is here too." Francis Boyd

+ Spec p557 My 7 '54 750w

"Without being a work of scholarship in the narrow sense of providing historical reference, precedents and academic allusion, Government and Parliament is, nevertheless, a work of research in the deepest and most valuable meaning of the phrase. Mr. Morrison deserves the general gratitude for revealing his unique experience."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p275 Ap 30 '54 1250w

MORRISON, PEGGY (MARCH COST, pseud). Invitation from Minerva. 286p $3.50 Lippincott

54-5602

Sequel to the author's earlier novel about the Princess Victoria Babenburg, The Hour Awaits (Book Review Digest 1953). In this several people are invited to dine with the Princess in her castle in the Tyrol, an avalanche falls upon the castle, and for seven days the Princess and her guests and servants are isolated from the rest of the world.

Booklist 50:321 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:185 My '54 50w

Reviewed by La Tourette Stockwell

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 11 '54 250w

"Readers of March Cost's earlier tales of Princess Victoria will be further delighted with this surprise-filled story, but 'Invitation from Minerva' is complete in itself." O. D. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 15 '54 100w

"An elusive charm, a subtle sophistication, combine with an intricacy of plot and play of character on character, to make this, for one reader anyhow, one of the high spots of the new season."

+ Kirkus 22:71 F 1 '54 300w

"A witty and entertaining story which is not melodramatic and can be highly recommended as a sprightly comedy of manners." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 79:622 Ap 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by Patricia Hodgart

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 30 '54 110w

"As sequel or non-sequitur (it is both) to 'The Hour Awaits,' this novel cannot compare with that finely wrought small masterpiece. Yet, March Cost's unmistakable art is still here." Georgianne Sampson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 18 '54 330w

"The frankly contrived means by which the gathering is assembled under the chateau's strong roof are well justified by the dramatic intensity of what is revealed when individuals discard their masks; of how under duress the truth stands bare, courage and weaknesses manifest themselves and remembered emotions are rendered trebly poignant. Not only has Miss Cost written an absorbing drama of mounting suspense about human beings, but she has obviously taken great pains to study the practical details of avalanche history." Nancie Matthews

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 11 '54 450w

"Miss Cost describes the dinner party and the events leading up to it with grace and humor, and manages to invest every one of her characters with a theatrical elegance that is good fun to contemplate."

+ New Yorker 30:147 Ap 10 '54 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 16 '54 450w

"This is not a story about people or places with any claim on actuality. This is pantomime for those who like diverting romance, told in sparkling-water repartee." Evelyn Eaton

Sat R 37:21 Ap 10 '54 470w

"The basic situation is developed in one of the most elaborately organized novels I have read for years. It was James Stephens who first charged me to read the work of Miss March Cost, and Invitation to Minerva displays the qualities that won his admiration, not lightly given. Original, wilful, ironic, she keeps an unusual balance between action and analysis, and makes both dramatic. She uses words with a poet's accuracy, and can convey both beauty and charm without anatomising them. Her eye is sharp and odd. . . . The best of her dialogue is so good one feels that the stilted and artificial passages have some deliberate purpose: but, even beneath Miss Cost's spell, I cannot believe such words were ever spoken by anybody. This, however, is my one point of resistance to a novel which adds to its other attractions the primitive virtue of suspense." L. A. G. Strong

MORRISON, PEGGY—Continued

+ Spec p370 Mr 26 '54 550w

MORRISON, WILLIAM, pseud. See Samachson, J.

MORSE, NANCY CARTER. Satisfactions in the white-collar job. 235p $3.50 Univ. of Mich. press

658.3 [651.34] Job satisfaction. Office workers 53-12570

"The central concerns of this study revolve around the characteristics in the work situation that lead or do not lead to work satisfactions. A large number of specific variables are examined within the general categories of financial returns, job prestige, intrinsic job satisfactions, involvement in the company, pride in the work group, and character of supervision. Other variables relate to such 'objective' characteristics of the respondents as age, sex, education, and length of service, and such 'subjective' characteristics as need and aspiration levels. The whole is cast within an explicit theoretical framework that attempts to specify the general relationship between motivation and environmentally-derived satisfactions." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by R. C. Stone

Am Soc 19:499 Ag '54 700w

"This study is a technical research report with few concessions to the general reader. The exposition is consistently clear and coherent, however, and the summaries largely non-technical." W. E. Moore

Ann Am Acad 292:173 Mr '54 400w

"This book has been written by a member of the staff of the Survey Research Center of the Institute for Social Research at the University of Michigan. . . . As Study Director with this group, the author should be in a particularly advantageous position to survey, evaluate, and comment on job satisfaction. . . . This reviewer's principal criticism of the book is that it lacks lucidity. The sentence structure is such that re-reading is often necessary." M. M. Bruce

Management R 43:66 Ja '54 700w

MORTIMER, JOHN CLIFFORD. Like men betrayed. 254p $3 Lippincott

54-5598

"Deals with the final struggles of a good man caught and broken by a series of accidents. The man, a London solicitor named Kennet, is not surprised to discover that his wife is his chief antagonist in the ordeal he undergoes, and he finds solace—for a short time, at least—with an unworldly young woman named Sylvia. The story occasionally moves out of London to a remote village called Worsfold." New Yorker

Kirkus 22:77 F 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by M. S. Byam

Library J 79:775 Ap 15 '54 100w

"In his sourly efficient way he gives us ■ brisk and vivid reshuffling of the current clichés of fiction. He writes very well except when his desire for the curt image betrays him into meaninglessness." Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 45:785 Je 27 '53 200w

"John Mortimer's favorite modern authors are said to be Raymond Chandler and Jean Paul Sartre. To a great extent his work shows their influence. The highly diverting story he tells of a father's assumption of his son's guilt has the sustained suspense of a crime tale, but over and beyond that, giving it added stature, is the philosophy that lies at the core of his act." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 28 '54 600w

"Since he is a brooding philosopher as well as a magnetic story-teller, the author never for a moment lets us lose sight of Kennet and all he symbolizes as he moves, almost willingly, to his doom." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 28 '54 420w

"The atmosphere is consistent, alternating between shadowy and sharp impressionism, and the writing is economical, moderately intense, and unflinchingly to the point."

+ New Yorker 30:130 Ap 3 '54 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 1 '54 230w

"It is a patently contrived novel, though neatly worked out and with some good moments." R. D. Charques

Spec p70 Jl 10 '53 140w

"The very facility of his style betrays him too often, in his neat descriptive phrases, into a cleverness of invention rather than observation which challenges the reader's acceptance. Particularly in many of his passages of scornful satire the reality beneath ceases to be recognizable. However, the exciting and complicated plot, developed rather slowly at first and relying at two vital points on the coincidence of one character receiving a telephone call intended for another, compels and holds the reader's attention and interest."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p425 Jl 3 '53 200w

MORTON, JOHN ROBERT. University extension in the United States; a study of the National University Extension Association, made with the assistance of a grant from the Fund for adult education. 144p $2.25; pa $1 Univ. of Ala. press

378.13 University extension 53-3553

"This study which was sponsored by the National University Extension Association is essentially a survey of the extension practices and services of the 75 member institutions. The principal topics included in the study are the following: historical development, functions, organization, financing, facilities, staff, curriculum, consumers, and methods of institutional adult education. The tables provide excellent summaries of the current administrative practices which should be of much interest and assistance to university administrators." Ann Am Acad

"This volume provides a comprehensive statement and summary of university extension services and is a valuable handbook for university administrators and others interested in this important segment of adult education. Professor Morton has made an important contribution to a neglected area of higher education through marshaling and presenting many facts in an interesting and significant context." E. V. Hollis

+ Ann Am Acad 292:184 Mr '54 500w

Booklist 50:215 F 1 '54

"In reporting for the first time a detailed account of university extension activities in the United States, the N.U.E.A. has performed a valuable educational service."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:216 Je '54 260w

MOSER, CLARENCE G. Understanding boys. 190p il $2.50 Assn. press

136.7 Child study. Boys 53-12991

"Clarence Moser, currently associate secretary on the staff of the Central Atlantic Area Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, has written ■ brief guide book for the average parent of infant through teen-age boys. The volume puts in positive, understandable language teachings from family social psychology, child psychology, and education regarding the growth and development of the child and his parents." (J Home Econ) No index.

Booklist 50:133 D 1 '53

"Understanding Boys presents a warm and optimistic view of human beings. Aimed toward the general public as well as toward those working with boys in YMCA, camp, and similar situations, Moser's short book leans heavily on the developmental-task approach, with a pinch of Spock and a dash of Gesell thrown in." George Kaiser

+ El School J 55:56 S '54 400w

"Terms which may be difficult for the lay person to grasp, such as the developmental task concept, are defined and illustrated. Although the names and addresses of leading organizations serving child and family life are included an index and a suggested bibliography would have expanded the usefulness of this volume to both parent and the professional person who may be recommending it to the parent." T. B. Johannis

J Home Econ 46:347 My '54 360w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 29 '53 40w

MOSS, HOWARD. Toy fair. 72p $2.50 Scribner 811 54-7566

A second volume of poems by a young American writer. These poems, written during the last eight years or so, have been previously published in such magazines as New Yorker, Harpers Bazaar, Kenyon Review, etc. Mr. Moss is on the editorial staff of the New Yorker.

Reviewed by Howard Nemerov
Atlantic 194:67 S '54 250w

Reviewed by Nicholas Joost
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 28 '54 80w

Kirkus 21:817 D 15 '53 90w

"This collection should be acquired by all libraries having a representation of the best contemporary poetry." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:558 Mr 15 '54 40w

Reviewed by John Ciardi
Nation 178:184 F 27 '54 40w

"A far-ranging intelligence, a penetrating and sophisticated humor, and a richly sensitive lyric gift are evident in the poetry of Howard Moss."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p28 My 16 '54 170w

"His gifts are a fine eye and ear, and a mind that works in the phrase, a poet's mind." John Ciardi

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 28 '54 220w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 3 '54 150w

Reviewed by I. L. Salomon
Sat ■ 37:21 Je 5 '54 210w

"His intellectual approach is unpretentious; and though his poetry is a probing of reality, it is never so at the expense of intensity and form."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:198 Je '54 240w

MOTOR SERVICE MAGAZINE. New automotive encyclopedia; ed. by William K. Toboldt and Jud Purvis. il $7.95 Goodheart-Willcox

629.202 Automobiles—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 53-11518

"Complete course in automotive mechanics with special emphasis on fundamental principles, trouble shooting." (Subtitle) Copiously illustrated. Index.

Booklist 50:254 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:107 F '54 20w

"It is designed as a successor to the long standard but now obsolete Dyke's Auto Encyclopedia. The style is introductory and practical, and the book will probably enjoy its widest use as a trade school text. . . Not a flawless book but it will be an essential one in most public library automotive collections." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:149 Ja 15 '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:3 Ja '54

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ja 24 '54 30w

MOTTE, JACOB RHETT. Journey into wilderness; ed. by James F. Sunderman. 326p il $6 Univ. of Fla. press

973.5 Creek war, 1836. Seminole war, 2d, 1835-1842. Surgeons—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 53-6655

"An army surgeon's account of life in camp and field during the Creek and Seminole Wars, 1836-1838." Subtitle

"'Journey Into Wilderness' is a valuable sourcebook on army life in the discouraging campaigns against the Seminoles and a good reflection of contemporary white attitudes towards the Indians. . . Motte describes vividly the intense physical discomforts of campaigning in the swampy wilderness, the delights of all-night waltzes with the lovely ladies of St. Augustine, and the lush beauty as well as the squalor of the peninsula. His journal, despite romantic literary embellishments, makes delightful reading today." J. M. El

+ Sat R 37:42 My 1 '54 230w

"Very well edited, with copious notes, the journal is illustrated with good maps as well as with contemporary sketches of Osceola and of Florida scenery."

+ U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:10 Mr '54 200w

MOULD, DAPHNE DESIREE CHARLOTTE POCHIN. Ireland of the saints. 175p il $4.50 British bk. centre

274.15 Celtic church. Ireland—Church history. Monasticism and religious orders [54-8397]

A history of the early Christianity of Ireland, describing how the Celtic saints and scholars received Christianity and later sent it out to the continent of Europe. Copiously illustrated. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:295 Ap 1 '54

"There are numerous illustrations impressive and enlightening. The Index and the Bibliography are good. If the one map had been more carefully reproduced, the book would be beyond reproach."

+ Cath World 179:161 My '54 100w

"To use a word that's far from unusual in the glossary of book reviewing, this is a genuinely unusual book. Considering the author, it's difficult to imagine it being otherwise. She was born in England, is a graduate and Ph.D. of Edinburgh university, is a geologist by training, and lives in County Cork. . . Close to 60 first rate illustrations provide an illuminating accompaniment to the text." J. M. Flynn

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 28 '54 250w

"Ireland of the Saints is less an addition to original scholarship than a balanced and attractive summary of previous research. There are many excellent photographs."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p412 Je 25 '54 550w

MOWRER, PAUL SCOTT. On going to live in New Hampshire. 109p $2.50 Wake-Brook House, Sanbornville, N.H.

811 53-12940

"Paul Scott Mowrer's fourth book of verse, a craft which he has pursued intermittently during a long and distinguished career, newspaperman, war correspondent, and political analyst. It is, not surprisingly, the work of a man with a wide range of interests and a considerable background of experience. The poems range from philosophical and 'occasional' sonnets and lyrics to light verse and satirical epigrams." Sat R

MOWRER, P. S.—Continued

"If he had titled it 'On Leaping a Stone Wall to See What Lies Beyond,' he might have prepared the reader more truly for its mood and substance. For here is a poet for whom the most trivial of everyday experiences is alive with meaning and fraught with a sense of adventure. As a verse technician, Mr. Mowrer uses form skilfully, seeming particularly at home in the rondeaus which he handles with lightness, grace, and a dash of impishness." S. B. Bellows

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 14 '54
400w

"Mr. Mowrer writes with zest and warm feeling, and the poems which so heartily endorse all country pleasures will find a response in like-minded readers." S. H. H.

+ Sat R 37:23 My 22 '54 150w

MOXLEY, VERNA (MRS PAUL MELVIN SMITH). Wind 'til sundown; il. by Warren Tufts. 223p $3.50 Caxton ptrs.

54-9102

Story of a present-day pioneering family facing the dirt, hardships, sickness and despair of their first year on a South Dakota ranch. The story is told in the first-person by the young wife and mother.

Kirkus 22:357 Je 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by Clarence Gorchels
Library J 79:1512 S 1 '54 40w

"Mrs. Moxley writes with a sensitive simplicity that shows an awareness of the world of nature in all its moods and of human beings who can hate it and love it at the same time." Carol Field

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 5 '54
320w

Wis Lib Bul 50:211 O '54

MUDRA, MARIE. David Farragut, sea fighter; decorations by Douglas Gorsline. 177p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Farragut, David Glasgow—Juvenile literature 53-10510

A full length biography of a famous American naval officer who became the first full admiral of the American navy. For high school readers.

Booklist 50:225 F 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 22 '53
50w

Horn Bk 30:44 F '54 70w

Kirkus 21:493 Ag 1 '53 100w

"Recommended." M. K. Walraven
+ Library J 79:77 Ja 1 '54 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p6 N
15 '53 80w

Wis Lib Bul 50:78 Mr '54

MUIR, JOHN. Wilderness world of John Muir; with an introd. and interpretive comments by Edwin Way Teale; il. by Henry B. Kane. 332p $4.50 Houghton

B or 92 Natural history 54-9040

"Naturalist Edwin Way Teale brings together 50-odd selections from Muir's writings with excellent black-and-white decorations by Henry B. Kane. Chosen to reflect Muir's life and career, these are chronologically arranged so that they come close to providing a biography of the famous Scot, or at least a 'biography' of his view of life." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

Booklist 51:82 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:7 O '54 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 17 '54
150w

"A superb collection of [Muir's] nature writing." R. R. Brunn

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 23 '54
700w

"These selections from Muir's works offer reading that is often magnificent, thrilling, exciting, breath-taking and awe-inspiring and the book should be a must for all libraries, nature study or conservation courses, with a definite West Coast audience."

+ Kirkus 22:467 Jl 15 '54 200w

"This admirably edited volume is especially welcome because Muir seems to have been buried under the weight of a collected edition no longer much read. Here is a substantial selection including many of his grandest passages."

+ Nation 61:389 O 30 '54 180w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 D 5 '54
110w

"No one can read this Muir anthology without becoming conscious of a quickening revelation of new aspects of the world's old beauty." Raymond Holden

+ N Y Times p7 S 26 '54 1000w

New Yorker 30:163 O 16 '54 200w

"Mr. Teale has done the job beautifully, and his introduction is exactly what such a preface ought to be." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 16 '54
600w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 400w

MUIR, PERCIVAL HORACE. English children's books, 1600 to 1900. 256p il col il $8 Praeger

028.5 Children's literature—History and criticism 54-6656

A history of English children's books from 1600 to 1900 which makes no pretensions of supplanting Darton's Children's Books in England (Book Review Digest 1933). The author says in his introduction: "I have leaned heavily on Darton throughout, and his book has been constantly at hand at all times. Had it not have been long out of print my book might not have been attempted. My purpose has been more limited than his: I have not attempted the detail of his portrayal; but rather a broader sweep within a smaller compass." Copiously illustrated. Index.

"Drawing from many reference books and from the actual sources themselves, Percy Muir has written a lucid critical analysis of the backgrounds of children's literature in England from 1600 to the beginning of the 20th century. From the start, his sense of period and the cross sections of influences combine with criticism to make pleasurable reading."

+ Kirkus 22:290 My 1 '54 180w

"Those who have enjoyed Mr. Muir's other writings on books will know what to expect from this new volume: it maintains the high standards of excellence which one has come to expect from him. . . The author and the publisher are to be congratulated on the production of that rare thing—an authoritative book of reference value which it is fun to read." R. F. Metzdorf

+ Library J 79:1294 Jl '54 360w

"This large and handsome volume is, we soon find, essentially a bibliographical reference book—interrupted though it is by informing and sometimes provocative chapters, and by an abundance of delightful pictures. . . In spite of a jocularly informal way of writing it is with scholarly and technical matters—the earliest history and the development of book production—that Mr. Muir is most at home." Naomi Lewis

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:572 My 1 '54 1150w

"Delightful history. . . Beautifully produced, with over a hundred pictures, many of them in colour, his book is a permanent exhibition of well chosen specimens, with Mr. Muir, most amiable of curators, standing by to answer questions." Arthur Ransome

+ Spec p406 Ap 2 '54 550w

"Though his compilation is planned as a history of children's books, the narrative passages, describing books and their authors, are more perfunctory than the bibliographical information. He frankly acknowledges that he has no pretensions to supplanting F. J. Harvey Dar-ton's Children's Books. He certainly has nothing of Harvey Darton's sympathetic insight and power of relating a book to the outlook and preoccupations of its time and to other contemporary literature."

Times [London] Lit Sup p1 My 28 '54
1850w

MUKERJEE, RADHAKAMAL (RADHAKA-MALA MUKHOPADHYAYA). Social function of art. 280p 59pl $10 Philosophical lib.
701.1 Art and society 54-3247

"The author is professor of economics and sociology in Lucknow University. One of his many books is The Theory and Art of Mysticism. The two interests thus indicated, the sociological and the metaphysical, are interwoven in this discussion of art. Most Occidental readers will probably find it necessary to get themselves into the spirit of Eastern philosophy by some preliminary studies before they are prepared to find in it much enlightenment on the general theme, but many details will be clear to any interested reader. The specific applications and the many illustrations from sculpture and painting, gathered in two substantial appendices, all have reference to Indian art and to Hindu religion and philosophy." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. H. Mueller

Am Soc R 19:811 D '54 330w

Christian Century 71:1370 N 10 '54
100w

"A solid contribution to the field."

+ Kirkus 22:263 Ap 1 '54 210w

"One feels that the author observes the world from a much greater breadth in time and space than those who write from a much narrower point of view. For the thoughtful reader who wishes to contemplate on art from the world point of view this will be choice reading material."

+ School Arts 53:47 Je '54 200w

MULCAHY, LUCILLE. Pita. 218p $2.75 Coward-McCann 54-11355

Pita Lopez was almost sixteen the day she received her first invitation to a ball. But that was the day Mama fell and broke her leg, and Pita had to take care of the family until Mama could walk. Then there was fiery Papa to placate before the invitation could be accepted. This story of Spanish-Americans in New Mexico is for grades six to eight.

Booklist 51:91 O 15 '54

"Sensitively written, with skillful portrayal of village as well as family relationships, this succeeds as a far better-than-average regional story." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:338 O '54 160w

"Slow moving at times but warm and sincere."

+ Kirkus 22:390 Jl 1 '54 110w

"The gay warm-hearted life in Pita's household and the customs and traditions of the little Spanish-American village make this a colorful story. Older girls will like Pita and her impulsive family. They will also approve of the ingenious way in which her first date is made memorable." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p36 O 31 '54 100w

MUMFORD, LEWIS. In the name of sanity. 244p $3.75 Harcourt

901 Civilization, Modern 54-11324

"A most graphic account of the destruction an atomic war would bring and—rather unexpectedly—the even worse conditions that might prevail should the arms race and international stalemate continue another hundred years. (In the United States: cities abandoned; fewer than 100,000 people left in New York City; schools, factories, farms and government operating underground; staggering taxation; and military dictatorship.) If we are sane we shall prevent the extinction of civilization in either of these ways: admit we are at war, agree to a year's armistice, lay all our cards on the table, and work out a modus vivendi." Library J

Booklist 51:104 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:6 O '54 20w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 3 '54
220w

Reviewed by H. E. Kolbe

Christian Century 71:1466 D 1 '54
1100w

"Mr. Mumford's ideas on most points are admirable and on some are of great value. It is difficult not to agree with almost everything Mr. Mumford says; at the same time, it is difficult to be enthusiastic about anything he says. Moreover, although we tend to nod in agreement as we turn the pages, it is often hard to know exactly what it is we agree with. Mr. Mumford is amiable, humane, and high-minded, but he is also vague and all-inclusive." J. M. Duffy

+ — Commonweal 61:98 O 29 '54 1700w

"Strong words from a strong minded man, these will invite heated discussion."

Kirkus 22:471 Jl 15 '54 250w

"These timely lectures and essays should receive the widest possible dissemination, especially in public libraries and their branches." A. D. Osborn

+ Library J 79:1586 S 15 '54 140w

"I am ashamed of not liking this book. Mr. Mumford is an erudite man, a talented writer, and a courageous thinker, one of the few who still dare say out loud that we must find a way of living at peace with the Communist world. All the same, deeply as I admire him, I still fell sound asleep over his book, which is but a collection of papers given on various occasions over the last seven years." Robert Smith

Nation 179:447 N 20 '54 950w

"The occasional warping of logic and possibility in Mumford's book disturbs me all the more because there is so much to be said for his thesis regarding the insanity of contemporary Western man, and he says it, in the main, most convincingly. Lewis Mumford is not afraid to express unpopular ideas, and he does so with a confidence born of knowledge and intelligence." D. R. Weimer

+ — New Repub 131:18 O 11 '54 2700w

"Lewis Mumford makes his plea for sanity in our culture and civilization in a frankly alarmist mood. He notes some obviously decadent elements in our culture and dwells upon the familiar perils of atomic war in the future of our civilization. Our situation is precarious enough to justify some alarm, but Mr. Mumford is inclined to be extreme in the degree of the alarm felt." Reinhold Niebuhr

N Y Times p31 S 26 '54 900w

"Even when he packs things together a little too tidily, Mr. Mumford's tour through his own informed and humane mind is well worth the price of admission."

+ — New Yorker 30:137 O 30 '54 150w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 27 '54
600w

"Offhand one could wish that our national leaders be required to read a chapter of Mumford before and after every conference and every speech. I therefore regret to add that 'In the Name of Sanity' is likely to intensify one's feeling of futility. It will not be read, of course, by the many who might profit from it; it will convince few except those who are already convinced. But one may also be depressed by Mumford's strategy, aside from some monotony in style." H. J. Muller

+ — Sat R 37:20 S 16 '54 850w

MUNDY, JOHN HINE. Liberty and political power in Toulouse, 1050-1230. 402p maps $6.50
Columbia univ. press

944 Toulouse 54-5191

"This essay is a social history of political power in Toulouse from the latter part of the eleventh through the first thirty years of the thirteenth century. It describes an epoch in which political form went from monarchy, through aristocracy, to democracy. The prince dominated the community in the early twelfth century. In the latter part of that century, much of his power was wrested from him and vested in an aristocracy. Finally, for a brief time in the early thirteenth century, it passed into the hands of the many, the universitas of Toulouse. The passing down or devolution of political power at Toulouse is the central theme of this book." Intro

MUNDY, J. H.—Continued

"Professor Mundy's narrative is clear and logical. His analysis of the actual powers transferred from count to consuls is systematic and thorough. The outstanding feature of his work is, however, the light he is able to throw on the social origins of the consuls and other urban leaders. He has been able to do this through extensive research in unpublished archival material." J. R. Williams

+ Am Hist R 60:79 O '54 320w

"This is a book that everyone interested in the Middle Ages should read. The more time and care he or she can give to its perusal, the greater will be the reward, but a rapid reading of the text alone is eminently worth while." Sidney Painter

+ Ann Am Acad 295:199 S '54 450w

MUNN, CLARENCE. Michigan state multiple offense. 211p il $3.95 Prentice-Hall

796.33 Football 53-12498

"Michigan State's famous Head Football Coach gives a full explanation, complete with on-the-field photographs and diagrams, of the actual coaching techniques and system of plays that have proved so successful. For coaches and players." Library J

Booklist 50:200 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:69 Ja 1 '54 20w

"The theory involved is undoubtedly sound. But the not so-successful coach who reads it may well ask, too: Where do I get the players to make this offense work?" I. T. Marsh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p42 D 6 '53 50w

MUNZ, LUDWIG. Rembrandt. See Rembrandt Hermanszoon van Rijn

MURCHIE, GUY. Song of the sky; with il. by the author. 438p $5 Houghton

629.12 Aerodynamic. Flight. Meteorology 54-9119

"Mr. Murchie, a flier, draws deeply from history, mythology, poetry and the many sciences. He relates his profession of navigator to the Arabs who watched their flocks by night and were the early watchers of the skies. He tells how those who ride the winds of the sky today find closer kinship with the navigators of Columbus' day than with the modern steamship traffic. A whole chapter reveals how the sky is itself an ocean, filled with currents and wild-life of its own; in the sky, to stop is to die. Other chapters tell the stories of Wind, and of Clouds, in mythology, in poetry and in science." Kirkus

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 194:84 D '54 160w

Reviewed by J. L. Maloney

Chicago Sunday Tribune p1 N 28 '54 750w

"It is a most unusual and fascinating book. As we read we realize how long we have been waiting for it. And yet could it have been written any sooner?" R. R. Brunn

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 D 9 '54 900w

"Out of the invisible, intangible substance around us, the simple air, Guy Murchie has written a wonderful documentary, which stands up to comparison with Rachel Carson's The Sea Around Us and it rivals in quality St. Exupery's Wind, Sand and Stars. . . Although the book lacks the remarkable lucidity of Miss Carson's story and now and again the author seems lost in his maze of fancy to the point of disorganization, he makes throughout an exciting contribution in this poetic and scientific tribute to the sky."

+ — Kirkus 22:569 Ag 15 '54 280w

"From its survey of the cosmic forces which drive the ocean of air, the book moves to the history of flight, rising to a climax in the story of man's conquest of the sonic barrier with rare glimpses of what a flyer sees from the navigator's seat. Mr. Murchie's exposition is packed with facts, technicalities are expertly reduced to familiar terms and analogies, and all is done with a touch of poetry and imagery as befits one who sings the song of the sky." G. W. Gray

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 12 '54 1100w

"A loving and delightful account has at last been written of man's new ocean, the ocean of air. Everyone who flies, everyone who as a child was fascinated by the watery oceans, all who speculate upon the nature of our world will enjoy this book." James Michener

+ N Y Times p3 D 5 '54 1200w

"An enjoyably instructive book. It must be said, however, that it would be a good deal more enjoyable if Mr. Murchie were less often inspired to key his prose to the harmonies he hears in the sky."

+ — New Yorker 30:240 D 4 '54 180w

"The book recalls, on the one hand, the writing of Saint Exupery, and on the other, Rachel Carson's 'The Sea Around Us'. It has more than a touch of the one's personalized narrative, and a considerable amount of the other's scientific approach. Like all real books, however, it has also much of its own." G. R. Stewart

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 12 '54 1300w

"It must be admitted, regretfully, that Mr. Murchie often strains more than credibility. One can cavil and wish that he had applied more discipline to his metaphors. . . But imaginatively illustrated by the author, it is a book of the air age, informative and dramatic, indispensable to those who are ready to rise from the sea to the air around us." D. B. Dodson

+ — Sat R 37:12 D 11 '54 900w

"Though his book sometimes reads like an airborne Information Please, it offers engaging proof that scientific fact can be at least as strange as science fiction."

Time 64:134 D 6 '54 250w

MURDOCH, IRIS. Sartre, romantic rationalist. (Studies in modern European literature and art) 78p $2.50 Yale univ. press

194 Sartre, Jean Paul. Existentialism

A53-5267

"Miss Murdoch, a tutor in philosophy at Oxford, offers us a study of existentialist philosophy based largely on Sartre's novels and, to a lesser extent, on his philosophical work, L'Être et le Néant. At every point in her close analysis the thought of Sartre is related to its contemporary context in philosophy, aesthetics and psychology. In attempting to understand and explain Sartre, she attempts to understand man's fate in modern history." Commonweal

Reviewed by A. F. B. Clark

Canadian Forum 34:19 Ap '54 80w

"One wishes that space had allowed her to make a study of his plays, especially The Flies, in which considerable elucidation is given to the idea of Sartrean freedom. All things considered, however, this book seems to me one of the most objective and useful yet written on Sartre and his significance for our time." Wallace Fowlie

+ Commonweal 59:145 N 13 '53 400w

"Miss Murdoch does criticise the form of the novels, but it has been her main purpose to explain what Sartre's existentialism is, and why it has been largely ignored here, particularly by English philosophers. I think she almost wholly succeeds. Her essay is full of illuminating comparisons; but more important than this, it is written by someone who understands the catastrophes of intellectual politics, and who can still take them seriously." Stuart Hampshire

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:19 Ja 2 '54 900w

"Miss Murdoch's short essay is a remarkably intelligent and penetrating introduction to and commentary upon Sartre."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p45 Ja 15 '54 600w

MURDOCH, IRIS. Under the net. 279p $3.50
Viking

54-7053

The adventures of a charming but feckless young man in London and Paris. Jake Donaghue, the narrator, is a writer and translator of sorts. He falls in and out of love, he kidnaps a canine movie star, he trails a one-time friend, but in all his restless wanderings he seems to get "nowhere fast."

"The raffish characters and the agitated plot abounding in burlesque are delightfully original; and the style, too, has an accent all its own."

C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:85 Jl '54 60w

Booklist 50:359 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Joan Fox

Canadian Forum 34:164 O '54 170w

"Iris Murdoch, who sounds more competent than her protagonist, has given us an odd first novel, strongly flavored with her research in existentialism. It is not clear whether Miss Murdoch endorses such an explanation of life, but her characters find their particular meanings through their own actions, in themselves haphazard and meaningless." Jean Holzhauer

Commonweal 60:228 Je 4 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:207 Mr 15 '54 130w

"Read it yourself. Even the left-wingers in it are amusing." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:771 Ap 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by Patricia Hodgart

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 1 '54 30w

"'Under the Net' is a literary cocktail mixed by Iris Murdoch. As in all cocktails, the ingredients in this first novel are familiar; it is the sure touch and manner of their combination that is delightful."

+ Nation 178:548 Je 26 '54 350w

Reviewed by John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 47:737 Je 5 '54 350w

"One thinks of Simone de Beauvoir, another woman writer who considers men to be superior creatures, but the parallel is a faulty one since humor is not precisely one of the French writer's gifts whereas 'Under the Net' is a truly comic creation. It is also one in which there is no trace of nastiness. . . Here for once is a novel written for the fun of it, but the fun is that of a witty and poetic intelligence."

Gouverneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 6 '54 800w

"At the end of this amusing, intricately plotted book, we are left with little substance beyond the shrewd observation of some essentially unrewarding people. Jake appears to be following permanently the dictum of Hugo Belfounder: 'One must just blunder on. Truth lies in blundering on.'" Edmund Fuller

+ N Y Times p15 Je 20 '54 500w

New Yorker 30:118 Je 12 '54 100w

"However one interprets the central intention of 'Under the Net' and despite some passages towards the end that read too much like the diary of Miss Murdoch's most recent visit to Paris, the novel maintains a level of rarely mitigated delight. Miss Murdoch writes with a verve that is almost unique in philosophical fiction; her too intelligent characters are more pleasant to encounter, even when they are committing stupidities, than those to whom such conduct seems totally normal. Even though her novel doesn't fall neatly into any accepted category or solve problems so that from now on we won't have to think, it entertains and enlightens as most novels of the summer or any other season will not." H. C. Webster

+ Sat R 37:15 Jl 3 '54 550w

"'Under the Net' is a winner, a thoroughly accomplished first novel. It successfully combines elements which are difficult to combine and some of which are tricky to do on their own." Kinglev Amis

+ Spec p722 Je 11 '54 450w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 13 '54 500w

"Miss Iris Murdoch's first novel, Under the Net, reveals a brilliant talent. The book is an achievement in its own right and the gifts which have gone to its making promise great things. Miss Murdoch has wit, intelligence and sympathy. She can create character. . . Set against this dazzling array of virtues, the weaknesses of Under the Net pale into their proper significance. They are faults of construction and design."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p437 Jl 9 '54 440w

MURPHY, ALFRED JOHN, ed. Non-ferrous foundry metallurgy; the science of melting and casting non-ferrous metals and alloys. 497p il $12.50 McGraw

669 Nonferrous metals. Foundry practice 54-1768

"Application of scientific knowledge to foundry practice is the central theme of this book. The first four chapters in particular are condensed surveys of the accumulated scientific knowledge on such matters as the viscosity, surface tension and vapor pressure of molten metals, the solubility of gases in molten metals, and the growth of crystals when a metal cools. In later chapters devoted to foundry processes, there is a certain amount of correlation of the scientific knowledge and the technology. The book originated in Great Britain, and the contributors are British specialists. It will be useful both to graduate metallurgists and to technicians in supervisory positions in nonferrous foundries." N Y New Tech Bks

"For graduate metallurgists and technicians responsible for the planning and top-level direction of foundry operations." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1896 O 15 '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:42 My '54

MURPHY, MRS FRANCES (SALOMON). Ready-made family; il. by Mabel Jones Woodbury. 184p $2.50 Crowell

53-8421

Hedwig Kowalski and her younger brother and sister are orphans, wards of the state. After trying out living with relatives, they are given as foster children to a childless couple, the Kennedys. The story of their first year as a ready-made family, told largely from Hedwig's point of view, has its ups and downs but ends happily.

Booklist 50:209 Ja 15 '54

"This is Mrs. Murphy's second book about children who are wards of the State and sent out to board in families. She obviously knows her subject and emphasizes the care with which foster homes are chosen for the children. The important thing from the young reader's viewpoint is that she makes a warm and friendly story out of the situation; and the children and foster parents are real people." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:36 F '54 110w

Kirkus 21:579 S 1 '53 150w

"Well-written, heart-warming story of real children in a real situation. . . Recommended for girls from 10-12." V. A. Russell

+ Library J 79:74 Ja 1 '54 90w

MURPHY, GRACE EMLINE (BARSTOW)
(MRS ROBERT CUSHMAN MURPHY).
Your deafness is not you; new design for deafness. 238p $3 Harper

617.8 Deafness

54-8973

"Knowing all the frustrations of the permanently 'deafened' (as distinguished from the congenitally deaf), Grace Barstow Murphy sets down for the benefit of others techniques she has worked out and compensations she has found in this 'new design for deafness.'" N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:7 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:6 O '54 30w

Kirkus 22:357 Je 1 '54 170w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1509 S 1 '54 90w

"Spirited, charming, a real triumph—such must be the verdict on this intensely personal story of a woman who has risen victorious above one of the cruelest of physical handicaps." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 5 '54
550w

Wis Lib Bul 50:205 O '54

MURRAY, ALBERT VICTOR. Education into religion [with a foreword by Elton Trueblood]. 230p $3 Harper

268 Religious education

54-7263

"The President of Cheshunt College has written about the 'big idea' behind a sound religious education. He is operating in the important field in which content and method are combined for the achieving of an attitude to life. His book is properly entitled 'education into religion,' and it deals with theology and psychology. I suppose the author is a 'reconstructed liberal,' which means he is aware of all the changes in theology but has not gone overboard." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 50:251 Mr 1 '54

"At times, the book seems to amble along in an amiable way, and then suddenly a sentence hits the reader with the force of a frozen snowball. These nuggets of meaning stand out with compelling force, and they are highly quotable. . . . There are points at which both theologians and educators would disagree with the author, but the encouraging thing is that a writer who is informed both theologically and psychologically has brought both disciplines together in this presentation of 'education into religion.'" R. C. Miller

+ Christian Century 71:430 Ap 7 '54
800w

"Mr. Murray has produced a volume which can be of great value in religious education not because it says anything new but because it brings together so much known to the experts and not before translated for the ordinary struggling teacher."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p157 Mr 5 '54
600w

MURRAY, ALEXANDER RAINY MACLEAN.
Introduction to political philosophy. 240p $4.75
Philosophical lib.

320.15 Political science

54-997

"The central thesis which this volume seeks to prove is that 'the broad division in political philosophy is between the rationalist and the empiricist theories,' and that 'this division reflects, and depends upon, the division between the rationalist and the empiricist theories of logic and knowledge.' The schematism employed in the book, therefore, consists of the analytic-synthetic distinction and the way in which philosophers have made use of it, even unconsciously, in establishing the 'justification of government' by means of theories of morality with either an empirical or a rational foundation." Ethics

Reviewed by Marshall Knappen

Christian Century 71:924 Ag 4 '54 500w

"The systematic consequences of such an approach are not very impressive, judging by results in the present volume. There are in this study many sound interpretations of doctrines of past political philosophers and equally sound observations on practical issues of politics, but . . . the net result is far from illuminating." J. A. Torres

Ethics 65:73 O '54 330w

MURRAY, CLYDE E., and others, eds. Group work in community life. 245p $4.75 Assn. press

361.4 Group work

54-1126

"The purpose of this book is to examine a few significant projects which show the effectiveness of the group work method in community settings. Our emphasis is on the functioning of the group worker outside the agency building as he helps groups to meet problems of concern to them. Group work programs in rural and urban, industrial and residential communities are included. Communities which are undergoing rapid change because of sudden industrial expansion or the influx of a new population are also covered." Pref

"This volume is an extremely readable book which will give to health workers a new appreciation of the role of the group worker and the agency in the community in helping both individuals and groups to take their places in constructive social action. . . . The material is logically arranged and practical, making it possible to select the sections which give suggestions for or parallel one's own problems." E. M. Gates

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1203 S '54 280w

"This volume should be required reading for all social work educators, students, practitioners, and board members. It is interesting and provocative." W. I. Newstetter

+ Ann Am Acad 296:192 N '54 550w

Booklist 50:335 My 1 '54

MURRAY, MRS JANET PAGE, AND MURRAY, CLYDE E. Guide lines for group leaders: the why and how of group work. 224p $3.95 Whiteside

301.155 Group work. Leadership

53-9217

"The book deals with and answers the thousand-and-one problems that face the men and women in positions of group responsibility who have not had special training in social work. It tells how to conduct successful programs of every type, whether the work is with scout troops, youth organizations, churches, camps, or community centers." Publisher's note

"For those leaders who are young and inexperienced in the subtle variety of discipline demanded by modern child psychology, the chapter on control and discipline will be worth the price of the book. Best of all, is the final chapter where a leader is defined and counseled in democratic procedure." E. M. Gates

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1468 N '54 150w

Booklist 50:371 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 14:34 N '54 30w

"A helpful blend of group work principles and techniques, especially good for the new or not too experienced worker."

+ Kirkus 22:53 Ja 15 '54 100w

"A useful handbook for the untrained group leader. . . . The problems arising in group leadership are broken down and illustrated by actual cases which in turn are analyzed to show what was good or bad in the leader's handling of the specific incident. Recommended." C. J. Roth

+ Library J 79:547 Mr 15 '54 100w

MURRAY, MARIA D. Art of tray painting [drawings by the author; photographs by Jack Pomeroy]. 176p $4.50 Studio

745.5 Trays

54-5623

Explicit information on equipment, designs, and techniques, written by an authority in the field of tray painting. For both serious beginning amateur and for professional workers. Copiously illustrated. Bibliography. Index.

Bookmark 14:32 N '54 10w

"This is definitely a how-to-do-it book, and as such fills a specific need—for tray painting has become one of the most popular ways in which the craftsman with an urge for creative design has found outlets. . . . An excellent Bibliography, and a good list of sources of supplies wind up the text."

+ Kirkus 22:573 Ag 15 '54 170w

"Although intended as a guide for the non-professional, most craftsmen would find welcome knowledge in this volume. For the large library and for those with craft and hobby departments." Paul von Kruhm

+ Library J 79:2213 N 15 '54 140w

MURRAY, MARRIS. The fire-raisers. 223p $3 Farrar, Straus

[53-32235]

This first novel has a remote township on the seacoast of South Africa as background. The story "concentrates on the household of Jacob Fieldfare, an elderly bachelor who shares his home with a young schoolmaster, Etienne, and with Agatha, a stray young woman in distress who turns to him for help. The time is the present." (New Yorker)

"Surely the South African scene should be painted on a grander scale than Miss Murray has used and with a greater truth. Her talent is for word pictures of the land itself, piling picture on picture to make you care, as South Africans do for the beauty of their country. Perhaps in a later novel she will do justice to the people." M. C. Hubbard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 21 '54 450w

"A triumphantly simple first novel. . . . Miss Murray's controlled, almost matter-of-fact style is a pleasure to read."

+ New Yorker 30:130 Mr 13 '54 80w

"Her first novel is written with a skill and confidence that make it close to the most impressive story yet about the South Africa of Malanism and apartheid."

+ Time 63:116 Ap 26 '54 1200w

MURRAY, RAYMOND LE ROY. Introduction to nuclear engineering. 418p il $9.35 Prentice-Hall

539.76 Nuclear engineering. Nuclear reactors 54-8207

"Practical aspects are stressed in this book addressed to advanced undergraduate engineering students. A background in basic mechanical engineering knowledge is assumed; and the reader is introduced to the special engineering knowledge and problems of nuclear reactors, the manipulation of radioactive materials and disposal of radioactive wastes, the types and uses of detecting and controlling instruments and the use of nuclear fuels for the generation of power. On the whole the treatment is descriptive and elementary, but mathematics is used in some of the exposition and is required for solution of most of the problems." Library J

Chem & Eng N 32:1507 Ap 12 '54 30w

Eng N 153:315 O 7 '54 180w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1235 Je 15 '54 110w

MURRAY, WALTER JOHN CAMPBELL. Sanctuary planted; with 64 photographs including one in full colour, and a plan specially drawn by Jo Mayo. 191p $3 Roy pubs.

574.942 Wildlife, Conservation of. Natural history—Sussex, England 53-10353

The description of the planting of a sanctuary for all types of wild life on an acre of waste land in Sussex, England. The book not only tells in detail about the author's experiences in establishing the sanctuary, it follows thru a year there. Illustrated with photographs. An appendix lists trees and shrubs in the sanctuary, with notes on flowering time and purpose.

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 24 '53 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 29 '53 180w

"Besides being a writer Mr. Murray is also a skilful photographer, possessed of that rare patience which looks like luck in its results. To people faced with the problem of a garden which they can no longer maintain, an arboretum on the lines of Mr. Murray's may provide an answer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p443 J1 10 '53 110w

MURROW, EDWARD ROSCOE, comp. This I believe; v2; as written for Edward R. Murrow; ed. by Raymond Swing. 233p $3; pa $1 Simon & Schuster

170 Conduct of life (52-14364)

"Presents, like the first volume of the same title [Book Review Digest 1953], the brief personal philosophies of people from different walks of life and accompanying profiles, originally prepared for Edward Murrow's radio program. Differs from the first in that 20 of the 100 statements included represent the credo of 'immortals' from Socrates to Franklin Roosevelt and Gandhi, as formulated by some contemporary authority on each. A stimulating book notwithstanding variation in quality among the selections." Booklist

Booklist 51:145 D 1 '54

Reviewed by Larry Wolters

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 21 '54 190w

Kirkus 22:610 S 1 '54 190w

"Once more, the note running through these individual expressions is confidence in the human potential, an unshakeable conviction that, much evidence to the contrary, man is essentially a creature of dignity, even of nobility, able to order his world according to moral principles implanted in his very nature, of which service to one's fellows is chief, as well as prime source of life's satisfactions and happiness." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 D 5 '54 500w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:23 D 4 '54 60w

MURSELL, JAMES LOCKHART. How to make and break habits. 313p $3.95 Lippincott

158.43 Habit 52-10932

"With many case histories the author of Streamline Your Mind shows how the 'machinery of living' is controlled by habits which can be learned or unlearned for greater happiness and effectiveness. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:133 D 1 '53

Bookmark 13:84 Ja '54 30w

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 7 '54 60w

Kirkus 21:520 Ag 1 '53 110w

Library J 79:907 My 15 '54 40w

MUSCIANO, WALTER A. Building and flying scale-model aircraft; il. by the author. 174p $2.95 McBride co.

629.131 [629.13334] Airplane models 53-12538

"Here are detailed drawings, photographs, clear directions for making and flying replica aircraft including stunt models, speedsters, seaplanes, transports, racers, jets and rockets, triplanes with information about and pictures of the real, full-sized planes from which the models are copied. Will appeal to all air-minded youth, especially those with some mechanical aptitude." Library J

Booklist 50:123 N 15 '53

MUSCIANO, W. A.—Continued

"Excellent for school and youth libraries and hobby shelves, though it is the appealing kind of book that often walks away, unsigned for. Recommended." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 78:2047 N 15 '53 100w

"This book will appeal mostly to hobbyists in their early 'teens, but it is likely that some fathers will be looking for spaces to fly model planes where they won't be seen by their golfing neighbors." B. K. Thorne

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 17 '54 170w

MUSGRAVE, FLORENCE. Catherine's bells; il. by Zhenya Gay. (Ariel bk) 248p $2.75 Farrar, Straus

54-5205

Story of two orphans, Catherine aged twelve, and tiny crippled Peter, whom Catherine loved with a fierce devotion. The story is of their adoption by an understanding woman, and their joy in their new home. For ages 10 to 14.

Booklist 50:406 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 15 '54 70w

"This is a delightful story with fine relationships between Miss Haven and the children; a book for younger readers."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 90w

Kirkus 22:232 Ap 1 '54 130w

"Humor, pathos, human interest, and bird lore make it an appealing story climaxed by Catherine's unselfish decision which she thinks is the only way to make it possible for Peter to have a home. Recommended for fifth- and sixth-grade girls. Advise buying in library binding." Elizabeth Malone

+ Library J 79:992 My 15 '54 80w

"It is 'another orphan story,' and it is without the pervading humor of this author's delightful 'Oh Sarah.' But the country setting, the one room school, the 'aviary' and breeding of canaries in the farmhouse, the way Catherine's poetic nature flourishes amid hard work—all these make a book that will enrich a growing girl's understanding of life." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 16 '54 160w

"Catherine's real-girl qualities, her enthusiasm for new experiences, her practical manner of expressing gratitude and her generous decision concerning Peter make her an endearing character. Young readers will sigh with satisfaction at Miss Nan's solution to the problem." Rose Friedman

+ N Y Times p28 My 16 '54 180w

"In this quiet, well-written story, the author recreates life on an American farm early in the century and draws the unusual picture of an orphan girl who is pretty, well treated, and definitely not pathetic." A. O. Murphy

+ Sat R 37:27 Ap 17 '54 130w

Wis Lib Bul 50:217 O '54

MUSGROVE, SYDNEY. T. S. Eliot and Walt Whitman. 93p pa $2 Cambridge

811 Eliot, Thomas Stearns. Whitman, Walt

"Its argument, in brief, shows that of the two layers in Eliot's poetry the one setting forth his religious and philosophical thought rejects the ideas espoused by America's democratic rhapsodist. But the other layer—of physical images and emotional evocations—shows an overwhelming number of parallels and similarities in Whitman." Sat R

"A subtle and illuminating study." G. W. Allen

+ N Y Times p24 N 29 '53 400w

"As a literary monograph it is exceptionally sound, literate, and persuasive. . . This kind of investigation, at least in Mr. Musgrove's book, is illuminating." Robert Halsband

+ Sat R 36:36 Ag 22 '53 150w

MUSIL, ROBERT. Man without qualities; tr. from the German by Eithne Wilkins and Ernst Kaiser. 4v v2 454p $5 Coward-McCann

"The second volume of the English edition takes us up to the critical turning-point of Musil's great novel, his hero's departure from the capital after being informed of his father's death. The Collateral Campaign, still in its comically hopeful phase throughout the present volume, will gradually fade into dreary fatuousness, many of the minor characters recede to the periphery of Ulrich's mind, engrossed, as he will be, in a single powerful experience." (Times [London] Lit Sup) For volume 1 see Book Review Digest 1952.

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier

Commonweal 61:196 N 19 '54 1500w

"Considering the amount of publicity and disagreement aroused by volume I this book should definitely be in all libraries with large fiction collections, and in those other libraries which cater to a public anxious to keep abreast of the newest literary developments. Rental collections will also benefit immediately after publication. Only the future can tell whether this is a classic as some critics have claimed." H. L. Roth

Library J 79:1890 O 15 '54 210w

"It is an extraordinary work: a novel of ideas which also satirises ideas. The characters, ostensibly the vessels built to contain and convey them, sometimes seem to founder in the sheer flow and amplitude of the author's thought. Yet all is calm, the calm before the storm. We are poised at a critical moment in history: the curl of the wave, the pause before the deluge of 1914." Norman Shrapnel

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 7 '54 360w

"As far as this second volume is concerned, Musil is still an artist; but there is something of the café writer in him and it requires the special hardness of genius (such as we find in Italo Svevo) to keep that kind of writing from becoming a catherine wheel fizzing round and round on the same spot." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:442 Ap 3 '54 2300w

"This second volume of Robert Musil's high comedy of the intellect continues to probe our contemporary confusion of values with gay irony and witty earnestness." Richard Winston

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 7 '54 550w

Reviewed by Siegfried Mandel

N Y Times p34 N 14 '54 550w

New Yorker 30:202 D 11 '54 140w

"It exhibits a disregard of novelistic tools that is at once reckless and calculated and, because of the size of the canvas across which it spreads, majestic. . . The novel presents a tournament of theories instead of a drama of emotions. It is even more than its first volume a formidable tour de force composed of intricate dialectics, of a thousand finely-wrought intellectual crystals and not a single drop of blood." Frederic Morton

Sat R 37:52 D 11 '54 340w

Time 64:116 N 15 '54 500w

"Excellently translated. . . The present volume does not even raise the question of ultimate directions. We can still enjoy all these delightful entanglements as we enjoy those in our own lives, without troubling too much about where they will lead; and Musil's lightness of touch—that irony whose absence from the later parts he himself regretted—maintains the illusion of comedy as few of us are capable of maintaining it in our own lives."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p197 Mr 26 '54 700w

MYERS, LOUISE KIFER. See Kifer, L.

MYERS, MRS. MADELINE NEUBERGER. Pulling strings; il. by Adrienne Adams. 238p $2.50 Holt

54-5739

"Returning home after graduating from college, Victoria Channing is without a job and much in need of establishing herself in the family pattern. Against a background of life in New York, this closely-woven career story centers around her mother, father, sister Linda, a Puerto Rican girl, and Chris, the romantic interest. Through enthusiasm, determination, and real ability, she finds a position in the field of television." Library J

Booklist 50:404 Je 15 '54

Kirkus 22:4 Ja 1 '54 90w

"Enough well-handled romance and details about the career to appeal to older girls. Recommended." M. L. Turk

+ Library J 79:566 Mr 15 '54 90w

"It is better than most such fiction, and its varied young people are worth meeting." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 11 '54 50w

MYGATT, EMMIE D. Stand by for danger. 186p $2.50 Longmans

54-5792

Further adventures of the three boys concerned in the author's "Rim-rocked." Upon returning to school they set up a ham radio station and, as a result, become involved in the rescue of a classmate's father, a refugee scientist. A section at the end of the book gives information concerning amateur radio including codes, signals, government regulations, etc.

"The story itself is written in such a staccato style, and the dialogue is so surely in the 'teen' idiom, that I'm positive your twelve-year-olds and up will stay with it until its exciting finish." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 193:85 Je '54 30w

"An excellent adventure story."

+ Kirkus 22:117 F 15 '54 160w

"Plot not credible but portions dealing with amateur radio are capably handled; little fiction is available on this hobby. Recommended for ages 10-14." Robert Van Benthuyzen

+ — Library J 79:865 My 1 '54 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 16 '54 140w

"The plight of the Czech refugees imparts an unusual timeliness to this smoothly written story of school life. Pelican is a colorful and thoroughly likeable hero. The author sets forth a wealth of information about ham radio, and suggests that it has great possibilities for furthering international friendship. One wishes that theme had been developed more thoroughly." Howard Boston

+ — N Y Times p19 Je 27 '54 120w

MYRDAL, GUNNAR. Political element in the development of economic theory; tr. from the German by Paul Streeten. 248p $5 Harvard univ. press

330 Economics—History A54-6170

This volume is based on a series of lectures delivered at the University of Stockholm in 1928. Its purpose is to give in broad outline a historical and critical account of the part played by political speculation in the development of economic theory. Index.

"Important book by a distinguished scholar." E. O. Golob

+ Ann Am Acad 295:163 S '54 450w

"Gunnar Myrdal's scholarly attack on economics as it has been practiced throughout its history seems more pointed today than in 1929. . . Readers curious to know where economists have been and where they are now, could do much worse than to read Myrdal's delightfully argumentative book." Robert Lekachman

+ New Repub 130:25 My 17 '54 1250w

MYRES, SIR JOHN LINTON. Geographical history in Greek lands. 381p il maps $7 Oxford

938 Greece—Historical geography [53-1115]

"In distinguishing, in his preface, between historical geography and geographical history.

the author succinctly expresses the underlying purpose of this collection of essays. It focuses on 'the geographical features which invite historical commentary, rather than the historical events which invite geographical.' . . In all there are 12 essays, originally inaugural lectures or papers read before geographical and classical associations, and published between 1910 and 1941. They have been gathered and reprinted here, with a few editorial changes, omissions, and added documentation to bring them up to date." (Geog R) Bibliography. Index.

"The first Wykeham professor of ancient history at Oxford has been a pioneer in the application of geographical and archaeological criticism to historical problems. Some of what is here published has gone the way of all scaffolding. No student today, for example, needs to be informed that the Greek world was a melting pot of various divisions of the white race, in spite of the fact that the classical Greeks claimed they were of one race. This reviewer would question whether some of Myres's comments on industrial slavery are in accord with up-to-date research. Nonetheless, these lectures, now issued with a bibliography of his published works to mark his eighty-second birthday, constitute a stimulating contribution by a notable scholar." W. K. Pritchett

+ — Am Hist R 59:354 Ja '54 600w

"To demonstrate as well as this book does the interdependence of the fields of geographical and historical knowledge requires a thorough grasp of history from ancient times to the present, a background of world travel and a precise knowledge of world geography. Sir John Linton Myres possesses these requisites. He has traveled widely through most of the years of his professional career and has held eminent chairs in geography and history at Oxford and Liverpool. He has been busily engaged in writing on these subjects since 1891; his bibliography, appended to this volume, covers 31 pages. The breadth and detail of his knowledge stand out on every page." W. H. Stahl

+ Geog R 44:316 Ap '54 700w

"These essays will delight many who may not have a classical training as well as most classical scholars who respect a prince among them." H. J. Fleure

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 17 '53 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p370 Je 5 '53 600w

MYSTERY WRITERS OF AMERICA, INCORPORATED. Butcher, baker, murder-maker; ed. and with an introd. by George Harmon Coxe. 341p $3.50 Knopf

Short stories—Collections

54-8768

The fifth annual collection of short detective stories by the Mystery Writers of America. Contents: Change of address, by Robert Arthur; Killer in the house, by Ben Benson; The girl who married a monster, by Anthony Boucher; I'll be waiting, by Raymond Chandler; The coffee cup, by Lillian de la Torre; The betrayers, by Stanley Ellin; My Aunt Celia, by Bruno Fischer; Modus operandi, by Michael Gilbert; Extradition, by Brett Halliday; Guilty witness, by Morris Hershman; Man-killer, by W. B. Mowery; The riddle of the Black Museum, by Stuart Palmer; Witness for the prosecution, by Q. Patrick; No place for magic, by Maurice Procter; The Gettysburg bugle, by Ellery Queen; Off the face of the earth, by Clayton Rawson; The McGregor affair, by Sidney Rowland; Stan the killer, by Georges Simenon; The fatal red hair, by Walter Snow; Cop's gift, by Rex Stout; The blonde nurse, by Thomas Walsh.

Booklist 51:152 D 1 '54

Kirkus 22:551 Ag 15 '54 150w

"The roster of authors is distinguished and as various as the stories. It includes Raymond Chandler, Stanley Ellin, Rex Stout, Clayton Rawson (with an excruciating little

MYSTERY WRITERS OF AMERICA, INC.—

Continued

locked room). Georges Simenon and others, almost all of them in exceptionally good form." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 17 '54 50w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p50 O 24 '54 50w

"Several beauties are by Boucher, Clayton Rawson and Maurice Proctor, and most of the other performers are of peak quality. Something here for everyone; you can't go wrong."

L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 21 '54 30w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 40w

N

NABARRO, DERRICK. Rod of anger. 249p $3
Sloane

53-9732

"Five years after the war, John Granger, Englishman, returns to central Europe for Anna, the girl he left behind in the resistance movement. He becomes involved in the intrigues between 'idealist' Anton, an old friend and now fugitive from the party, and 'realist' Brud, Moscow-trained chief of secret police. Anna and Granger escape, but Anton, who believes he can replace fear with love in the party platform, becomes the martyr of the cause." Library J

Kirkus 21:596 S 1 '53 100w

"Only an occasional bit of stiff dialogue interrupts the generally smooth, fast moving style. It is an excellent story for the cloak-and-dagger fan. Recommended for the large public library." C. R. Gough

+ Library J 79:63 Ja 1 '54 120w

"The story, after a rather slow start, maintains a great pace right through to a cataclysm which clears a variety of the characters from the scene. The novel is intensely dramatic with a well-constructed plot. Despite the high-breasted beauty of his heroine and heroes who are strong, handsome, athletic types, while their opponents are ugly little shrimps, the author has given many of his people a certain reality by personal observation in the delineation of them."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 29 '53 290w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner
N Y Times p20 Ja 24 '54 270w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 10 '54 50w

"Mr. Nabarro describes Granger's maneuvers with ingeniousness, and with enormous authority. Perhaps Mr. Nabarro's personal experience may account for some of his book's authentic impact: he was a prisoner of the Germans during the last war. . . . Like Eric Ambler, Mr. Nabarro has the uncommon talent for making his scoundrels individuals, not stereotypes, and 'The Rod of Anger' contains a fascinating gallery of villains, as well as men of good will. If a better novel of suspense has been written in recent years, this reviewer hasn't seen it." Martin Levin

+ Sat R 37:39 Ja 16 '54 280w

"Most of Mr. Nabarro's twists to this now familiar plot are fairly predictable, but the writing throughout is crisp and the general level of comments, political and human, hopeful as well as discerning. Altogether this is a remarkably professional thriller, with vivid background and pointed dialogue, that suffers only from too much underlining of dialectical conclusions already adequately implied."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p489 J1 31 '53 210w

NAETHER, CARL ALBERT. Building an aviary. 85p il $2.25 All-pets bks.

636.6 Aviaries

"A small, practical guidebook for those who wish to build an aviary. The author is a bird fancier and writes from his experience of the needs that should be met in constructing an aviary." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 50:352 My 15 '54

Wis Lib Bul 50:175 J1 '54

NAKAYA, UKICHIRO. Snow crystals, natural and artificial. 510p il $10 Harvard univ. press

551.573 Snow

52-5038

"This new work by a Japanese scientist is a scientific study. It contains hundreds of remarkable photomicrographs; but the author's primary interest was in the varieties of crystals and in the conditions of temperature, humidity, etc., which are associated with their formation. Accordingly there are many pictures which are not pretty. . . . The author's studies led him to the development of a technique for the production of artificial snow, with all the varieties of crystals found in natural snow and to an understanding of the conditions necessary for the production of specific classes of crystals. The book is a major scientific contribution, but it will not replace Bentley's work [Snow Crystals, 1931] as a source of inspiration for art forms." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"This is a book that must be considered a technical work but it is most unusual in that much of its content can easily be understood and appreciated by the average as well as the intellectual reader. For meteorologists and collectors of scientific books, here is a volume that must be included. Also on your living room table and mine it will be a valuable conversation item and a painless path to new knowledge." H. B. Nichols

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 15 '54 600w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:60 J1 '54

"The author, who went to Hokkaido University in Japan as physics professor, conducted his research on snow crystals over a period of twenty years. . . . This meticulous project has produced a monumental work of special interest in the area of science, although the beauty in the work illustrated will be of more than casual interest to the art field."

+ School Arts 54:47 O '54 150w

NANKIVELL, JOICE MARY (MRS FREDERICK SYDNEY LOCH). Tales of Christophilos; il. by Panos Ghikas. 119p $2.50 Houghton

53-10988

"After World War I, when all Greeks living in Turkey were repatriated, Christophilos and his family went to Pyrgos, at the foot of Mt. Athos, realm of monasteries, monks, and hermits. The boy's deeds and events in the village are told simply and humorously." Library J

Booklist 50:327 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates
Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 60w

"A unique and charming collection of stories." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:97 Ap '54 160w

+ Kirkus 22:62 F 1 '54 120w

"Recommended." E. J. Bowland
+ Library J 79:460 Mr 1 '54 70w

"The author lived in the tower from which the village takes its name, Pyrgos, while she was working with the Quakers. Her observing eye and memory are keen. Her introduction gives us the dramatic history of the place, myth and fact, and the well-written stories, focusing on a boy who must be the man of his small family, reflect the life of this lonely, primitive world, with powerful simplicity. . . .

Excellent bookmaking with interesting typography, and unusual pictures by a Greek who knows Pyrgos well." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 4 '54 320w

"Some are sketchy fare for the average child but the book has an unusual flavor and vitality. . . The sharp black and white illustrations are by Panos Ghikas, who also knows Athos. They are uneven in quality but original in concept." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p26 My 2 '54 230w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkad
New Yorker 30:211 N 27 '54 60w

"The stories have dignity, integrity, deep perception of people, as well as humor and drama. A short historical introduction sets the stage for the stories. Black-and-white illustrations by the Greek artist, Panos Ghikas, are a happy complement to the book." Augusta Baker

+ Sat R 37:63 My 15 '54 180w
Wis Lib Bul 50:142 My '54

NARAYAN, R. K. Swami and friends; and Bachelor of arts. 179/166p $3.95 Mich. state college press

54-8878;54-4796

Two novels: Swami and Friends, and Bachelor of Arts, by a contemporary Indian writer. The former deals with childhood, the latter with adolescence. First American printing.

Bookmark 14:35 N '54 10w

"Mr. Narayan's world is warm, civilized, untidy and practical. It is full of love: the emotional generosity of almost every one of the characters quietly grows on us. . . It is not Gogol or Turgenev but Kipling and H. G. Wells that come to mind when we read this endearing book." D. B.

+ N Y Times p36 N 21 '54 500w

"Two of Narayan's best Malgudi novels. . . The first . . . is very funny and very sad at the same time. The second is an extremely effective love story. . . It is a luminous and enlightening description of the Indian approach to questions of marriage and giving in marriage, and in its quiet way it succeeds in being deeply moving."

+ New Yorker 30:216 N 20 '54 180w

"Here is a contemporary Indian author with a growing reputation in his own country and abroad, writing with a quiet competence and engaging style, who is yet to be discovered and enjoyed by the rank-and-file of fiction readers in this country." Joseph Hitrec

+ Sat R 37:27 N 6 '54 750w
Time 64:66 D 27 '54 220w

NATHAN, MRS ADELE (GUTMAN) and BAKER, WILLIAM CLAYTON. Famous railroad stations of the world; il. by Graham Bernbach. (Gateway bks) 100p $1.75 Random house

385.1 [385.3] Railroads—Stations 53-6276

A popular account of the origin and development of early railroad stations both in America and abroad. A few large present day stations are described in more detail.

Booklist 50:263 Mr 1 '54

Kirkus 21:536 Ag 15 '53 80w

N Y Times p28 F 7 '54 50w

NATHAN, LEONARD. Wind like a bugle. 282p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y) 54-9963

Historical novel of pre-Civil war days in Kansas, of the underground railroad and the bitter conflict between the Abolitionist and the pro-slavery factions. The chief characters are a young and wealthy widow, Susan Orr; a Scotsman who is a disciple of John Brown; and Little David, a slave.

"Nathan is particularly effective in invoking the frightful terror that stalked Kansas when Free Soilers and slavery advocates developed a schism that only conflict could resolve. He is somewhat less successful with the love story of Susan Orr and Geddes and I would warn the prospective reader that Nathan has an unhappy flair for overwriting some of his scenes, with the result that they read a bit like old fashioned July 4 oratory. In the main, however, he has 'proved' his literary claim with a solid and frequently exciting story." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 16 '54 600w

Kirkus 22:165 Mr 1 '54 140w

"As a picture of the method and the hazards of escape and the Abolitionist cooperation it is successful. As a novel it is wooden and naive." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 79:860 My 1 '54 60w

"The attraction between Susan Orr and Neal Geddes adds a light love interest to the story. The book is well written and particularly noteworthy for a mature point of view that never runs to excesses of feeling."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 My 30 '54 240w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 80w

NATIONAL UNIVERSITY EXTENSION ASSOCIATION. University extension in the United States. See Morton, J. R.

NEALE, JOHN ERNEST. Elizabeth I and her parliaments, 1559-1581. 434p il $5.50 British bk. centre

328.42 Great Britain. Parliament. Great Britain—History—Elizabeth, 1558-1603. Elizabeth I, queen of England 53-2766

In his preface the author says: "This volume is the first of two in which I hope to fulfil the promise made in my Elizabethan House of Commons [Book Review Digest 1950] to write a parliamentary history of Elizabeth I's reign. . . I have focused the narrative on the relations between the Crown and Parliament: partly because the story would have been formless and unreadable if I had attempted to discuss all the business that came before Parliament; and partly because my purpose is to reveal the significance of the Elizabethan period in the constitutional evolution of England, and, more specifically, to banish the old illusion that early-Stuart Parliaments had few roots in the sixteenth century. . . The narrative is constructed very largely from manuscript sources, many of which have not been printed or even used by historians."

"On the issue between crown and Commons Professor Neale is superb. He has not only drawn upon all available sources of information both in manuscript and in print but he has made important discoveries of his own. . . The significance of this will be apparent to the most casual reader. What will be less obvious to those who have not worked in desperation over the more familiar sources, is Neale's skill in interpreting the scant text of the official journals and in integrating it with scattered material drawn from all sorts of places. . . The best part of the book is that it is never dull. Neale makes his commoners live and never forgets that at a time when institutions were still uncrystallized it was the man who mattered more than the machine." Conyers Read

+ Am Hist R 59:610 Ap '54 1000w

"The book is never dull and may be purchased for colleges and public libraries. JEN is one of the fine historians who writes for layman as well as scholar." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 78:1688 O 1 '53 130w

"'Elizabeth and Her Parliaments' is not a book for easy or hasty reading; it belongs, rather, to that small class which Bacon reserved 'to be read wholly with diligence and attention'; for, as Professor Neale from time to time notes, it offers many close parallels to modern times in its story and its lessons. Not the least of its merits is that it is written with understanding, charity, and detachment." G. B. Harrison

NEALE, J. E.—Continued

+ Sat R 37:33 Mr 27 '54 370w

"This book is a real experience for those who have a taste for history." Mildred Campbell

+ Yale R n ■ 43:456 spring '54 350w

NEARING, HOMER. Sinister researches of C. P. Ransom. 217p $2.95 Doubleday

54-5168

Science fiction

Bookmark 13:186 My '54

Kirkus 22:45 Ja 15 '54 80w

"Written with such an entrancing blend of literate subtlety and outrageous farce that it should delight every one—including those who have read many of the episodes before; for these are stories which get funnier the better you know them." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 21 '54 110w

"It is impossible to stop laughing long enough to give any coherent account of Ransom's mad forays through time when he and MacFate manage an arena that features fifth-rate gladiators; or through space, where the pair wind up as marital relations counselors on Mars." J. F. McComas

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 4 '54 230w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 37:15 Ag 7 '54 80w

"Humor is a rare thing in science fiction, and when humor as expert as Mr. Nearing's is combined with intriguing scientific tomfoolery, the result is irresistible." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 11 '54 80w

NEEDHAM, JOSEPH. Science and civilisation in China; with the research assistance of Wang Ling; 7v; v. 1. Introductory orientations. 318p il maps $10 Cambridge

951 Civilization, Chinese. Science—China. China—Intellectual life [54-4723]

"This book is the first to be published in a set of seven volumes designed to offer a complete history of science and technology in the civilization of China. . . The first volume offers an extremely stimulating discussion of the geographical foundations of Chinese civilization and the circumstances surrounding the transmission of ideas and techniques between China and Europe. The author combines in one person a knowledge of the Chinese language and advanced training in science (he teaches biochemistry at Cambridge)." Library J

Reviewed by Joseph Bram

+ Library J 79:1509 S 1 '54 180w

"There begins with this volume perhaps the greatest single act of historical synthesis and intercultural communication ever attempted by one man, in our own or any civilisation." Lawrence Picken

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 20 '54 450w

Reviewed by O. E. Clubb

Nation 179:427 N 13 '54 90w

"The first volume not only exhibits a combination of expertise that has hitherto not existed in any one person, but it is written with admirable lucidity and detachment. The book is superbly printed, contains 36 illustrations, and gives the Chinese characters where required. It is only when the complete work of nine volumes has been published and has emerged from its ordeal of specialised criticism by mathematicians, astronomers, engineers, philosophers, etc., that a true appraisal of its significance will be possible. But even now it is safe to say that after its publication the Western attitude towards China can never be quite the same again. It is bound to be altogether better informed and therefore more understanding." Victor Purcell

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:298 S 11 '54 1350w

"The production of this book is in every way equal to the high standard of its scholarship. It has been finely printed by the Cambridge Press, is well illustrated, and has excellent maps. Chinese characters are also given wherever necessary, and the bibliographies and index are of Chapman-like quality." O. B. Van der Sprenkel

+ Spec p447 O 8 '54 1000w

"Dr. Needham's work is not only valuable from the point of view of scientific scholarship but is an important contribution to international understanding. The book is a beautifully printed production."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p662 O 15 '54 1150w

NEIDER, CHARLES, ed. Fabulous insects. 278p $3.50 Harper

595.7 Insects

53-11855

A collection of articles about inhabitants of the insect world, chosen from work appearing in magazines, journals, and books. Partial contents: The two lives of anax the dragonfly, by R. L. Abbott; The hometown of the army ants, by William Beebe; The social genius of white ants, by L. R. Cleveland; The human bot fly, by C. H. Curran; The dauber wasp, by Alan Devoe; The terrible praying mantis, by J. H. Fabre; Houdini of the spider world, by W. J. Gertsch; Spiders that lasso their prey, by W. J. Gertsch; Ant warfare, by Maurice Maeterlinck; Sexton beetles, by L. J. and Margery Milne; Oddities of the insect world, by E. W. Teale; Ants that kill elephants, by J. W. Vandercook. No index.

Booklist 50:272 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:183 My '54 20w

Reviewed by Gary Sheahan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 8 '54 150w

"Here is a nature anthology of remarkable interest." H. B. Nichols

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 22 '54 480w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 30:262 Ag '54 70w

"A good enlivening of entomology."

+ Kirkus 21:811 D 15 '53 160w

"Not an essential book, but one which many readers will find entertaining." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:380 F 15 '54 100w

"All in all, Mr. Neider's anthology lives up to its title." Thomas Foster

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 28 '54 250w

"A well-selected collection of short articles on the weirder and more entertaining bugs. . . It does not completely avoid other kinds of romancing. One of the authors, Royal Dixon of Texas, tells how Texas ants deliberately plant rice, cultivate it faithfully and harvest their crop. They don't. . . Such examples are few, however. Most of the selections are scientifically responsible, and they lose nothing by it. The deplorable customs of insects, faithfully recorded, are more fantastic than any sort of nature-faking." J. N. Leonard

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 7 '54 320w

"The book as a whole, leaves me dissatisfied. I cannot help but wonder whether my attitude is unreasonable, whether I am using the wrong criteria in judging it. Certainly I am asking for more than the editor intended to provide. . . Eleven of these twenty-four selections are on social insects, five on ants alone, the others on bees, termites, and wasps. This is a reflection of the 'human interest' that these creatures have. But again the continuity is lost, since the selections on related subjects are scattered through the book, which is arranged alphabetically by author. But this is carping. As the publishers say, 'The Fabulous Insects' is a popular nature writing of a high order and if you like popular nature writing and have no strong allergy to anthologies, you will like this book." Marston Bates

Sat ■ 37:20 Mr 6 '54 550w

Wis Lib Bul 50:66 Mr '54

NEIDER, CHARLES, ed. Man against nature; tales of adventure and exploration. 483p $5 Harper

910.8 Adventure and adventurers 54-8974

A collection of true stories by explorers, pioneers and adventurers. Partial contents: Earthquake at San Francisco, by F. W. Aitken and Edward Hilton; The strange death of Louis Slotin, by Stewart Alsop and R. E. Lapp; Voyage to the South Pole, by Roald Amundsen; Descent into perpetual night, by William Beebe; The plague, by Giovanni Boccaccio; The great Lisbon earthquake, by Samuel Chase; Rounding the Horn, by R. H. Dana; Death in the afternoon, by Ernest Hemingway; To the summit of Everest, by Sir Edmund Hillary; The buffalo chase, by Francis Parkman; The North Pole conquered, by R. E. Peary; The open boat, by Sir Ernest Shackleton; The Johnstown flood, by P. J. Toner; Success at Kitty Hawk, by Orville Wright.

Booklist 51:37 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:6 O '54 10w

"Neider has done a fine job. Each of the 47 items is a satisfying whole, tho many are excerpts from books. [The source of each is given in precise detail.] The editor has used several magazine articles by men who have told their stories elsewhere at book length. Tho some items are recovered from obscure back issues of periodicals, more should serve to embark the reader on wide ranging discoveries between the covers of other books." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 29 '54 250w

"Mr. Neider has lifted many of these tales from book-length narratives. His volume is a magnificent show-window of man's courage in extremity, his unwillingness to bow to nature." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 16 '54 350w

"A superb collection."

+ Kirkus 22:379 Je 15 '54 170w

"In his introduction to these tales of adventure and exploration, Charles Neider states that his anthology is unique. This is a large claim, and it is a pleasure to report that Mr. Neider has filled it to the letter. For once the publisher's dream of pleasing most everybody seems to have been realized." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 29 '54 550w

New Yorker 30:78 S 4 '54 160w

Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54 160w

NEIDER, CHARLES. White citadel. 224p $3.50 Twayne

54-7519

Story of life in a Jewish community in Bessarabia thirty years ago. The protagonist is a middle-aged, well-to-do Jewish banker whose domestic life is troubled by the conflicting claims of his mother and his wife.

"Charles Neider's first novel will not, I think, make it necessary to change our estimate of his talent as primarily a critical one. But The White Citadel represents nonetheless an added distinction to the fine reputation which this young critic has won by his study of Franz Kafka and by a series of notable anthologies." J. F. Sullivan

+ Commonweal 59:559 Mr 5 '54 550w

"The tone is plaintive, tender, ironic; the material is fresh; what is even more remarkable these days, the author is wise." Maxwell Geismar

+ Nation 178:203 Mr 6 '54 140w

"In 'The White Citadel' Mr. Neider has written an unusual and successful first novel. His material may seem familiar to the superficial glance, for he deals with the emigration of a family of Russian Jews. Soon it becomes evident, however, that the author focuses less on the fact of emigration than on the psychological pressures and the cultural climate that provoked it." Frederic Morton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk p8 F 28 '54 900w

"Take one part Byzantine humor, one part Hebrew religion, one part nature lore. Season with the flavor of man, Turkish. Add a Kafkan study of a self-made Bessarabian banker who becomes a community pillar but fails himself and his family. Do all this—and you'll have a general idea of Mr. Neider's turbulent first novel. . . Not an 'easy' novel but a deeply felt and provocative one." James Kelly

+ N Y Times p22 F 28 '54 450w

Sat R 37:54 Mr 6 '54 220w

NEILL, HUMPHREY BANCROFT. Art of contrary thinking. 112p pa $1 Caxton ptrs.

301.152 [301.154] Public opinion. Thought and thinking 54-7837

"The hardheaded Yankee shrewdness of a veteran Vermonter was blended with a lot of Wall Street experience and a lifetime of economic research into market trends and tactics, to make the mind and mold the thinking of Humphrey Neill. 'Contrary' is his key word. From his rural workshop he puts forth his weekly 'Letters of Contrary Opinion.' . . His aim is to displace herd thinking by independent thinking. In this brief exposition of his processes of thought and some of his conclusions in regard to economics and some other matters, there is a good deal of material that could well be studied by a class in logic." Christian Century

"It is a crisp, breezy and stimulating document that would be good medicine for sluggish minds that live by slogans and 'think' (if you can call it that) in goosestep. Whether one agrees with all his opinions is not important. He is primarily expounding methods, not propagandizing for conclusions." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:612 My 19 '54 200w

"Unfortunately limited and opinionated in ways that inherently detract from his professed intent, Mr. Neill's book is confused cracker barreling and doesn't even really tell us why our Republican government is best."

— Kirkus 22:20 Ja 1 '54 130w

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 170w

NEILL, ROBERT. Rebel heiress. 314p $3.95 Doubleday

54-5165

Romantic novel of love and adventure in Restoration England.

Booklist 50:222 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54 30w

"Rebel Heiress is skillful, rousing make-believe, a neat blend of action and social history." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 178:473 Mr '54 220w

"If you dote on historical novels and have the time to wade thru an excessive amount of trivial conversation that at times bogs down an otherwise excellent story, this is your meat."

Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 10 '54 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

Kirkus 21:744 N 15 '53 130w

Reviewed by John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 47:233 F 20 '54 200w

"This is a first-rate historical romance."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk p8 F 7 '54 180w

"Mr. Neill has recognized the human drama in his material. But for the most part he settles for harmless melodrama." Richard Match

N Y Times p28 Ja 10 '54 300w

"There is a weakness in the treatment of church affairs; the position of a Cromwellian minister did not depend on his willingness to use the Prayer Book, but on his willingness to accept episcopal ordination. All the chief characters in Rebel Heiress are deeply interested in theology, people were at that time; but none of them makes this vital point. Nonetheless, this convincing and vivid book, written from a sound central position, makes past politics as exciting as the Cold War."

NEILL, ROBERT—Continued

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p85 F ■ '54
190w

NEILL, THOMAS PATRICK. Rise and decline of liberalism. 321p $5.50 Bruce pub.

301.15 Liberalism 53-13155

"A Catholic scholar gives his interpretation and evaluation of liberalism. He first examines the conflicting definitions which have given rise to much confusion on the subject, then traces the development of liberal theory on the continent, in England, and in the U.S., and describes the social, economic, and political manifestations of liberal thought. In the latter part of the nineteenth century, says the author, liberalism gave way to welfare, or socialistic liberalism, a natural outcome, he suggests, of an anti-Christian view of man." Booklist

Reviewed by R. G. Jones

Ann Am Acad 295:181 S '54 450w

Booklist 50:196 Ja 15 '54

"If The Rise and Decline of Liberalism is not a startling book, it is a solid and well documented one, a careful consideration of Liberalism's history in the nineteenth century—a history which must be studied before we can understand Liberalism's fate in the twentieth." Michael Harrington

+ Commonweal 59:362 Ja 8 '54 650w

"A thoughtful book, not to be taken without challenge. But it says much that needed to be said."

Kirkus 21:513 Ag 1 '53 190w

"For larger library collections."

Wis Lib Bul 49:251 N '53

NELSON, EDNA DEU PREE. O'Higgins and Don Bernardo. 384p $4.50 Dutton

O'Higgins, Ambrosio, marqués de Osorno—Fiction. O'Higgins, Bernardo, Supreme Director of Chile—Fiction 54-10925

"The story of the two O'Higgins in South American history—Don Ambrosio de Vallenar, expatriate Irishman, who was to become Viceroy of Peru, and his illegitimate son, Bernardo, who fought for South American independence. Since an old Spanish law provided that no man with children born of a native woman could hold a high position in South America, the book is concerned chiefly with Don Ambrosio's steady rise in power and his ever increasingly frenetic attempts to hide his son." (Library J) Bibliography.

"Disappointingly short sighted in its comment on political effects, this has a vivid immediacy that enlivens the people and the storms they created."

+ — Kirkus 22:621 S 1 '54 240w

"The author uses the technique of taking the point of view of the person she is discussing and her breathless, rather heavily-exclamation-pointed style will be a little too much for the serious student to bear. Still it presents material, not duplicated elsewhere in English, which should please not only adult readers of popular biographies but YP. Excellent bibliography. Recommended." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:2099 N 1 '54 160w

"The theme of the book is fine, but the treatment is thin. There is tiresome straining after effect, and not enough substance to produce the effect. The pages are peppered with exclamation points—a bit of adornment which is the last thing a good biography needs." Hubert Herring

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 26 '54
650w

"Though the author has appeared to use some of the devices of fictionalized biography, she has drawn so skillfully on the rich original sources of the period that she has succeeded in preserving the basic authenticity of her story. At the same time, she has made her narrative more realistic and her characters more lifelike than they would have been in a conventional biography. The result is an extremely readable book about some very interesting and important people, who destroyed one state and set up another in its place." W. L. Schurz

+ N Y Times p10 N 28 '54 750w

"The author does not clog her story with much political background, and historical facts not supporting her sentimentalized version of the perfect hero are suppressed or altered, for this is the Cinderella story of a ponderous leader, not original in his political thinking, but a brave, dogged, occasionally able soldier, overglorified by Miss Nelson's gracious reconstruction of battles according to her own fancy." Carleton Beals

Sat R 37:21 N 27 '54 650w

NELSON, HUGH LAWRENCE. Suspect. 250p $2.50 Rinehart

54-6243

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:137 F 15 '54 60w

"It's all a rather fresh fancying from familiar materials, assisted considerably by the mountain setting." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p19 Ap 25
'54 130w

"Good clues, handsome scenery. B minus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je ■ '54
90w

"Pace good, but personnel slightly bizarre." Sergeant Cuff

+ — Sat ■ 37:29 Je 5 '54 10w

NEMEROV, HOWARD. Federigo, or, The power of love. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 265p $3.75 Little

54-11120

"Julian Ghent is a bit bored with his marriage to Sylvia, to the point where he composes two anonymous letters to himself, and signed Federigo, which suggest Sylvia's faithlessness. . . The letters create trouble, not only for Sylvia, but also for Julian who is hounded by Federigo who appears and disappears, seduces and disrupts. A weekend planned between Julian and Elaine, Sylvia and Marius, leads them all unsuspectingly to the same destination, and serves to dispose of Federigo." Kirkus

"Even when he turns his hand to a field as heavily lampooned as advertising, Mr. Nemerov, a clever and stylish writer, manages to regale us with fresh extravagances in which there is the glint of truth. This second novel of his reveals him as a comic artist of real originality." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:96 N '54 390w

Booklist 51:84 O 15 '54

"Nemerov writes well; his touch is long-fingered, fastidious, and a little supercilious; it is unfortunately applied, however, to those who have no genuine emotion to scratch, and no real passion to spend."

Kirkus 22:455 Jl 15 '54 210w

"'Federigo,' in brief, constitutes an elegant potpourri of novelistic designs, a piquantly conceived, finely written and philosophically mannered motley of masques in modern dress, not a cohesive story." Frederic Morton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 3 '54
600w

"One begins by taking the story seriously, but soon the reader perceives that Mr. Nemerov is spoofing the comedy of modern life. . . Mr. Nemerov is skillful in his portrayal of the Hamlets who write advertising copy, of the women whose modern handbook is Freud on the one hand and Vogue on the other. 'Federigo, or, The Power of Love,' becomes at times, in a Waughish sort of way, a rather hilarious pastiche with serious undertones." H. F. West

+ — N Y Times p4 S 26 '54 550w

"A cold, very mannered, very amusing story."

New Yorker 30:162 O 16 '54 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 14 '54 170w

"The author, who is a professor at Bennington College, has published two volumes of poetry and another satirical novel, 'The Melodramatists,' from which 'Federigo' is a considerable step forward." Robert Minton
+ Sat ■ 37:57 N 13 '54 300w

"As long as the author was in the mood for experimenting, he might have let his elegant Afghan hounds, Troilius and Cressida, speak their minds. Possibly they would have made more sense than their master and mistress and all the arch horseplay in the book." Richard McLaughlin

— Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 270w

"Mr. Nemerov is a gifted writer—witty, intelligent, alive, with a sense of style—but probably he is not (or not yet) at his best in fiction. He does not love his characters; they are always threatening to bore him. Only when he gets them under the scalpel is he completely at ease; he runs a very entertaining dissecting room. The reader who takes Federigo, or The Power of Love as a series of essays and observations stapled together by a silly but often amusing plot will find himself by no means unrewarded." Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 44:xviii autumn '54 400w

NESTOR, AGNES. Woman's labor leader. 307p il $3.95 Bellevue Bks, 740 N Church St, Rockford, Ill.

B or 92 Woman—Employment 54-9372

"Another of the early fighters for protection of women workers has written the story of her part in it. Starting as a glove worker she moved through the early struggles to organize into the higher spheres of the Women's Trade Union League, legislative lobbies and government missions. A simple unadorned account that will interest workers and others who want insights into the period of social reforms of the early 20th century, when vocational education, shorter work-days and the right to organize were the burning issues." Library J

Booklist 51:130 N 15 '54

"Recommended for libraries where labor history in easy doses is in demand." D. K. Oko
+ Library J 79:2335 D 1 '54 80w

NETHERCOT, ARTHUR HOBART. Men and supermen; the Shavian portrait gallery. 321p $5 Harvard univ. press

822 Shaw, George Bernard 53-6033

"An analytical, interpretative, and critical guide to the multitude of characters in the plays and novels of George Bernard Shaw, sorting out the divisions into which the playwright filed his heroes, heroines, and villains." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 50:354 My 15 '54

"This latest addition to Shaviana is unusually scholarly. It will prove a valuable addition to a drama or theatre collection if there is still room on the shelves for more Shaw or books about him." George Freedley
+ Library J 79:779 Ap 15 '54 20w

Reviewed by Gerard Fay

Manchester Guardian p10 O 8 '54 180w

"With intelligent but remorseless thoroughness Professor Nethercot attempts to systematize Shaw's ideas and asks formal questions about both his status as an artist and the pigeonhole in which he should be placed. The ultimate judgment is favorable enough."

Nation 178:428 My 15 '54 220w

"Mr. Nethercot knows his subject thoroughly. He writes in a lively and amusing manner. He is accurate, judicial, and cautious, though ready to make a clear pronouncement when it seems warranted. 'Men and Supermen' should prove interesting to general readers and invaluable to scholars, critics, and producers." William Irvine

+ Sat R 37:33 Jl 24 '54 700w

NEUBERGER, RICHARD LEWIS. Adventures in politics; we go to the legislature. 210p il $3.50 Oxford

353.9 Oregon—Politics and government. Politics, Practical. State governments

54-10003

"Richard L. Neuberger is a successful magazine writer who is the Democratic candidate for United States Senator from Oregon. . . He puts down some of his experiences in the Oregon State Legislature, of which he and his wife are members. This small book is more than a campaign document. It expresses some worried thoughts on the weaknesses of states and their inability to carry the responsibility President Eisenhower feels they should have. To Mr. Neuberger only at Washington, where the ins and outs are closely balanced, where there is a national, vigilant press in close attendance, can the heavy burdens of modern American governmental responsibility be dealt with adequately, with proper foresight and perspective." Sat R

Booklist 51:76 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:32 N '54 20w

"Neuberger is an able writer and is effective, too, as a politician. . . An appendix is a useful—and idealistic—handbook of advice for young folk seeking to enter politics. The dangers of compromising principles and of accepting excessive campaign contributions are noted." Seymour Korman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 19 '54 200w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '54 550w

"A clear and lively book, with a lot of helpful information on how to get in and stay in politics; it makes you want to throw your hat right into the ring, and also a warming story of a happy partnership marriage."

+ Kirkus 22:605 S 1 '54 280w

Reviewed by Phil Kerby

Nation 179:310 O 9 '54 850w

Reviewed by E. T. Douglas

New Repub 131:21 O 4 '54 600w

"Rarely has a politician written as frankly, or as well, and with such zeal for good government, whatever you may think of his political views. His book obviously calls for a sequel. Where did he get the money for the 1954 campaign? What is he going to think of the United States Senate when he gets there? 'Adventures in Politics' has got to be the first chapter in a serial story." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 D 5 '54 500w

Reviewed by Gladwin Hill

N Y Times p18 O 10 '54 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 22 '54 500w

+ Sat R 37:36 O 2 '54 270w

"This book is a collection of essays written in recent years for various national magazines, and as a book it is hurt by that fact. Three or four times the same tale is told that Richard and Maurine constitute fifteen percent of the Democratic caucus in Oregon. . . Let this be said, however: nobody else in the American scene today is writing as clearly or with as much insight on the state legislature in operation as Neuberger. If he sounds bitter, perhaps it is understandably so." R. S. Babcock

+ — Yale R n s 44:312 winter '55 320w

NEUMAN, ABRAHAM AARON. Landmarks and goals; historical studies and addresses. 370p $5 Dropsie College for Hebrew & Cognate Learning, Broad Bldg, York St, Philadelphia 32

296 Jews—Religion

53-10659

"Containing some of Dr. Neuman's monographs which first appeared in scattered publications, and some of his addresses, hitherto unpublished, Landmarks and Goals . . . has been published by the Dropsie College of Philadelphia in homage to its president on the tenth anniversary of his appointment. The historical studies deal with Judaism in medieval and modern times. . . Two illuminating essays describe the faith and institutions of Judaism. The ten public addresses in the closing part of the book deal with contemporary Jewish issues and problems in the United States from the point of view of a historian and of a religious leader." U S Quarterly Bk R

NEUMAN, A. A.—Continued

"The most significant scholarly contribution in the volume is the renewed investigation of the problem of 'Josippon,' the Hebrew paraphrase of Josephus. Although never as popular among Jews as was the original Josephus in Christendom throughout the ages, this paraphrase, an extraordinary amalgam of history and folklore, has long attracted the interest of modern scholars." S. W. Baron
+ N Y Times p46 O 25 '53 360w
U S Quarterly Bk R 9:438 D '53 220w

NEURATH, HANS, and BAILEY, KENNETH CLAUDE, eds. Proteins: chemistry, biological activity, and methods. v 1 pt B; v2 pt A. 567p; 661p il $13; $14 Academic press
547.92 Proteins (52-13366)

Volume 1, part A of this work appeared in Book Review Digest 1953. "Volume I deals with the general properties of proteins; individual proteins are cited only as they illustrate some general principle. Volume II [considers] specific proteins, grouped according to occurrence or biological role." (U S Quarterly Bk R)

Chem & Eng N 32:1385 Ap 5 '54 20w
(Review of v2, pt A)

N Y New Tech Bks 38:92 N '53 (Review of v 1, pt B)

N Y New Tech Bks 39:59 Jl '54 (Review of v 2, pt A)

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:118 Mr '54 280w
(Review of v 1, pts A-B)

NEURATH, MARIE. Around the world in a flash; how messages are sent via telephone, telegraph, radio and television [Eng title: Message around the world]. (How and why ser) 36p il $2.10; $1.75 Lothrop

621.38 Telecommunication—Juvenile literature 54-12388

Describes world communication in text and diagrams, showing the fundamentals of cables, telephones, radio, and television.

"Though accurate as far as they go, the explanations embody few physics principles and will probably raise more questions than they answer."

Kirkus 22:311 My 15 '54 80w

"Recommended for elementary school and public libraries." N. S. Zipf
+ Library J 79:1238 Je 15 '54 30w

"This book makes excellent use of coloured drawings and diagrams to illumine lucid descriptions of how electrical impulses are made to serve the needs and the luxuries of communication, of the apparatus which harnesses them and the etheric waves they induce. Once again, many an adult will be the wiser for a glance at the section showing how television works."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup pxi My 28 '54 40w

NEURATH, MARIE. Speeding into space [pictures by the author]. (Chanticleer ed; How and why ser) 36p il $2.10; $1.75 Lothrop
629.14353 [629.1388] Interplanetary voyages—Juvenile literature 54-12508

"Effective pictures and brief text give a condensed and easily understood explanation of some of the principles and problems of space travel. Illustrations are by the Isotype Institute, Grades 4-8." Booklist

Booklist 51:156 D 1 '54

"The somewhat shoddy in appearance and manufacture, compared to some of the other children's books now being published, 'Speeding Into Space' crams a great deal of information on the 'classic' theory of space travel into its 36 pages. Basic scientific principles involved are well described and illustrated." J. L.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p45 N 14 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:636 S 15 '54 90w

"Well-designed, effectively illustrated, and clearly written small book." M. C.
+ Sat R 37:84 N 13 '54 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p xi My 28 '54 40w

NEURATH, MARIE. Wonder world of birds. (Chanticleer ed) 36p col il $1.50 Lothrop 598.2 Birds—Juvenile literature

Facts about the lives and flight habits of a series of birds, some of them not well-known, told in brief text and pictures for young readers.

"Bright colored drawings and clear, short explanations make Marie Neurath's book highly attractive." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p42 N 15 '53 50w

Horn Bk 30:34 F '54 70w

"A hodge podge that leaves much to be desired."

Kirkus 21:666 O 1 '53 90w

Reviewed by Anne Jackson

Library J 78:2109 D 1 '53 70w

"There are rare, gay pages on the dance of the ruffs. And watch the hedge sparrow, as in nine delightful drawings she raises the cuckoo's egg! All these doings are indeed 'wonders.' Before the child is through looking, he has absorbed much about the ways of birds, strange or familiar, all over the world." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p12 F 28 '54 120w

"Familiar and unfamiliar birds find a place and each page teaches an interesting principle of avian natural history. The facts are accurate and the diagrammatic illustrations well and colourfully done. Children from eight upwards will enjoy it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p18 N 27 '53 50w

NEURATH, MARIE. Wonder world of the seashore. (Chanticleer ed) 36p il $2.10; $1.75 Lothrop

574.92 Seashore. Marine biology—Juvenile literature 54-14283

"An order of life in a silent world we are prone to take for granted—the fish, plant, and shell life on our sea coast. This book, illustrated with graphic reproductions, will prepare children for what can be found and understood when an opportunity comes to explore the tide pools." Sat R

Booklist 51:180 D 15 '54

Kirkus 22:580 S 1 '54 60w

"The text is geared to good readers 10 and up, but, because the bright, graphic illustrations by the author are fitted so concisely to the text, the book becomes more flexible and can be read to much younger children with success. . . Recommended for all natural history collections." Lois Anderson

+ Library J 79:1666 S 15 '54 70w

Sat R 37:83 N 13 '54 90w

NEUTRA, RICHARD JOSEPH. Survival through design. 384p $5.50 Oxford

720.1 Art—Philosophy. Design. Architecture—Philosophy 53-9190

"This new book by one of the foremost architects and designers in the world today discusses the significance of design in the survival of the human race. He points out that man does have the unique ability to control his own environment, and he feels that his very survival depends upon his taking advantage of the opportunity to plan his homes, communities, and objects of everyday use according to his biological needs. Design can help or harm actual living processes, and it should be based on physical needs, and especially mental health." School Arts

Reviewed by C. S. Ascher
Ann Am Acad 295:182 S '54 410w
Booklist 50:213; 218 F 1 '54

Reviewed by Rexford Newcomb
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 21 '54 210w

+ Kirkus 21:811 D 15 '53 200w

"Every architect and planner will read this book. Every citizen should. This appears to be a time when conditions obvious (and repulsive) to everybody can be remedied only if the citizens can be aroused and stay aroused long enough to convince the politicians and vested interests that they mean business. The individual citizen of a metropolitan area served by a one-party press can see what is wrong, but he can seldom think of anything better to do than to indulge in inarticulate howls of grief. Mr. Neutra supplies him with rhetorical weapons that may be more effective in a scientific age." R. M. Hutchins

+ Nation 178:152 F 20 '54 900w

Reviewed by F. J. Gutheim
New Repub 130:20 Mr 8 '54 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p35 My 16 '54 40w

"As a stimulus to creative thought not only in the actual process of design but in establishing our attitude toward designs made by others 'Survival Through Design' is epoch-making. But Mr. Neutra seems to have devoted too little thought to value judgments and he tends to overlook two other important actualities. The first is the unconscious and the part it plays in the emotional satisfactions of living. . . . The second has to do with pure esthetics and contemplation. . . . One other question is inherent in Mr. Neutra's approach. To him the aim of design (if I do not misinterpret or misunderstand him) is to produce objects whose effect would be the reduction of nervous and physical tensions—a sort of ultimate entropy of consciousness. Personally I cannot conceive that this is the summit of human strivings. . . . Nevertheless, despite these questions, the body of the work stands as farseeing and extremely cogent." Talbot Hamlin

+ — N Y Times p7 F 21 '54 900w

"Neutra has that kind of mind, untrained academically in many of the subjects he discusses, but jammed with a lifetime of omnivorous reading—and rich with having thought about what he has read. The absence of academics has left gaps in his learning, particularly in the philosophical opening chapters. But the thinking he has done has drawn him into exotic byways, rich in originality and stimulating notions. And except for the opening chapters, the book is never a bore. This is a warning to those who might read it, that the book has what journalists call a poor lead."

Jim Walls

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 28 '54 650w

"Although Richard Neutra calls it 'Survival through Design,' in actuality it is a book on architecture written by one of that small group of great pioneers who transformed the art during our century. . . . It is filled with the most remarkable observations on the effect of surroundings on people, observations taken not only from Mr. Neutra's ripe experience but from wide reading especially in biological and psychological science. It is enlivened by many a fine anecdote. . . . A book such as this lacks the flashing insights into art intuition to be found here and there in the work of a critic such as Jacques Maritain, but happily it also lacks the shameless floating of the world of art on clouds of scholastic revelation." Douglas Haskell

+ Sat R 37:15 F 20 '54 900w

"Of interest to the adult, and especially valuable as a philosophical basis for students preparing for a career in some art profession, the book of 384 pages makes an important contribution to the literature in the field."

+ School Arts 53:55 F '54 200w

"This seminal and provocative book is unique in that it is the result of an extensive reading in the current literature on physiology by an architect with an extensive practice. One of the most stimulating sections is concerned with the theory of design now termed functionalism."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:181 Je '54 260w

"There is much in the book to show that architects are developing a healthy concern for the larger environment, and although methods may differ, the approach through science has its importance and is engagingly presented here." Christopher Tunnard

+ Yale R n s 43:615 summer '54 900w

NEVILLE, ALISON (EDWARD CANDY, pseud.). Which doctor? 250p $2.50 Rinehart 54-5889

Detective story.

Booklist 50:453 J1 15 '54

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 9 '54 110w

Kirkus 22:46 Ja 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 46:538 O 31 '53 80w

"This is a beginner's novel, an amateur detective story in the happiest sense." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p12 Mr 28 '54 100w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p28 My 2 '54 40w

"Here's an English first novel of great promise, faintly reminiscent of Innes and Crispin in its precision of style, but rather more simple and direct." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 28 '54 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 10w

NEVINS, ALLAN. Ford: the times, the man, the company; with the collaboration of Frank Ernest Hill. 688p il $6.75 Scribner

B or 92 Ford, Henry. Ford motor company 54-6305

A comprehensive, extensively documented study not only of the man, Ford, but also of the car he built and the company he formed, set against the background of American economic life and ideals. The book closes with the year 1915. Bibliography. Index.

"There is much human interest in this story, but the book as a whole is a cool and accurate account of Ford and his place in the automobile industry. It is no glorification of Ford or big business; Ford was the antithesis of the typical business magnate. . . . The Ford Motor Company was one of the few that survived among the scores of automobile concerns that started in the early chaotic years. Its history is fascinating, and the book does it justice." H. U. Faulkner

+ Am Hist R 59:956 J1 '54 500w

Reviewed by G. C. Osborn

+ Ann Am Acad 295:170 S '54 400w

Booklist 50:319 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:130 Mr '54 50w

"Mr. Nevins and his collaborator have written in entertaining style an excellent history of the beginning of an era and the man and his company that finally dominated it. They have examined a wealth of material and honestly reported their findings." P. F. Kenney

+ Cath World 179:239 Je '54 180w

"Henry Ford has been the subject of many books, a number of them read by this reviewer. So when Nevins' new work came along this reviewer proposed to skim thru it and dash off an account. But, unfortunately for such a plan, Nevins has written such a fascinating book that the reviewer found himself reading long past midnight simply because he was enjoying it." Philip Hampson

NEVINS, ALLAN—Continued

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 28 '54 290w

Reviewed by W. C. Harvey

Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 4 '54 750w

Foreign Affairs 32:675 J1 '54 30w

Kirkus 21:317 D 15 '53 260w

"This is a far more humanized portrait than Nevins' biography of Rockefeller and should appeal to a much wider group of readers."

E. T. Smith

+ Library J 79:380 F 15 '54 100w

Nation 179:78 J1 24 '54 340w

"While the history of the Ford enterprise is utterly engrossing, formidably documented and refreshingly free from visible bias, it is at a deeper level that the book exerts its fascination. As Mr. Nevins is clearly aware, the story of the Ford company during its halcyon days is only a motif from a far larger pattern; while the book has the sharpness and sometimes even the pace of a newsreel, it is often the background rather than the central figures which excites attention." R. L. Heilbroner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 28 '54 700w

"There can be no doubt that 'Ford: The Times, the Man, the Company' is a landmark contribution to American industrial history."

J. K. Galbraith

+ N Y Times p1 F 28 '54 1050w

"This book is a waste all round, and the more to be regretted because it is high time that we had not a broadside like Harry Bennett's wild and funny 'We Never Called Him Henry,' not a graduate thesis on transportation and the American automobile industry, but a biography worthy of the old devil who loved to play crude practical jokes on people and would never let anyone play practical jokes on him." Brendan Gill

New Yorker 30:124 Mr 27 '54 600w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 11 '54 650w

"In their selection from the immense mass of material in the recently opened Ford Archives, Dr. Nevins and Mr. Hill have used judgment and artistry. Packed with information, meticulously documented, and abundantly illustrated, the book is a valuable reference book, but it is also readable and often entertaining as well. It is a vital contribution to the history of our times." Roger Burlingame

+ Sat R 37:14 F 27 '54 750w

"A masterpiece of proportion and clarity in a most difficult field of narration." D. W. Brogan

+ Spec p232 Ag 20 '54 2450w

"It is much to be hoped that Professor Nevins and Mr. Hill—or authors as competent as they are distinguished—will complete a work so auspiciously begun. This is the era of serious industrial histories. Nowhere have they been as fully documented, as fairly compiled, as in America. It would be a pity if the Ford story were to remain half-told; particularly as this first half has been told so consummately well."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p756 N 26 '54 1500w

"Although no one else as yet knows the Ford archives well enough to be knowledgeably critical of Professor Nevins' treatment, it appears to be objective. Ford's weaknesses as well as his insights are noted. The reader may find the writing too leisurely and expansive in spots, and he will be painfully aware that neither the author nor his collaborator speak the language of the automobile, but these are small failings in an important book."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:158 Je '54 260w

Wis Lib Bul 50:70 Mr '54

NEW Century cyclopedia of names; ed. by Clarence L. Barnhart with the assistance of William D. Halsey [and others]. 3v 4342p $39.50 Appleton

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries. Biography—Dictionaries. Names, Geographical 52-13879

"Work is a revision, enlargement and modernization of the 60-year old Century Cyclopedia of Names. It has over 100,000 entries, their average length considerably longer than in the older work. Longest are those for United States and U.S.S.R. Among the fullest biographical entries are those of Washington, Jefferson, Churchill, F. D. R., and Stalin. As an indication of the period when revision no longer was possible for the editors, the death of Dylan Thomas early in November ('53) is recorded, but Eugene O'Neill's death, late in the same month, is not. Work was carried through under editorship of Clarence L. Barnhart (with an Editorial Advisory Committee, Paul North Rice was the library member), consulting editors, special consultants, etc." Library J

"The typography is excellent, the volumes not too bulky, and—judging from my experience to date—the entries provide all one could hope to find in a medium-sized reference work." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:100 O '54 150w

"This cyclopedia is a must for libraries and schools, in fact for anyone who wants detailed information about and correct pronunciation of persons and places. Ordinary dictionaries contain only a fraction of the material presented here. Of special value in these days of news dispatches about foreign cities and countries are the pronunciations of foreign names." J. B. Sheerin

+ Cath World 179:317 J1 '54 300w

"This three volume set will prove a gold mine in many professions as well as a valuable answer giver, in combination with a regular dictionary." J. T. McCutcheon

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 28 '54 80w

"The three-volume edition is not, of course, as handy as the one-volume, and it is not nearly so well printed as its predecessor. The pronunciation will be useful. The average reader can stand some help with such proper names as Saint-Exupéry, O'Faoláin, Krutch, and Kanawha. But altogether this new edition of 100,000 names has most of the good points of its famous predecessor and many new ones of its own. It is a worthy successor to a noble forebear." Horace Reynolds

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 25 '54 650w

"A monumentally painstaking job intended as a reference work but likely to ensnare the reader into idle hours of paging through names, names, names."

+ Commonweal 60:351 J1 9 '54 60w

"It should be of inestimable value in small libraries, where choice of reference material is necessarily limited, and in well-equipped students' private libraries, schools and colleges."

+ Kirkus 22:88 F 1 '54 180w

"Will be considered a major reference work for many years. Although libraries could turn to gazetteers, biographical dictionaries and encyclopedias for a good deal of the information it contains, its convenience is outstanding. . . Having every indication of careful and enlightened editorship, it should be acquired by almost all libraries." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:556 Mr 15 '54 280w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 28 '54 40w

Reviewed by David Dempsey

N Y Times p29 My 2 '54 650w

"Seven years of work have gone into the production of the present edition, and the result is a sound and useful reference work."

+ New Yorker 30:135 Ap 3 '54 70w

Reviewed by G. R. Stewart

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 25 '54 900w

"The failures of the 'Cyclopedia' are few in relation to its total success, and most of those are due either to the refusal of people and places to remain static, or to the 'housekeeping' problems involved in reference-book publication. . . Usage of the 'Cyclopedia' reveals few serious gaps, but a major flaw seems to be the erratic treatment of the official National Monuments of this country, with many of them completely ignored. . . Missing personalities are fewer than missing places. . . All of this is minor carping. When, at the end of this year, Oscars are passed out to the reference books of the year the 'New Century' deserves one of the first." Wayne Hartwell

+ — Sat R 37:40 Mr 20 '54 650w

"One of the very helpful features of the geographical entries is the inclusion of variant spellings and older forms of place names. The variant spellings occur most frequently in the case of foreign names. . . The New Century Cyclopedia of Names offers a wealth of information on a wide range of subjects. It is well-written, thorough, up to date, and specific in its information, and even though much of the information may be available in other sources, the convenience of having it all in one place should make it extremely useful. It is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:53 O '54 1800w
Times [London] Lit Sup p782 D 3 '54 350w

NEW Oxford history of music [editorial bd: J. A. Westrup, chairman] 11v:v2, Early medieval music up to 1300, ed. by Anselm Hughes. 434p il $8.75 Oxford 780.9 Music—History and criticism

(54-12578)

"The second volume in the New Oxford History of Music (but the first volume to appear), this covers a period that extends from the earliest Christian music to approximately 1300 A.D. It is the work of six contributors, including the editor, and is divided into eleven sections: Early Christian Music; Music of the Eastern Churches; Latin Chant before St. Gregory; Gregorian Chant; Trope, Sequence and Conductus; Liturgical Drama; Medieval Song; The Birth of Polyphony; Music in the Twelfth Century; Music in Fixed Rhythm; and the Motet and Allied Forms." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"There is evidently more there than meets the eye, or the uninstructed ear. This is an alluring book. I shall, in time of more leisure, compare it with the work of Gustave Reese, Music in the Middle Ages. All students of musical history will watch for the successive volumes of the great New Oxford History of Music." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:1271 O 20 '54 270w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 10 '54 70w

"The articles, though technical as can be, are nevertheless readable, and the browser may learn without too much difficulty what kind of music Charlemagne heard in church and what kind of music the troubadours sang."

New Yorker 30:195 N 6 '54 140w
Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 400w

NEW YORK. MUSEUM OF MODERN ART. Masters of modern art; ed. by Alfred H. Barr, jr. 239p il $15 Museum of modern art; distributed by Simon & Schuster

709.03 Art, Modern 54-13277

"It consists of 273 black-and-white illustrations and seventy-seven very good color plates of the work in the permanent collection of the Museum of Modern Art, surely one of the world's great galleries. . . Mr. Barr accepts the challenge of selecting modern art which he believes will stand the test of time. And it is to the credit of his connoisseurship first as director of the Modern Museum and then director of its collections that so many of his choices have already become 'modern masterpieces.' Expanded captions—sometimes Mr. Barr's own comments, sometimes quotations—accompany the pictures." N Y Times

"Mr. Barr has written a commentary on the paintings, drawings, and sculpture which seems to me a model of its kind, and which makes excellent use of quotations from the artists themselves. This is the main body of the book and it constitutes a lively panorama of the Modern movement." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 195:86 Ja '55 240w

"Meant to be a picture-book, it is more, far more—since it provides a panoramic view of the modern adventure in art as illustrated in original works in the Modern Museum collection."

Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 2 '54 240w

"Luckily, the birthday exhibition has hints of greatness written all over it and so has this volume, which is practically a catalogue of it. Time may edit it savagely but in the meantime it is entertaining beyond any precedent that we have had in the way of museums—and that is the secret of its success with the public."

Henry McBride

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 21 '54 400w

"The story of modern art is told with the objects, rather than theories and movements, as focal points. This valuable book gives one the pleasant illusion of being conducted through the galleries with Mr. Barr as the genial and knowledgeable docent."

A. B. Saarinen

+ N Y Times p4 D 5 '54 170w

New Yorker 30:207 D 11 '54 190w

Reviewed by L. R. Sander

Sat R 37:32 D 4 '54 80w

NEWBIGIN, JAMES EDWARD LESSLIE, bp. Household of God; lectures on the nature of the church. 177p $2.75 Friendship press
261 Church 54-5573

The Kerr lectures given in Trinity College, Glasgow, during November, 1952. "The reader will find here no attempt to deal with the doctrines of the ministry and the sacraments or of the standard of faith. I have simply tried to make a contribution to the discussion of the question 'By what is the Church constituted?' The first chapter sketches the present context of the discussion and touches on the biblical meaning of the word 'Church.' The next three chapters examine the three answers to the central question, which may be roughly characterized as Protestant, Catholic, and Pentecostal. The last two chapters argue that the Church is only to be understood in a perspective which is at once eschatological and missionary, the perspective of the end of the world and the ends of the earth." (Pref)

"Bishop Newbigin's book is worth studying carefully. It makes the achievement of unity seem more important than ever—and more difficult." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:611 My 19 '54 1250w

"The Household of God has an unusual quality. The author, whose original religious allegiance was Presbyterian, is now a bishop of the Church of South India; he is a man of large mind who lays hold of his subject with a tenacious grip. His thinking has been dominated by a sincere and prolonged endeavour to weld together the diverse elements that had to be brought into mutual understanding if there was to be a union between heirs of the Protestant Reformation and a Church which retained the Catholic tradition as it is known in the Church of England."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p109 F 12 '54 500w

NEWELL, HOMER EDWARD. High altitude rocket research. 298p il $7.50 Academic press
551.5 Atmosphere, Upper. Rockets (aeronautics) 53-12945

Contents: The rocket as a research vehicle; Recovery of data; Pressures, densities, and temperatures in the upper atmosphere; Winds in the upper atmosphere; Rocket measurements of solar radiation; Composition of the high atmosphere; The ionosphere and earth's magnetic field; Cosmic rays; High-altitude photography. Name index. Subject index.

N Y New Tech Bks 39:2 Ja '54

NEWELL, H. E.—Continued

"The science teacher and student will learn much from this book about upper atmospheric physics and rocketry; the specialist will welcome the orderly review of research results, and the extensive lists of references and name and subject indexes."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:264 Je '54 270w

NEWELL, MRS HOPE (HOCKENBERRY).

Cap for Mary Ellis. 200p $2.50 Harper

53-8547

Story of two young Negro girls, enrolled in an all-colored school of nursing, who are chosen to represent their race in a fine private school which is experimenting with mixed classes.

Booklist 50:226 F 1 '54

"This is not a story of prejudice problems. With a single exception the girls are accepted for the worthwhile individuals they are. The problems they meet are mostly those which arise in the course of becoming full-fledged nurses, and the author tells her story with good many flashes of humor." P. A. W.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p59 N 15 '53 200w

"Honest, unglamorized and up-to-date story."

V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:38 F '54 90w

Kirkus 21:541 Ag 15 '53 160w

"An interesting and authentic story about nursing. A second theme is the adjustment of two Negro girls (of Steppin and Family) to the problems presented by their being the first Negroes in an all-white nursing school. This has been handled skilfully and naturally. Older girls will take this book to their hearts and look for a future Mary Ellis story. Recommended." Augusta Baker

+ Library J 78:2230 D 15 '53 70w

"The training and hospital details are excellent, as they would be when written by an experienced nurse. Girls will find equally fascinating Mary Ellis' home life and her brother, the famous dancer. For once, a good career story without a love affair, though a fascinating beau appears at the end. We like it a lot." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 10 '54 150w

Reviewed by Nora Kramer

N Y Times p22 Ja 24 '54 150w

Wis Lib Bul 50:81 Mr '54

NEWELL, MRS HOPE (HOCKENBERRY).

Penny's best summer; pictures by W. T. Mars. 244p $2.75 Harper

54-8975

Story of two thirteen-year-old girls on a Pennsylvania farm, during a summer when oil was discovered on the farm.

"Romantically minded girls will enjoy this book as much as boys who will want to read it for technical information." B. J. R.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 N 14 '54 80w

"A nice story of friendships formed. Slight but warm."

Kirkus 22:441 Jl 15 '54 90w

"Although the story material will appeal to girls in the upper elementary grades, the book is a disappointment in its stereotyped characters and the melodramatic qualities and predictability of its plot. A 'marginal' purchase." Anne Singleton

Library J 79:2255 N 15 '54 70w

"There are good humor, an amusing cast of characters, happy family life and plenty of atmosphere in this story of the turn of the century. The plot structure is a bit weak, but girls will enjoy the spontaneity and fun." Eleanor Clymer

+ — N Y Times p36 N 28 '54 90w

NEWHOUSE, EDWARD.

Temptation of Roger Heriott. 241p $3 Houghton

54-10198

"Roger Heriott is Executive Secretary of the privately endowed Averill Foundation, which grants musical scholarships. To support a wife and two nice children in the Ramapos he has $10,000 a year, and he is tempted to accept more from his father-in-law, who is estranged from and rather unreasonably detested by his daughter." Library J

Booklist 51:133 N 15 '54

"A delicate assessment of worldly expensibilities for which the price may be integrity, and independence, paraphrased in attractive and familiar terms."

+ Kirkus 22:544 Ag 15 '54 240w

"Mr. Newhouse, a seasoned New Yorker contributor, is well versed in feminine and child psychology, the whims of the rich. . . His witty novel is inconclusive, perhaps, but life is like that too. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1826 O 1 '54 100w

"Mr. Newhouse, well known for his short stories, displays here at full length the same sharpness and insight and ability to engage the attention which have distinguished his shorter work." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 17 '54 480w

"Despite a kind of limpness in total effect and the invented quality of conflicts among characters, 'The Temptation of Roger Heriott' develops considerable voltage through the bas-relief clarity of small scenes. One feels that he has watched a master workman build something out of the materials at hand and that the experience has been fun, whether or not the final product carries much illusion." James Kelly

+ — N Y Times p6 O 17 '54 490w

"As readers of his short stories have known for years, Edward Newhouse is a writer of real stature. Now, he again demonstrates that he is an equally talented—if, unhappily, an undervalued—novelist. 'The Temptation of Roger Heriott' is one of the really good books of this or any other season." William Peden

+ Sat R 37:20 O 30 '54 600w

"Edward Newhouse builds an absorbing plot; he is an adroit and finished writer who knows how to establish his characters and put them into action with speed and finesse; his whole book has assurance and skill and excitement that lift it out of the ranks of mere competence. Yet for all this the action moves a little too rapidly for the deepest feelings of the characters to become involved. The plot is a little more easily resolved than the situation requires." Paul Pickrel

+ — Yale R n s 44:316 winter '55 280w

NEWITT, JOHN H.

High fidelity techniques. 494p il $7.50 Rinehart

621.345 [681.843] Sound—Recording and reproducing. Radio receivers 52-5781

"This book analyzes and explains the processes involved and how the proper results are achieved in high fidelity sound reproduction. Designers, custom assemblers, and home experimenters or constructors will find it valuable for its evaluation of characteristics to be expected from equipment, and for the author's consciousness of costs involved." Booklist

Booklist 50:161 D 15 '53

Library J 79:917 My 15 '54 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:81 N '53

"Mr. Newitt is a professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and his material undoubtedly made an effective lecture course in 'Audio Systems,' but in its unfortunate present form it suffers from the author's failure to shape his text to the needs of a specific public. Few of its technicalities are made clearly comprehensible for lay readers, while its lack of rigor and skimpiness of references hold its engineering usefulness down at about the level of audioservicemen's interests." R. D. Darrell

Sat R 36:41 N 28 '53 120w

NEWMAN, BERNARD. Report on Indo-China. 245p il maps $4 Praeger

959 Indo-China, Indo-China, French 54-7713

"An account of the complex ideologies and objectives at war in this region today. Mr. Newman traveled more than 25,000 miles through Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia gathering material for this book. He spoke with Emperor Bao Dai, met the king of Laos, the Prime Minister of Vietnam and many other local dignitaries. In addition he lived with French troupes, was present at several actions and even penetrated the Viet Minh lines on a number of occasions. He also interviewed prisoners and talked with peasants and workers." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Bookmark 14:6 O '54 10w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 Ag '54

Current Hist 27:326 N '54 150w

"Somewhat out of date because of the recent truce, but nevertheless an easy-to-take interpretation of a complex situation." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 79:1589 S 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by O. E. Clubb

Nation 179:427 N 13 '54 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 S 5 '54 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 21 '54 150w

"Much of the volume is a sort of guidebook to Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia. Mr. Newman went out to look and listen, and has put together some interesting, though not overly-scholarly observations on his travels." Michael James

+ Sat R 37:18 S 25 '54 390w

NEWMAN, WILLIAM STEIN. Understanding music. 302p il $3.75 Harper

780.15 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 53-5378

"A new introduction to music's elements, styles, and forms—for both the layman and the practitioner." (Subtitle) The author is Associate Professor of Music and Chairman of Instruction in Piano at the University of North Carolina. A preliminary, shorter version of this book appeared in 1952 as a syllabus entitled Toward an Understanding of Music.

Booklist 50:200 Ja 15 '54

+ Bookmark 13:84 Ja '54 20w

"This book is for the reader who seeks more than a superficial knowledge of the subject but who does not care to wade into the deep waters of musicology." Harold Rogers

+ Christian Science Monitor D 3 '53 40w

"There are occasional statements that are open to question on several counts. . . But, on the whole, Dr. Newman's book has much to commend it. Not the least of its virtues consists in the constant reminder to listen to the music of today, and in the discussions of modern trends wherever such discussions are pertinent." Doris Silbert

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:297 Mr '54 450w

Wis Lib Bul 50:67 Mr '54

NEWSOM, ED, pseud. See Evans, M. N.

NICHOLL, LOUISE TOWNSEND. Collected poems. ltd autog ed 243p $5 Dutton

811 53-10858

"Miss Nicholl's first book of poetry appeared in 1939. Its contents and the three books which have followed it are reprinted complete in this collection, together with a group of 19 new poems." Library J

Booklist 50:219 F 1 '54

"This is readable, sensitive, pleasant verse, that all who run may read."

+ Kirkus 21:616 S 1 '53 120w

"Mystical, exquisite in craftsmanship, and very personal in feeling, these poems are praiseworthy additions to our literature, and they should be better known." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 78:2221 D 15 '53 40w

"Throughout her work the continuity of her thought is unbroken, though the style grows more intense like a burning glass coming to a focus. She is the poet of revelation. Penetrating her observations and lighting them from within, she discloses each one in passing as part of an eternal pattern." Robert Hilleyer

+ N Y Times p5 D 20 '53 550w

"Miss Nicholl has not received her just due from either the critics or the public. Her work is never showy or discursive, and her form is conventional although varied with more subtlety, to meet the demands of her difficult subject, than is at first apparent. . . It is obvious that Miss Nicholl is writing religious poetry, but of a kind that goes beyond any set liturgy and touches the sacred in man and nature." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 30:114 F 27 '54 200w

"Miss Nicholl sees all experience in a framework of quiet which, while it does not excite the reader, satisfies him in a way which Mil-lay's or Teasdale's more passionate outbreaks of despair never do. She does not yield to the temptation to be dramatic at the expense of what she knows and is. So controlled, indeed, can she be on occasion that some of the poems bear the imprint of a vision very much like Robert Frost's, as in Son on Bark." Michele Freedman

+ Poetry 84:175 Je '54 800w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R 37:30 Mr 6 '54 90w

NICHOLS, ALICE. Bleeding Kansas. 307p $4.50 Oxford

978.1 Kansas—History 54-5295

"This is the story of the conflict between Northerners and Southerners for possession of Kansas between 1854 and 1857. . . Miss Nichols writes in story form, with a liberal use of dialogue and with a novelist's sense of landscape and weather. . . She skilfully employs dramatic suspense as she portrays scenes of comedy and tragic violence. Yet she almost wholly avoids the history-faking which the story form so often involves." Sat R

Booklist 50:448 Jl 15 '54

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 20 '54 250w

"An energetic period and a pot and kettle situation, this is a lively research into sources and makes vivid the bloody, tempestuous years."

+ Kirkus 22:278 Ap 15 '54 120w

"Recommended for all history collections." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:1055 Je 1 '54 130w

"Miss Nichols, a native of Kansas, and a professed exponent of 'the middle way,' undertakes to get behind the moral facade of the Kansas myth and find out what really happened. In taking her stand between the two embattled camps, she runs somewhat the same risks that the territorial governors ran—the risk of being shot at from both sides. . . For those who like their history at a galloping pace, however, Miss Nichols will provide considerable satisfaction." C. V. Woodward

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Jl 25 '54 500w

"Convinced that earlier accounts have been written almost exclusively from a Northern viewpoint, Alice Nichols is bent on being fair to the South. Her overemphasis on the part New Englanders played in Kansas settlement through Eli Thayer's Emigrant Aid Society is misleading." H. F. Graff

N Y Times p16 My 16 '54 470w

NICHOLS, ALICE—Continued

Reviewed by William Spanner

San Francisco Chronicle p18 J1 11 '54
230w

"A work of solid and permanent value which is also lively, colorful, exciting. . . My feeling is that, in her effort to redress the balance, she has sometimes tipped the scales toward the Southern side in her interpretations; I think, too, that she, like most of those who have written of him, is something less than fair to erratic, brilliant Jim Lane. . . These, however, seem to me very minor faults in a work whose general accuracy is as great as its human interest. This is authentic Americana. It ought to be widely read." K. S. Davis

+ — Sat R 37:18 Je 12 '54 800w

NICHOLS, BEVERLEY. Laughter on the stairs; with drawings by William McLaren. 254p $3.75 Dutton

828 Country life 54-5048

"Merry Hall [Book Review Digest 1953] began the country house experiences of a writer who knows beauty and has good taste and writes of his life with a brittle gaiety that dispels gloom. Laughter on the Stairs carries on life at Merry Hall and no reader will be bored if he passes the first chapter." Library J

Booklist 50:316 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:157 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Walter Harding

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 28 '54
220w

Kirkus 22:53 Ja 15 '54 150w

"Very good for reading aloud—if the group is congenial. General purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:547 Mr 15 '54 100w

"Mr. Nichols has a lot of fun; his readers should have as much." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 21 '54 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 16 '54
300wTimes [London] Lit Sup p270 Ap 24
'53 280w

NICHOLS, BEVERLEY. No man's street. 209p $2.75 Dutton

Detective story. 54-10914

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 47:508 Ap
17 '54 90w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 17 '54
100w

"In its old-fashioned way it's rather fun." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p50 O 24 '54 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 7 '54
100w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:63 N 6 '54 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p117 F 19 '54
250w

NICHOLS, LEE. Breakthrough on the color front. 235p $3.50 Random house

301.451 [325.26] Negroes—Segregation, U.S.
Armed forces 53-9713

Against a background of a detailed picture of earlier conditions, this book tells how the American Armed Services formulated and carried through a policy of non-discrimination, chiefly in post-World war II years and in the Korean war. Index.

Booklist 50:253 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by Roi Ottley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 28 '54
250w

Foreign Affairs 32:675 J1 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:47 Ja 15 '54 160w

"Some libraries south of an imaginary line may have to consider carefully. Recommended."

R. P. Bartolini

+ Library J 79:555 Mr 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by Saunders Redding

Nation 179:196 S 4 '54 500w

"Lee Nichols' book will be a restorative for any who have lost faith in human progress." Philleo Nash

+ New Repub 130:19 Mr 22 '54 600w

"For both the crusader and the skeptic this book filled with the drama of official fact rather than exhortation and oratory, is a significant contribution to the continuing effort to build a dynamic and meaningful democracy in terms of human relations." Roy Wilkins

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 14 '54
700w

"By producing a first-class study of a major problem in American race relationships Lee Nichols, who works the night desk for The United Press in Washington, has demonstrated that any time a good reporter aspires to write a book he will find rich material kicking around underfoot. . . It is in the backward glance that Mr. Nichols, though ardent toward his subject and exceptionally sympathetic toward the services, fails somewhat of objectivity in relating why things did not move faster." S. L. A. Marshall

+ — N Y Times p3 F 14 '54 380w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:233 Je '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:63 Mr '54

Reviewed by C. V. Woodward

Yale R n ■ 43:606 summer '54 350w

NIDA, EUGENE ALBERT. Customs and cultures; anthropology for Christian missions. 306p $4 Harper

572 Missions. Society, Primitive 54-8976

"Dr. Nida, who is Secretary for Translations with the American Bible Society, has visited Christian mission work in many primitive out-of-the-way parts of the world. His book, ostensibly written to help the missionary put his best foot forward, charts the contrasts between Christian and various non-Christian religious and cultural concepts and shows how these create barriers to understanding and communication." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:166 D 15 '54

"Readers will remember Dr. Nida's recent book, God's Word in Man's Language [Book Review Digest 1952] which dealt with the linguistic problems involved in the expansion of Christianity among peoples speaking languages other than those in which our religion got its start, and also different from ours. In the present volume . . . he treats without prejudice or special pleading a theme which is a fascinating field for scientific study, but at the same time keeps in view the special relevance of this anthropological material to the work of carrying Christianity to the peoples whose customs and cultures are studied." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1492 D 8 '54 120w

"This volume is a must for those engaged in or preparing for foreign missionary work. It also provides intensely interesting and informative reading for all who are concerned with the problems of inter-cultural relations."

+ Kirkus 22:701 O 1 '54 250w

"Informative, yet non-technical, this book will have interest for the general reader as well as the specialist." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p40 N 21 '54 90w

NIEBUHR, REINHOLD. Christian realism and political problems. 203p $3 Scribner

261.7 Christianity and politics 53-12785

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Through it all shines more clearly than through any previous book of the author the mature judgment of a mind which accomplished the rare feat of balancing liberal elements of thought and true conservatism." Ludwig Freund

+ Ann Am Acad 293:191 My '54 650w

"In this volume of essays, the first such collection since Discerning the Signs of the Times (1946), Reinhold Niebuhr gathers together some of his evaluations and criticisms of current movements and events in politics and religion. . . I should like to record what may be only a feeling on my part; namely, that the Niebuhr of 1953, while still possessed of the incisive mind and given to the use of strong words and striking contrasts, is somewhat more moderate than the Niebuhr of two decades ago. Not that he has grown soft! But there seems to be a temperateness about these essays which is unlike the barbed-wire quality of some of his earlier ones." H. E. Kolbe

+ Christian Century 71:551 My 5 '54 950w
Foreign Affairs 32:505 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by A. R. King
J Religion 30:298 O '54 600w

"A mind like Dr. Niebuhr's strikes sparks from any subject it touches. This book throws its full share of unexpected illuminations upon corners which one often had not even realized were dark." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 7 '54 480w

"If there are those who, having heard much about Niebuhr, have not read him because of his reputation as an obscure writer, they can find in this book a relatively smooth and fascinating pathway into the subtleties of his thought. Not everything Niebuhr has to say, of course, is here, but it is surprising how much of his essence is here brought together. To any who wonder whether Christian theology has relevance in our contemporary ordeal, and have been tempted by the 'peace and prosperity' books put out in the name of religion to conclude that it has not, a brush with this theologian who warns that 'history remains morally ambiguous to the end,' who never forgets the 'ultimate tragic possibility' overshadowing all human effort, may bring a great enlightenment." Paul Hutchinson

+ Sat R 37:31 Ap 10 '54 550w
U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:67 Mr '54 220w

NIELSEN, HELEN. Woman on the roof. 220p $2.50 Washburn

54-12219

Detective story.

"Miss Nielsen keeps us aflutter with agitations while considering the shrewd compassions of Sergeant Osgood (Homicide) and the consequence is prettily topsy-turvy, the more effective for its unattractive, frenetic heroine and its bursts of unanticipated complication and release. Wily contriving from Miss Nielsen and worthy praise for its unpretentious artfulness." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 5 '54 220w

"The case is an effective one, with a sound murder-puzzle and a good picture of life in a Los Angeles bungalow court; and its odd portrait of a paranoid, not as a case history but as an understandable person, lifts it out of the common run." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p10 S 5 '54 200w

"Surroundings, an apartment court in Los Angeles are well pictured, and the very oddness of the protagonist gives this novel a new flavor." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 12 '54 40w

"High good humor, adroit characterization set this among year's top titles." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:43 O 30 '54 40w

NIETZSCHE, FRIEDRICH WILHELM. Portable Nietzsche; selected and translated, with an introduction, prefaces, and notes, by Walter Kaufmann. 687p $2.50 Viking

193 54-7985

Contains new translations in their entirety of: Thus Spoke Zarathustra; Twilight of the idols; The Antichrist; Nietzsche contra Wagner. Also includes selections from 12 other works, many notes and letters, a chronology and a bibliographical note.

"Unless one is an absolute devotee of Nietzsche—and there are few such, though many recognize his warped greatness—this is probably all of him one will ever want." W. E. G.

Christian Century 71:1008 Ag 25 '54 40w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit
N Y Times p12 J1 18 '54 130w

"Mr. Kaufmann provides an informative introduction and the volume is altogether a most welcome way to enter a challenging relationship with one of the world's great minds." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p5C Ag 8 '54 300w

NILES, ALFRED SALEM, and NEWELL, JOSEPH SHIPLEY. Airplane structures. 4th ed v 1 607p $7.75 Wiley

629.14 [629.134] Airplanes—Design and construction (53-11940)

"Since 1929, this work has been a leading college text on the analysis of structures such as airplanes in which the strength/weight ratios are high. It is addressed particularly to senior undergraduate and first-year graduate engineering students. It is used also for self-instruction by graduate engineers who are entering aircraft design from some other field of structural engineering. It includes an adequate coverage of basic theory and a thorough exposition of practical computational methods. The third edition was published in 1943 [Book Review Digest 1943] and was complete in two volumes. This fourth edition, Volume I, contains one completely new chapter and extensive and important revisions in others." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 79:1594 S 15 '54 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:33 My '54

NIN, ANAIS (MRS IAN HUGO). Spy in the house of love. 136p $3 British bk. centre 54-3920

"The story's structure and rhythms are somehow suggestive of a ballet in which the heroine, Sabina, acts out her relationships with five very different men—her husband and four lovers—seeking all the while to understand why mobility in love is the condition of her existence: to understand what it is in each man that she so deeply needs and what makes her eventually reject him." Atlantic

"The self-knowledge Sabina finally arrives at is a bit patly presented; but the swift denouement should be read as a chapter ending rather than a terminal point, for all of Miss Nin's work is a continuing chronicle of Sabina's inner development." C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 194:86 Ag '54 90w

"The present book is the best of her series of novels published in this country. The craft moves directly toward the area of psychological realism; the prose is a pleasure to read. This is, in short, a sensitive and discerning fable of a woman's love life, which manages to compress within a very brief compass some of the rewards and almost too many of the anguishes of passion for its own sake." Maxwell Geismar

+ Nation 179:75 J1 24 '54 500w

"This is not among Miss Nin's best work, being neither as poetically imaginative nor as psychologically profound; but it does suggest her ability to illuminate the sub-cellars of the female psyche." Jerome Stone

+ — Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 270w

NININGER, ROBERT D. Minerals for atomic energy; a guide to exploration for uranium, thorium, and beryllium. 367p 11 maps $7.50 Van Nostrand

553.4 Uranium. Thorium. Beryllium. Prospecting 54-10377

"A reference manual containing a great variety of information for prospectors for uranium, thorium and beryllium. It includes information on the United States and other areas of the world where indications are favorable for these minerals. Much space is devoted to reference material such as lists of manufacturers of equipment, laws and regulation applying to prospecting, and a list of A.E.C. offices." (Library J) Index.

NININGER, R. D.—Continued

Booklist 51:126 N 15 '54

"The techniques of diamond core drilling appear to have been overlooked, which is unfortunate in view of their increasing importance in uranium prospecting. The book should have been published several years ago when surface prospecting for uranium was a more favored technique, but most libraries in mineral-bearing regions and those in large metropolitan areas will still find it useful." R. R. Hawkins
Library J 79:2219 N 15 '54 130w

NIXON, FLOYD E. Principles of automatic controls. 409p il $9.35 Prentice-Hall 621.8 Control equipment 54-5075

"The book for engineers and technicians who desire to get a grasp on the theory without the assistance of an instructor. Does not require a knowledge of higher mathematics." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Library J 79:919 My 15 '54 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 38:82 N '53

NOBLE, HELEN (KLAFFKY). Life with the Met. 250p il $3.50 Putnam

B or 92 New York (city). Metropolitan opera 54-5490

"Mrs. Noble, formerly secretary to various Metropolitan Opera notables and Girl Friday about the House, was first hired in the early Twenties apparently while still in her teens. She loved the backstage atmosphere and stayed on for around twenty years, seeing the end of Gatti's regime and working well into Edward Johnson's." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

Booklist 50:414 J1 1 '54

"If you are a music lover who has a special spot in your heart for the Metropolitan—the capital of grand opera in the United States—you'll find Helen Noble's book to be engaging reading from first to last. . . She writes with a kind touch, a full heart, and a bubbling sense of humor. She provides an informal supplement to the more serious books about the Met." Harold Rogers

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 17 '54 370w

"The 'gal Friday' of the Met tells the backstage story of the famous opera house with affection, sugar and spice."

+ Kirkus 22:258 Ap 1 '54 130w

"Anyone interested in the workings of opera will enjoy reading this modest book of reminiscences, but should not expect to find any great amount of 'inside stuff.' Fortunately she has almost as much to say about the general managers, officers, doormen, and telephone operators as about the singers and conductors—individualists to the man." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:1231 Je 15 '54 130w

"All told, it is quite a document. In essential tone it is a good-natured book—full of anecdote, gossip, opinion, conjecture, first names, nicknames, camaraderie, and affection for the Metropolitan itself, for co-workers, for admired singers, and, above all, for the memory of Mr. Ziegler." James Hinton

+ Sat R 37:18 J1 3 '54 370w

"Here is a witty and humorous survey." W. M. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 360w

NOBLE, HOLLISTER. One way to Eldorado. 286p $3.50 Doubleday

54-5178

A story of railroading in the Sierra mountains. The hero-narrator is an official of the railroad on the way East for a vacation, when he drops off at Pioneer Gap and finds himself in the midst of an adventure.

Booklist 50:260 Mr 1 '54

"A virile, swiftly paced novel of suspense and railroad lore."

+ Bookmark 13:108 F '54 30w

"Here is a story of suspense and high adventure, with a stretch of railroad without a peer as the background." W. W. Cunningham

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 28 '54 400w

"Not a very profound book, but very absorbing entertainment."

+ Kirkus 21:747 N 15 '53 200w

"It has everything! It will not survive for centuries but it's a very good, slightly off-beat adventure yarn. Men and women both will like it; rail fans will go for it like a gourmet for filet of sole Marguery." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 79:142 Ja 15 '54 100w

"A fast-moving story, but almost the best of it is the fascinating picture the author gives of the inner workings of a railroad."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 24 '54 200w

"Any railroad buff will get a thrill out of the background, which is painted in with broad strokes and strong colors. The author's characters are drawn with almost as bold a technique. There isn't much subtlety about any of them; but subtlety isn't the quality to expect in so fast-paced a story." Hal Borland

+ — N Y Times p4 Ja 24 '54 420w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R 37:12 F 6 '54 380w

NOBLE, MARY, and MERKEL, JEAN LOUIS.

Plants indoors; their selection, care, and use in decoration. 219p il $6.95 Van Nostrand

635.96 House plants 54-6277

"A practical guide to the art of growing plants indoors, which will have a particular appeal for the novice who has had some success with philodendrons and African violets, and wishes to venture further afield." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 50:336 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:232 J1 '54 20w

"Anyone interested in house plants, whether as a hobby or admirer of them, will be delighted with the many features of this book, which is one of the best on the subject in many years. Remarkably fine illustrations." A. K.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 18 '54 80w

"Good book for women's and garden clubs as well as for individual house-beautiful-ers."

+ Kirkus 22:139 F 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 79:555 Mr 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 13 '54 180w

NOEL, MARY. Villains galore; the heyday of the popular story weekly. 320p il $5 Macmillan (N Y)

051 Periodicals. American fiction—History and criticism 54-9474

A history of the American weeklies from about the 1840's to the middle 1880's. The author deals with about forty of these weeklies, devoting about half of her book to their development and decline. The remainder of the book contains an analysis and commentary on the contents of the papers. Index.

Reviewed by F. E. Merwin

Ann Am Acad 295:160 S '54 500w

Booklist 50:333; 337 My 1 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 30 '54 250w

"We are treated to some lurid purple prose in a work historical in tone but light of heart, nevertheless for a somewhat specialized market."

Kirkus 22:181 Mr 1 '54 170w

"Mary Noel's 'Villains Galore,' is an account of the development and success of the popular story weekly of the mid-nineteenth century. Fascinating as the facts concerning these publications are, Miss Noel has done a good deal more than make them available to the reader; she has, through her interpretation of them, written a book which helps the reader to understand himself better." Jessamyn West

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 My 30 '54 800w

"An interesting and comprehensive history. . . Students will regret the lack of citations and bibliography in Miss Noel's book because some of the statements will be hard to trace back to their source. However, there is a good index and more casual readers will probably welcome pages without footnotes." F. L. Mott

+ N Y Times p7 My 16 '54 500w

Reviewed by Jim Walls

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 1 '54 600w

"In 'Villains Galore' Mary Noel has written a fine book, a thorough, interesting study of the weekly story papers which for more than half of the nineteenth century formed the principal reading matter of the so-called masses. . . Her book is especially recommended to those who cherish the delusion that during the past century there has been a great improvement in taste and public morals." Herbert Asbury

+ Sat R 37:16 Jl 31 '54 1000w

NORLING, MRS JOSEPHINE (STEARNS). Pogo's truck ride; a story of motor freight [il. by Ernest Norling]. 46p $1.75 Holt

54-5802

John and his dog Pogo make a tour of a motor freight terminal and get some enjoyable rides with explanations. For ages 7 to 10.

Booklist 50:283 Mr 15 '54

Kirkus 21:787 D 15 '53 80w

"Too much information and not enough story appeal for primary age, but interesting, easy reading for boys in grades 3-6. Good father-son relationship. Reader may need explanations of such terms as portals, executone, odometer, and tachograph. Useful for social science units on transportation. Recommended all libraries." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 79:389 F 15 '54 80w

"This is an experience which any small boy will envy, especially as John's driver is a friendly soul who explains easily and concisely the technique of truck driving, the rules of the road, the system of loading and unloading freight and related matters. This information is supplemented with realistic pictures and with endpaper diagrams of engines, miniature drawings of signals and signs and types of trucks." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 21 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54 30w

NORMAN, CHARLES. Rake Rochester. 224p il $3 Crown

B or 92 Rochester, John Wilmot, 2d earl of 53-9975

Biography of one of the worst rakes of Restoration England, John Wilmot, second Earl of Rochester. After a brief career of violence and several periods of exile from court he died at the age of thirty-three. Index.

"This biography defies most recent novels in lively interest and surpasses them, when it quotes Rochester's letters, in excellence of prose." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 25 '54 340w

Kirkus 22:255 Ap 1 '54 150w

"Mr. Norman tells his story without pulling any punches. At times he accepts too readily the gossip of de Grammont and others." DeLancey Ferguson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p29 My 16 '54 550w

"Here the matter of authenticity is important. For his kind of book, Mr. Norman obviously did not wish to become involved in questions of bibliography and canon. But with Rochester it is vital to know which versions are genuine and which represent contemporary attempts to fasten on him scandalously pornographic verses written by others. Mr. Norman includes a number which are definitely in the doubtful class, yet never explains the basis of his choice. The reader is left with the impression that the book is designed more to shock than to present the truth." J. L. Clifford

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 18 '54 600w

New Yorker 30:139 Je 5 '54 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 20 '54 250w

Time 63:132 My 17 '54 280w

NORMAN, CHARLES. To a different drum; the story of Henry David Thoreau; pictures by Margaret Bloy Graham. 113p $2.50 Harper

B or 92 Thoreau, Henry David—Juvenile literature 54-8977

A brief biography of Thoreau which stresses certain episodes in his life; the stay at Walder Pond; the river trip with his brother; his relationship with the Concord group; and his defense of John Brown. For high school age.

Booklist 51:113 N 1 '54

Reviewed by Frederic Babcock

Chicago Sunday Tribune p44 N 14 '54 100w

Commonweal 61:202 N 19 '54 20w

"An attractive and stimulating book." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:439 D '54 160w

Kirkus 22:445 Jl 15 '54 150w

"Particularly useful in school libraries as easy background reading for senior high American literature." F. K. Jones

+ Library J 79:1675 S 15 '54 80w

"A well-written study of Thoreau, containing judiciously selected passages from 'Walden' and his other works. Mr. Norman addresses his audience (twelve years and over) in an adult manner, assuming that it has the sensitivity and intelligence to appreciate his subject with no more than a minimum of editorializing." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:221 N 27 '54 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 14 '54 100w

NORMAN, GERTRUDE. First book of music; pictures by Richard Gackenbach. 67p $1.75 Watts, F.

780 Music—Juvenile literature 54-6542

This book for boys and girls tells the story of music from its pre-historic beginnings to the present day of symphony orchestras and phonograph records. It contains explanations of how music is conceived and written, of theory, harmony and rhythms, notation and interpretation. The book also includes a few easy pieces to pick out on the piano, as well as brief biographies of some of the composers of today and yesterday. All the instruments of a modern orchestra are described, together with their history and their placement in the orchestra.

Booklist 51:91 O 15 '54

Kirkus 22:234 Ap 1 '54 110w

"It seems incredible that the history of music could be compressed into so slim a book as this one. Yet this has been accomplished by Gertrude Norman in such a way as to make most interesting and illuminating reading. . . Richard Gackenbach's illustrations are enticing to young and old, but the text is quite difficult for tyros. . . However, older children, who have had some experience in music, will find the book well worth while. It provides excellent reference material for parents, teachers and librarians, including a list of records compiled by Leo Lerman." Jeanne Massey

NORMAN, GERTRUDE—Continued
+ N Y Times p44 O 17 '54 110w

NORMAN, SYLVA (MRS EDMUND CHARLES BLUNDEN). Flight of the skylark; the development of Shelley's reputation. 304p il $4.50 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Shelley, Percy Bysshe 54-5932

"Miss Norman, contrary to the usual custom, begins her biography with the hero's death. Instead of dealing with the thirty restless years of the poet's life, the book covers a period of some eighty years beyond it. These were the years that unraveled truth from myth, fact from legend, and built up Shelley's reputation, which was at a low ebb when he drowned near Viareggio in a typical Mediterranean squall." N Y Times

"A scholarly as well as an entertaining book." H. F. West

+ N Y Times p24 S 26 '54 600w

"Miss Norman's rigorously objective account fails to provide analysis where it seems most necessary: too suddenly, Shelley is accepted among the immortals of English poetry. What changes in taste, thought, sensibility brought about this conversion, why the 'blasphemous infidel' achieved the status of 'classic'—this Miss Norman does not tell us. But in separating truth from myth, gossip, scandal, and sentimentality—and doing so with wit and perceptiveness—Miss Norman has given us a rewarding and engaging book." Saul Maloff

+ — Sat R 37:23 D 11 '54 320w

NORSE, HAROLD. Undersea mountain. (New poetry ser) 54p $2 Swallow, A.

811 53-9395

A collection of verse by a young "neometaphysical" poet who lives in New York city.

"He needs yet to explore the tensions of meter and rhythm, for his work lacks conflict and drama, but such vision and such artifice is part of a growth well within his attainment." Kimon Friar

New Repub 130:20 F 15 '54 70w

"Harold Norse's poems are really promising. Although as yet one hears echoes in these verses of other poets, and although a good many of these poems are too long, Norse is obviously developing his own medium." E. L. Walton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p7 Ag 9 '53 180w

"There is a bleak eloquence in the satire directed at complacent city life and the frustrations everywhere from coal mines to colleges. Mr. Norse writes best, though, when he deals with seascapes and skies and the feeling of one person who loves another." Maurice Irvine

N Y Times p39 S 27 '53 50w

"There are three or four poems in the book that perceive the process of living as more than mere loss and are distinguished verbally by an aspiration to dwell again in possibility. Most of Mr. Norse's poems communicate easily even when their references are autobiographical, private, or even anomalous: the demi-myth has had its way with the experience, and the diction is somehow public, or perhaps, rather, exposed. These few, on the other hand, have got their contents well into their immediate words, or anyhow well enough that the lapses in the writing are regrettable. They are romantic, if you will, and not well controlled." Harry Duncan

Poetry 83:335 Mr '54 1200w

NORTH, ROBERT CARVER. Moscow and Chinese communists. 306p $5 Stanford univ. press

951.04 Kung-ch'an-tang. Communism—China 53-10945

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by Lindsay of Birker

Am Pol Sci R 48:546 Je '54 1000w

"Mr. North's book is not written in popular style, although he evidently seeks to bring a 'message' to his readers concerning their attitude toward the emerging political situation in Asia. The evident intellectual integrity of the author constantly keeps the reader informed of the differences between conclusions based on scholarly documentation and conclusions derived from personal judgments and opinions. The volume itself is a helpful addition to the bookshelf of contemporary world affairs." H. A. Steiner

+ Ann Am Acad 292:215 Mr '54 340w

"A useful, sober and dispassionate historical analysis."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:682 Jl '54 30w

"This contribution to the 'Hoover Institute Studies' is an important and scholarly one, but it may disappoint those who expect it to cover the full ground suggested by the title. . . The concluding chapter which bears no relation to the rest of the book is put forward as a prescription for American policy. Mr. North seems here to fall into the common trap of assuming that because nationalism is a most powerful force in Asia today it is also capable everywhere of being turned to constructive purposes if not thwarted by Westerners." Max Beloff

+ — Pacific Affairs 27:69 Mr '54 550w

Reviewed by C. B. McLane

Pol Sci Q 69:138 Mr '54 800w

Reviewed by C. C. Montgomery

Social Studies 45:311 D '54 550w

"The book adds important detail to the knowledge of its subject, but has defects probably unavoidable at present. The presentation of the history of Chinese Communism is uneven because the substructure of monographic studies, particularly on the years since 1937, has not been done. In addition, the real documents on the clandestine relationship between Moscow and the Chinese Communists are not available to scholars. As a consequence, the narrative must still be constructed out of historical fragments, the Comintern record made for public consumption, clues, and conjecture."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:166 Je '54 280w

NORTHEN, HENRY THEODORE, and NORTHEN, REBECCA TYSON. Secret of the green thumb. 431p il $5 Ronald

635 Gardening 54-6918

"This book has been written to give gardeners the scientific facts about plants on which all gardening methods must be based. You acquire a 'green thumb' only when you understand what goes on in the plants themselves, what they need in order to live, how they do their work, and how they can be helped to resist the many ailments which threaten them." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 50:314 Ap 15 '54

"In clear-cut unapologetically scientific terms, with carefully selected illustrations that clarify the points, the Northens have given the curious gardener fascinating facts behind the rules he's had to learn. This for the true gardener who wants to know the whys of planning and growth."

+ Kirkus 22:51 Ja 15 '54 250w

"Amateur gardeners who are at all interested in the 'why' behind the 'how' of plant cultivation, will find this volume a welcome change from the usual how-to-do-it book. . . Recommended." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:547 Mr 15 '54 140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:174 Jl '54

NORTHROP, FILMER STUART CUCKOW. European union and United States foreign policy; a study in sociological jurisprudence. 230p $4.75 Macmillan (N Y)

341.18 U.S.—Foreign policy. European federation 54-12844

"Widely known Yale philosopher applies sociological jurisprudence to the problem of European unification. Accordingly he examines the various European countries as to their 'common social norms,' especially religious and political beliefs. Conclusion: Only France, Italy, Benelux Countries and West Germany share enough common living-law norms to make union a practical possibility. He ends with a brief, but penetrating analysis of our foreign policy in relation to Europe." (Library J) Index.

"The facts are incontrovertible; the statistics, cogent. Students of international affairs will have to read this book; the average reader, out to be pleasurably informed, will find himself really at work."

+ Kirkus 22:514 Ag 1 '54 450w

"While out of date with regard to the now defunct EDC, this is a thoughtful book, well founded on facts, still well worth reading for those genuinely interested in foreign policy. Recommended for all larger public and college libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ — Library J 79:1823 O 1 '54 130w

Nation 179:448 N 20 '54 270w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 28 '54 1150w

"The argument is intricate and profound. With the majority of Mr. Northrop's conclusions most observers in Europe would agree. If such observations as 'the fate of Continental European Union depends on the Europeans' confidence in the direction which the United States foreign policy will take' penetrate to the Senate chamber then the book will have performed a missionary service of the greatest value. Here and there Mr. Northrop's espousal for the cause of European unity betrays him into judgments which seem ill-advised." Drew Middleton

+ — N Y Times p3 D 26 '54 1000w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 340w

Time 64:102 N 1 '54 180w

NORTON, ALICE MARY (ANDRE NORTON, pseud). At swords' points. 279p $3 Harcourt 54-8575

A story of international intrigue by an author well known for her science fiction for young readers.

"The writing is adult in accomplishment. . . The young who go along with Anders, and it's for the mid and upper teens, will enjoy chilled spines. I wish I could have been convinced."

T. M. L.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 N 11 '54 60w

Horn Bk 30:436 D '54 120w

"Superior cloak and dagger."

+ Kirkus 22:390 J1 1 '54 150w

"Recommended." R. M. McEvoy

+ Library J 79:2501 D 15 '54 80w

N Y Times pt2 p34 N 14 '54 60w

"Local color, characterization, good; pace slow for spy yarn. Genteel thriller." Sergeant Cuff

+ — Sat R 37:7 S 25 '54 20w

"Mystery, suspense, and action combine to make an exciting, well-written story of escape and rescue. There is no 'writing down' to a juvenile level; its nineteen-year-old hero and its straightforward style will appeal to all boys over twelve." E. S.

+ Sat R 37:92 N 13 '54 90w

NORTON, ALICE MARY (ANDRE NORTON, pseud), ed. Space pioneers; stories by Eric Frank Russell [and others] ed. with an introd. and notes by André Norton. 294p $2.75 World pub. 54-5338

An anthology of science fiction for teen aged readers.

Booklist 50:423 J1 1 '54

"One of the best science-fiction anthologies for youngsters yet produced." Mark Reinsberg

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 11 '54 350w

Horn Bk 30:194 Je '54 80w

Kirkus 22:202 Mr 15 '54 50w

"Excellent anthology of science fiction for the teen-age." E. S. Yoneshige

+ Library J 79:790 Ap 15 '54 30w

"Falls a trifle below Miss Norton's admirable earlier efforts as writer or editor, relying too much on stories which are long sheerly for the sake of being long, and not because the plot or theme demands length." H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 Mr 7 '54 40w

NORTON, ALICE MARY (ANDRE NORTON, pseud). Stars are ours! 237p $2.75 World pub. 54-8169

Science fiction for teen-agers.

Booklist 51:88 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:14 O '54 20w

"Extremely exciting." Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p45 N 14 '54 80w

+ Kirkus 22:395 J1 1 '54 160w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 28 '54 70w

"An excellent fabrication of old and new science-fiction ideas, 'The Stars Are Ours!' is based on the theme that man's desire for personal liberty can overcome all adversity. Some readers may feel the ending is incomplete, and that too much happens in too few chapters, but even they will agree that this is a rip-snorting adventure tale." L. T. Bulman

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 29 '54 160w

"Wild improbabilities and deeds of fantastic valor are the stock-in-trade of science-fiction authors. Good writing is not so common among them. André Norton employs all three in 'The Stars Are Ours.'" A. O'B. M.

+ Sat R 37:35 Ag 21 '54 100w

NORTON, ANDRE, pseud. See Norton, A. M.

NORWAY, NEVIL SHUTE, (NEVIL SHUTE, pseud). Slide rule. 240p il $3.50 Morrow

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Engineers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-7100

Autobiography of the English engineer and novelist covering only the engineering side of his career. The book ends with 1938 when the writer resigned from the airplane industry to devote himself to writing.

Booklist 50:413 J1 1 '54

Bookmark 13:217 Je '54 30w

Reviewed by John Lewellen

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 12 '54 130w

"This book contains unexpectedly little of the human personality and the warmth that fill Mr. Shute's novels. The autobiography stays in the factory and the board room and rarely goes home, so that one sees only the fleeting shadows of the people with whom Mr. Shute has walked in company and simply knows the names of some who impinged on his career. Yet the story is exciting and the major theme is highly significant for our day." J. A. May

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 My 27 '54 700w

Kirkus 22:225 Mr 15 '54 130w

"The rather forbidding though characteristically modest title should not deter readers from taking up a veracious record as fascinating as Nevil Shute Norway's numerous novels and romances. . . Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:981 My 15 '54 140w

"Aviation has never been more keenly observed than by this engineer turned novelist." O. S.

+ Manchester Guardian p6 J1 11 '54 190w

NORWAY, N. S.—Continued

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson

New Statesman & Nation 48:48 J1 10 '54 210w

"For Shute aficiandos the autobiography will be useful as an explanation of the man and his writings. Others whose participation in aviation goes back to World War I will find in it many illuminating sidelights on events of which they may have had some personal knowledge. But the average American reader will probably find the story of abortive British airship projects and of the vicissitudes of aircraft manufacturing in England in the pre-war decade something short of glamorous." S. P. Johnston

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 27 '54 550w

"'Slide Rule' is the fascinatingly factual record, not so much of a writer's apprenticeship as of a man who has always liked to do two jobs at the same time. It is mainly the story of Mr. Norway the engineer, but Mr. Shute the novelist makes significant though fleeting appearances in it, telling how he edged up on his career. If this book is any criterion, there should be no dearth of novelists in the Era of the Machine. All you need is a working knowledge of engineering like Mr. Norway's—and a flair for story-telling like Mr. Shute's." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p10 My 30 '54 450w

"A lively and most satisfying book."

+ New Yorker 30:119 Je 12 '54 290w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 8 '54 190w

"Will Shute's American followers care to share the tribulations in the birth, adolescence, and marriage (to an older company) of a little-known aircraft factory engaged primarily in the building of small carriers and twin-engine trainers? They may not. But as an insight into the other side of a famous storyteller, this book is entertaining and revealing." H. L. Smith

+ — Sat R 37:36 Je 5 '54 550w

Reviewed by David Stone

Spec p70 J1 9 '54 180w

"The accomplished and very successful storyteller in the making scarcely obtrudes on this straightforward and easily written record of an engineering and business career, except now and then to give lively and practised point to some psychological observation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p419 J1 2 '54 850w

Wis Lib Bul 50:208 O '54

NORWICH, ALFRED DUFF COOPER, 1st viscount. Old men forget. 399p il $5 Dutton

B or 92 Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-11701

"Alfred Duff Cooper, first Viscount Norwich, died on the first day of this year. He served his country long and ably as soldier, parliamentarian, Cabinet Minister and Ambassador. He gave to contemporary literature a classic biography of Talleyrand, a solid life of Haig and the exquisite short novel 'Operation Heartbreak.' In the future he will also be known for 'Old Men Forget,' an autobiography that mirrors a man and his times as few others have done in this century." N Y Times

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 12 '54 350w

"One may look in vain for any trace of bitterness or disappointment here. It is the book of a happy man." Vincent Sheehan

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 5 '54 600w

"The attraction of 'Old Men Forget' lies in passages of self-revelation, in the sharply drawn glimpses of men and events and in the picture that Duff Cooper, now indignant, now concerned, always devoted to his country, paints of British politics over twenty tumultuous years." Drew Middleton

+ N Y Times p6 D 5 '54 1100w

New Yorker 30:150 D 18 '54 180w

"It is perhaps the crowning merit of this book that the author, without unduly drawing on sentiment, can lead the reader above the prosaic details of political or fashionable life to the heights which lend sense and dignity to the years of tribulation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p xviii Ag 6 '54 2350w

NOTCUTT, BERNARD. Psychology of personality. 259p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

137 Personality

53-7912

"In the preface to his book, Prof. Notcutt of the psychology department of the University of Natal, South Africa, suggests that 'the main purpose of this book is that of direction-finding in the field of personality.' He further suggests that he is not going to deal with case studies, or technical descriptions of psychological techniques, or even to present reports of research findings. He takes upon himself the task of evaluating rather than describing the activities of psychologists. To achieve this goal, he organizes the book into an introductory chapter on 'The Meaning of Personality and Its Place in Society,' a group of chapters which deal with theories of personality, another group dealing with measurement of personality, and a final chapter entitled 'Development of the Concept of Personality.' Christian Century

"In evaluating Prof. Notcutt's presentation as a whole, this reviewer was left with several impressions. First, it seems that in his critical evaluation of the activities of psychologists the author creates the proverbial 'straw man'... The criticisms of the psychoanalysts for being too willing to inbreed ideas would appear also to be better aimed at an earlier era... Notcutt's concern over the psychologists' 'avoidance' of the problem of the relationship between ideology and personality suggests that he may not yet have had an opportunity to examine the work of the California group and their elaborate explorations into 'authoritarian' or 'anti-democratic' personality syndromes... Aside from the above mentioned criticisms and others, the inclusions of which are restricted by space limitations, this is a substantial, well-written contribution to the field of personality that is quite refreshing." R. I. Evans

+ — Christian Century 71:552 My 5 '54 1100w

Reviewed by J. A. Torres

Ethics 64:334 J1 '54 150w

Reviewed by Philip Mariet

Hibbert J 52:423 J1 '54 190w

"To the lay reader who cares to know what psychology has accomplished since the Germans in the nineteenth century tried to make it an exact science this little volume is warmly recommended."

+ Nation 179:177 Ag 28 '54 650w

NOTESTEIN, WALLACE. English people on the eve of colonization, 1603-1630. (New American nation ser) 302p il maps $5 Harper 942.06 England—Social life and customs. Great Britain—History—Stuarts, 1603-1714 54-8978

"Deals almost exclusively with English institutions and life during the reigns of James I and Charles I. There is scarcely a facet of English culture and political, economic and legal patterns which the author has left untouched." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:172 D 15 '54

"Standing by itself, this work is a valuable over-all social history of the English in the first half of the Seventeenth Century. Equally important, it depicts the environment from which the American colonizers sprang and makes meaningful the pattern of life in the early colonies—patterns which in many cases are still strong on the American scene."

+ Current Hist 27:387 D '54 60w

"Scholarship and readability combine to make this a coherent background within which it is possible to trace the origin of many concepts that have contributed to the American tradition. Recommended for the general reader and the student." B. B. Libaire

+ Library J 79:1892 O 15 '54 130w

"A fascinating account of the society that sent forth the first settlers of tidewater Virginia and New England's stern and rockbound coast." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 179:495 D 4 '54 30w

"Few living historians are better equipped than Notestein to write such a book, for he has devoted a long life to the study of a people whom he greatly admires; he has spent much time living in the country which produced these people; and he is one of the foremost authorities on their political institutions." L. B. Wright

+ Sat R 37:20 D 11 '54 800w

NOTT, KATHLEEN. Emperor's clothes. 328p $4 Ind. univ. press

820.9 Religion in literature. English literature—History and criticism. American literature—History and criticism [54-16695]

"An outspoken and stimulating criticism of the 'dogmatic orthodoxy' of such modern writers as T. S. Eliot, Graham Greene, Dorothy Sayers, Basil Willey and C. S. Lewis, introduced by an attack on the influential philosophy of T. E. Hulme. . . Miss Nott, an English poet and novelist, ably defends liberal and humanistic philosophy and faith and also considers the relationship of poetry and science." Library J

Kirkus 22:555 Ag 15 '54 170w

"[Miss Nott] writes skilfully and with authority. Recommended for literary collections." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:1586 S 15 '54 100w

"Miss Nott writes with a sense of fun and immense vigour. Yet her book would have been better had she spent more time in developing her argument rather than in punching her opponents round the ring. Each chapter is a flurry of blows rather than a sustained argument; and when she winds up for the knock-out blow her strength is expended." Noel Annan

+ — Manchester Guardian p2 Ja 5 '54 450w

Reviewed by Jacob Korg

Nation 179:470 N 27 '54 50w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 46:765 D 12 '53 550w

New Yorker 30:155 D 18 '54 110w

"Her method is unusually tentative and well-mannered for so polemical a purpose, as if she were making war according to the rules of the M.C.C., and although Mr. Eliot himself may be similarly gentlemanly, his surface manner conceals an inflexibility of opinion where Miss Nott conveys the impression that she may, after all, be wrong. . . Interior evidence here suggests that Miss Nott was somewhat overawed by the magnitude of her task. There is a good deal of curtsying to Eliot the poet. . . Nevertheless, Miss Nott has made a valuable beginning and has ventured where other critics, who would be much in agreement with her, might regard it as imprudent to follow." Emanuel Litvinoff

+ — Spec p52 Ja ■ '54 650w

"Miss Nott wishes, with the rest of us, to see established 'a society in which charity is more important than power.' . . Time and again she weakens her case by statements which are totally devoid of meaning. . . These confusions would matter less if the author did not try to extract an ethical Christ from the evidence of eye-witnesses who certainly did not share her aversion to theology. . . However, when all this has been said, her book is not without interest and value. Apart from an occasional lapse into jargon—'fixated,' 'observational'—it is acutely written, and when she is discussing the creative impulse at work in poetry, she displays critical insight of a high order."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p49 Ja 22 '54 2600w

NOURSE, ALAN EDWARD. Trouble on Titan. 208p $2 Winston

54-5067

Science fiction for teen-agers.

Kirkus 22:120 F 15 '54 130w

"A common weakness in S-F youth titles is here, namely, that the teen-ager is too aware and the older people blind to what is going on. However, this is better than others and has good father-son relationships. Recommended for grades 7-10." L. T. Bulman

+ — Library J 79:1065 Je 1 '54 60w

"As a yarn, it's not bad—though the solution is awfully hard to believe." L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 23 '54 100w

Reviewed by Villiers Gerson

N Y Times p16 Ag 8 '54 70w

NOVAK, JOSEPH. How to put power and direction in your golf. 187p il $5.95 Prentice-Hall

796.352 Golf

54-6852

In text, photographs, and diagrams, the author describes his life-time experiences as a golf champion and teacher. Index.

Booklist 50:395 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:862 My 1 '54 30w

NU, THAKIN. Burma under the Japanese; pictures and portraits; ed. and tr. with introd. by J. S. Furnivall. 132p $3 St Martins

959.1 Burma—Politics and government

"An account of the Japanese occupation of Burma (1942-'45), written by the first Prime Minister of Independent Burma. Mr. Nu was a member of the Nationalist movement at the outbreak of the war. Because of this, he was interned by the British, but later, Dr. Ba Maw, head of the Burmese Government under the Japanese, made him Minister of Foreign Affairs, hoping thereby to secure the support of the nationalists." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by Herbert Passin

Ann Am Acad 296:221 N '54 650w

"This is a most remarkable personal record by the man who, ever since the entire Cabinet of Ministers was assassinated in 1947, has been Prime Minister of Burma."

+ Current Hist 27:61 Jl '54 200w

Foreign Affairs 33:168 O '54 40w

"Most interesting."

+ Kirkus 22:139 F 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by Guy Wint

Manchester Guardian p4 My 4 '54 200w

"Burma Under the Japanese is a sincere account of the conflicts which faced Nationalist leaders. Mr. J. S. Furnivall's translation brings out the poetical quality of Thakin Nu's writing; he also contributes an excellent Introduction." Dorothy Woodman

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:839 Je 26 '54 750w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 13 '54 60w

"This book by the Prime Minister of Burma is a welcome addition to the source material relating to the Japanese occupation of Burma. . . Nu's apologetics for Ba Maw's puppet regime and Thakin participation in it, perhaps the most important aspect of the book, are clarifying but not entirely convincing." J. F. Cady

+ — Pacific Affairs 27:285 S '54 400w

"This book is essential reading for all ambassadors newly appointed not only to Burma but to other South-East Asian countries; perhaps for Foreign Ministers, too." C. H. Philips
+ Spec p660 My 28 '54 300w

"The mind that is revealed in this book is of no ordinary quality. Mr. Furnivall has done well to enable Englishmen to read these pages, originally written for the enlightenment of the Burmese people."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p235 Ap ■ '54 600w

NUGENT, FRANCIS EDWARD, ed. Father McNabb reader. See McNabb, V. J.

NUNN, HENRY LIGHTFOOT. Whole man goes to work; the life story of a businessman. 214p $3 Harper

B or 92 Nunn-Bush shoe company 53-8548

"The personal story of a businessman with deep convictions about industrial democracy, this autobiography describes Mr. Nunn's development from a $17.50-a-week bookkeeper in-to a founder of the Nunn-Bush Shoe Company; the evolution of his philosophy of labor relations and belief in the 'whole man;' and the application of his philosophy in such pioneer efforts as the Nunn-Bush Share-the-Production Plan. It is also an account of Mr. Nunn's participation in several government missions and of his thinking on a variety of topics, from politics to vegetarianism." Management R

Booklist 50:143 D 1 '53

Reviewed by H. C. Kenney

Christian Science Monitor p9 S 16 '54 400w

"A good book for all echelons, right down the line."

+ Kirkus 21:561 Ag 15 '53 160w

Management R 42:690 N '53 90w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p5C F 7 '54 120w

NURKSE, RAGNAR. Problems of capital formation in underdeveloped countries. 163p $3 Oxford

332.67 Investments, Foreign 53-3970

"Seven clearly presented lectures which outline in general terms the enormous task of creating a modern industrial economy. The kind of balanced growth Mr. Nurkse recommends cannot be achieved simply by loans from abroad, nor by enlarging the market. The problem is to direct savings into capital investment rather than the increased consumption which would enlarge the population. For this purpose correct domestic fiscal measures are essential." Current Hist

"This is a good and careful book. Its scope is clearly defined and its argument is lucid and consecutive." J. B. Condliffe

+ Am Econ R 44:451 Je '54 1800w

"Nurkse gives underdeveloped countries sound advice on the necessity for complementary action on the home front if foreign loans are to be effective, and he helpfully clears away many familiar misconceptions regarding commercial policies in relation to economic development. Unfortunately, Nurkse's bland view of the nature of imperialism may lead readers in newly sovereign countries to dismiss this useful book." Helen Lamb

+ — Ann Am Acad 294:194 Jl '54 1050w

Current Hist 26:255 Ap '54 60w

Foreign Affairs 32:506 Ap '54 20w

"Our embryonic theory of economic development seems to be taking on the form of a three-legged stool. Of this tripod, 'capital formation' is only one leg, the others being 'resources' and 'entrepreneurship.' Limiting his study to a single leg, Professor Nurkse has not given us a rounded study of economic theory in the large. Neither does he stress the special problems of a particular country or area. Despite which facts, this thin volume will probably be more useful to students of general economic development, or economic development in particular countries, than many another tome larger in size, in scope, and in pretensions." M. Bronfenbrenner

+ — J Pol Econ 62:175 Ap '54 1000w

Reviewed by David Mitran

Manchester Guardian p2 Ja 5 '54 240w

"Professor Nurkse, addressing primarily his fellow-economists, has kept his discussion on a highly theoretical level. I have no complaint on this score: pure theory is essential to the development of economics. It is to that of physics. But I would like to urge Professor Nurkse to consider a supplementary volume applying his theories to the specific problems of different types of underdeveloped countries." Keith Hutchison

+ — Nation 178:135 F 13 '54 380w

"A timely and valuable addition to economic theory and in part a synthesis of contemporary thought."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:212 Je '54 240w

"Nurkse's book comes closer to being a 'primer' on economic development than any other book on the subject. It deserves the thoughtful attention of all concerned with problems of economic development." J. H. Adler

+ Yale R n 43:470 spring '54 230w

NUSSBAUM, ARTHUR. Concise history of the law of nations. rev ed 376p $5 Macmillan (N Y)

341.09 International law—History 53-13529

"In 1947, Dr. Nussbaum provided for students of international law a much needed modern, brief, general history of that discipline [Book Review Digest 1947]. In the revised edition, bearing the same title, the material has been organized more systematically and less mechanically or chronologically. More attention is still given to theory and literature, and less to practice, than would come natural to an Anglo-American student, but perhaps that is a salutary corrective." U S Quarterly Bk R

Am Pol Sci R 48:589 Je '54 90w

"In the meticulous revision of this little volume, Professor Nussbaum presents a masterful profile of the evolution of a law of nations from primitive tribal groping to the present. Each chapter is interestingly and accurately written in a style that will inform the reader and refresh the memory of those whose contact with this important facet of human relations has dimmed with time." D. W. Knepper

+ Christian Century 71:826 Jl 7 '54 500w

"There continues to be a conspicuous lack of reference in the work to the sociological bases of international law. . . The present plight of international law emphasizes, in fact, the importance, for that law, of social and political conditions. A Concise History of the Law of Nations continues, however, to be a most useful book for everyone interested in international law and its history."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:224 Je '54 160w

NUTTIN, JOSEF. Psychoanalysis and personality; a dynamic theory of normal personality; tr. by George Lamb. 310p $4 Sheed

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Personality 53-8868

"The author is a professor of psychology at the Catholic University of Louvain, Belgium. His short introductory section is intended to provide a 'critical sketch of psychoanalysis as a whole for the benefit of the nonspecialist reader.' The first major part of the book is a rather extensive critical analysis of Freudian psychoanalysis as a science, as a philosophy or 'picture of man and human life,' and as a therapeutic method. In the second part the author attempts his own formulation of a 'dynamic theory of normal personality' in which he employs and extends principles of normal behavior developed in the field of general psychology in preference to those of classical Freudian theory, which he feels is inextricably tied into psychopathological behavior." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"Some men have followed [Freud] blindly; some have attacked him relentlessly; and a vast multitude have desired a balanced appraisal of his work, based upon skillful, thorough investigation by an expert speaking from a platform of unquestionable solidity, whether scientific or religious. Of this desire the present book is a satisfactory fulfillment. Much of it, to be sure, will appeal chiefly to the specialist; but most of it makes profitable reading for all the intelligent."

+ Cath World 178:479 Mr '54 170w

"The package is an attractive one and may be expected to arouse considerable interest among both specialist and non-specialist groups of American readers, for several reasons... Although Nuttin attempts to develop his own personality theory in the context of general and experimental psychology, there is a rather conspicuous absence of references both to the problems of research methodology and to reports of completed research in either the general or personality fields. But probably the most serious limitations to the usefulness of his theory within an experimental context is the large number of operationally undefined terms he employs as explanatory principles which presumably could not be subjected to empirical validation... The short introductory section presents a great many of the working terms of psychoanalysis with felicity, though it necessarily foreshortens the perspective of their development." Laurence McGaughan

+ — Christian Century 71:19 Ja 6 '54 900w

"This work is not a popular discussion of psychoanalysis; it is, on the contrary, a predominantly technical book. Though not exclusively for the expert, it is more for the specialist than for the layman. It is closely reasoned, and the style is not easy, due, perhaps, to its double translation. It is, however, a solid and thoroughly scholarly book, scrupulously documented throughout; one which requires, but will repay, study. It is a book which no serious student of psychoanalysis or modern psychology can afford to neglect." W. C. Bier

+ Commonweal 58:470 Ag 14 '53 1150w
Kirkus 21:324 My 15 '53 140w

"[The book] is to be heartily welcomed as a most timely and valuable clarification of a difficult matter." J. W. C.

+ Sat R 37:32 Ap 10 '54 270w

"The translation by Mr. George Lamb is smooth, and he is presumably not responsible for the irritating frequency of italicized words and phrases, which hamper this author's otherwise fluid exposition. The annotated bibliography is excellent."

Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Ap 23 '54 1050w

NUTTING, WALLACE. Furniture treasury (mostly of American origin); all periods of American furniture with some foreign examples in America, also American hardware and household utensils. 2v in 1 il $10.95 Macmillan (N Y)

749 Furniture

"A standard work now made available in a heavy but convenient, and less expensive, one-volume edition." Booklist

Booklist 51:135 N 15 '54

"This promises to be one of the best pieces of merchandise, quality merchandise, of this season... In one volume, and at this price, with all the 5000 illustrations of the original, Furniture Treasury becomes an essential item for public library reference shelves (the 7 1/2 pounds weight almost precludes circulation), and for private libraries not only of dealers and collectors, but of the amateur antique addict who wants an authoritative work on American antiques. The text is scarcely more than descriptive captions, but the scope of inclusions, items photographed from 500 collections, museums and private collections, makes almost certain that the identification value is almost all-inclusive."

+ Kirkus 22:647 S 15 '54 180w

Reviewed by John Haverstick
Sat R 37:23 D 4 '54 130w

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. First prize stories, 1919-1954; from the O. Henry memorial awards; introd. by Harry Hansen. (Hansover House bk) 495p $3.95 Garden City bks.

Short stories—Collections 54-11451

Thirty-four short stories, which took first prize in the annual volumes of The O. Henry Memorial Award prize stories, between 1919 and 1954. There are gaps for 1952 and 1953 when the selection committee did not function.

Booklist 51:151 D 1 '54

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 21 '54 270w

"For students of the genre, as well as short story fans, here is rich harvest."

+ Kirkus 22:644 S 15 '54 170w

"It may seem disappointing that Ring Lardner or Willa Cather never made an O. Henry Memorial, or that Ernest Hemingway or Katherine Anne Porter made it only once... Despite its limitations, 'First-Prize Stories' is both an entertaining collection of good and not-so-good stories and a significant milestone in the history of this distinctly American literary type." William Peden

N Y Times p40 N 28 '54 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 12 '54 500w

"For the most part the cluster of top-rated stories appeals more to emotion or sentiment than to mind. There is a comfortable air of screened readability hovering over the volume, though one questions the editorial claim that these are the 'best' stories of their time. Perhaps they are the best of their popular kind, equal in style and characterization and mood to the run of today's offerings." James Kelly

Sat R 37:29 D 4 '54 850w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 350w

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories, 1954; sel. and ed. by Paul Engle and Hansford Martin. (V34) 318p $3.95 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections (21-9372)

"This is the thirty-fourth appearance of the O. Henry Memorial Award Prize Stories, which until 1951 had been published annually. The continuity of the series was broken by the sudden death in May 1952 of its late editor, Herschel Brickell. No collection appeared in 1952 or 1953." (Publisher's note) Contents: The Indian feather, by Thomas Mabry; The news from Troy, by Clay Putman; A game of catch, by Richard Wilbur; The war in the air, by R. V. Cassill; Very sharp for jaggings, by Richard Clay; A family matter, by G. P. Elliott; The witch, by Herbert Gold; Estate and trespass: a Gothic story, by J. B. Hall; Rebellion, by Ruth Harnden; Vineland's burning, by Donald Justice; Too young to have ■ gun, by P. H. Lowrey; Fighter, by J. A. Maxwell; The life you save may be your own, by Flannery O'Connor; The flower, by Miriam Rugel; The shorn lamb, by Jean Stafford; The sorrows of Captain Schreiber, by R. G. Stern; The day of the cipher, by Augusta Walker; The secret weapon of Joe Smith, by Robert Wallace; Breach of promise, by Jessamyn West; Lost soldier, by Stanford Whitmore; The Stutz and The Tub, by Reed Whittemore; Whistle and the heroes, by Herbert Wilner; A kind of scandal, by Rex Worthington.

Booklist 50:241 F 15 '54

"It is ■ remarkably even and consistent collection, of genuine quality; and if it contains no unmistakably immortal masterwork by the same token it contains nothing shoddy or cheap. It is a collection featuring—not exclusively but dominantly—the work of young and new writers. It is marked, ■ a collection, by an excellent lack of the very fancy and showy and precious sort of writing which in some rarefied circles is mistakenly confounded with art." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 31 '54 300w

"They are, generally, good, honest and effective pieces. And their goodness points to the unconvincing quality of current novels. It's significant that about half of the sketches deal with children or childhood." George Miles

+ Commonweal 60:22 Ap 9 '54 1000w

"The overall effect is ■ mannered, often self-conscious approach to ■ very old literary form, the short story which here has its beginning, a diminished middle and seldom an end and which may bring some surprises to followers of the previous collections."

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD—Continued
 Kirkus 21:766 D 1 '53 200w

"These young writers are talented and serious, without being pretentious. I would have cast my vote for first-prize for Clay Putnam's 'The News From Troy,' a powerful evocation of the effect of the death of a son upon his family, but the editors awarded him second-place anyway. And the winner, Thomas Mabry's 'The Indian Feather,' is a very respectable story in its own right. There are of course some light-weight affairs in the collection, but the general tone is high." J. H. Raleigh

+ New Repub 130:20 F 8 '54 850w

"How does the final product shape up? Bland. Mild. Respectable. A sameness in mood, pace, flavor and theme. . . Most of the stories are controlled, non-experimental and based upon pot-au-feu recipes which aim to extract the universal from the particular. As a passing thought, one wonders whether Henry James wouldn't feel more at home among these fictional people and activities than the memorialized O. Henry." James Kelly

N Y Times p27 F 7 '54 650w

"The new kind of short story derives from the fusion of two schools—the group that regarded the short story as a deliberately artificial construct, and the group that regarded it as a direct presentation of the truth, with little concern for form, and sometimes even conscious avoidance of anything that even looked like form. If such a reconciliation is taking place, if the newer writer is intelligently choosing the best of both schools, then this is the best thing that has happened to the short story in a long time. The editors here believe this is exactly what is taking place, and this collection, the best in many years, bears them out." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 F 5 '54 600w

"There is precious little that is being said in this volume, there is nothing new, and if we were to judge it as representative of our current short story we would be forced to say that it has come to a dead end. Fortunately, the collection is not representative; it seems strongly biased. The giving over of so important a series to one academic writing center might well be counted a dubious act on the part of the publisher." Raymond Walters

— Sat R 37:15 Ja 23 '54 1350w

"Although all the contributing publications are known to a fairly limited group, only four are in any sense magazines familiar to the average reader. This means that most of the stories have not had wide circulation, which is a point in favor of the anthology. Unfortunately, it is about the only point in its favor." R. F. H.

— Springfield Republican p5C Ja 31 '54 300w

OBERNDORF, CLARENCE PAUL. History of psychoanalysis in America. 280p $5 Grune

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Psychology—History
 53-12381

"Dr. Clarence P. Oberndorf offers an eyewitness story of the spectacular growth of psychoanalytic training, practice, and contributions to psychoanalytic thought in the United States in the last forty years." Sat R

Reviewed by Waldo Frank
 Nation 178:54 Ja 16 '54 800w

"Only a distinguished veteran of the Freudian wars, like Dr. Clarence P. Oberndorf, Clinical Professor of Psychiatry at Columbia University, could have undertaken the difficult task of tracing the dramatic rise of psychoanalysis in this country during the last fifty years. The result of this historical approach is a concise, honest, wise and critical report which cannot be too highly recommended to physicians and to patients who apply or submit to this psychotherapeutic technique." Martin Gumpert

+ N Y Times p6 D 27 '53 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 20 '53 150w

Reviewed by Franz Alexander

Sat R 37:11 Ja 9 '54 1100w

"Throughout the book, Dr. Oberndorf's warm autobiographical touches make this chronicle a vital history."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:97 Mr '54 240w

O'BRIEN, ELINOR. Land and people of Ireland; with an introd. by Padraic Colum. (Portraits of the nation ser) 115p il $2.75 Lippincott

941.5 Ireland—Civilization 52-12906

A short but fairly comprehensive survey of Ireland's past and present set forth in readable style for high school students.

Booklist 50:224 F 1 '54

"Thoroly readable and cleverly arranged, this view of one of the oldest of nations gives the reader interesting and authoritative information." J. M. Flynn

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 27 '53 200w

Reviewed by Mary Hanly

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 12 '53 30w

Kirkus 21:589 S 1 '53 120w

"Recommended for seventh-, eighth-, and ninth-grade boys and girls for recreational as well as informative reading." L. R. Markey

+ Library J 79:151 Ja 15 '54 80w

"The main value of this new volume in the portraits of the Nations Series is its fine presentation of Ireland as we find it today. The book includes a series of beautiful photographs, and has a full index."

+ Sat R 37:53 F 13 '54 100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:78 Mr '54

O'BRIEN, GRACE. Golden age of German music and its origins. 221p il $3.50 De Graff 780.943 Music, German [53-29387]

"As would be expected from the title, the chief emphasis here is on composers from Bach through Beethoven. The 19th century (Weber, Mendelssohn, etc.) forms the briefest of tail pieces and there is no attempt to assess the twentieth century. The historical background, however, is filled in, from pagan beginnings through the Minnesinger and Meistersinger to the glories of the Renaissance courts and merchants' establishments, the hardy musical life of the Lutheran Church, and the beginnings of German opera." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"A well-told story and, in general, reliable." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:147 Ja 15 '54 90w

"The general reader, to whom this book is aimed, will find the brisk lives more interesting than the much condensed and occasionally repetitious history. As in the author's companion volume on Italy, there is little criticism or interpretation of music itself. The interested layman can be led on by the bibliography to more scholarly and profound works on the period. The format is attractive." J. K. Dickson

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:314 Mr '54 210w

"There is evidence that the author has consulted recent authorities and she shows great care in assembling and arranging her facts. Her prose is a little drab, but is fluent enough to make easy reading. Such criticism as occurs in the second part of the book is jejune, but any looseness of writing is in the expression, not in the assembling of the facts. As an elementary textbook it is to be recommended."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p440 Jl 10 '53 250w

O'BRIEN, JOHN ANTHONY, ed. Roads to Rome; the intimate personal stories of converts to the Catholic faith. 255p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

248 Catholic church—Converts 54-9380

The personal stories of sixteen converts to the Catholic faith. Among those included are A. J. Cronin; Bella V. Dodd; Gene Fowler; Alexis Carrel; John C. H. Wu; Anne Fremantle; William Markoe.

Booklist 50:370 Je 1 '54

"A reading of this excellent volume can help us acquire the understanding, tactful zeal without which we cannot be of the slightest assistance to inquiring non-Catholics." J. T. McGinn

+ Cath World 179:236 Je '54 350w

"Extremely interesting." Fred Wieck

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 25 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:190 Mr 15 '54 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p35 My 16 '54 20w

O'BRIEN, JOHN ANTHONY, ed. Vanishing Irish; the enigma of the modern world. 258p $4 McGraw

312.1 Ireland—Population. Ireland—Social conditions 53-11487

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Bookmark 13:106 F '54 20w

Reviewed by Gerard Fay

Manchester Guardian p4 S 14 '54 500w

"Anyone who has a taste for the bizarre rhetorical effects of racial propaganda and has enjoyed the general Irish protest against life will enjoy this book, both for its good sense and the traditional echoes of the dear lost scream of the Skibbereen Eagle." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:297 S 11 '54 2150w

"Father O'Brien, of the University of Notre Dame, has assembled an interesting collection of people and ideas in 'The Vanishing Irish.' His own contributions to the volume are among the most thoughtful. Like all the writers he has brought together, Father O'Brien loves Ireland. Like a good Irishman and good priest, he feels a duty to keep asking—as Sean O'Faolain does in his witty essay—'Why, ye young devils, why in the name of God and nature won't ye marry one another?'" John Cogley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 14 '54 380w

Springf'd Republican p10D Ja 17 '54 600w

O'BRIEN, LIAM. Remarkable Mr Pennypacker. 185p il $2.75 Random house

812

54-7468

"A high-spirited comedy revolving around the freethinking bigamist, Mr. Pennypacker, who maintained eight children in Wilmington and nine children in Philadelphia. The action takes place during one spring weekend in 1890." Booklist

Booklist 50:376 Je 1 '54

"Delightful comedy about a bigamist which starred Burgess Meredith and introduced a promising new playwright to the Broadway scene. This is good community theatre fare and is so recommended to drama libraries aiding them." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1233 Je 15 '54 30w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 23 '54 50w

O'CASEY, SEAN. Sunset and evening star. 339p $4.75 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-4920

"With 'Sunset and Evening Star' Sean O'Casey completes his autobiography. The sixvolume series began fifteen years ago with his valiant and lovely impressions of childhood, 'I Knock at the Door.' . . . In 'Sunset and Evening Star' he reports some of the things he did and many of the things he thought between his return to England from America and the years following World War II. Since the autobiography is no chronicle of vital statistics, Mr. O'Casey is chary of dates. But the period covered in the new volume is from 1934 or 1935 to, apparently, 1949 or 1950." N Y Times

"The sixth and presumably concluding volume in one of the greatest autobiographies of this century." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 195:84 Ja '55 550w

Booklist 51:150 D 1 '54

Reviewed by F. E. Faverty

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 N 28 '54 320w

"As always, there are lashings of good things here. One of the best is O'Casey's sly remark that 'Ireland is not nearly so Irish a country as some Gaels make her out to be.' This is succinct criticism of many an Irish writer. Sean's genius for dramatizing situation, characterizing people, in dialogue is here on almost every page." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 24 '54 1350w

+ Kirkus 22:656 S 15 '54 250w

"Only occasionally are there flashes of the old O'Casey as in the chapter that tells of the lot of the Cambridge students and again when he describes the fearful bombing in the South of England during the war, but on the whole it is mixed up, tedious piece of writing—a sad, sad ending for the great dramatist who produced Juno and the Paycock, and Within the Gates." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 79:2211 N 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by Gerard Fay

Manchester Guardian p9 N 26 '54 180w

"Perhaps this book, presumably the last of six constituting an informal autobiography, should be reviewed as many music critics do symphonies—by quoting the musical text. Nothing, it seems to me, can quite convey the feel of O'Casey's writing—and thinking—except the text itself. Despite the many faults which might 'legitimately' be found in it, it is, I am convinced, great writing." Harold Clurman

+ Nation 179:468 N 27 '54 600w

"Sean O'Casey in Sunset and Evening Star is cantankerous, intolerant, unfair, and dogmatic. . . . But don't let the opening of this review give you the notion that it is a book to shrug off. Far from it. Its impact can be felt. And the impact of the six volumes of autobiography of which Sunset and Evening Star is the last, when taken together have not only an impact but a wallop. Perhaps it is in this that as an autobiographer O'Casey is a breed to himself." Padraic Colum

+ New Repub 131:19 D 27 '54 1400w

Reviewed by T. C. Worsley

New Statesman & Nation 48:544 O 30 '54 600w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 14 '54 700w

"Whatever else the autobiography may be, it is a masterpiece of writing. The writing has music, eloquence, passion, bitterness and force. It can recreate sense perceptions with concrete exactitude. . . . Despite the grandeur of the writing, 'Sunset and Evening Star' is a quarrelsome book." Brooks Atkinson

+ N Y Times p1 N 14 '54 1250w

Reviewed by D. A. Pitt

San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 5 '54 450w

"Most of O'Casey's autobiographical writings are of the soap-box variety, timed for a laugh, a cheer, or a hoot of rage from those who hear or read them. Such prose has been known as Irish eloquence since the days when Samuel Lover wrote his 'Handy Andy.' . . . The book contains an amusing fantasy of Kathleen ni Houlihan in a British pub, but behind these sketches the image of the Hyde Park soap-box rises and on the placard across the speaker's chest is lettered 'Communist Party.'" Horace Gregory

O'CASEY, SEAN—Continued

+ Sat R 37:18 N 20 '54 1250w

"O'Casey proudly calls himself a Communist and has a soft spot in his head for the Soviet Union ('The inexhaustible energy, the irresistible enthusiasm of their Socialistic efforts, were facts to Sean; grand facts'). But this does not make his autobiography any less entertaining. O'Casey admits the existence of other literary lights only to short-circuit them, and he is at his best when he is blowing fuses."

Time 64:116 N 15 '54 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p699 N 5 '54 950w

O'CONNOR, FRANK, pseud. (MICHAEL O'DONOVAN). More stories. 385p $5 Knopf 54-7199

Contents: The lady of the sagas; Guests of the nation; Eternal triangle; Orpheus and his lute; The face of evil; Masculine protest; The man of the house; Judas; My first Protestant; The sorcerer's apprentice; Don Juan (retired); A romantic; The custom of the country; The little mother; The mad Lomasneys; A sense of responsibility; Council for Oedipus; A torrent damned; The shepherds; The old faith; The miracle; The frying-pan; Vanity; Darcy in the land of youth; The sentry; Father and son; Jerome; Unapproved route; Lonely rock.

"O'Connor is a writer whose stories are not only superlatively good but also extremely attractive reading. His style is artfully simple and flowing, his portraiture full of subtlety and charm. And he has a perfectly balanced sense of life's beauty, heartbreak, and humor." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:93 D '54 80w

Booklist 51:133 N 15 '54

"If one were asked to suggest another title for this collection of 29 short stories by Frank O'Connor, 'A Treasury of Masterpieces' would be faithfully descriptive. More than most of his contemporaries—in Ireland or elsewhere—Frank O'Connor succeeds in making the short story do what many a multi-paged novel doesn't, which is to present human beings, their thoughts, emotions, and activities with such superb faithfulness that their realism at times seems enchantingly unreal." J. M. Flynn

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 7 '54 350w

"The joy of this new volume, beyond the fact that it is a new volume, lies in the well-ordered and carefully chosen views it gives of the world of Frank O'Connor. The book is an atlas of that world." Frank Getlein

+ Commonweal 61:170 N 12 '54 750w

Kirkus 22:502 Ag 1 '54 90w

"As always, Mr. O'Connor combines great artistry, mastery of dialogue, a wonderful sense of humor, love for his fellow creatures, and an astonishingly comprehensive knowledge of people of various ages and conditions. Every library and librarian ought to acquire at least one copy of this fine book." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1826 O 1 '54 100w

"O'Connor is never dull; he is honest enough to acknowledge that 'everyday' life has its charm and tragedy, and artist enough to recreate both beautifully. There can be no doubt that he is one of the ablest practitioners of the short story now working."

+ Nation 179:496 D 4 '54 250w

"Even when the 'I' doesn't appear at all, we remain aware of the fascinated, acute, sympathetic but detached watcher, and his presence sets a little space between us and the tales he tells. We are not expected to identify ourselves with any of the characters, who are seen and interpreted from the outside—only to share with Mr. O'Connor his alert and delighted observation of them. In spite of the warmth of his story-telling, its appeal is more to head than heart: our stronger emotions are rarely engaged. Perhaps for this reason the briefer stories, which have singleness of effect, seem more satisfying than the longer ones."

Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 O 17 '54 750w

Reviewed by James Stern

N Y Times p6 O 17 '54 1000w

"'Guests of the Nation' and 'Orpheus and His Lute' are two such stories as to be worth the price of the book alone, but the book is full of his earlier better stories, as well as his later New Yorker ones. There are 29 fine tales of Ireland here for five dollars, a full fat book of nigh 400 pages. Were money any measure of stories this is a bargain of the years."

W. B. Ready

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 24 '54 550w

"The stories of Frank O'Connor are among the few survivals of an elder dispensation; they are traditionally Irish, humorous, entertaining, artful, and gay. Among writers of fiction O'Connor himself is a rarity, one who has trimmed his craft to the writing and rewriting of short stories and nothing else; today he has put aside the writing of verse, novels, and biographies; he has made his choice and he sails his craft with witty skill." Horace Gregory

+ Sat R 37:20 O 30 '54 600w

Time 64:96 O 25 '54 300w

O'CONNOR, PATRICK, pseud. Flight of the peacock; il. by Rus Anderson. 179p $2.75 Washburn

"Sixteen-year-old Bill started out with $100 to be legitimately increased and returned to his father within a year as a test of his worthiness to inherit his father's business. Within two days he had lost his money. . . . A hurricane, an experience with professional 'wreckers' which only Bill and another seaman survive, a berth on the beautiful clipper Peacock headed for the China trade, and other adventures follow." Sat R

"Above-average sea yarn." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:214 N 27 '54 30w

"The vocabulary is not easy, but the story moves along rapidly. Better readers from the eighth grade on who like sea tales will want to read this one. Good pen and ink drawings by Rus Anderson accompany the sketch." Barbara Dillon

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 14 '54 170w

"The atmosphere of the sea and of the daily life aboard a China clipper is well done. 'Flight of the Peacock' will be enjoyed by junior-high-school readers who like adventure on the sea far away and long ago." E. S.

+ Sat R 37:90 N 13 '54 120w

O'CONNOR, PATRICK, pseud. Society of foxes; ■ tale of adventure; il. by Clifford N. Geary. 184p il $2.50 Washburn

An adventure story for grades seven to nine. The hero is Dick Wenting, an inn potboy, who was acting as guard on the Dover mail coach, when he had his big chance. The time is 1801; the scene England and France.

Booklist 50:384 Je 1 '54

"The author is expert at depicting the times and its characters. His scenes press swiftly on from clash to clash. What with the junior public's insistence on pace, and the publishers' need to save costs, this grandly plotted historical thriller has been cut to the bone. . . . Yet, thanks to Mr. O'Connor's style and powers of invention, what we do have is tensely picturesque and exciting while it lasts." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 My 13 '54 170w

"Good characterization and a vivid feel of the period and scene, in Dick's own telling of the tale, make this an historical adventure that should please readers of Stevenson and Dumas." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:251 Ag '54 90w

Kirkus 22:156 Mr 1 '54 80w

"Boys will like. Recommended for ages 12-16." Robert Van Benthuyssen

+ Library J 79:1066 Je 1 '54 90w

"Well-written tale for older boys." L. S.

Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune D R p8 My 30 '54 160w

O'CONNOR, PATRICK FITZGERALD. Shark! [Eng title: Shark-O!]. 255p il maps $3.50 Norton

799.1 Shark fishing 54-7556

A tale of the author's adventures in capturing the basking sharks in Hebridean waters. The basking shark is valuable as a source of oil and Mr O'Connor, inadequately prepared, nevertheless made a profit on his adventures.

Booklist 50:254 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:130 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by Al Chase

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Mr 21 '54 180w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 4 '54 240w

"The isolation and independence of the work in Scottish waters, the fascinating information, still not complete, about this species of shark and the everchanging moments of excitement and thrills that contrast with the strain of depression and defeat give this its color and add to its very personal history. For masculine tastes."

+ Kirkus 22:23 Ja 1 '54 220w

"This is good reading for the adventurous of any age." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:380 F 15 '54 90w

"As far as the knowledge is concerned Mr O'Connor has succeeded, but the 'exultation' is more questionable. . . . If the reader does not sympathise too strongly with 'el sharko' (Mr O'Connor's term) and is not put off by the style, he will find this book refreshing in its enthusiasm and interesting in its facts."

Anthony Smith

+ Manchester Guardian p9 Jl 14 '53 200w

"The final impression I wish to leave is that Shark-O! is well worth reading. . . . My criticisms are that the book is padded, and the style often clumsy." Nigel Nicolson

+ New Statesman & Nation 45:163 Ag 8 '53 380w

"The quality of the book is such that the reader finds himself irresistibly infected with 'shark fever.' This is one of the better shark books and recommended reading for connoisseurs of shark stories." Gilbert Klingel

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 28 '54 260w

New Yorker 30:132 Mr 27 '54 110w

"Any book like this depends greatly on how it's written. Here, wholly aside from the sheer adventure which is vividly described, Mr. O'Connor has much to give. He is a novelist, after all, and knows his job. This is exactly what such a book ought to be; there's not a phony page in it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 15 '54 600w

"An engaging narrative of human adventure on a beautiful and romantic, if sometimes bad-weathered, coast. Mr. O'Connor does not try to get his effects by overemphasizing danger and difficulty. The result is that every word of 'Shark!' rings true." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R 37:27 F 20 '54 260w

"In this book, O'Connor has described, breathlessly, his own Homeric battles with both the beasts and a diminishing bank balance. At times his narrative has some of the qualities of the last half-minute of a Derby commentary. It splutters like a fast fuse. This is an excellent method of describing deeds of derring-do in rough seaways, but it is not always the best way of portraying men and manners among the inlets and islands that give the west coast of Scotland such a dissipated appearance on the map." J. D. Hillaby

+ Spec p135 Jl '53 550w

"Some of the adventures which befall the fishermen make exciting reading. Unfortunately, Mr. O'Connor is guilty of unnecessarily overdramatizing escapades which certainly crackle with excitement in themselves." J. J. N.

+ Springfield Republican p5D F 21 '54 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Jl 17 '53 650w

O'CONNOR, RICHARD. High jinks on the Klondike. 284p $3.50 Bobbs

971.21 [917.121] Klondike gold fields 54-6505

"Of all our major gold rushes none was more sudden than that which takes its name from a tributary of the Yukon River called the Klondike. . . . Mr. O'Connor is interested less in the actual finding of gold than in the indoor activities incident to the rush. He gives us the operators of the saloons, dance halls, gambling joints, theaters and brothels which mined the lads fresh from the creeks, or fresh from London, New York, West Derby, Vermont, and other native haunts of would-be millionaires. Among the more interesting of these fellows were Alexander Pantages, Tex Rickard, Sid Grauman, and of course, Wilson Mizner. He also has room for literary characters like Jack London, Rex Beach and the peer of them all, Robert W. Service." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:397 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:183 My '54 30w

Reviewed by S. H. Holbrook

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 18 '54 300w

"A pleasant, journalistic account of the Alaskan gold rush."

+ Nation 178:549 Je 26 '54 160w

"A wildly entertaining story." S. H. Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk H p1 Ap 11 '54 550w

Reviewed by R. L. Neuberger

N Y Times p15 Ag 29 '54 500w

O'CONNOR, WILLIAM VAN. Tangled fire of William Faulkner. 182p $4; text ed $3 Univ. of Minn. press

813 Faulkner, William

54-5657

"The purpose of this book is to offer a coherent interpretation of Faulkner's fiction. It introduces as much biographical information as seems to me useful in accounting for the man in relation to his fiction and the man in relation to his region. Primarily, however, this is a critical study. Therefore, some of the biographical information I have collected, which is of interest but not especially relevant to an interpretation of Faulkner's fiction, I have included only in the notes, for the most part, at the back of the book." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 50:256 Mr 1 '54

"Tho O'Connor's book is both comprehensive in its coverage and systematic in its method, it seems more valuable for its details—fresh biographical data and comments on individual works and aspects—than in the way of having made any very new or important contribution to our over-all knowledge of its subject." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 14 '54 320w

"William O'Connor attempts to correct some of the mistaken slants of earlier Faulkner criticism. In that effort he has the advantage of a better-unified one-man approach, although his book lacks the richness of the Huffman-Vickery volume." J. R. Willingham

+ Nation 179:512 D 11 '54 300w

New Statesman & Nation 48:110 Jl 24 '54 250w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk H p19 Ja 31 '54 40w

O'CONNOR, W. V.—Continued

"Mr. O'Connor's study, perceptive and comprehensive, adds magnitude to an already impressive literary position. It provides insight for both general and specialized readers." E. A. Bloom

+ Sat R 37:59 My 1 '54 360w

Reviewed by Malcolm Bradbury
Spec p126 J1 23 '54 600w

"Mr. O'Connor's book on William Faulkner is one of those admirably comprehensive studies which we have learned in recent years to expect from American critics associated with universities."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p544 Ag 27 '54 1100w

"Despite its faults, this is probably the best of the book-length studies of William Faulkner so far published."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:190 Je '54 200w

O'DALY, MRS ELIZABETH C. Dear parents. 121p $2.50 Oceana

372 Home and school. Education of children 53-11776

"A school principal who is also a mother, in an informal, common-sense open letter, explains the need for closer parent-teacher understanding and the influence of home and school in child development." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:106 F '54 20w

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ja 17 '54 40w

"The plan of the book is haphazard and repetitious. The reader has the impression that writing this book has given the author the grand opportunity for giving vent to all the grievances stemming from her close relations with parents and children." George Kaiser

— El School J 55:54 S '54 800w

"This is a book of sound advice and wise counsel. . . Recommended for all general collections." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 78:2100 D 1 '53 80w

O'DONOVAN, MICHAEL. See O'Connor, F., pseud.O'FLAHERTY, DANIEL. General Jo Shelby: undefeated rebel. 437p $6 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Shelby, Joseph Orville 54-9545

A biography of the only Confederate general who never surrendered. He was ordered to surrender but instead he crossed the Texas line with the last of his men and sought service there. The author is a native of Virginia. He has been a newspaper man, radio executive, and magazine writer. Index.

"Shelby was a skillful fighter, a hard rider, and a dashing figure but his definitive biography is yet to be written." W. F. English

Am Hist R 60:195 O '54 360w

Booklist 50:418 J1 1 '54

Reviewed by R. P. Basler

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 15 '54 550w

Reviewed by Francis Russell

Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 15 '54 200w

"The author, a Virginia journalist of wide experience and exceptional writing talent, has understandably fallen under Shelby's spell and it is possible that his estimate of the man is too high. But Shelby was undoubtedly a remarkable person and a brilliant leader, and O'Flaherty has depicted him and his incredible career in a style that is as lively as the rollicking boys who rod hell-for-leather behind their beloved chief." B. I. Wiley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 13 '54 750w

"Mr. O'Flaherty is occasionally over-enthusiastic, over-lush in style, and professional historians may quarrel with some of his points." H. T. Kane

N Y Times p6 J1 4 '54 650w

"Mr. O'Flaherty, without sacrificing scholarship, gets the best out of his central figure, and his book will very likely live as the definitive biography of the great cavalryman who could teach his art to the best of them. It will live, too, as a reflection of a way of life no longer possible—or perhaps even desirable—but a gracious and romantic one that is, in spite of its disappearance, a part of our national past." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 10 '54 750w

"Mr. O'Flaherty has written a first-rate book, combining careful scholarship with the ability to tell a story in an engaging manner. The book is warmly recommended, both to the reader who wants to know more about the Civil War and to the one who simply wants to read about an interesting man doing interesting things." Bruce Catton

+ Sat R 37:41 My 1 '54 800w

OGG, ELIZABETH. Decorating on a budget; drawings by Bunji Togawa. 246p $4.50 Barrows

747 House decoration 54-5379

Discussion of home decorating problems by the author of Decorating the Small Apartment (Book Review Digest 1949). She takes up such subjects as: salvaging secondhand furniture; doing one's own refinishing; making use of inexpensive materials; etc. Illustrated. Index.

Booklist 50:352 My 15 '54

"A delightful book on all phases of comfortable living."

+ Bookmark 13:182 My '54 20w

"This is a particularly useful book; it not only gives good advice on furniture arrangement, style, color, accessories, and the like, but it has a lavish amount of 'how-to-do' information as well. . . A source list is another excellent feature." Anne Douglas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 30 '54 60w

OGILVIE, ELISABETH. Dawning of the day. 308p $3.50 McGraw

53-12055

Philippa Marshall, an attractive war widow, goes to rugged Bennett's Island off the coast of Maine to teach the little school. She wins favor with the children but finds herself caught between two warring factions in the local "lobster war." It finally becomes necessary for Philippa to decide whether to leave the turmoil, or marry one of the island men.

Booklist 50:297 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:159 Ap '54 30w

"These are wonderful down east people. Miss Ogilvie writes of them all with understanding affection; even the bad boy and the island toper have her tenderness." M. B. Snyder

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 21 '54 380w

Kirkus 22:75 F 1 '54 160w

"The Dawning of the Day" follows a familiar pattern in regional novels, but its romantic quality is quite special."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 21 '54 360w

"Miss Ogilvie has done a splendid job of giving each character on the island an identity, a personality, an individuality—and has preserved these distinctions adroitly in the helter-skelter of conflict, emotion and group activity. Many a good book has proved a burden to the earth as authors let such things get out of hand, but Bennett's Island stays clear-cut all the way." John Gould

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 21 '54 600w

Reviewed by Isabel Stradley

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 4 '54 120w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p9C My 2 '54 200w

OGILVIE, ELISABETH. Whistle for a wind; Maine 1820; il. by Charles Hand Geer. (Strength of the Union ser) 241p $3 Scribner
54-8789

"This is one of the first books in the series The Strength of the Union. The idea behind this series is the portrayal of each state near or at the time of its entrance into the Union. The setting for this particular volume is Maine at the time of transition from district to state. Jamie Bennett, who lives on an island off the coast of Maine, longs to go to sea and to the distant places of the world, but instead must stay at home. However, life is far from uneventful as he participates in the activities of the fishing village and helps clear up the problem of the wrecks on the reef." Sat R

Booklist 51:157 D 1 '54

"Unlikely, perhaps, to have great popularity, this is, nevertheless, a well-written and warmly human story." V. H.

+ — Horn Bk 30:436 D '54 150w

"A warm story with romantic appeal, this has less political background than previous books in the series."

+ Kirkus 22:638 S 15 '54 150w

"One of the most exciting books in 'The Strength of the Union' series... Recommended for fifth grade and up." C. W. Field

+ Library J 79:2255 N 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p34 N 14 '54 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 14 '54 120w

"Miss Ogilvie lives in Maine and brings warmth and understanding to her story. Mr. Geer's illustrations are in keeping with the spirit of the story." N. J. D.

+ Sat R 37:91 N 13 '54 140w

O'HARA, JOHN. Sweet and sour. 162p $3 Random house

818 Books and reading 54-9511

Collection of articles on books and people reprinted from the author's column in the Sunday edition of the Trenton Times-Advertiser.

"Flashy to funny, this is fairly uninhibited and self-indulgent essaying which makes mettlesome reading."

Kirkus 22:565 Ag 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:1888 O 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 O 31 '54 450w

"Most of these sketches read as though they were written off the top of the O'Hara head, and when he blows his top, he's good mental relaxation. He's a long-practiced workman in terse, hard-bitten prose. And he's far more enjoyable when he's butting his head against something—or someone—than when he tries to be nice, which, fortunately, is seldom." S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p30 O 17 '54 410w

"O'Hara, who admits that he is a fairly handy man with a wisecrack, is having a very good time speaking his mind, and when a writer—any writer any time, and much more the old pro like O'Hara—is having a good time, so do his readers. Undoubtedly that's why the Trenton paper is glad to go on using the column." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 15 '54 500w

"As compared with the 'Appointment with O'Hara' pieces that have been running in Collier's, these are wilder, funnier, shrewder, considerably more entertaining. It's the same fellow, though." Lee Rogow

+ Sat R 37:14 N 13 '54 550w

O'HARA, MARY, pseud. See Sture-Vasa, M. A.

OLGIN, JOSEPH. Little league champions; with a foreword by Phil Rizzuto; il. by David Stone. 189p $2.50 Dutton

54-5034

A story of Little League baseball by a physical education instructor. For boys nine to fourteen.

Reviewed by Harry Molter

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 180w

Kirkus 22:198 Mr 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:710 Ap 15 '54 40w

"A serviceable plot and some hints on bettering your game. For boys who really enjoy reading about baseball this book is the large economy size, since there are at least twenty-five games described from the day the team starts training until it takes the Little League world series." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p16 J1 18 '54 110w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 21 '54 100w

OLIVER, RITA N. Rain or shine, things to make; photographs by Biagio Pinto. 56p $2.50 Harcourt

745.5 Handicraft 54-8847

Shows how to make a variety of things from materials to be found at home: wire coat hangers, newspapers, food containers, clothespins, etc. Directions are plain enough so that children can make the objects without help. Contains some easy-to-make Christmas tree ornaments.

Booklist 51:22 S 1 '54

"Particularly good for a sick-a-bed child." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:340 O '54 80w

Kirkus 22:432 J1 15 '54 90w

"Help from adults will be necessary for children through the second grade, but the brief instructions with diagrams where necessary, good photographs of each object and the fact that all can be made of materials found in the home, combine to make it a book possible for third- and fourth-graders to take pride in using by themselves. Recommended." Averil Randall

+ Library J 79:1666 S 15 '54 110w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 22 '54 60w

Wis Lib Bul 50:217 O '54

OLIVER, ROBERT TARBELL. Syngman Rhee; the man behind the myth. 380p il $5 Dodd B or 92. Rhee, Syngman. Korea—Politics and government 54-7714

"One of the most controversial figures of our time, Korean President Syngman Rhee has been freely discussed and freely denounced by a large number of persons, most of whom know little about him. It was imperative that there appear an authoritative and intimate biography that could show the man as he is. The logical person to write that book was Robert T. Oliver of the faculty of Pennsylvania State College. Mr. Oliver has been in close association with Rhee for more than ten years, part of the time as a secretary and political adviser." (N Y Times) Index.

"Dr. Oliver has been closely associated with Rhee for more than a decade, and his book is the tribute of a zealous partisan." C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 193:80 Je '54 50w

Booklist 50:379 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:183 My '54 40w

Cath World 179:vi S '54 200w

"Extreme left wingers hate Rhee for obvious reasons. But many Americans of moderate political viewpoints are deeply concerned over Rhee's actions in the belief that these actions often fail to show the slightest consideration for American interests. In the first full length biography of the man, Dr. Robert T. Oliver has done little to allay these fears. The book, written by an urbane and knowledgeable educator who has served as a part time lobbyist for the Korean government since 1947, is valuable and enlightening." Walter Simmons

OLIVER, R. T.—Continued

+ —Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 13 '54 240w

"Mr. Oliver, whose objectivity is perhaps affected by his close association with the Republic of Korea's publicity machinery, has himself worked hard over the years to further the cause of Korean independence. He has written many books, he has edited many pamphlets and information tracts designed to bring Korea's problems more forcibly before the eyes of the world. This biographical study, his latest achievement, is especially useful because it brings to light many facts and opinions about Korea and its leaders which have hitherto not been chronicled." Gordon Walker

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 28 '54 700w

"A detailed, laudatory account of the long and interesting career of one of this century's most colorful personalities."

+ Current Hist 26:378 Je '54 120w

Reviewed by Mark Gayn

Nation 179:95 Jl 31 '54 650w

"This friendly biography of Korean President Syngman Rhee gives an intimate and valuable sketch of a controversial figure whose decisions all too often have seemed incomprehensible to Americans. . . Mr. Oliver's book is a little too worshipful; one closes the book wishing it had been a bit more critical of certain acts. Yet Rhee's decisions have an uncanny way of proving right." Homer Bigart

+ —N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 16 '54 800w

"An illuminating, inspiring and extremely valuable book. Moreover, it is written in a clear and fluent style that makes for enjoyable reading. . . The whole of the Korean story has not yet been told, of course, Mr. Oliver is firmly convinced that when it is Rhee will stand as one of the great leaders of our century. He makes a good case and his book should be reassuring to those who are still apprehensive about our Korean ally." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 25 '54 1000w

New Yorker 30:137 Je 5 '54 110w

"The author is a personal friend of Dr. Rhee and has approached the subject in a friendly tone. This is his fourth book on Korea. The writing is a bit colorless, but the subject matter keeps it from being dull." G. A. Barker

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 9 '54 650w

"Robert T. Oliver tells with warmth, sympathy, and great admiration the story of Rhee's lifelong struggle against Korean absolutism, Japanese and Russian imperialism, and Communist subversion and aggression. From this telling two things stand out: his singleminded, selfless devotion to the liberation of his country and his absolute conviction that his way was the only way independence could be won and maintained." H. H. Fisher

+ Sat R 37:17 Je 5 '54 950w

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 500w

Wis Lib Bul 50:134 My '54

OLSON, ELDER. Poetry of Dylan Thomas. 163p $3.25 Univ. of Chicago press

821 Thomas, Dylan

54-9580

A critical examination of the work of this Welsh poet who died in November, 1953, at the age of thirty-nine. The author is associate professor of English at the University of Chicago. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:354 My 15 '54

"It's quite possible that I would never have 'understood' the poems without the critic's help. But I would, quite frankly, prefer continuing to misunderstand them or not trying to understand them at all to having them suddenly stripped down before my eyes like ■ lovely, lethal weapon, its fire-power made harmless, its hidden springs suddenly and rudely exposed, its quality as a thing itself resolved into small functions." Alan Brown

Canadian Forum 34:140 S '54 750w

"A balanced evaluation and an understanding critique." Sister Mary Christopher

+ Cath World 180:159 N '54 450w

"This study of ■ recently dead poet will benefit any reader of modern literature. It is always helpful and often brilliant, making discoveries in the poetry of Thomas which not only illuminate the poems under discussion, but throw a revealing light on poetry in general. He makes the sort of insights into this poetry, so difficult because so imaginative, which could only come from a mind having its own power of imagination." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 2 '54 200w

Reviewed by Francis Russell

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 6 '54 210w

"It is good to be able to say that Elder Olson's book while it is not and does not pretend to be the definitive assessment, is the just and intelligent and dignified appraisal we have hoped it would be." Nicholas Joost

+ Commonweal 60:151 My 14 '54 650w

"Mr. Olson in his study indicates the difficulties which this sort of poetry poses. He describes the techniques and subject matter of Thomas's work, making clear the awesome dimensions of his art and its peculiarities of symbol and metaphor. Recognizing that the poems are anchored in a private view of reality, he explores the attitudes and insights they express. . . [The book] raises almost as many questions as it answers, but Mr. Olson leaves little doubt that he has discovered the key to an understanding of these poems." Jacob Korg

Nation 178:360 Ap 24 '54 800w

Reviewed by G. S. Fraser

New Statesman & Nation 48:330 S 18 '54 1250w

"It is all modestly, decently done. The Olson volume is made further valuable by a long bibliography, the work of William H. Huff, of publications by and about Thomas and 'Under Milk Wood' has an informative preface by Daniel Jones on the sources of the play and includes Mr. Jones' music for the songs in the play." W. T. Scott

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 23 '54 140w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 13 '54 200w

"It is good to have Elder Olson's book, 'The Poetry of Dylan Thomas,' which is the first considerable attempt to evaluate the whole body of his verse." Dudley Fitts

+ Sat R 37:30 My 1 '54 800w

Reviewed by Charles Tomlinson

Spec p235 Ag 20 '54 450w

OLSON, HARVEY STUART. Aboard and abroad; the 1954 professional guide to Europe; il. by Cy Ferring. 730p maps $4.95 Harved pub. co, 39 S. La Salle st, Chicago 3

914 Europe—Description and travel. Travel 53-39530

"This book of information on planning a European tour is an expanded version of material which was formerly privately published for the guidance of persons employing the author's two established travel agencies. It is not intended to replace guidebooks, but to furnish background material on countries and towns, and to make suggestions about such matters as itineraries, preparations for the trip, shopping, dining out, hotel accommodations, and currency. Appendixes include a calendar of special events, and lists of foreign tourist information bureaus in the U.S., U.S. embassies and consulates, and authorized travel agencies in the U.S. and Canada." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 50:397 Je 15 '54

"Hundreds of travel books have been written since the war, but 'Aboard and Abroad' is one of the very best that I have read. There's an understandable reason for this. The author, Harvey S. Olson, is a professional traveler. Travel to Europe is his business, and that is the subject of his book. He is a literate writer, and his language is simple, direct, and understandable." Frank Cipriani

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 1 '53 400w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p32 My 9 '54 40w

O'MEARA, WALTER. Spanish bride. 370p $3.95 Putnam

54-11402

Historical novel about a beautiful Spanish actress from Avila in Castile. Leaving her successful theatrical life in Madrid, in the early 1700's, she came to the Kingdom of New Mexico to become the mistress of the Governor. Her experiences in America make the main part of the novel.

Booklist 51:152 D 1 '54

"A vanished period is brought to vivid life in this novel. The sights and sounds and smells, the motley populace of the Spanish capital; the harsh New Mexican country, both savage and beautiful; the long, hard journey into the mysterious north—these backgrounds are created with effective detail and strong feeling." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 O 31 '54 220w

"Good tale-spinning combined with a vigorous picture of Spanish America in the throes of a final struggle to keep a foothold in the Southwest. Anyone who likes recreation of a colorful, dramatic period of our own history will enjoy it."

+ Kirkus 22:595 S 21 '54 210w

"From the opening pages to the historical postlude indicating the probable fate of Josefina, everything in 'The Spanish Bride' is workmanlike and explicit. All the historical facts-of-the-matter calculated to titillate reader interest are presented in richly emotional and sensual context. The Spanish idiom and ways of thought are skillfully suggested, and with a disarming casualness Mr. O'Meara incorporates the culture of Colonial Spain of the early eighteenth century into his story. Food, manners, customs—all the moral, religious, social textures of the times—are indicated in a tale whose pattern remains, nevertheless, that of the historical novel of romance." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 31 '54 500w

"Here is hot-blooded history made both real and dramatic in its frame of romance. The picture of a civilization that flourished before Plymouth Rock is sharply defined—and green-eyed Josefina is a heroine hard to forget." Lewis Nordyke

+ N Y Times p35 O 31 '54 320w

New Yorker 30:219 N 13 '54 130w

"Both excellent fiction and an excellent historical novel." Lon Tinkle

+ Sat R 37:30 D 4 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 180w

O'MORAN, MABEL, pseud. See Moran, M.

O'NEAL, COTHURN. Dark lady. 313p $3.50 Crown

54-11171

The novel is based on the Shakespearian sonnets and Venus and Adonis, and it is the author's assumption that they and the plays were written by a woman. The "dark lady" is Rosaline, illegitimate daughter of the Earl of Oxford. First as a supposed boy actor, and later known to Shakespeare and Burbage as the author, Rosaline does the writing and Shakespeare signs his name to the plays, in order to protect Rosaline.

"O'Neal is careful to explain that his book is a novel, and that he is not advancing the claim of a new candidate for Shakespeare's laurels; but, in all fairness to him, his fantasy of Rosaline de Bere is no more preposterous than the theories of the Baconians or Oxfordians. As a novel, however, 'The Dark Lady' has little to recommend it. The characters are largely borrowed from second rate historical novels, and their speech is Hollywood." Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 3 '54 370w

"Perhaps no proof positive, but the case is presented with imagination, and vitality, and care, and it's a literary speculation well worth the gamble."

+ Kirkus 22:411 J1 1 '54 220w

"This will change no theories of Shakespearian authorship. It will however entertain, delight and keenly interest novel readers whose Elizabethan experience is confined to school and college... Highly recommended to Shakespeare, theatre and even more particularly to general circulation collections regardless of size." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:2338 D 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by Esther Dunn

N Y Times p36 N 21 '54 340w

Time 64:106 S 27 '54 100w

O'NEILL, JEAN. Cotton top [il. by the author]. [38p] $2.50 Lothrop

53-6729

Picture story book about a little tow-headed girl living on Possum Trot mountain. Cotton Top thought she had everything in the world she wanted until her little city cousin arrived with city clothes and a china doll. The story tells what happened then. For ages 5 to 9.

"It's a most appealing little tale with a repetitive folktale quality and charming illustrations." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 F 28 '54 160w

"A folktale kind of story with refreshing originality in text and pictures. Little girls will love it." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:30 F '54 100w

Kirkus 21:759 D 1 '53 50w

"An appealing and convincing story, good for reading aloud. . . Recommended for all libraries." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 79:70 Ja 1 '54 90w

Wis Lib Bul 50:182 J1 '54

ONIS, MRS HARRIET DE, ed. Spanish stories and tales. 270p $3.95 Knopf

Short stories—Collections 53-9479

Twenty-three fictional pieces translated from the Spanish. They were written in the Old World and the New, and cover in time a period from the thirteenth century to the present. Contains a historical introduction and paragraphs about each of the entries.

Booklist 50:341 My 1 '54

"Good, and all have been well translated. Market for students."

+ Kirkus 22:208 Mr 15 '54 160w

"The twenty-three stories have been chosen and translated with perception; the anthology will be of value to all literary collections." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:771 Ap 15 '54 90w

"With verbal accuracy and sometimes inspiration, Harriet de Onís has edited and in part translated a collection of Spanish stories. Those which best preserve the grace of the original are the selections from Valle Inclán, Pío Baroja and the Colombian writer Hernando Téllez. Miguel de Unamuno's story, weak in Spanish, is less obvious and diffuse in English. The Latin-American authors are all interesting, although we miss such names as Arévalo Martínez in Guatemala and Mariano Latorre in Chile." Ramon Sender

+ — N Y Times p29 Ap 25 '54 400w

Reviewed by T. G. Bergin

Sat ■ 37:14 J1 10 '54 600w

OPPENHEIMER, J. ROBERT. Science and the common understanding. 120p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

504 Science

54-8650

"The layman used to be told that only a trained scientist could understand recent developments in physics. . . . In the present six lectures (originally delivered for the B. B. C.) Mr. Oppenheimer undertakes two things: (1) To summarize in general terms the new discoveries and (2) to point out not only what they imply concerning the future of science but also how they affect our whole conception of the relation between what we can learn and that ultimate reality with which perhaps not even science makes any full contact." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:446 J1 15 '54

"One cannot imagine an American network broadcasting the six Reith Lectures by J. Robert Oppenheimer which the B.B.C. presented last fall. But we can now read them under the title 'Science and the Common Understanding.' To do so is to enjoy a rare, exciting, and memorable experience." T. L. Rettger + Chem & Eng N 32:3206 Ag 9 '54 1100w

Reviewed by R. C. Cowen

Christian Science Monitor p9 S 2 '54 450w

Kirkus 22:323 My 15 '54 200w

"Whatever the merits of this philosophy, it is valuable to have a new authoritative statement of it here, for there are few sources available for it. Besides, Dr Oppenheimer's grand sentences, his striking adjectives and penetrating aphorisms will make his lectures enjoyable even to sceptical readers." Michael Polanyi

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 12 '54 390w

"Let it be confessed at the outset that some of the lectures are not easy on the average human understanding. . . . On the other hand, they are well worth following. Even if the reader fails to grasp much of the technical detail and the scientific reasoning involved . . . he is given an understanding of the principle of complementarity, which Dr. Oppenheimer makes the keystone of his further treatment." Julian Huxley

+ New Repub 132:18 J1 19 '54 3050w

Reviewed by H. C. Longuet-Higgins

New Statesman & Nation 48:444 O 9 '54 1000w

"His discourses are beautifully clear, and if they must be read with close attention that is not because they involve mathematical or other technicalities with which the layman is not familiar. It is simply because the implications of atomic physics are revolutionary in a way that disturbs our habitual assumptions and modes of thinking." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 20 '54 1150w

"In November and December, 1953, Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer broadcast six radio lectures in England on the evolution of atomic physics and the philosophical implications of that evolution. The lectures are assembled in this small volume in permanent form, a richly deserved tribute to their quality." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p12 Je 20 '54 650w

"A profound piece of work, difficult to follow in some places, overcharged with rhetoric in others, yet always thought-provoking and often inspiring."

+ New Yorker 30:63 J1 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 1 '54 1300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p676 O 22 '54 1050w

ORCHARD, NORRIS ELY. Study successfully; 18 keys to better work; il. by Barbara Bridgman. (Whittlesey house publication) 80p $1.50 McGraw

371.3 Study

53-10629

Advice addressed to the student who, for one reason or another, wants to do good work in his study hours. Contents: The purpose of this book; Your point of view; Where do I get the time? Study conditions and equipment; Your lessons for tomorrow; The taking of notes; The library; Examinations; Studying on your own; A closing word.

Booklist 50:187 Ja 1 '54

"This excellent little how-to-do-it volume by the head of the English department, the Loomis School, might well be useful in the hands of every high-school boy and girl. It is written directly to the student, and covers an amazing amount of ground concisely and effectively."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 8 '54 160w

Kirkus 21:492 Ag 1 '53 60w

"Practical, condensed, simple, yet very pertinent. . . . Highly recommended for all school libraries." R. C. Buell

+ Library J 78:2230 D 15 '53 80w

ORGANIC analysis [1953] editorial board: John Mitchell, and others. (V 1) 473p 68il $8.50 Interscience

543.8 Chemistry, Analytic. Chemistry, Organic (53-7163)

"The first volume published of a new series addressed to graduate chemists. For the first few volumes at least it will present monographic papers on methods of analysis for functional groups in organic compounds. In the volume at hand, each of the chapters is an independent monograph based on the author's own experience and on the literature. In each a variety of methods is described and, in most cases, procedures are described in detail, with a wealth of related data presented in tables. Bibliographies—which in some instances run to several hundred references—are included for each monograph." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 38:83 N '53

"Each chapter is by a recognized authority, who presents a thorough, critical, and concise treatment of the methods applicable to determinations of each functional group. Usually the methods are not included in university courses. They are required, however, for research and analysis and have become indispensable to the current growth of industrial organic chemistry. The series has made an excellent beginning."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:123 Mr '54 210w

ORIGO, IRIS (CUTTING) marchesa. Leopardi; a study in solitude [new ed rev & enl] 305p il $4.50 British bk. centre

B or 92 Leopardi, Giacomo, conte

[A54-1858]

"The short and unhappy life of Giacomo Leopardi, one of Italy's greatest poets, is known to English readers mainly through this biography which was first published in 1935 [Book Review Digest 1935]. The present edition has been thoroughly revised and much information has been incorporated; it is virtually a new work. Leopardi (1798-1837) suffered from physical deformity and various chronic ailments throughout his life and his poems are deeply pessimistic. In his foreword to the first edition, reprinted here, George Santayana states that 'The misfortunes of Leopardi were doubtless fortunate for his genius.'" (Library J) Index.

"Highly recommended for college and larger public collections." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:1308 J1 '54 130w

"Marchesa Origo has enriched her admirable study of the great Italian lyrical poet and polymath, originally published eighteen years ago, with the fruit of further personal researches and also with the results of a good deal of recent Italian writing." Cecil Sprigge

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 27 '53 700w

"The seemingly flat life acquires relief through the patient accumulation of significant detail and a sure touch in presenting it. Even those whom Leopardi's philosophy exasperates should find considerable interest in the skilful reconstruction of the Italian scene of the time."

Geoffrey Brereton
+ New Statesman & Nation 46:530 O 31
'53 750w

Poetry 85:56 O '54 70w

"Since the first edition of this book was published in 1935, much new material has come to light, including three more volumes of Leopardi's correspondence, several valuable studies and two critical editions of the poet's work. Of all this wealth of material the Marchesa Origo has made skilful use. . . Sympathetic and discerning, devoted to her subject yet recognising his considerable faults of character, expert at sifting evidence and settling old controversies, she is the ideal biographer. Her interpretation of the strange friendship between the poet and the erratic, faithful-untodeath Ranieri and of the relations of the two with Aspasia is both judicious and lively, but, here as elsewhere, in interpreting the man she is careful not to lose sight of the poet." For-

scarina Alexander

+ Spec p644 N 27 '53 650w

Time 64:78 Ag 2 '54 1200w

"It is altogether an admirable biography which will appeal even to those who have no knowledge of the poet's work; and to devout Leopardians it gives the great pleasure of revealing a devotion which they could not possibly surpass."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p630 O 2 '53
1150w

ORME, ALEXANDRA. Paris original. 340p
$3.50 Houghton

54-7088

"Escaping from Communist Poland, Kristina found it hard sledding to earn a living in Paris as a receptionist in a famous 'grande maison de couture.' It was a hectic, exhausting business, presided over by a martinet of a woman. Life took on new meaning when Kristina met an old flame from Warsaw. But complications ensued when her husband whom she had not seen for ten years turned up on a Communist mission." Library J

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 11 '54
450w

"The writing is difficult, awkward, oblique, but there is a holding quality that carries the reader through the areas of arrested motion." Kirkus 22:292 My 1 '54 180w

"Inconsequential yet entertaining novel, meant for the woman with time for light reading. Recommended for rental collections." H. R. Forbes

Library J 79:1310 Jl '54 90w

"Based upon the author's own inside knowledge of the dressmaking business in Paris as she learned it in 1948 and upon her own inside knowledge of what it means to lose your heritage and be tossed into a coldly alien world, 'Paris Original' might well have proved a moving tale. The fact that it is not can hardly be laid to Alexandra Orme's imperfect English, since in her previous books she managed to convey her spirit with acuity. Perhaps, quite simply, she cannot translate into the language of fiction the intrinsically factual quality of her mind." Virgilia Peterson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Jl 25 '54
550w

"An honest and entertaining story in which the many threads of Kristina's life draw a little too smoothly into place, 'Paris Original' cannot fail to enlarge the author's reputation as a popular novelist." Frances Keene

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 11 '54 550w

"Except for a few scenes like the dressmaking opening, which is realistic and well reported, this is a disillusioned view of Paris, of love, and of Kristina's life, even though we do finally get a happy ending. It is a disappointment, coming as it does from the author of 'Comes the Comrade.'" R. C. Benét

— + Sat R 37:12 Jl 24 '54 370w

"Catty, intimate, high-pitched and highly perfumed, Paris Original is a woman's happy hunting ground, but no man's land." Time 64:98 Jl 12 '54 280w

ORMONDE, CZENZI. Solomon and the queen of Sheba. 412p $3.95 Farrar, Straus

Solomon, king of Israel—Fiction 54-7306

An expansion of the Biblical story which tells why the Queen of Sheba came to Solomon and why she returned to her own country.

Booklist 51:110 N 1 '54

"From the First Book of Kings comes this biblically styled but humanly interpreted story of a great king and a pagan girl queen. . . . A modern view that misses none of the color of the past."

Kirkus 22:593 S 1 '54 210w

"As a novel it suffers from the weight of too much philosophy, but it is rich in sociological fact and will be enjoyed by readers of Biblical fiction." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 79:1589 S 15 '54 90w

O'ROURKE, FRANK (FRANK O'MALLEY, pseud). High dive. 205p $2.75 Random house

54-5385

Detective story.

Kirkus 21:772 D 1 '53 90w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 28
'54 120w

"A meticulous exercise in the imitation of the imitators of Hemingway. The loose and implausible plot deals with an insurance detective. . . . Several overneat subplots combine to illustrate generalizations on the Meaning of Life." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p20 F 21 '54 40w

"Straight tough prose and lack of illusions give a rich surface effect to a story actually somewhat lacking in plot complications. B minus." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 14
'54 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 20w

ORTEGA Y GASSET, JOSE. Velazquez. See Velazquez, D. R. de S. y

OSBORN, DAVID G. Geographical features of the automation of industry. 106p 11 maps pa $3; to subs $2 Univ. of Chicago, Dept. of geography, Rosenwald Hall 24, Chicago 37

658.2 Control equipment. Industry 53-4280

"Automation is essentially the substitution of manufactured instruments for people 'as a source of decisions required for guiding machines.' In this volume Dr. Osborn examines the effects of automation in a number of establishments upon their requirements for production workers and space per unit of product. He then speculates on the changes reduced requirements would have upon the location of industry both within metropolitan areas and throughout the nation." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography.

"The subject and future of automation are exciting, and the case studies are well presented. It is probably too early to base forecasts of the effect of automation on data of the few existing installations. Projections into the future without better data call for a more penetrating study of the nature of the revolutionary potentialities of automation systems than Dr. Osborn has presented." R. N. Grosse

+ Ann Am Acad 291:174 Ja '54 450w

Library J 79:907 My 15 '54 30w

Management R 42:691 N '53 100w

OSBORN, FAIRFIELD. Limits of the earth.
238p $3.50 Little
301.32 Food supply. Population 53-7324
For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"To point up his position in 'The Great Debate,' the author reviews in broad terms the resources (and dominantly, the food) situation in Great Britain and Europe, Australia, Canada, and Argentina, the United States, Africa, South Africa, the Amazon, beyond Europe and East of Suez. He paints the picture colorfully, dramatically, and with an inescapable drive to his final conclusion that we can now see 'the limits of the earth.' One misses, however, on so broad a canvas the exact, quantitative data, upon which the ultimate decisions as to solution of the population problem must rest." Abel Wolman

+ — Am J Pub Health 44:396 Mr '54 330w
"It is a sombre book but not an unrealistic one." J. O.

Canadian Forum 33:259 F '54 170w

Christian Century 71:48 Ja 13 '54 380w

Foreign Affairs 32:507 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 178:134 F 13 '54 210w

Reviewed by N. W. Pirie

New Statesman & Nation 47:736 Je 5 '54 750w

"The situation is serious and if the book arouses thoughtful interest in the problem it will serve a useful purpose."

Times [London] Lit Sup p251 Ap 16 '54 700w

U ■ Quarterly Bk R 10:109 Mr '54 280w

OSBORNE, HAROLD. Bolivia: a land divided.
144p maps $2.50 Royal inst. of int. affairs

984 Bolivia

A54-8959

"This is the first general survey of modern Bolivia to be published in England. It is one of a series of studies of the Latin American republics which are designed to give a concise but comprehensive picture of the political, social and economic conditions in those countries for the benefit of the non-specialist reader and student." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"The volume on Bolivia is written out of wide contacts and unusual insight into the nature of the country, its people, and its problems. It is one of the best books on Bolivia available in English." Frank Tannenbaum

+ Ann Am Acad 296:217 N '54 470w

Booklist 50:397 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by R. J. Alexander

Canadian Forum 34:188 N '54 210w

Foreign Affairs 32:684 Jl '54 10w

OSGOOD, ROBERT ENDICOTT. Ideals and self-interest in America's foreign relations; the great transformation of the twentieth century [prepared under the auspices of the Center for the study of American foreign policy at the University of Chicago]. 491p $6.50 Univ. of Chicago press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—History—Philosophy 53-10532

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This well-written and provocative book is the most careful analysis of American diplomatic history from this particular point of view. Its influence is likely to be great for it provides a logical exposition of ideals and self-interest that is well attuned to a period when neither traditional isolationism nor Wilsonian idealism fit the facts of international relations." P. A. Varg

+ Am Hist R 59:402 Ja '54 550w

"Whether one subscribes fully to the author's premises and conclusions or not, the views which he has set down on the respective roles of ideals and of national self-interest, and their interconnection, merit reflective thought by all concerned with the security and well-being of the nation." N. J. Padelford

+ Am Pol Sci R 48:544 Je '54 900w

"Mr. Osgood has made an earnest and laborious effort to come to grips with the realities behind American foreign policy in the twentieth century. . . Mr. Osgood's handling of documents is exemplary both in accuracy and in skillful weaving into his narrative. He has assimilated an enormous body of facts and ideas with uncommon success. Though there is little which is new, there are several fresh estimates of men. In particular his treatment of Wilson is refreshing and satisfying. It is pleasant to see that tragic figure once more in something like a clear perspective." S. G. Brown

+ Ethics 64:132 Ja '54 650w

Foreign Affairs 32:509 Ap '54 50w

"If Mr. Osgood had observed his own caveat that American self-interest and idealism are interrelated (pp. 16-17), his study might have approached definitiveness. As it is, this book probably represents the farthest reach of the political scientist fearful of professing the use of art in historical analysis, zealous to present his work as exact science, but using history primarily to validate categories intended to deprecate idealism and glorify power." Basil Rauch

+ Pol Sci Q 69:453 S '54 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p102 F 12 '54 270w

"This volume will undoubtedly meet criticism from three sources: the diplomatic historian will wince at some of the generalizations; the student of contemporary affairs will question the need for so much historical narrative; and the critical reader will wish Dr. Osgood had moved farther from the prose and approach of a doctoral thesis. Yet more of such blending of the historical and analytical approaches is needed, and the reader will do well to be sympathetic toward the author's effort to make sense out of the contradictions of America's recent past."

U S Quarterly Bk R 9:456 D '53 420w

OSGOOD, WILLIAM R., ed. Residual stresses in metals and metal construction; prepared for the Ship structure committee under the direction of the Committee on residual stresses, National academy of sciences, National research council. 363p il $10 Reinhold

623.81 Ships, Iron and steel. Welding. Strains and stresses 54-7345

"The failure of several welded ships on the ways or while at sea during World War II focused the attention of metallurgists and engineers on residual stresses in metals and structures. This authoritative book is one of the results. The 22 papers were contributed by eminent American and British specialists. Embodied in them are descriptions of numerous case histories of structural failure due to residual stresses, the results of numerous investigations of such failures and the best opinion available to date on the causes of such stresses and how to avoid or minimize them. The papers are all written on a high technical level and are accompanied by literature references." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

Chem & Eng N 32:2639 Je 28 '54 20w

Eng N 153:315 O 7 '54 180w

"An important though highly technical work." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:2459 D 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:61 Jl '54

OSTLERE, GORDON (RICHARD GORDON, pseud). Doctor at sea. 191p $3 Harcourt

54-5249

The narrator, an English doctor running away from matrimony, describes his first experience as a ship's doctor. The voyage around the South Atlantic lasts three months, and gives the "doc" a chance to become acquainted with the ways of the sea, and the oddities of ship's captains, as well as some of His Majesty's sailors.

Booklist 50:241 F 15 '54

"It is an amusing book, in fact there are some really hilarious bits in it, but there is little nonsense and nothing that is artificial."

Richard Philbrick
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 14 '54
150w

Kirkus 21:755 N 15 '53 200w

"Sheer delight. . . Highly recommended."
Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:206 F 1 '54 100w

"That the doctor is an excellent writer, is unquestionable. After last year's delightful account of medical school he has now turned up with another, and equally funny." Joanna Spencer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 14 '54
480w

"The plot is set by the sextant and the stars. Things happen in low-keyed action, yet the reader receives a good intake of capsuled, palatable information on the men who go to sea. . . The only parts that sound like fiction are those where the doctor keeps running away from predatory females—a most unseamanlike attitude." Herbert Mitgang

+ N Y Times p21 Ja 24 '54 200w

Reviewed by G. P. Griggs
Spec p647 My 15 '53 650w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck
Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54
160w

Wis Lib Bul 50:73 Mr '54

OSTROW, ALBERT A. How to enjoy yourself! 259p $2.95 Dutton

790 Conduct of life. Recreation 54-5054

"Emphasizing the therapeutic value of play, defined as 'something you don't have to do, 'a joyful release' and method of relaxation, Ostrow's plea throughout is for moderation, his aim self-sufficiency. He suggests hundreds of ways of enjoyment, by simple pastimes, hobbies such as painting and photography, travel, fishing, hunting, nature study, family fun, home entertaining, etc." Library J

Booklist 50:315 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:183 My '54 20w

Kirkus 22:95 F 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 79:548 Mr 15 '54 140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:130, My '54

OSTROW, ALBERT A. Planning your home for play; drawings by Anthony Lombardo. 132p $3.50 Tupper

747 Recreation rooms. House decoration 54-6406

Contents: Why plan; How to enjoy your backyard; Fun downstairs; Room for play and relaxation; Space many people waste; Equipped for fun. Index.

Booklist 50:375 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by W. C. Harvey
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '54 190w

Kirkus 22:254 Ap 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown
Library J 79:1227 Je 15 '54 60w

O'SULLIVAN, JAMES BRENDAN. Don't hang me too high. 222p $2.75 Mill

Detective story. 54-10206

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 10 '54
30w

"Battered."
— Kirkus 22:460 Jl 15 '54 60w

"Routine." James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 10 '54
70w

"Wholly unreal and imitative, and detected with startling incompetence." Anthony Boucher
— N Y Times p43 O 10 '54 20w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p28 O 24 '54
60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:43 O 30 '54 20w

OTTAWAY, ANDREW KENNETH COSWAY. Education and society; with an introd. by W. O. Lester Smith. (International library of sociology and social reconstruction) 182p $4 Grove

370.15 Educational sociology. Education—Great Britain [53-4270]

"An introduction to the sociology of education" (Subtitle) from the English point of view. The author is lecturer in education at the University of Leeds. Bibliography. Index.

"Students of comparative education should find this book valuable. Educators who are not familiar with the literature in educational sociology will find the text informative and the annotated bibliography covering the leading references in the field since John Dewey's first publications helpful." C. E. Hawley

+ Ann Am Acad 293:190 My '54 400w

"Sane, sensible and scholarly." John Garrett
+ New Statesman & Nation 47:74 Ja 16 '54 180w

"Mr. Ottaway knows precisely what he means by the sociology of education: he defines it as 'a study of the relations between education and society,' and says that 'it is concerned with educational aims, methods, institutions, administration, and curricula in relation to the economic, political, religious, social, cultural forces of society in which they function.' It is important to remember while reading the book that it is no more than an introduction, and that it is the first of its kind to be published in England. Otherwise, it is difficult to resist the feeling that too often Mr. Ottaway labours the obvious and invests with an undeserved halo the platitude and the truism."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p591 S 18 '53
750w

OTTO, MRS MARGARET (GLOVER). Pumpkin, Ginger, and Spice; il. by Barbara Cooney. 116p $2 Holt

Dogs—Legends and stories 54-5741

Three dachshund puppies named Pumpkin, Ginger, and Spice belonged to Miss Marvelous who ran the village bake shop. The story of their adventures makes this book for ages five to eight.

Booklist 50:346 My 1 '54

"Beginning readers are sure to find these three entertaining, easy to read stories pretty marvelous." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 2 '54
150w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13 '54
90w

"Shenanigans with a touch of make-believe; not the author's best works, but definitely homey."

Kirkus 22:1 Ja 1 '54 80w

"Recommended for libraries, requiring additional easy-reading material." Grace Shakin
+ Library J 79:460 My 1 '54 60w

"Both author and artist know the special charm of young dachshunds, and the result, though not outstanding, will be appealing to dog lovers." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 9 '54
140w

"Mrs. Otto's touches of whimsy and hominess and Barbara Cooney's delightful black-and white drawings give this tale more than ordinary appeal." Rose Friedman
+ N Y Times p16 Je 20 '54 150w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 16 '54
30w

OTTO, M. G.—Continued

"Barbara Cooney's wonderfully humorous illustrations for this easy-to-read story of real animals and people will add to the younger child's enjoyment of it." Augusta Baker
+ Sat R 37:30 J1 24 '54 40w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54
30w

OTTO, WALTER FRIEDRICH. Homeric gods; the spiritual significance of Greek religion; tr. by Moses Hadas. 310p il $5 Pantheon bks.
292 Greece—Religion. Mythology, Greek. Civilization, Greek 54-7070

"Here the Greek gods are considered as representing an authentic religion, a religion which embodies features of the natural life and the wonder and beauty of the world that are absent from other beliefs. Both the spiritual significance and basic concepts of this religion are analyzed and the religious meaning of the chief gods discussed." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 J1 4 '54
50w

"Walter F. Otto's 'The Homeric Gods' is a book which should be read not only by those interested in Greek mythology, but by those interested in the Greek mind. The original is in German, but the translation is admirable. Through the translator's subtle skill and beauty of style it has become an English book. No one who is acquainted with Moses Hadas' translation will be surprised, but to me this is his most notable achievement." Edith Hamilton
+ Sat R 37:13 Ag 7 '54 700w

"'The Homeric Gods' is a long-needed work that aptly clarifies misconceptions and illusions surrounding Greek religious thought. Complete with seven excellent illustrations and indicative of meticulous research and documentation, it heralds a new approach to Greek religion." G. A. Panichas
+ Springf'd Republican p12D J1 18 '54
300w

OTWAY, HOWARD. The evangelist. 307p $3.50
Harper

54-8980

Character study of a woman evangelist, Sister Edith Flemming. From small beginnings Sister Edith made her way to a million dollar house of God in Chicago. It took the first man she really loved to prick the bubble of her self-importance.

"Otway writes well, although his narrative at times escapes him."

+ — Kirkus 22:501 Ag 1 '54 190w

"Excellent first novel recommended for small libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 79:1826 O 1 '54 90w

"In telling his story Mr. Otway manages to make Sister Edith absorbing in a florid way, but I suspect that is largely because she seems so closely patterned after a notorious real-life sister of not so long ago. . . Mr. Otway has tried hard to ridicule the follies of easy salvation, the pomposities of religious art, the hollowness of female evangelists and the depths of human credulity. But satire delivered with a sledge hammer begins by being just noisy and ends by numbing." Alden Whitman

+ N Y Times p36 O 10 '54 350w

"This repellent but undeniably vivid history is diminished in power by its digressions into the lives of people who, though more reasonable than she is, seem much more shadowy, and by its ending, which is so much of an anticlimax that it reads as though Mr. Otway had just grown weary of his redoubtable heroine and wanted to have done with her at all costs."

New Yorker 30:182 O 9 '54 70w

"Howard Otway brings a good deal of narrative talent to 'The Evangelist.' Its limitations are that it has no distinguishing depth of character study and deals with such familiar materials and gambits that readers are apt to have a kind of 'this is where we came in' feeling, even when Mr. Otway is performing competently as a craftsman. He sets it in no clear time frame, which seems to emphasize, rather than avoid, a dated quality about the story."

Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 37:17 S 16 '54 250w

OURSLETER, FULTON. Lights along the shore. (Hanover House bk) 348p $2.95 Garden City bks.

818 Conduct of life 54-9848

A posthumous collection of human interest stories which were published in magazines and given as lectures, but which have never appeared in book form before.

"This book is a wonderful treasure house. When you open its covers you find a sparkling assortment of human interest stories, inspiring incidents, reflections upon life, and other items from that spiritual pharmacopeia that has the power to improve the sense of the zest and wonder of life. These stories and personality sketches come from the pen of a great journalist and a fine author who lived heartily on many a human interest front. We are grateful to Mrs. Oursler for saving these by publication after the author's death." Clarence Seiden-spinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 21 '54
230w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p30 N 28 '54
130w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:23 D 4 '54 40w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 28 '54 400w

OURSLETER, WILLIAM CHARLES. N.Y., N.Y.; drawings by Georg T. Hartmann. 372p $3.75 Coward-McCann

54-6535

"All walks of life are represented in 'N.Y., N.Y.' They include, for example, Tom King, the honest but harried news reporter; John Glendenning, the magazine publisher, and his opera-singer wife; Gladys, a girl of free will and good heart; Elaine, a mixed-up artist type; Maud Hays, a big, complaisant publicity woman; a sensitive artistic-type boy named Mike Kelly, who is wrongfully accused of murdering his brother; Rosa Russolini, the Italian girl he finally marries; Mr. and Mrs. Caldings of Park Avenue (corporation lawyer and art photographer) and offspring; Valerie Healey, the ambitious little Irish dancer; a rabbi, a priest, some cops, a couple of big financiers, and so on. Everybody acts and reacts, one upon the other, until everything comes out even." N Y Times

"'N.Y., N.Y.' is an admirable story with lusty talk, rich characterizations, and proving that the son of the late Fulton Oursler has inherited his father's warm insight." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 27 '54
200w

"Pretty much like the cat that ate the rat that ate the cheese, this makes the rounds of rich and poor neighborhoods, eavesdrops here and there to no particular purpose."

+ Kirkus 22:248 Ap 1 '54 110w

"As remarkable as the authenticity of detail is the novel's unselfconscious tone of brotherly loving-kindness, without religiosity or moralizing. It is too sweeping, too much a documentary to have the impact of art, but the author's attitude towards our 'good-and-evil' life invites the despairing to look at it all once more." M. L. Barrett

+ Library J 79:1402 Ag '54 210w

"It is only after one has finished the book, which at times seems rambling and disconnected, that its pattern comes into full focus. This is New York, east side and west side, uptown and downtown; these are its people and this is how they live." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 20 '54
650w

"Its symbolism, couched in small sections vaguely reminiscent of John Dos Passos' camera-eye and other techniques, is easily grasped; the writing is sternly pedestrian. There is no reason on earth why it shouldn't make a hot Hollywood property, done in semi-documentary style, on the pattern of 'Grand Hotel.'" Gilbert Millstein

N Y Times p10 J1 4 '54 400w

"All in all it's ingenious manipulation by a resourceful puppeteer." James Kelly
+ Sat R 37:37 Je 26 '54 250w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 8 '54
50w

OUTLER, ALBERT C. Psychotherapy and the Christian message. 286p $3.50 Harper

253.5 Psychotherapy. Psychology, Pastoral 53-10975

"This little book is an essay in clarification. The problem with which it is concerned is how to relate psychotherapy and Christianity in valid synthesis and productive alliance. Since my own seminary days I have been interested in psychotherapy as an important resource for pastoral work. I wrote my B.D. thesis on this topic and got my first clinical training twenty years ago, when it was something of a pioneering venture. In the two decades since, my observations and experiences in counseling, both as pastor and teacher, have greatly strengthened my confidence in the practical usefulness of psychotherapy for the work of the Christian minister, teacher and counselor." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 50:391 Je 15 '54

"This is the most searching comparison of the Christian approach to man and that of contemporary psychotherapy which has yet appeared. It is the kind of book one would expect from a man who is among the ablest of the younger Christian thinkers in America today. With real knowledge of both Christianity and psychotherapy, it tackles constructively one of the liveliest, most fascinating and most important ideological issues of our time." Huston Smith

+ Christian Century 71:270 Mr 3 '54 1150w

"His theological acumen, knowledge, and good sense are very considerable; there are many more needed books in his system; so that one hopes some critical comment on this book will spur, not deter, further contributions. . . The author's summaries of the thought of some psychotherapeutic workers is good, especially in relation to Sullivan, Fromm, and Horney. . . The philosophical dimensions of Outler's position are not, properly enough in a book of this kind, wholly clear." Seward Hiltner
+ J Religion 34:211 J1 '54 3250w

"On those occasions when theologians and psychoanalysts have endeavored to reach common ground in their understanding of the nature of man, considerable controversy has been in evidence. Dr. Outler's book has the merit of clarifying a number of issues involved. As a result of its influence, controversy should certainly be more polite and the areas of co-operative labor made wider."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:202 Je '54 180w

OVERHOLSER, WAYNE D. Tough hand. 192p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-7267

Western story.

Kirkus 21:772 D 1 '53 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 2' '54 30w

"Overholser has written some good books but 'Tough Hand' falls short of his usual mark." Hoffman Birney

N Y Times p33 Ap 11 '54 40w

"A hard-hitting novel of range-grabbing and of the smoldering feuds of the big cattle owners." S. M. Agnew

Sat R 37:15 Mr 27 '54 60w

Springf'd Republican p10C Mr 7 '54
70w

OVERSTREET, HARRY ALLEN, and WILKINSON, BONARO (MRS HARRY ALLEN OVERSTREET). Mind alive. 333p $3.75 Norton

137 Personality. Psychology, Applied

54-7249

"Dr. Harry Overstreet and Bonaro Overstreet have both concerned themselves with the problems of personality. Both have written on the subject. . . Now the two collaborate in a new book in which they explain to the lay reader the differences between a sound personality which enables the individual to function well in life (which is to say, enjoy living) and the emotionally unhealthy personality that holds the individual back from a full and happy life. Their book is one in which many readers can find much to help them." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

Booklist 50:213; 215 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:130 Mr '54 20w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 14 '54
300w

"Not only at the personal level but at the social one, their book contains plenty of wisdom, attractively presented, both for those who feel they need psychological guidance and for those (if any such exist) who don't." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 130:22 Mr 15 '54 390w

"Incisive thinking, felicitous phrasing and apt illustration mark this work." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 14 '54
370w

"A book stronger in its parts than in its sum. The authors offer some practical wisdom about human behavior, but it is more as insights scattered through the text, for the reader to glean, than as a strong, clear thesis. It is hard to pause at the end of any chapter and summarize. The premises, as in so many popular psychology books, tend to remain generalizations about generalizations, often specific in illustration and anecdote but vague in pattern. . . The strongest body of material within 'The Mind Alive' is in the several chapters devoted to communism and conspiracy. Here, on the present problems of public morale and liberty, some fine and valuable things are said." Edmund Fuller

N Y Times p10 F 14 '54 320w

"The book is packed with common sense, which, of course, is the most uncommon kind of sense there is." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 12 '54
550w

"Once again, the Overstreets have prepared for us an encouraging and optimistic look at ourselves at a time when things are such that we often can't bear to look at ourselves. As we shout at each other, they tell us, quietly and convincingly, that we must get on speaking terms. Even more important, they not only tell us what we must do but they show us how. And they show us with a modesty and a conviction that make us want to try." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R 37:15 Mr 6 '54 800w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 550w

OVINGTON, RAY. Spinning in America. 205p il $5 Stackpole co.

799.1 Fishing—North America 54-8684

"Ovington, a pioneer in technique spinning, brings this form of fly fishing up to date. Casting, effective lures, balanced tackle and most effective methods as applied to both fresh and salt water game fish. Illustrated." Library J

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:1319 J1 '54 20w

"With a spinning rod, a spinning reel, and Spinning in America, any fisherman, no matter how green, should be able to return home with fish for the pan and, occasionally, a trophy for his den." Stanleigh Arnold

OVINGTON, RAY—Continued

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 24 '54 180w

OWEN, FRANK. Eddie Chapman story. See Chapman, E. A.

OWENS, WILLIAM A. Walking on borrowed land. 304p $3.50 Bobbs

54-9491

"This novel concerns Mose Ingram, a plantation-born Negro educated as a teacher, who took a position as Principal in a Negro school in Columbus, Oklahoma. The town was Jim Crow, but, seeing the possibility of a better life there nevertheless Mose brought his family to Oklahoma and began a successful life-work, becoming in time a leader in his community trusted by both white and Negro, and a pillar of the church (Methodist)." Library J

Booklist 51:63 O 1 '54

Reviewed by Roi Ottley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 3 '54 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

"Well done, with an understanding of both Negro and white problems, of the need for belonging, and of the possibilities for the Negro to succeed in a white world without being a 'handkerchief-head.' Recommended for all general collections." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:1512 S 1 '54 150w

"A sensitive novel which sees hope as well as despair in the American Negro's struggle against bigotry." Stanley Cooperman

+ Nation 179:218 S 11 '54 90w

"A novel of solid distinction. . . At times the mechanics of the plot seem a little too apparent. . . At times the author seems not wholly to have resolved his own point of view, with the result that several characters, among them the gifted Cenoria Davis and John Carson's son, remain vague and unsubstantial figures. These matters, however, weigh lightly in the balance. 'Walking on Borrowed Land' is a fine novel, warm and human and honest, discerning and hopeful." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 12 '54 900w

"This is a gripping novel of conflict between the white and Negro races. In some cases the white writer who tries this topic falls over backward to be condescending to the minority. William A. Owens, a native Texan who teaches writing at Columbia University, does not make this mistake. Through sharp characterization and the art of first-class story-telling, he brings out with great force, the strength, the weakness and, to a degree, the ignorance of both races." Lewis Nardye

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 29 '54 430w

"We are indebted to Mr. Owens for a novel whose fidelity to social realism goes beyond the mere enumeration of stains on a crumpled bed-sheet or the anatomization of a lynch victim." Jerome Stone

+ Sat R 37:29 S 25 '54 330w

OXNAM, GARFIELD BROMLEY, bp. I protest. 186p $2.50 Harper

351.74 U.S. Congress. House of representatives. Committee on un-American activities. Civil rights

54-6899

"It is difficult to summarize the book: it is itself a summary of the lengthy record of the hearings before the House Un-American Activities Committee which the Bishop had requested. The immediate purpose of his request was to clear his own name against the false allegations appearing in the Committee files and released by the Committee under its letterhead. But he had a larger purpose: to help bring about much needed changes in the procedures of the Committee and of its opposite number in the Senate." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) No index.

"In I Protest, the Bishop presents an absorbing, informative, and compact summary of his encounter; gives further evidence of his own integrity; and shows the shameful incompetence of the Velde Committee. Verbatim extracts from the hearing, interspersed with interesting commentaries, comprise the major part of the book." R. L. Roy

+ Ann Am Acad 296:194 N '54 550w

Booklist 50:372 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 9 '54 210w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey

+ Christian Century 71:671 Je 2 '54 550w

Reviewed by Donovan Richardson

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 17 '54 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 My '54

"Throughout this heated document the Bishop repeatedly makes clear how effectively the Protestant churches are battling communism. A book that should attract wide attention."

+ Kirkus 22:189 Mr 15 '54 210w

"It cannot be read without a renewed sense of shock and dismay that the level of public life in the United States has permitted these vicious practices of the Un-American Committee with so little protest. The title of the book gives emphasis to this. The bishop not merely explains, as for most of the time he was compelled to do at the hearing—and as he was frequently prevented from doing when it was apparent that the explanation would be in his favor. He protests. And in his protest, the reader will find hope and promise, for it is still possible for Americans to return to their heritage of justice of which Bishop Oxnam is so effectual a champion and so enheartening an exemplar." A. P. Davies

+ New Repub 30:20 My 10 '54 800w

"At the least, this book is a conclusive answer to Congressman Jackson's accusation that its author was 'serving God on Sunday and the Communist front the balance of the week.' But it is more than that: it is a convincing reaffirmation of basic American principles, and it gives us a glimpse inside the mind and heart of one of the great Christian leaders of our generation." J. A. Pike

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 9 '54 450w

"Bishop Oxnam has performed a real service in giving us this record. It may well frighten us. For 'what can't happen here' is proved by this record already to have happened, in a measure." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ N Y Times p6 My 2 '54 800w

"The book's most important omission is the 'file' published by the Washington Post, together with the bishop's answers. Its most significant contribution is its revelation of the power of the truth in the hands of a man who has the courage to fight back against tyranny in any form. It is worth noting that the House Committee has not sought a return engagement with Bishop Oxnam, although this book would seem to demand that it do so." H. E. Fey

Sat R 37:43 S 11 '54 1150w

Reviewed by H. L. Dante

Social Educ 18:287 O '54 80w

Wis Lib Bul 50:128 My '54

OXFORD economic atlas of the world; prepared by the Economist intelligence unit and the Cartographic department of the Clarendon press. 113, 152p maps $4.80 Oxford

911.3 Geography, Commercial—Maps

Map54-952

"A reference volume containing a series of commodity maps that show patterns of production in the major areas of the world, and an index arranged by countries, giving statistics that show the relative significance of various commodities in the economy of the country. Also included are an introductory section of maps indicating physical factors that influence distribution of commodities, and a concluding section showing the distribution of population and communications. This is the first volume of a new series, to be followed by regional atlases which will deal with each major region in much greater detail." Booklist

Booklist 51:38 S 15 '54

"Some statistics are as late as 1952. A genuine contribution to business reference resources. Highly recommended." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:2334 D 1 '54 210w

"A quite admirable economic atlas of the world. Clear and well-arranged maps give a world pattern of the production of and trade in, every important commodity, ranging from abaca to zinc."

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:192 Ag 14 '54 120w

"The volume will be immensely useful, but it must be said that as an atlas this volume, at least, of the series is not as good as it could be. The difficulties of representing the sources of world production on maps roughly $9\frac{1}{4}$ ins. by $6\frac{1}{2}$ ins. are lessened, but not overcome, by the 'Oxford' Projection, which 'cuts' much of the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans. Inevitably in a number of maps there is overcrowding and loss of clarity. . . This difficulty is endemic in any world atlas, but surely double-page maps would have gone a long way towards making it less obvious. Further volumes in the series will benefit through not having this special difficulty to cope with." C. A. S.

+ — Spec p43 J1 2 '54 280w

"The work is one of much value, and presents a great mass of information in a modest space. . . More thought could profitably have been devoted to the choice of values for dots and circles, especially where production is highly localized. In some of the introductory maps the register of the same colour shows wide variation, and the maps themselves are lacking in finish. . . Much of the text that accompanies each map represents material which, though useful, is either common knowledge or is readily available elsewhere. . . In its conception, and to a large extent in its execution, the atlas has much to recommend it."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p585 S 17 '54 600w

P

PACE, MRS MILDRED (MASTIN). Home is where the heart is. (Whittlesey house publication) 191p $2.50 McGraw

53-12880

A novel of life in Kentucky for teen age girls. After her mother's death, thirteen-year-old Brady Allen was "given away" to the Marston family. In the great old house sheltering four generations of Marstons the girl who had always lived in one-room cabins, learned at last what it meant to be loved and wanted.

Booklist 50:303 Ap 1 '54

"Here is a story full of excitement and suspense, set against the homely, everyday life of lovable people, whose picturesque speech, so well rendered by the author, gives the book added charm." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 25 '54 130w

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 100w

"A fresh story of Kentucky mountain life, with a well-handled plot and theme." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:102 Ap '54 150w

Kirkus 22:5 Ja 1 '54 120w

"Characters and plot are well defined, and this warm and memorable pioneer story will delight girls of 12-16." M. L. Turk

+ Library J 79:790 Ap 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 25 '54 150w

"It was a patriarchal life in the old tradition, busy, close-knit and abundant, and Miss Pace does full credit to it, with an affectionate eye for its details. The exact period is never specified, but apparently not even a T-Model Ford had yet penetrated that mountain fastness. . . A well-written story, with enough romance to satisfy young girls and a rich flavor of the region." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 21 '54 220w

Wis Lib Bul 50:144 My '54

PACKE, MICHAEL ST JOHN. Life of John Stuart Mill; with a pref. by F. A. Hayek. 567p il $6.50 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Mill, John Stuart 54-4589

Biography of John Stuart Mill, nineteenth century philosopher and economist, author of Utilitarianism, On Liberty, and other works on political economy, and of the famous Autobiography. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:130 N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:560 Ag 15 '54 210w

"Recommended for all libraries." B. B. Libaire

+ Library J 79:1823 O 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 179:495 D 4 '54 90w

"The only weakness of this admirable book is that it does not sufficiently relate Mill to the early and mid-Victorian background. Also it would probably have been better to omit the rather hasty comments on Mill's thought. But the book as a whole is of absorbing interest and of great value. It is very well produced, indexed and illustrated, and has five hundred pages of text. This may even justify its price." Stuart Hampshire

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:505 Ap 17 '54 1050w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 N 7 '54 60w

"At last, eighty years after the death of John Stuart Mill, we have a definitive and delightful biography that could scarcely be improved. The book, dealing with the personal as well as intellectual history of one of the most remarkable men of the nineteenth century and based on much new material, is in fact an intellectual history of that century." S. E. Harris

+ N Y Times p28 O 31 '54 1100w

"A full-dress biography, and altogether a superior piece of work."

+ New Yorker 30:136 O 30 '54 160w

"Though this work will always remain one of the great Victorian classics, Mr. Packe shows that it gives not only an incomplete but also in some respects a misleading account of its author's character and career. By distilling all available printed and manuscript sources, Mr. Packe has been enabled to present Mill's history with remarkable comprehensiveness and lucidity; and in the process he has written an absorbing book." G. N. Ray

+ Sat R 37:16 D 25 '54 750w

"This, to use the ugly but inevitable word, is the definitive biography of John Stuart Mill, a book of the utmost interest and importance. Long (rather longer, I think, than it need have been) but vigorous, rich in detail and documentation, and uncommonly well written, it tells for the first time in the eighty-one years that Mill has been dead the true story of his life." Maurice Cranston

+ Spec p523 Ap 30 '54 950w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 10 '54 70w

"The definitive biography of John Stuart Mill which has been awaited for so long has almost all the qualities that such a book ought to have. It is exhaustive, for Mr. Packe has made full use of the resources of correspondence much of which only recently became available, and has supplemented them with a prodigious search into Victorian periodical literature."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p291 My 7 '54 1200w

PADGETT, LEWIS, pseud. See Kuttner, H.

PAGET, VIOLET (VERNON LEE, pseud.). Snake lady, and other stories; ed. and with an introd. by Horace Gregory. 288p $3.50 Grove

Eight short stories with psychological and supernatural backgrounds, selected and introduced by Horace Gregory, from the works of an English woman, long resident in Italy.

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 60:297 Je 25 '54 2700w

"Recommended for larger fiction collections."

Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:205 F 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 14 '54 140w

"All of [these stories] are good, palpably good, better than Poe." Donald Barr

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 21 '54 500w

"There is a peculiar and haunting attraction about the stories in this volume. Their supernatural aspects, though handled with great restraint and taste—sometimes with irony—contribute the least to their quality. . . . Vernon Lee perceived with a sensibility that has been compared to Virginia Woolf's. She gave out her perceptions in prose which any stylist of any era might envy. This volume of chosen stories is a worthy revival." L. G. O.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 9 '54 400w

"There can be no question that her love for Italy's olive and lemon groves, and for its Renaissance wickedness, permeates her descriptions and furnishes the point of departure for her creative imagination in nearly all of the tales here included. But it is unfortunate that her preoccupation with evil should be as repetitious as Poe's, and that her love-tragedies . . . should have about them the same musty air of melodrama as Browning's Italian imbroglions have inherited." Nicolas Monjo

+ — Sat R 37:35 Jl 10 '54 260w

PAHK, INDUK. See Pak, I.

PAK, IN-DOK. September Monkey. 283p $3 Harper

B or 92

54-8981

"Personal narrative of a Korean woman. . . . The author was born of an illiterate Buddhist mother and a scholarly Confucian father. Coming under Christian influence, she was educated in mission schools, became involved in anti-Japanese agitation and was imprisoned. Later she became a leader in missionary and social welfare work in Korea and a much sought-after speaker in church gatherings in America. She has been active and effective in mobilizing American help for Korea in the recent years of conflict with its accompanying devastation and suffering." Kirkus

Booklist 51:130 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:32 N '54 20w

"A simple story, simply told. But it is refreshing to find Korea presented in concrete terms of the individual rather than as a complicated international problem." Takashi Oka

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 28 '54 450w

"Well told. It holds the reader's interest from first to last and throws interesting side lights on life in Korea, especially during the period of the Japanese occupation of that country."

+ Kirkus 22:721 O 15 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 21 80w

"The whole tone of the work is, of course, deeply religious, but this is far more than a missionary tract or a bit of devotional reading. It is an intense human document, deeply emotional and profoundly moving. Only a callous reader could get through it with dry eyes." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p34 N 7 '54 450w

PAKINGTON, HUMPHREY. Willoughby Carter. 272p $3.50 Norton

54-6717

A story of an English doctor from birth to marriage and the beginning of his medical career. In a prefatory note the author explains: "Early in 1952, and shortly before he died, my friend and neighbour, George Percival Mills asked me to read a novel—largely autobiographical—which he had written. I subsequently obtained permission from his widow to write his story myself. The substance of this book therefore is almost wholly his; the presentation mine."

Booklist 50:204 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:73 Ap '54 200w

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 10 '54 340w

"A subdued novel, written with grace—but it just isn't Pakington." E. E. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:146 Ja 15 '54 80w

"The strength of this novel lies in its convincing professional background, clear of the theatricality that so often mars books about the medical world." Norman Shrapnel

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 16 '54 50w

"A charming, simple story." Giles Romilly

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:295 Mr 6 '54 240w

"There is no solid background to this lightweight, romantic story, and one feels that Mr. Pakington is not comfortable in it. Some of the charm and all of the good humor of his previous books are here, but one feels that he is dealing with an alien field." Anne Brooks

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ja 17 '54 450w

"In this quiet, deftly turned tale of a doctor's dilemmas Mr. Pakington has been faithful both to a friendship and to his craft." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 24 '54 420w

"The book is a pale piece of work, making as little impression as though it were written in white ink on white paper."

— New Yorker 29:97 Ja 16 '54 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 11 '54 200w

"The period is from the 1880's to 1910, and the novel might have been written in that orderly and even time. It makes few demands on a reader and offers the small rewards of a sincere and well-mannered narrative about some uncomplicated people." Walter Havighurst

Sat R 37:42 F 13 '54 230w

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Mr 5 '54 200w

PALESCANDOLO, FRANK (FRANK PALEY, pseud.). Rumble on the docks. 367p $3.75 Crown

53-9970

"A social worker by training, Frank Paley, here turns to the novel to illuminate the murky recesses of the Brooklyn waterfront and the dark hours of a teen-ager becoming a criminal." N Y Times

Booklist 50:222 F 1 '54

Reviewed by W. M. Kunstler

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 D 27 '53 240w

Kirkus 21:680 O 1 '53 190w

"Told in terms of the individuals who live in that area, rather than in terms of the shipping companies or the shadowy 'big-shot' racketeers who run the grafts, Mr. Paley's story has succeeded in being something a little more moving than an ordinary documentary." Edgar Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ja 31 '54 650w

"It is an unlovely picture, and the author spares few details in painting it. Mr. Paley's narrative powers are not quite up to his descriptive ones. Jimmy's story ought to have impact. Instead, it is loose and sprawling and sufficiently unrealistic in spots to throw the somewhat maudlin finale completely out of kilter." Alden Whitman

N Y Times p24 Ja 1 '54 270w

PALEY, FRANK, pseud. See Palescandolo, F.

PALMER, JOSEPH HILL. This was racing; ed. by Red Smith; profusely ill. by Willard Mullin. 270p $3.75 Barnes, A.S.

798.4 Horse racing 53-10703

Selections from the author's contributions on the subject of racing, which appeared in the New York Herald Tribune from 1946 to 1952. No index.

Booklist 50:294 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 7 '54 120w

"An interesting record of racing and its sidelights by one of the best of sporting writers." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:69 Ja 1 '54 30w

"This Was Racing", thanks be to God, is like having Joe Palmer right there with you, which is a happy, happy thing. He wrote so nice and easy, with information, anecdote and laughter blended in the most companionable way. . . What he is writing may be basically informative, but always there is fortunately lurking, only a sentence or two away, a bit of drollery to rowel the story gayly along." John McNulty

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 13 '53 700w

"In his first contribution to The Herald Tribune, Palmer said he would try 'to bring you some of the color and interest and personality of racing' and he lived up to this aim up to his death on Oct. 31, 1952. His standards were high as a writer, and he maintained them unflinchingly. Thanks to his civilized and witty point of view, he wore his learning—and he had a lot of it—lightly. He helped to prove that newspaper writing could be as good as good writing anywhere." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 3 '54 600w

PALMER, RALPH SIMON, Mammal guide; mammals of North America north of Mexico; color illustrations, maps, and drawings by the author. 384p $4.95 Doubleday

599 Mammals 53-8002

"The State Zoologist, New York State Museum and State Science Service, has prepared this handbook for the layman, containing complete information on the mammals of North America north of Mexico. Copiously illustrated with maps, photographs in color and drawings by the author. Full index." Bookmark

Booklist 51:57 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:6 O '54 30w

"This should be an excellent reference and library item."

+ Kirkus 22:263 Ap 1 '54 120w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 S 26 '54 40w

PALMER, STUART. Cold poison. 221p $2.75 Mill

Detective story. 54-6453

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 My 1 '54 110w

Kirkus 22:85 F 1 '54 60w

"Mr. Palmer has rarely been more genial in manner, more amusingly allusive, and rarely has he plotted a book with more absolute ineptitude. His murderer is all too plain for all that his confession at last is rather convenient than credible. The ordinary rules of fair play (between an author and his reader) are in abeyance and the book is saved only by the incidental flourishes." James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 18 '54 140w

"The plot is well-constructed and ingeniously (if not quite fairly) clued; it's grand to welcome Hildy back among fiction's sleuths, and please, Palmer—no more long waits between novels." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p25 My 16 '54 130w

New Yorker 30:136 My 22 '54 100w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 9 '54 60w

"Plus mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:40 My 22 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 8 '54 70w

PANGBORN, EDGAR. Mirror for observers. 222p $2.95 Doubleday

54-5352

Science fiction.

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54

Kirkus 21:750 N 15 '53 80w

"Mr. Pangborn, always an able and often an interesting writer, has now abruptly placed himself, with one giant stride, in the top rank of science fiction novelists; and this column's often-repeated plea for a moratorium on the there-are-agents-among-us theme is rescinded so long as the theme can evoke such warmly vital treatments as this." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 31 '54 230w

"A pretty wonderful book." J. F. McComas

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 7 '54 200w

"Despite its preoccupation with ethics, the story does not lack excitement, and the whole is animated by a style of writing and a maturity of outlook almost as rare in the whole field of contemporary literature as in the tiny world of science fiction." Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 11 '54 350w

PANIKKAR, KAVALAM MADHAVA (KE-RALA PUTRA, pseud). Asia and western dominance; a survey of the Vasco da Gama epoch of Asian history, 1498-1945. (Asia bk) 530p ill maps $7.50 Day

950 Asia—History 54-5879

"An overview of the influence of European imperialism on the whole of Asia, from the arrival of Vasco da Gama in Calicut in 1498 to the withdrawal of European navies from China in 1949. The author, an Indian scholar and diplomat, brings an Asiatic viewpoint to bear on the age of maritime mercantilism which began as a crusade against the Moslems, flared into conquest, and hardened into empire. He devotes much of his attention to the history of missions during this period of revolutionary change. Larger public libraries and college and university libraries will find this study a useful key to the understanding of Asian nationalism." (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by Woodbridge Bingham

Ann Am Acad 296:219 N '54 380w

Booklist 50:257 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by Kenneth Colegrove

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 29 '54 350w

Current Hist 27:324 N '54 170w

Foreign Affairs 32:518 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by Edgar Snow

Nation 61:386 O 30 '54 1350w

"The first fact that strikes even the casual student is the constant misspelling of proper names and the puerile illustrations, the next the paucity and secondary nature of the references, one, 'The Memoirs of Li Hung Chang' by Mannix, being a notorious forgery, a literary hoax. This is the more surprising when we recall that the author is a former Indian Ambassador to China and at present Ambassador to Egypt. . . Although 'Asia and Western Dominance' purports to be an attempt to restore

PANIKKAR, K. M.—Continued

'a correct perspective,' it is largely a denigration of Western (including American) ideals, ideas and acts, and is cleverly (but not too cleverly) concealed vilification of the West (especially England) in its relations with Asia."

H. H. Hart

— N Y Times p7 Mr 7 '54 900w

"Although we are all still far too close to that extraordinary epoch of history to be able to view it from distant summits of dispassionate objectivity, there is every reason to welcome the appearance of so broad-based an essay in historical interpretation, particularly since it gives an Asian version of the nature and effects of Western imperialism. . . Few readers will not find themselves frequently tempted to disagree vigorously with some of the judgments which Mr. Panikkar expresses and some of the interpretations which he places on events, but such disagreements should not be allowed to obscure the real contributions which the book makes." Rupert Emerson

+ — Pacific Affairs 27:171 Je '54 1000w

"Bad history or not, the inclination of many Asians to think the best of Russian relations with Asia, past and present, and to suspect the United States as the heir to European imperialism is one of the important facts of life of our international relations. Ambassador Panikkar, with skill and persuasiveness, shows why they feel this way. That is important for us to know." H. H. Fisher

Sat R 37:14 Jl 24 '54 1050w

"Sardar Panikkar has written a clear and full historical account. . . Readers will value this important book most of all for the refreshing, stimulating and confident view which it gives of the Asian outlook both upon past history and upon the future. They will not always agree with the author's judgment."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p815 D 18 '53 950w

PANOFSKY, ERWIN. Early Netherlandish painting: its origins and character. 2v $35
Harvard univ. press

759.9492 Painting, Dutch. Paintings, Dutch
52-5402

A history of the development of painting in the Netherlands from the pre-Van Eyck painters to the beginning of the sixteenth century. Volume one contains the text; volume two contains most of the plates. Dr. Panofsky is professor of the history of art in the Institute for advanced study at Princeton. Index.

"This is a stupendous work of scholarship which can be consulted for a great variety of questions related to Flemish art, and art in general, of the late Middle Ages and the early renaissance. It is not easy reading, but a concentrated effort is richly rewarded."

Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 24 '54 400w

"Remembering how soon the author's 'Dürer' proved unobtainable this reviewer urges prompt acquisition of the present work if the budget permits." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:1060 Je 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by S. L. Faison

Nation 179:54 Jl 17 '54 1000w

"Mr. Panofsky's two handsome volumes do far more than fill a need. Together with the articles that their author has published over the past twenty years, they inaugurate a new era in the understanding and enjoyment of early Netherlandish painting. . . Even after brief acquaintance with this rich and zestful text, the reviewer feels certain that it will take its place as one of the major works in the history of art." Millard Meiss

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 7 '54 750w

"Easily the most brilliant among living historians of art, Erwin Panofsky has yet another distinction, of greatest rarity among scholars—he writes beautifully. 'Early Netherlandish Painting,' his finest work in some forty years of extraordinary production, must be reckoned a masterpiece." Harry Bober

+ Sat R 37:38 My 8 '54 700w

"Impressive and immensely learned book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p156 Mr 7 '54 1950w

"The style of the book, precise and lucid throughout, is capable of conveying sharp and logical deductions as well as penetrating esthetic insights."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:183 Je '54 240w

PAPASHVILY, GEORGE, and PAPASHVILY, HELEN (WAITE). Dogs and people; il. by Marguerite Kirmse. 283p $3.95 Lippincott

636.7 Dogs

53-8937

An informal book on dog lore. Partial contents: The dog inside the skin; In man's image; The dog begins; The dog in folklore; Dog's worst enemy; The dog in our world today; A puppy in the house; Health; You can teach a new dog old tricks; Breeding; In and out of the show ring; All the good dogs. Bibliography.

Booklist 51:1; 100 S 1 '54; N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:59 D '54 20w

"Combining fine writing, humor, warm appreciation of the dog's contribution to civilization and modern man's happiness, with facts about canine history that read much like fiction, this volume should be considered a must in the library of every dog owner." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 N 21 '54 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

"The combination of useful and general information, along with Marguerite Kirmse's illustrations, should make this the perfect book for every dog to give to his human friends."

+ Kirkus 22:617 S 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by G. P. Slocum

Library J 79:2259 N 15 '54 80w

"Some of the best dog stories that lard the pages of the book go back into days that are past but a modern one deserves attention. When John Garfield was offered a role in the movies where he had to mistreat a dog, he turned it down. . . Marguerite Kirmse's illustrations are, as always, a delight to the eye."

Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 19 '54 320w

"There are one or two errors of fact with regard to dog shows in the volume. The Westminster Kennel Club Show in New York, while indeed one of the oldest and most important, is not, as it is called, the largest in the world. Nor is the final placing of best dog in show made there by three judges. This accolade has been handed out by a single judge for a matter of twenty years. These are minor discrepancies, however, in a book which has very definite value from an educational point of view and at the same time has much charm."

R. M. Cleveland

+ — N Y Times p39 N 21 '54 650w

"A first-rate book about dogs, especially in their relation to humans." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C N 14 '54 180w

PAPE, RICHARD. Boldness be my friend; foreword by Lord Tedder; introd. by Sir Archibald McIndoe. 309p il $3.50 Houghton

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English
54-5254

"In an amazing record of courage and endurance, an RAF navigator, shot down over Germany in 1941, tells of incredible hardships in prison camps, three unsuccessful attempts to escape and final repatriation in 1944. Maps on endpapers, photographs." Bookmark

Booklist 50:220 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:106 F '54 30w

"The greatness of the human spirit burns in this book. It was worth writing; it is eminently worth reading." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 21 '54 300w

Kirkus 21:809 D 15 '53 180w

"Brash, and frequently exciting, this is neither different enough nor important enough to warrant purchase by most libraries unless the demand for escape stories has not already been sated." W. K. Harrison
Library J 79:203 F 1 '54 120w

"One of the most remarkable escape-books of the Second World War." Terence Prittie
+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 29 '53 270w

"It is callously written to shock, and it does shock. So does the detailed description of battering an innocent Hungarian to death. There comes a moment for reticence even in the story of a struggle for survival. Mr. Pape does not recognise it." Nigel Nicolson
— New Statesman & Nation 46:538 O 31 '53 140w

"Plenty of hair-raising episodes, and soundly written." Marcus Duffield
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 28 '54 420w

"The story reads like an Errol Flynn scenario minus clinches, plus authenticity. It is not necessary to look at the pictorial appendix (quite fascinating in itself, by the way) or to peruse Air Marshal Tedder's foreword to believe this book. The very absence of literary varnish lets shine through its tough-grained honesty. The book would not have been half so effective if the author also had not been so impartial about himself." Frederic Morton
+ N Y Times p27 Mr 14 '54 600w

New Yorker 30:133 Mr 13 '54 160w

"This, of course, is not nice reading. Richard Pape's story reveals all the bestiality, sadism and general hell of Gestapo cruelty, softening nothing." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 5 '54 500w

"Boldness Be My Friend is one of the best war-stories, yet not one of the best war-books. It has neither the quality of writing nor the humane sense of larger issues that made, for instance, Odd Nansen's Day after Day so desperately moving even when action was suspended. But as a blunt record of one York-shireman's fight against odds, at whatever cost, it will justly reach an immense audience." Peter Vansittart
+ Spec p544 N 13 '53 650w

"His story is damning evidence of the brutality of which the Germans were sometimes guilty. It is throughout a remarkable testament of endeavour and endurance, into which he infuses a robust sense of humor."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p650 O 9 '53 370w

PAPINI, GIOVANNI. The Devil; tr. from the Italian by Adrienne Foulke. 246p $3.75 Dutton
235.4 Devil 54-9304

"The Prince of Darkness is here very kindly and tolerantly treated by Signor Papini, author of a famous Life of Christ. It would be an insipid sort of world without him, the Signor implies. He also quotes Scripture—including the final verse of the Lord's Prayer—for his purposes, proving that Lucifer is not permanently out of favor at the celestial court. One chapter deals with the Devil in literature, art, and music (Tartini, Paganini). For the public, university, and theological libraries." Library J

"The truth about 'The Devil' is that it is boring and, except for readers who are really curious about his research into the demonic influence, past and present, it has little allure except for an occasional thesis." Fanny Butcher
— Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 S 26 '54 450w

"Scarcely a book to attract non-Catholic leaders, it is also likely to be disapproved by the hierarchy, despite its piety and its spottily brilliant writing."
Kirkus 22:576 Ag 15 '54 260w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 79:1500 S 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by R. M. Brown
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 21 '54 800w

"While one may admire the author's audacity, he can but bemoan the result. There is, it must be admitted, something about Satan that bewitches even the greatest writers—with varying results." John Chase

N Y Times p38 S 26 '54 550w

"After the publication of his 'Life of Christ' several decades ago, Papini enjoyed a brief vogue in this country. This book will do little to renew that vogue." J. V.

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 21 '54 150w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 240w

PARENTS' MAGAZINE. Family cookbook, by Blanche M. Stover. 376p il $3.95 McGraw

641.5 Cookery 53-9016

A cookbook planned for the mother of a family, this "is neither a basic cookbook nor a gourmet's delight but rather a practical guide to family meals." Includes over five hundred recipes, hints on planning meals and shopping, school lunch box suggestions, and a chapter addressed to the very young cook. Index.

Booklist 50:162 D 15 '53

"Here is a general cookbook planned for the woman with children who is confronted daily with the preparation of nourishing, appetizing meals. It is a practical cookbook for anyone who must manage on a budget. There are many good recipes for beverages, breads, vegetables, meats, desserts, confections, and popular meal-in-one casserole dishes." R. F.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 F 7 '54 70w

"Not a gourmet cookbook or even a basic overall cookbook. But a sound family slanted book, budget geared."

+ Kirkus 21:687 O 1 '53 180w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 78:2218 D 15 '53 30w

Reviewed by Lawton Mackall

Sat R 37:39 F 13 '54 10w

PARIS, LEONARD ALLEN. Men and melodies. 197p $2.75 Crowell

927.8 Musicians, American 54-9151

Sixteen brief biographical sketches of musical comedy composers and librettists in America. Includes Reginald De Koven; Victor Herbert; Harry B. Smith; George M. Cohan; Rudolf Friml; Otto Harbach; Sigmund Romberg; Jerome Kern; Irving Berlin; George Gershwin; Vincent Youmans; Cole Porter; Kurt Weill; Richard Rodgers; Lorenz Hart; Oscar Hammerstein II. Index.

Booklist 51:45 S 15 '54

"The author writes not as an authority, but as one who obviously loves his subject. His biographies are correct as far as they go, though they often could go a bit farther. His tendency is to 'hit the high spots' and occasionally to omit the listing of a work that could be included. These sketches will fill in the gaps for thousands of Americans who have whistled, hummed, or sung many a famous tune over the years without knowing a great deal about how these tunes came into being. Musicians, however, might wish a more thorough discussion of the music, of the changing styles, the trends, the influences." Harold Rogers

+ — Christian Science Monitor p7 S 16 '54 360w

Kirkus 22:342 Je 1 '54 90w

"Recommended for teen-age collections." C. A. Hulton

+ Library J 79:1673 S 15 '54 80w

PARKER, DOROTHY (ROTHSCHILD), and D'USSEAU, ARNAUD. Ladies of the corridor; a play [in 2 acts]. 120p $2.50 Viking 812 54-6125

Text of a play which opened in New York in October 1953. The subject is the futile lives of a group of middle-aged to elderly women living in a New York hotel.

Kirkus 21:805 D 15 '53 80w

PARKER, D. R.—Continued

"This is a far from perfect play but the authors have name appeal and so community theatres will want to produce it. It is a perfect vehicle for their season. Recommended to the libraries which service community play-houses." George Freedley

Library J 79:779 Ap 15 '54 30w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 4 '54 140w

Dramatic criticism by Henry Heuss

Sat ■ 36:32 N 7 '53 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:68 Mr '54

PARKER, MILTON ELLSWORTH, and others.

Elements of food engineering. 3v v2-3 360,241p il v2 $8.50; v3 $6.75 Reinhold

664 Food, Food industry and trade (52-11858)

"The first volume of this work was published in 1952 [Book Review Digest 1953]. The volumes in hand—which complete the set—are both devoted to the unit operations of commercial food processing, such as cleaning, separating, cutting, homogenizing, mixing, drying and packaging. These operations are described from the viewpoint of the food processing engineer. Illustrations of typical food machinery are included." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:2219 N 15 '54 70w

"Can be read by persons with a grasp of the technical terminology without the guidance of a college instructor, hence they will be useful to readers who are entering food processing from some other field of engineering as well as to the college students for whom they are primarily intended."

N Y New Tech Bks 39:55 J1 '54

PARKER, RICHARD. Gingerbread man. 254p $2.75 Scribner

54-8391

An English journalist runs afoul of a big shot in the black market racket and his wife and children become involved in the chase that follows.

Booklist 50:452 J1 15 '54

Bookmark 14:9 O '54

"Alert and amiable."

+ Kirkus 22:322 My 15 '54 50w

"The formula is hackneyed; but Mr. Parker writes well enough to work up a continuous feeling of excitement." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:47 Ja 9 '54 70w

"It's a fine job in every respect—off-trail, refreshing and exciting. And the excellent depiction of the barely tangential worlds of children and adults may well stay in your mind as long as 'High Wind in Jamaica.'" Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p20 J1 25 '54 190w

"Mr. Parker is a long way from being Mr. Hughes, and on the whole his tots lack the terrible charm of the master's."

New Yorker 30:87 Ag 21 '54 120w

"Different, and excellent fun. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 29 '54 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:37 Ag 21 '54 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p757 N 27 '53 60w

PARKINSON, CYRIL NORTHCOTE. War in the Eastern seas, 1793-1815. 478p il maps $8 Macmillan (N Y)

942.073 Great Britain—History, Naval [54-3308]

"Professor Parkinson here presents the first documented account of naval operations in an important, and too long neglected, theatre of war—the East Indies Station, stretching from the Cape of Good Hope to China. He uses the correspondence of successive Commanders-in-Chief of the station, and of other main participants, professional and privateer, of many countries, to describe personalities and plans, actions and results." Manchester Guardian

"The author avoids the straight narrative approach by analyzing the fundamental strategic objectives of both Britain and France and the tactical choices before each commander in every naval encounter. This approach enables the reader to avoid the feeling of the inevitability of events which is so often found in military and naval history. One defect which may prevent the volume from having a widespread appeal is the almost total absence of accounts of the wars in Europe and of internal developments in England and France. That Professor Parkinson has the ability to provide such accounts is shown by his superb three-page summary of the naval war in the Indian Ocean from 1794 to 1801 at the end of Part I of the narrative." D. G. Barnes

+ Am Hist R 60:190 O '54 500w

Manchester Guardian p4 F 16 '54 300w

"The period, as Professor Parkinson remarks, is particularly well documented, and the historian has not so much to seek for his authorities as to choose what is essential among the wealth of material. That task the author has performed with judgment and discrimination, and his volume is a useful addition to the naval history of the last ten years of the Napoleonic Wars."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p570 S 10 '54 600w

PARKS, JOSEPH HOWARD. General Edmund Kirby Smith, C.S.A. (Southern biography ser) 537p il maps $6 La. state univ. press

B or 92 Smith, Edmund Kirby 54-3764

"Kirby Smith was the last of the Confederate generals to surrender in the Civil War. He was born in St. Augustine, Fla., and appointed to West Point from that state. At the outbreak of the war, he was stationed in Texas as a colonel in the United States Army. But he resigned from this post and hurried to Confederate Headquarters in Montgomery, where President Jefferson Davis assigned him to Lynchburg, Va. From then on he fought for the Confederacy in Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky and farther west as commander of the Trans-Mississippi Department. He died in 1893 in Sewanee, Tenn., where he had been a professor at the University of the South."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 O 3 '54 90w

"Its style is clear and easy. It is especially valuable for the light which it throws on the Trans-Mississippi country, least known part of the Southern Confederacy." B. I. Wiley

+ N Y Times p5 D 26 '54 800w

"Dr. Parks does a competent job upholding the virtues and abilities of Kirby Smith although he dwells too much on the general's Civil War career and not enough on his post-war years. Students of Civil War personalities will find this work fills a gap, but Edmund Kirby Smith still has not received his due." A. N. C.

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 28 '54 200w

PARRISH, ANNE. And have not love. 305p $3.50 Harper

54-6023

Character study of Clara Le Strange, a beautiful but selfish woman, who was the absolute center of her own life from babyhood to old age. The time is from the middle of the last century to the First World war.

Booklist 50:230; 342 F 15 '54; My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:186 My '54 30w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 9 '54 360w

"This character, surely not an appealing one, is made subtly fascinating against a meticulously artful portrait of a period, from mid century on to World War II, a way of life and thought, a rural aristocracy that is no more."

Kirkus 22:134 F 15 '54 170w

"Recommended for public libraries." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 79:771 Ap 15 '54 100w

"Miss Parrish as heretofore deftly manages the years by shifts of fashion in song, dress, and custom and by an evocative apprehension of weathers and seasons. . . Its richer complexity than any of the previous novels is illustrated by depth and scale of several of its major characters but principally by Clara Moore. The book is her portrait and history."

W. T. Scott

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 My 2 '54 600w

"This is assured accomplishment, such writing as many readers may be ready to rank with Anne Parrish's best—even those whose memories go back three decades to 'The Perennial Bachelor.' But some, recalling her 'Poor Child,' a starkly simple story intensively mirrored in 12-year-old subjectivity, may find this brief, brilliantly executed overture almost heartless by comparison." Frances Gaither

+ — N Y Times p24 My 2 '54 650w

New Yorker 30:141 My 8 '54 60w

"Anne Parrish's wide and devoted following will welcome her Portrait of a Selfish Woman. It is an engrossing and occasionally hair-raising chronicle. While it does not attain, perhaps, the significance and major stature of some of Miss Parrish's earlier works, it bears witness to its author's great skill and charm as a novelist whose keenness of insight, whose wit and irony and sympathetic perception assure her a distinguished place among contemporary writers." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 37:14 My 8 '54 700w

Wis Lib Bul 50:137 My '54

PARRISH, MRS MARY FRANCES (KENNEDY) (M. F. K. FISHER, pseud). Art of eating [her collected gastronomical works; decorations by Leo Manso] with an introd. by Clifton Fadiman. 749p $6 World pub.

641.01 Gastronomy. Cookery 54-8172

An omnibus volume containing the author's five books on the culinary art: Serve it Forth; Consider the Oyster; How to Cook a Wolf; The Gastronomical Me; An Alphabet for Gourmets. Index.

Bookmark 14:31 N '54 10w

"This first collection of Miss Fisher's five fantasies on food will be a pleasure for those who like light gastronomical reading. . . Each of the five books is a pleasure itself, and the only complaint might be that the collection, like many, is a little heavy in the hand." C. P. S.

+ Commonweal 60:591 S 17 '54 180w

"A sampling here and there revives the delight of first reading."

+ Kirkus 22:467 Jl 15 '54 100w

"Not for the beginning cook but for one who loves the literature of the 'art of eating.'" K. T. Willis

Library J 79:2452 D 15 '54 70w

"For the benefit of the one person in a million who may never have heard of M. F. K. Fisher, let her here be identified as one of the haute cuisine gastronomes of our time, and perhaps the shrewdest and wittiest commentator of the refinements of subsistence since Brillat-Savarin laid down his quill and his larding-needle." J. T. Winterich

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 D 5 '54 260w

"Mrs. Fisher can certainly cook, but her book is wonderful because she too can write. . . Anyone who reads it will forever after be a better cook and a better host (or hostess)—and a more dangerous guest. There is your money's worth, but there is much more." Rex Stout

+ N Y Times p12 ■ 19 '54 500w

"In sum, a book like this depends upon the way it's done. In today's welter of cutie-pie cookery-chatter, the conversations of M. F. K. Fisher on the Art of Eating are like a refreshing breeze flowing from the twin sources of sense and sensibility. She writes, in short, as one intelligent adult to another—practically, often profoundly, and always beautifully. If eating means more to you than a steak drowned in bottled sauces, then she's what you've been looking for." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 S 24 '54 550w

PARSON, DONALD. Portraits of Keats. 189p il $10 World pub.

B or 92 Keats, John—Portraits 54-5337

"Portraits of the poet are not in short supply. The confusion arises from their wide divergence. A full selection of these portraits is here reproduced. The portraits are accompanied by a history of each portrait and of Keats' relations with the artist, when there were such relations." (Christian Science Monitor) Bibliography. No index.

"A quite admirable book." P. J. Henniker-Heaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22 '54 500w

Poetry 85:57 O '54 180w

Time 63:102 Mr 8 '54 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p468 Jl 23 '54 550w

PARSONS, ARTHUR HUDSON. Horn that stopped the band; pictures by Lynd Ward. [44p] $2.50 Watts, F.

54-5950

Story of a small boy named Terry who had an exciting time trying to find out what made his French horn go Phloo-Phloo-Phloof.

Booklist 51:180 D 15 '54

"Any child who would like to toot a horn—and who wouldn't?—will love the fun and suspense in story and humorous, lively pictures." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 15 '54 80w

"Mr. Parsons shows a kind of humor for which Lynd Ward's drawings are just right." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:429 D '54 80w

Kirkus 22:706 O 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Marian Herr

Library J 79:2497 D 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p4 N 14 '54 120w

PARSONS, TALCOTT, and others. Working papers in the theory of action. 269p pa $3.75 Free press

301 Sociology 53-9671

"In the hope of provoking discussion among sociologists, psychologists, philosophers, and psychiatrists interested in social theory, Professor Parsons and his colleagues have made available here a set of working papers which constitute an attempt to develop more intensively a systematic theory of action. The papers include discussions of the concept of the super-ego, the theory of symbolism, and the problem of equilibrium in small groups." U S Quarterly Bk R

"The communication between scholars working on the same problems in different universities is usually slow and fragmentary. In this book the authors and the Free Press give us an important experiment in improving the speed of communication." G. E. Swanson

+ Am Soc R 19:95 F '54 2250w

"The book will be almost incomprehensible to persons not familiar with the prior publications of Professor Parsons and his colleagues, but for specialists in the technical problems of social theory, the working papers trace an important development of the ideas, concepts,

PARSONS, TALCOTT—Continued
and theoretical schemes previously worked out by the authors in connection with the formulation of a sociological theory of action."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:466 D '53 240w

PASTENE, JEROME. Auto guide to Europe. 337p maps $4.50 McGraw

914 Europe—Description and travel. Automobile touring 53-5102

Information for those who plan to travel in Europe by car, whether they take their own car, buy one for delivery abroad, or hire one. Maps. Index.

Booklist 50:374 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:184 My '54 20w

Reviewed by Leon Harpole

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 27 '54 60w

Reviewed by Kathleen Cannell

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 16 '54 240w

Kirkus 22:143 F 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1597 S 15 '54 50w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p11 My 9 '54 70w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p32 My 9 '54 30w

"While he does give pertinent information on fuels, maps, garage costs and traffic conditions in general, more information about the vehicles themselves would seem in order in ■ guidebook of this kind." A. N. Chamberlain

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 17 '54 110w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 180w

PASTORE, ARTHUR, and PASTORE, EVELYN. Where to eat in Europe. 269p $3.50 Crowell

647.95 Restaurants, lunch rooms, etc.—Europe 54-6892

A guide to over one thousand selected restaurants in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, England, France, Holland, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Scotland, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Wales and Western Germany.

Booklist 50:394 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:217 Je '54 20w

Kirkus 22:256 Ap 1 '54 60w

"An authoritative but hardly all-inclusive guide." W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1597 S 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p32 My 9 '54 20w

PATAI, RAPHAEL. Israel between East and West; a study in human relations. 348p il $4.50 Jewish pub.

956.94 Minorities 53-1528

"What Professor Patai is attempting to analyze here is the cultural conflict within Israel between the Jews who came to that country with a Western cultural heritage and those who came from the Arab or other eastern lands and brought with them an 'Oriental' cultural heritage." U S Quarterly Bk R

"The present author, Raphael Patai, is the most qualified anthropologist to cover culture contact and acculturation in Israel. . . Israel between East and West represents a good functional approach to acculturation in general, and a base-line study for Israel in particular. It is hoped that further investigations in Israel will probe deeper in these areas, and will examine some of the hypotheses Patai has proposed." Morton Rubin

+ Am Anthropol 56:310 Ap '54 650w

"Methodologically, the book is a mixture. It strives to ascribe cultural depth to contemporary phenomena. It is based on a solid foundation of historical knowledge and on participant observation from 1933 to 1951. Statistical data, particularly on trends of immigration, vital statistics, occupational structure, intermarriage, juvenile delinquency, general criminology, school attendance, and housing conditions are employed, whenever available." W. J. Cahnman

+ Am J Soc 59:507 Mr '54 1200w

"American sociologists will find this an informative and challenging book (although they may not agree with all its value judgments) because it is our only fully documented report on Israel's population composition and its socio-cultural problems, because it contributes to the sparse literature attempting evaluation of the broad cultural tapestry of which America is a conspicuous part, and because it boldly seeks to enlarge the scope of social science by pointing alternative directions of social change in an area of great historical and contemporary interest." Leo Srole

+ Am Soc R 19:794 D '54 550w

"The author's long historical digressions are not always illuminating and are often superfluous. The book contains many statistical tables, quoted from reliable sources, but Professor Patai quite often applies the statistics of 1939-40 to the entirely different scene of the 1950's. . . However, the main shortcoming of the book is a more serious one. The author embarked on his study with the preconceived basic premise that the European-American born Jews in Israel and those who arrived from Asia and Africa represent the clash between Western and Eastern civilizations. . . Many of the facts cited by the author in proof of his theory are of a temporary and passing nature, some of them greatly changed even in the few months since the publication of the book." M. Avidor

— Ann Am Acad 292:218 Mr '54 550w

Booklist 50:10 S 1 '53

Foreign Affairs 32:517 Ap '54 10w

"The book unquestionably is the best and most competent analysis of the cultural situation in Israel that has appeared thus far. The author brings to his task a thorough firsthand knowledge of the country, in addition to a competence in the field of Middle Eastern cultures. His work is characterized by an admirable objectivity, incisiveness, and clarity, which make it an excellent guide, for the interested social scientist and intelligent layman alike, to the understanding of this unusual case of a nation-in-the-making." Samuel Koenig

+ Social Forces 32:389 My '54 410w

U S Quarterly Bk R 9:403 D '53 240w

PATCHETT, MRS MARY ELWYN. Ajax golden dog of the Australian bush; il. by Eric Tansley [Eng title: Ajax the warrior]. 172p $2 Bobbs

Dogs—Legends and stories 54-9495

A first-person account of a girl's growing up on an Australian cattle station. The heroic Ajax who saved her life on several occasions was half-dingo, half-kangaroo, and wholly loyal to his mistress.

Booklist 51:140 N 15 '54

"Fascinating and unusual true story." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 3 '54 110w

"Grownups will enjoy the book because the author writes well and, even without many descriptive passages, gives a real feeling of Australia and of childhood. Children will enjoy it because to them the main emphasis will seem to be on the action—the adventures of the happy little girl and her dogs. The pictures do not do justice to the stories." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:437 D '54 160w

"Recommended for its authentic background and its feeling for dogs and other animals." Gertrude Herman

+ Library J 79:2497 D 15 '54 50w

"Written in the first person, with an unpretentious realism, these vivid memories will entrance all members of the family, from ten up. Into each brief incident is packed such material as many a writer stretches into full-length stories." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p2
N 14 '54 500w

"Half-dingo, half-kangaroo dog, Ajax dominates the book by his loyalty, his valor and his extraordinary intelligence. Yet this is a good deal more than a true dog story. It is a precisely observed, deeply felt narrative of a good life in a fascinating country." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 S ■ '54 170w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinhead
New Yorker 30:211 N 27 '54 90w

PATERSON, JOHN. Book that is alive; studies in Old Testament life and thought as set forth by the Hebrew sages. 196p $3.50 Scribner

223 Bible. Old Testament—Poetical books
54-5921

"This book by the Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Exegesis at Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, New Jersey, seeks to 'take it [the Bible] down from the pinnacle and set it back into the common life from which it first sprang.' The book's aliveness is shown through a study of its language, its composition as a 'Divine Library' with an organic unity, its types of literature, its various concepts of life and thought, and its approach to the deeper problems of human life. The books of 'Job' and 'Ecclesiastes' are especially singled out and studied." Library J

"A scholarly, readable interpretation."
+ Bookmark 13:130 Mr '54 20w

"I have not seen a more successful effort to tell the inquirer what he really needs to know without confusing him with details that he could neither understand nor remember." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:852 Jl 14 '54 60w

"While based on sound scholarship, this is a book which can be safely placed in the hands of the average reader of the Bible, for it will help to make 'The Book' come alive."
+ Kirkus 22:194 Mr 15 '54 160w

"Recommended for the larger public libraries with readers interested in the subject, college and university libraries, and all theological school and religious libraries." E. H. Weeks
+ Library J 79:548 Mr 15 '54 170w

PATRICK, JOHN, originally JOHN PATRICK GOGGAN. Teahouse of the August Moon. 180p $3 Putnam

812 54-10486

Text of the play based on Vern Sneider's novel of the same name.

Booklist 51:9 ■ 1 '54

"Combines meaning with frivolity and charm."
+ Bookmark 13:236 Jl '54 20w

"This is a delightful adaptation of Vern Sneider's delightful novel. . . Will be in great demand." George Freedley
+ Library J 79:1596 ■ 15 '54 30w

"For a play that depends so much on visual elements, 'The Tea House of the August Moon' is surprisingly good reading. The satire on military occupation is pungent and the Okinawans are delightful people. . . There is no pidgin English in this comedy, and for that alone it deserves a prize."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p8 S 12 '54
90w

PATRICK, QUENTIN, pseud. See Webb, R. W., and Wheeler, H. C.

PATRICK, REMBERT WALLACE. Florida fiasco; rampant rebels on the Georgia-Florida border, 1810-1815. 359p $5 Univ. of Ga. press
975.9 Florida—History. U.S.—Foreign relations
53-13265

Deals with the efforts of the United States government and its citizens living on the Florida frontier to seize East and West Florida from Spain in the years 1810 to 1815. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is particularly good for its analysis of the reasoning of the 'patriots' who felt betrayed after having been given clandestine encouragement to invest their all, literally, in an effort to maneuver East Florida into the hands of the United States. . . The only flaw is the lack of a map in a work which depends heavily upon place names, routes of expeditions, and the relationships of various positions." P. C. Brooks
+ Am Hist R 60:216 O '54 400w

"Thorough and well-written volume. . . The author has used a great variety of sources, both published and in manuscript, and has told his story with evident zest." J. F. Rippey
+ Ann Am Acad 294:184 Jl '54 600w

"Mr. Patrick has written this complicated story with a scrupulous regard for fact, and a keen eye for humor and drama." H. M. H.
+ Sat R 37:44 My 1 '54 260w

PATTEE, FRED LEWIS. Penn State Yankee. 384p il $4.75 Pa. state college, State College, Pa.

B or 92 Teachers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 53-63206

The autobiography of a college professor who was a pioneer in the introduction of the study of American literature into our colleges.

Reviewed by Richard Eberhart
N Y Times p17 Jl 18 '54 450w

"Pattee's autobiography is deficient in organization and style, as compared with his best writing, and one realizes that he did not prepare it for publication. Yet it is likely that a good many readers will be glad that Professor William L. Werner, as literary executor, decided to publish it." Sculley Bradley
Sat R 37:22 F 20 '54 750w

"Pattee's autobiography, Penn State Yankee, does not reflight old literary battles, is in fact curiously lacking in literary recollections and ideas. What it does have is a homely, and finally moving, story of a typical New Hampshire farm boyhood, the kind of hard, grinding, yet character-shaping beginnings that nowadays seem as remote as the stories of Horatio Alger."

Time 63:67 Ja 4 '54 480w

PATTEE, RICHARD. Case of Cardinal Aloysius Stepinac. 499p $5.50 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Stepinac, Aloysius, cardinal 53-12090

"A defense of the Metropolitan of Croatia against the charges presented by the Yugoslav Government." Foreign Affairs

"This book is a major contribution toward clearing the controversy and establishing the truth." W. P. C.
+ Commonweal 58:593 ■ 18 '53 160w

Foreign Affairs 32:516 Ap '54 10w

"In what is otherwise a temperate analysis of the origins of the Serbo-Croatian civil war Mr. Pattee commits the error of attempting to blame the Chetniks for the outbreak of hostilities. In so doing he finds it necessary to cite some very dubious evidence indeed. Except for this one lapse, however, his book is remarkably free of the bias that so often impairs the value of a work of special pleading." Leigh White

+ Sat ■ 36:25 N 14 '53 650w

PATTERSON, GEORGE NEILSON. Journey with Loshay [Eng title: Tibetan journey]. 248p il $3.75 Norton

951.5 [915.15] Tibet—Description and travel.
Tibet—Social life and customs 54-11658

"The story of a medical missionary's perilous passage from Kham, Tibet to Upper Assam and Calcutta, India involves the thrills of danger and the treat of Tibetan ways and wiles. Hoping to make the essential journey to India for supplies during the negotiation period of the Chinese Communists with the Tibetans and before the monsoons struck, the venturesome author took a pioneer route that carried him across wavering suspension bridges, ice fields, and mountains. Armed with ulag offered by Dege Sey, accompanied by his servant Loshay who displayed the sense of humor, romance and face suitable to a Tibetan, escorted by two military men who beat the headmen of villages which were deficient in hospitality, Patterson made his way. The engaging commentaries on the Tibetan love patterns, descriptions of the villages and various types of houses, eulogy to the yak and oration on bridges combine with the actual happenings of the trip, with the author's pitting of wile against wile in a book genuine in sentiment and hardihood." Kirkus

Booklist 51:38 S 15 '54

Kirkus 22:418 J1 1 '54 220w

"Told with humor, gusto, and affection for the Tibetan peasant." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 79:1597 S 15 '54 120w

New Statesman & Nation 47:709 My 29 '54 300w

"This is one Tibetan book in which there is little about lamas, lamaism and lamaseries; and what there is is far from complimentary or even sympathetic. The author likes bandits, as one might expect, far better than monks." Rodney Gilbert

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 8 '54 650w

"The author is good at describing the pageantry of Tibet. Occasionally he will moralize, and once or twice, out of the immense loneliness of those empty spaces, he will take refuge in momentary arrogance, saying that he regards his adventure as his initial challenge to his generation. But the mood passes. Then once again he is describing the harsh uplands, the incredible beauty of those sunsets, the agonizing difficulties of getting out of a sleeping bag and the Rabelaisian humors of his companions. The Tibetans are wonderfully bawdy, and he cocks a clear eye on their promiscuity." Robert Payne

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 8 '54 750w

New Yorker 30:164 O 16 '54 200w

"His story is the journey itself, wild and free, dangerous and exciting all the time. It makes fine reading for this reason." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 18 '54 550w

"Those of us who have traveled in the Tibetan border lands can only marvel at the intrepidity of George N. Patterson. For it takes courage—perhaps the word is fool-hardiness—to venture across Tibet in mid-winter. Yet that is what Patterson did, and he gives a remarkable report on his most remarkable expedition in a new book, 'Journey with Loshay.'" Nicol Smith

+ Sat R 37:12 S 4 '54 850w

"In sheer human achievement Mr. Patterson's record earns its place among contemporary odysseys. But the author saves his reflections on what the missionaries used to call 'the present state of China' for conversation with his hosts at different stages—and in Tibetan. And as what he calls 'my initial challenge to my generation' his book is insufficiently articulate." Francis Watson

Spec p70 J1 9 '54 360w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 180w

"This narrative matches in sheer virility the performance it records. Mr. Patterson was seldom in doubt about what he had to do and never in doubt about what he was thinking and feeling. His writing is categorical, clear and hard with the gusty pawkiness of Scots lineage. It often rasps up to the verge of exaggeration. Everything in these pages seems a little larger than life, even than Tibetan life: the jokes more rib-splitting, the annoyances more infuriating."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p331 My 21 '54 850w

PATTERSON, GROVE. I like people. 300p $3.50 Random house

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-7813

The autobiography of the editor-in-chief of The Toledo Blade, who has spent more than fifty years of his life as a newspaperman.

Booklist 51:60 O 1 '54

"There is much wisdom in the book and it would profit every aspiring newspaper man to read it." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 19 '54 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

"Mr. Patterson has an engaging personality which emerges in nostalgic reminiscences of early newspaper days. But a large part of this autobiography is devoted to the many celebrities interviewed by the author in the course of his incessant travels. His impressions of them are shallow and bear out Mr. Patterson's self-description as a man who 'has never suffered from even a slight degree of sophistication.'" Keith Hutchison

Nation 179:495 D 4 '54 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 S 26 '54 70w

"A candid account of a life successfully lived according to a set of humane and ethical values. . . . What one misses in this book is the quality of tough-mindedness and critical inquiry. To like everybody is to make a fateful compromise, at times, with objective values." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p38 O 24 '54 470w

"After fifty years as a newspaperman, with experience in all facets of the business, from working on the rim to writing a daily column, Mr. Patterson is still without bitterness or cynicism and is as fresh and eager as a youngster on his first foreign assignment." L. L. L. Golden

+ Sat R 37:36 O 2 '54 230w

PATTERSON, RAYMOND M. Dangerous river. 314p il $5 Sloane

917.12 South Nahanni river and valley. Northwest, Canadian 54-8607

Nearly thirty years ago the author went exploring along the South Nahanni river in northwestern Canada. With a partner he built a cabin in the wilderness, hunted and trapped there, and "lived off the land." This is his account of that adventure. Glossary

Bookmark 14:59 D '54 30w

"Well written, with the feel of the Northland and the hunter's life."

+ Kirkus 22:572 Ag 15 '54 130w

"True to his word Mr. Patterson's book does not contribute to the world of science, but it does provide a vivid picture of the Nahanni River country, its rivers, valleys, and canyons, its animal and plant life, and its extremes of heat and cold. Although much of the material is repetitive, the book will appeal to the nature-lover and armchair explorer, and belongs in all Canadiana collections." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:2325 D 1 '54 120w

"Few Canadian outdoor books can equal 'Dangerous River' in adventure, in understanding of the wilderness, in descriptive power. And it has the added advantage of being true." Bruce Hutchison

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 14 '54 500w

"'Dangerous River' is a fascinating book, a memorable addition to the growing body of Canada's northland literature. If Mr. Patterson does not win the Governor-General's medal for Canadian nonfiction in the year 1954, he should sue." Stuart Keate

+ N Y Times p6 N 28 '54 550w

"A truly enchanting book."

+ New Yorker 30:203 D 11 '54 200w

"Mr. Patterson's narrative has a fine edge of immediacy. It is hard to believe that these stories, moving quickly with sharp detail, are of hard action that occurred not yesterday but in 1928. . . Some of Mr. Patterson's pages are dull because he fills them with details, of no significance now, that are still intensely interesting to him. But for the most part they glow with the excitement of hard-pressed action, with the rough humours of getting along against the river, against its mosquitoes, and with such hard-bitten companions as fell in with them on the long haulage."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p460 J1 16 '54 600w

PATTERSON, MRS SHEILA. Colour and culture in South Africa. (International library of sociology and social reconstruction) 402p $6 Grove

572.968 South Africa—Race question

[53-24278]

"This is a study of the status of the Cape Colored people within the social structure of South Africa. . . The beginning chapters are concerned with an approach to this study and of the origin and early history of the various peoples who compose the 'Cape Colored' population. Later chapters deal with patterns of differentiation and discrimination." Social Educ

"Highly commended to all students of racial relations." J. G. Leyburn

+ Am Soc R 19:793 D '54 500w

Reviewed by W. O. Brown

Ann Am Acad 293:210 My '54 550w

Foreign Affairs 32:683 J1 '54 30w

Reviewed by E. S. Munger

Geog R 44:615 O '54 130w

"A useful and timely study." P. J. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 10 '53 310w

Reviewed by Maurice Freedman

New Statesman & Nation 45:646 My 30 '53 420w

Reviewed by J. K. Anthony

Social Educ 18:190 Ap '54 400w

"Excellent books have been written on the Coloured Folk, notably by Professors W. M. Macmillan and J. S. Marais; but though Mrs. Patterson's experience of life in the Union has been much shorter than theirs, she can claim confidently to have written the best and most thorough book that has yet appeared in this field."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p179 Mr 20 '53 750w

PATTON, MRS FRANCES GRAY. Good morning, Miss Dove; il. by Garrett Price. 218p $2.75 Dodd

54-11240

Miss Dove had taught geography in the same school for thirty-five years: some people in town thought that was too long. Miss Dove was a stern disciplinarian with old-fashioned ideas and ideals, but on that April day when she was stricken in the classroom the whole town came to realize how much Miss Dove had meant in their lives.

"With that relativity which Thornton Wilder applied so successfully in Our Town, Mrs. Patton passes swiftly from past to present and back again as she describes in her deft and telling phrases the teacher-town relationship which is so fundamental in our democracy. The author makes us see education for the dedicated task it is. She lets us touch the strands of loyalty and tradition which we have all felt and sometimes resisted. There is no villain in this piece and the unpretentious heroine is someone you care for and respect." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 194:90 O '54 550w

Booklist 51:110 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:60 D '54 40w

"This is Mrs. Patton's first novel—gentle, objective, and humorous—and possessing in Miss Dove a character who has every right to become as famous as Hilton's Mr. Chips." La Tourette Stockwell

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 31 '54 250w

"Recommended. It should be popular." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 79:2330 D 1 '54 60w

"If sentiment as well as selection has been at work here, it is sentiment of a highly superior variety. Leavened with wit and sound common sense, written with an unerring rightness of touch, the whole book rings with the truth about human nature in its nicer aspects. Standing some chance of becoming a minor classic, 'Good Morning, Miss Dove' is just about flawless and completely enchanting." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 31 '54 550w

"Miss Dove's personal orbit was extremely restricted, but her cumulative renown is no less than a literary success story. She got her start in the title role of a short story appearing first in The Ladies' Home Journal and later in the collection of this author's work. . . Now in a novel Miss Dove will be read of, and quite often aloud, in thousands of family living rooms, with her eventual elevation to the ranks of movie immortals meanwhile predicted in the news." Frances Gaither

+ N Y Times p4 O 31 '54 550w

"I suppose it is heresy to suggest that a story in this category might be even better than 'Goodbye, Mr. Chips.' But I think this can be said of 'Good Morning, Miss Dove.' To be sure, Frances Patton's book is about an American schoolteacher, which may have something to do with its appeal. If that's true, however, then a lot of American readers will share my prejudice in Miss Dove's favor." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 4 '54 500w

"In her first novel Mrs. Patton has easily combined thesis and character in a moving story which is sentimental without being cloying, and artful without seeming forced." Martin Levin

+ Sat R 37:30 N 6 '54 270w

PAUL, ELLIOT HAROLD. Desperate scenery. 302p $3.75 Random house

818 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. West—Social life and customs 54-7793

The seventh in a series of volumes: Items on the Grand Account, in which the author relates tales of his early life. This one concerns his experiences in a town in southern Idaho and at a dam construction site near Jackson Hole, Wyoming.

Booklist 50:447 J1 15 '54

Kirkus 22:373 Je 15 '54 110w

"Here and there, especially during the hibernation period, the author pauses to describe, and wonderfully well, aspects of the 'desperate scenery' with which he was surrounded. He gives you the feel of the country. He obviously has never quite got Idaho and Wyoming out of his system. Indeed, at the end of the book he promises that 'Boise and Arrowrock will have their places in another volume of these Items.' One will welcome them in the expectation that the author's memories of them will be as happily rowdy as the rest of the Grand Account." Stewart Hollbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 J1 11 '54 650w

"Perhaps others will find in 'Desperate Scenery' a lasting picture of the 'rip-roaring days that began in the summer of 1910, but, to my regret, I failed to do so. I was unable to believe half the things that happened—even the weird ball game between the dam mob and The Bloomer Girls—and at the same time I haven't any doubt that all these things did happen, and probably exactly as Mr. Paul relates." John McNulty

PAUL, E. H.—Continued

N Y Times p9 J1 11 '54 450w

"Entertaining but a trifle strained."

+ — New Yorker 30:76 J1 17 '54 90w

"It all sums up, like the other volumes, to first rate reading. The reason is Mr. Paul himself. And the point about Paul is that all things interest him. If he wants to give you scenery he does it magnificently. . . And the whole is put together with the author's characteristic urbanity and his genius for keeping a narrative alive. I envy the reader who may discover Elliot Paul's 'Grand Account' with this, the seventh volume. It would be a fine thing to go back and read the other for the first time." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 J1 22 '54 650w

"Lively and ribald reminiscence." T. E. Cooney

Sat R 37:15 Ag 21 '54 230w

"The stories Paul tells best, as always, are of the japes and high jinks of Elliot Paul and his pals. To his tales of boozing, floozing and just plain horsing around, Paul contributes an uninhibited tongue, a gift for total and Technicolor recall, and a pleasing tendency to sound like a book-length monologue by W. C. Fields."

Time 64:98 J1 12 '54 330w

PAUL, RANDOLPH EVERNGHIM. Taxation in the United States. 830p $15 Little 336.2 Taxation—U.S.

54-6282

"In this volume the reader will find answers to many of the most perplexing problems of taxation. I found particularly enlightening the discussions of the relative responsibilities of the Treasury and the courts in tax matters; the limits of tax capacity (Are taxes above 25 per cent of national income a danger to the economy?); the repercussions on investment of additional taxes on high incomes (the savers and investors), as against effects of added taxes on low income recipients. (Is investment stimulated more by concessions to the savers and investors or to the masses of consumers?)." N Y Times

"Perhaps no one in the United States is so eminently qualified as Mr. Paul to write this kind of book. He has devoted a lifetime to taxes. . . The book is a direct product of his broad experience, careful scholarship, and humane outlook. Altogether, it is a major contribution to the literature of public finance. It will become a classic to be consulted not only by students of public finance but also by students of American history." H. R. Bowen

+ Ann Am Acad 295:151 S '54 550w

"A distinguished book. . . The author writes not only for lawyers but also for historians and economists, and in his thorough survey of more than 100 years of taxation his appeal is both to scholars and the lay public." S. E. Harris

+ N Y Times p10 Je 20 '54 800w

PAUL, SAMUEL, and STONE, ROBERT B. Complete book of home modernizing; with il. by George Cooper Rudolph. 383p $5.95

H. S. Stuttman co, 303 4th av, N.Y. 10

728 Building—Repair and reconstruction. Dwellings 53-13244

"Ideas that improve the appearance, add to the comfort, increase the value." (Subtitle) Partial contents: The "why" and "how" of modernizing; Modernizing for living and dining; Modernizing the kitchen; Modernizing the bathroom; Planned storage space; Light conditioning; Heating and air-conditioning; Modernizing the outside; Cost estimating methods.

Booklist 50:138 D 1 '53

Bookmark 13:84 Ja '54 40w

"If you are one of the 40 million owners of houses more than 20 years old, you will find this one of the best books on the subject."

William Yates

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Mr 7 '54 50w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:149 Ja 15 '54 60w

PAULL, GRACE A. Snowed-in hill; pictures by [the author]. [39p] $2 Abelard-Schuman

Story of two farm children and their parents who were snowed in for more than a week on their hilltop farm. For ages five to eight.

Booklist 50:263 Mr 1 '54

"How all these wintry problems were met and solved makes a lively, easy to read story, with vivid and colorful pictures, so real they make you feel a part of the big storm yourself." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ja 3 '54 190w

"Good reading for the beginning reader. Lithographs are gay and colorful, but why do the people have to have such peculiar looks?" V. K. Fitch

+ — Library J 79:74 Ja 1 '54 70w

PAYNE, HENRY FLEMING. Organic coating technology; 2v; v 1, Oils, resins, varnishes, and polymers. 674p il $10 Wiley

667.6 Protective coatings (54-5971)

"Surveys the chemistry, manufacture, and use of oils, resins, varnishes, high polymeric materials, plasticizers, and driers used for clear coatings and as the vehicle for pigmented coatings. Emphasizes practical aspects and contains many formulations, based on commercial materials, showing actual use of material discussed." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Chem & Eng N 32:765 F 22 '54 30w

Reviewed by Kenneth Tator

Chem Eng 61:385 My '54 480w

"The style is technical and practical. The audience for the book will be constituted largely of persons connected with the paint and varnish industries, especially such persons as young chemists who are beginning to work in the industry." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:778 Ap 15 '54 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:24 Mr '54

PAYNE, JOAN BALFOUR (MRS JOHN B. DICKS). Piebald princess; story and pictures. (Ariel bk) 79p $2.75 Farrar, Straus

54-5892

Fanciful story of the little folk that lived in a Cape Cod cranberry bog—Molly Pippin and Ability, her cat, Hiram, the bear, Sabina, the crow, the villainous water-rats, and finally the strange newcomer, the Princess Renekrad from Siam.

Booklist 50:327 Ap 15 '54

"Original, full of fun. . . It's hard to tell which is better—story or pictures. To me, they're both just right." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 25 '54 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"Here is a story that will demand re-readings, for it is exceptionally original and full of fun, both in text and drawings." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:95 Ap '54 150w

Kirkus 22:229 Ap 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:702 Ap 15 '54 30w

"Suspense, mystery, and a surprise ending add to the delight of a well-written and beautifully illustrated book. Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 79:865 My 1 '54 80w

"Here is such an original setting that one wishes the story were even longer, and that the possibilities of some characters were better fulfilled. However, younger ones who listen to it will be lured by the many fine pictures, with their bold, sure rhythms, use of unusual colors and exciting action. Those over eight will appreciate more the atmosphere, humor and the point of the plot." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 16 '54 400w

"It's hard to define the charm of this imaginative tale, but certainly part of it lies in the consistently drawn characters." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p28 My 16 '54 210w

"Joan Balfour Payne has written and illustrated a delightfully humorous tale of a deception that so pleased the deceived that they asked for more. Though this is for younger children, it has an ageless quality and adults will chuckle with pleasure over the sophisticated allusions in it." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:56 My 15 '54 500w

Wis Lib Bul 50:142 My '54

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Alexander the god. 307p $3.50 Wyn

Alexander the Great—Fiction 54-11367

"This biographical novel opens with Alexander's conquest of Tarsus and ends with his death in Babylon. Chiefly, it is the story of Thaissa, the camp follower, whom Alexander elevates to position of his mistress-queen." San Francisco Chronicle

Kirkus 22:644 S 15 '54

"Such a character is a hard one to lift out of melodrama and into reality, but Mr. Payne does so in a book that is filled with action and color and that is almost—but not quite—the equal of 'Blood Royal.'" T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p48 N 7 '54 450w

"Robert Payne, a prolific writer, is best known for his factual works, 'Forever China' and 'China Awake.' His fine, knife-like prose saves Alexander the God from being another of the mediocre historical novels so prevalent these days."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 14 '54 150w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. The deluge, a novel by Leonardo da Vinci. 99p $3 Twayne

54-8557

"Leonardo da Vinci, the great painter, mathematician and would-be inventor of a flying machine, once started to write a story about a mysterious Deluge which overcame the world not far from the place where the Ark rested. Fragments of this tale—consisting of a brief outline, a number of disjointed passages, and some lengthy passages, written out in considerable detail—were found among the artist's papers. These have been arranged in order by Robert Payne and are presented here along with Mr. Payne's introduction and notes." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"This is not a novel by Leonardo Da Vinci, and—despite presumptions beyond the proprieties of editorship—scarcely a novel at all." Warren Beck

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 28 '54 60w

Christian Century 71:585 My 12 '54 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 28 '54 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 27 '54 250w

"'The Deluge' is advertised as having been written by that famous jack-of-all-arts, Leonardo da Vinci. According to the editor, Robert Payne, Leonardo left some notes for a short novel describing the end of the world. . . Unfortunately, there is no plot and nothing to indicate what Leonardo's real intentions were but the enterprising Mr. Payne sets out to fill in all the enormous gaps. What he does is to incorporate verbatim a good many of Leonardo's notes into a narrative that is entirely his own." William Murray

Sat R 37:34 Ap 24 '54 320w

PEARE, CATHERINE OWENS. John Woolman: child of light; the story of John Woolman and the Friends. 254p $3 Vanguard

B or 92 Woolman, John. Friends, Society of 54-6990

A biography of the famous Quaker leader, John Woolman, stressing his fight against slavery, long before the Civil war. Bibliography.

Booklist 50:382 Je 1 '54

"Miss Peare has succeeded admirably in presenting John Woolman's gradual progress under divine guidance without estranging young readers from him because of his piety." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 My 13 '54 250w

Kirkus 22:123 F 15 '54 150w

"This able biographer has led us to expect much from her next portrait of a character whose influence could be deeply felt by our youth of today. However, we must report disappointment in her fictionized life of this famous Quaker."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 My 16 '54 180w

N Y Times p22 Ag 22 '54 140w

"It is extremely difficult to interpret the life and times of a religious leader to young people, but Miss Peare, herself a Quaker, has told this story with competence and deep understanding. John Woolman emerges as a figure of strength and wisdom, a rightful leader of a great religious movement, a man whose life should be an inspiration to young people today." A. B.

+ Sat R 37:31 Jl 24 '54 110w

PEARE, CATHERINE OWENS. Louisa May Alcott, her life; il. by Margaret Ayer. 122p $2 Holt

B or 92 Alcott, Louisa May—Juvenile literature 54-5742

A fictionized biography of Louisa May Alcott for ages nine to twelve.

Booklist 50:384 Je 1 '54

"Although written for the 9-12 group, it faithfully follows the adult biography of the author of 'Little Women,' and would make good reading aloud for an entire family." Millicent Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 70w

"In maintaining a warm narrative and enough detail to stimulate this age group, the summing up is a splendidly unified tribute to Little Women's creator."

+ Kirkus 22:3 Ja 1 '54 140w

"Recommended for ages 9-12." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:635 Ap 1 '54 50w

"Slow readers of junior high age may welcome it; having read 'Little Women,' they will be fascinated with the story of its creation, and Louisa's own words about the 'facts' in it."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 My 16 '54 90w

"Miss Peare's biography serves as a happy introduction to the Alcott books." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 16 '54 80w

Spring'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54 140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:217 O '54

PEARE, CATHERINE OWENS. Mark Twain: his life; il. by Margaret Ayer. 116p $2 Holt

B or 92 Clemens, Samuel Langhorne—Juvenile literature 54-10389

The author presents "a friendly life of the beloved writer. . . In boyhood, there is the recreation of life on the Mississippi as young Sam lived and saw it. As he grows to manhood there is his own zest for life, coupled with his experiences—mining, steamboating, reporting, lecturing, travelling and marrying—that produced his legacy to the American heritage." (Kirkus)

PEARE, C. O.—Continued

"Catherine Owens Peare has done a magnificent job in her smooth flowing, topnotch biography of Mark Twain. . . Boys and girls will love this inspiring book." A. R. S.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 14 '54 80w

"It is swiftly told, gay and readable, and if the first part plays up the wildness of the 'Tom Sawyer' of real life almost too much for a child's good, the last half depicts a great author and humorist worth knowing." M. J. Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54 50w

+ Kirkus 22:389 J1 1 '54 90w

"Recommended for ages 9-12." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 79:2497 D 15 '54 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 14 '54 50w

PEARSON, GERALD HAMILTON JEFFREY. Psychoanalysis and the education of the child. 357p $5 Norton

370.15 Psychoanalysis. Education 54-11094

"From the personal interview to the process of learning and education is not too great a step. We may say that teaching consists of an accumulation of mutual interviews. From the able hand of Gerald Pearson, the dean of the Philadelphia Association for Psychoanalysis, we acquire the latest insights in the field of education gathered through daily psychoanalytic experience with children. His book is the first to bring us such a much-needed survey." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by R. G. Newman

New Repub 132:20 Ag 2 '54 450w

"I am convinced that his book will penetrate more and more into the field of education. It is clear, the author knows what he wishes to describe and he gives us abundant new material in a straightforward way." J. A. M. Meerloo
+ N Y Times p17 Ag 8 '54 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 24 '54 100w

PEARSON, RALPH M. Modern renaissance in American art; presenting the work and philosophy of 54 distinguished artists. 300p il $6.50 Harper

709.73 Art, Modern. Artists, American 53-11856

"Determined to bring order out of the chaos that beset the art world, a seasoned critic interprets the basic philosophy of modern painting and sculpture by quoting the artists on the purpose of their work, and adding informed comment of his own. He limits his remarks to the leaders of expressionistic, abstract, nonobjective, realistic, and surrealist art in the U.S. during the past decade." Booklist

Booklist 50:375 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1591 S 15 '54 90w

"Mr. Pearson's personal and intimate presentation has great advantages in warmth and directions, and it admirably conveys Mr. Pearson's real concern for art, besides allowing some of the artists to say interesting things about themselves and their work. . . But the author's standards of judgment are difficult, if not impossible, to follow. He puts much emphasis on 'created design' as a touchstone, but includes artists whose main interest is in anecdotal narrative; he stresses 'meaning' but gives his blessing to many a mannered exercise in a derivative style. Given his shifting grounds of judgment, given the title of his book, and given his desire to let each artist have his say, Mr. Pearson's wholesale dismissal of the tendencies of the last decade is incomprehensible." Robert Goldwater

+ Sat R 37:52 O 2 '54 800w

"This book of 300 pages is attractive in format and has 188 excellent illustrations. It will be an asset to the teacher, an excellent reference for high school, college, and art school student, and a source of help to all who are seeking an interpretation of the modern movement in America."

+ School Arts 54:47 N '54 270w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 550w

Wis Lib Bul 50:129 My '54

PEATIE, DONALD CULROSS. Lives of destiny; as told for The Reader's Digest. 208p il $2.75 Houghton

920 54-8136

"Twenty-four brief biographies from the 'Reader's Digest,' these cover artists, adventurers, statesmen and scientists, and include such men as Jefferson, Voltaire, Mozart, Da Vinci, Marco Polo and Jean Lafitte." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 13 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 130w

Wis Lib Bul 50:176 J1 '54

PECKHAM, TED. Grandma rolled her own. 214p $3 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Fisher, Fanny (Elliott) 53-8889

Reminiscences of the author's grandmother who immigrated from Ireland in the 1880s, married a ne'er-do-well in New York shortly after, ran boarding houses in St Louis, California, and Alaska, made and lost fortunes, and was mentor and inspiration in the author's own search for the adventurous life.

Booklist 51:39 S 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 My '54

Kirkus 22:260 Ap 1 '54 180w

"Unlike many of these family memoirs, the author of 'Grandma Rolled Her Own' doesn't insist that his character is extraordinary but merely writes of his grandmother with the gaiety and 'joyful respect for life' which he says in his preface were her greatest gifts to him. As a result his book is agreeable and unpretentious and his grandmother emerges as a delightful person." Barbara Klaw

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 4 '54 320w

"Light reading by any criterion, it is still amusing, high-spirited, and a pleasant tribute to a highly original woman." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 J1 27 '54 500w

PEET, CREIGHTON. First book of bridges; pictures by Deane Cate. 68p $1.75 Watts, F.

624 Bridges—Juvenile literature 53-8606

A brief explanation of the art of bridge building for grades four to seven. Gives a brief history of many famous bridges with pictures. List of terms, and a list of notable bridges. Index.

Booklist 50:226 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:14 O '53 20w

Horn Bk 30:100 Ap '54 80w

+ Kirkus 21:585 S 1 '53 80w

"Clear text and numerous illustrations by Deane Cate make the fascinating but complicated subject of bridges and bridge building seem quite understandable. . . Recommended." Mary Strang

+ Library J 79:150 Ja 15 '54 30w

"This book is simpler and briefer than David B. Steinman's recently published 'Famous Bridges of the World' and is, therefore, better suited to a slightly younger audience. Into sixty-nine pages Mr. Peet packs a considerable amount of well-organized information about the building and designing of bridges." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 11 '54 110w
Wis Lib Bul 50:80 Mr '54

PEI, MARIO ANDREW. All about language; decorations by Donat Ivanovsky. 186p $2.75 Lippincott

400 Language and languages 54-8488

"Written by a recognized authority, this book summarizes for young people the important facts about language—its history, diversity, distribution, and importance. It discusses entertainingly slang, dialects, and the advantages of a universal language. The usefulness of foreign language study is emphasized, with criteria for choice." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:153 D 1 '54

"Informed and free from pedantry, his style captures the fascination of the subject. His material is clearly organized and moves logically from aspect to aspect, from the basic role of language as a means of understanding to exploring the need for a universal tongue."

+ Kirkus 22:491 Ag 1 '54 150w

"Though there are good books on word origins, this fills a real need for a reliable and readable survey of the whole area. Useful for all, but indispensable in high school libraries." F. K. Jones

+ Library J 79:2257 N 15 '54 90w

"This book for readers from 12 and up is solidly informative and fascinating. Its value is enormous for the boy or girl just beginning the study of unfamiliar languages, whether classical or modern. Also it is an aid to richer understanding of our own English." Edmund Fuller

+ N Y Times pt2 p16 N 14 '54 140w

PEI, MARIO ANDREW, and GAYNOR, FRANK, eds. Dictionary of linguistics. (Mid-century reference lib) 238p $6 Philosophical lib.

403 Philology—Dictionaries. Language and languages 54-12662

Definitions of about 2,500 terms used in the scientific, historical, and descriptive study of language.

+ Christian Century 71:1240 O 13 '54 70w

"Terms are crisply, clearly, and authoritatively defined in this compact work. . . Medium-sized and large libraries will want to add this useful work to their reference collection of special-purpose dictionaries." S. S. Smith

+ Library J 79:1590 S 15 '54 170w

Special Libraries 45:354 O '54 20w

PELLING, HENRY MATHISON. Origins of the Labour party, 1880-1900. 257p il $4 St Martins

329.942 Labor party (Great Britain) 54-8776

Attempts to reconstruct a crucial period in British labor political history: the last two decades of the nineteenth century. The author is a Fellow of Queen's college, Oxford. Index.

Reviewed by C. F. Brand
Am Hist R 60:82 O '54 440w

Reviewed by W. H. Cooke
Ann Am Acad 295:188 S '54 550w
Current Hist 27:62 Jl '54 100w

"Recommended for libraries where a full collection on this subject is desired." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 79:1055 Je 1 '54 120w

"This is a very good book. The literature of British socialism and labourism of the eighties and nineties is now immense, but there have been few attempts, free from propaganda or hero-worship, to construct a balanced narrative and to assess the importance of the various strands. Professor Cole's 'British Working Class Politics' takes in the period but Mr Pelling goes deeper and draws on more of the original sources."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 15 '54 400w

"Mr. Pelling has done a striking service to the Labour Movement as well as to history by making the story clear. His book has rare distinction as a work of scholarship, told simply, without display, and final in its results." A. J. P. Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:292 Mr 6 '54 500w

Reviewed by W. L. Rofoes

Pol Sci Q 69:479 S '54 360w

"Students of the Labor Movement will find Mr. Pelling's chronology, drawn chiefly from original sources, interesting and valuable. Third-party hopefuls and scholastic amateurs, however, may find this document a bit trying, as it is hard-spliced with fact and with only belated interpretation. Yet it will be easier stuff for the amateur than for the impracticals." Thomas Wheeler

+ — Sat R 37:64 O 2 '54 500w

"Scholarly and absorbing narrative."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p173 Mr 12 '54 850w

PENDLE, GEORGE. Paraguay; a riverside nation. 115p $2.50 Royal inst. of int. affairs

989.2 Paraguay A54-8961

A short study of Paraguay which covers physical geography and history, outlines its progress, discusses natural resources and economy, the effects of its isolation in wars, political rivalries, dictatorships, and racial homogeneity.

Reviewed by Frank Tannenbaum

Ann Am Acad 296:217 N '54 140w

Booklist 50:397 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by R. J. Alexander

Canadian Forum 34:188 N '54 70w

Foreign Affairs 32:684 Jl '54 10w

PENFIELD, WILDER. No other gods. 340p $3.50 Little

Abraham, the patriarch—Fiction 54-5114

The hero is Abram, son of Terah, and the place the city of Ur in the year 2000 B.C. The novel is concerned with the search of Abram for the one true God. It ends as Abram and his followers set out for the land of Canaan.

Booklist 50:321 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 21:802 D 15 '53 160w

"Highly recommended for all libraries." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 79:383 F 15 '54 130w

"Dr. Penfield is not an experienced enough novelist to bring to realization all of his ambitions. The novel does, however, have virtues. It is sometimes exciting and Dr. Penfield frequently captures the tensions of the times. There is plenty of action and Abram is occasionally a thrilling figure." H. U. Ribalow

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 7 '54 470w

"In spite of the possibilities of this material, the result is unconvincing, the characterization shallow. . . There is no suggestion of what anthropology, sociology or history have to tell about the people whose every gesture has become a universal symbol, who have lived their ritual from Ur until today, and the echoes of whose significance haunt us still." Anne Fremantle

N Y Times p25 Mr 21 '54 500w

Reviewed by Isabel Stradley

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 18 '54 70w

Wis Lib Bul 50:73 Mr '54

PENTECOST, HUGH, pseud. See Philips, J. P.

PEREDA, PRUDENCIO de. See De Pereda, P.

PERRAULT, CHARLES. Cinderella; or, The little glass slipper [a free translation from the French] with pictures by Marcia Brown. [29p] $2 Scribner

398 Fairy tales

A free translation from the French of the Cinderella story, with illustrations by the translator.

Booklist 51:140 N 15 '54

"This favorite of all fairy tales has been given a lively re-telling, made truly magical by some of the most exquisite pictures—in pink and yellow, blue and lavender—you ever saw. The jacket showing lovely Cinderella driving to the ball will bring O's of admiration from young and old." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"No matter how well you think you know Cinderella, this book will make you dream about her all over again. A lovely Christmas gift."

+ Commonweal 61:204 N 19 '54 20w

Horn Bk 30:428 D '54 100w

Kirkus 22:707 O 15 '54 70w

+ N Y Times p11 D 19 '54 100w

"The text is a free translation by Marcia Brown of Charles Perrault's version, which is the sprightliest of them all, and the pages sparkle with her exquisite art work and lovely colors." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:200 N 27 '54 40w

"To our mind, this 'Cinderella' is a perfect picture book. The text is relaxed and easy, with the simple theme of goodness rewarded running through it like a shining thread. Yet it never becomes cloying or saccharine, for phrases such as 'chitter chatter,' 'puff their ruffles,' 'the young miss,' and 'paid them a thousand courtesies' give it a pertness, a kind of sauciness, that refreshes and at the same time reflects its French origin." E. S. Ross

+ Sat R 37:66 N 13 '54 260w

PERRY, JOHN HOWARD, ed. Chemical business handbook; prepared by a staff of specialists. Various pagings il maps $17 McGraw 660.2 Chemical industries 53-9381

"Covers from financing a business enterprise to advertising and selling its products, and from doing research and development work to transporting the finished commodity to the buyer." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng N 32:3378 Ag 23 '54 20w

"The section on sources of information for market research data is particularly detailed. An indispensable book for the aspiring technical executive." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:2334 D 1 '54 120w

PERRY, RALPH BARTON. Realms of value; a critique of human civilization. 497p $7.50 Harvard univ. press

191 Worth. Civilization, Modern 53-10867

"In his 'General Theory of Value,' [Book Review Digest 1926], Mr. Perry laid the logical groundwork for this more discursive book. There he promised, he would eventually undertake a general appraisal of our major domains of value, ideological and institutional. His theory lends itself to this extension, for he identified value with interest, and made value itself an object of interest. That makes every institution a center of some value. The appraisal indulges less in a 'rectification of frontiers' than in a sustained appreciation of what it is in each field that gave life to its organization and made it a sustainer and carrier of the interest that begot it. It is in celebration of the chief institutional foci of human concern that Mr. Perry is most notable." N Y Times

Reviewed by R. C. Angell

Am Soc R 19:630 O '54 1200w

"This is a splendid work. It has been awaited for many years as the promised sequel to the now classic General Theory of Value, published in 1926. Such a book can issue only from a lifetime of dedicated exploration in the vast domain of man and his works. It is a comprehensive survey of many-faceted human civilization, grounded throughout upon a general theory of value." Charles Morris

+ Ann Am Acad 295:179 S '54 400w

"Not a book for reading at a gulp, but for quiet moments of concentrated thought."

+ Kirkus 22:27 Ja 1 '54 180w

"Written with grace and urbanity and rich in erudite references, the book will be enjoyed by all truly literate readers. The professional philosopher may disagree with Prof. Perry's definition of the concept of value, but the book is written in such a way that one does not have to accept this definition in order to approve of his admirable chapters dealing with The History of History or of the one entitled Religion and Philosophy of Religion." Joseph Bram

+ Library J 79:625 Ap 1 '54 230w

Reviewed by Michael Polanyi

Manchester Guardian p4 O 1 '54 420w

"His whole book can be regarded as a justification of the Jeffersonian faith in man's capacity for freedom and self-government." H. B. Parkes

+ New Repub 130:20 Mr 1 '54 400w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 23 '54 50w

"Comprehensive as Perry's theory is, his treatise is generous only within the bounds of nature. Any hope raised for the human venture is melioristic, not perfectionistic." T. V. Smith

N Y Times p27 F 21 '54 400w

"As befits a work summarizing a lifetime of profound thinking, 'Realms of Value' has a tone of loftiness and dispassion that seems far above the frayed and brittle world we all inhabit, but periodically Professor Perry comes thumping down to earth, and his remarks about value theories like Nazi genocide are short and sharp enough for anybody."

New Yorker 30:129 Mr 20 '54 200w

"Some readers will regard this as a bleak book. I do not. It is both rich and sane. There is a patience, precision, and honesty about it that make it a good book to live with—a far better book, indeed, than many which hold more exalted views of man's place in the scheme of things." Brand Blanshard

+ Sat R 37:36 My 1 '54 1050w

"Realms of Value is a most important contribution to philosophy, and will be of major interest to scholars in many other disciplines as well."

+ U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:203 Je '54 200w

PERSON, WILLIAM THOMAS. Trouble on the trace. (Ariel bks) 184p il $2.95 Farrar, Straus

Historical novel for older boys and girls dealing with the Natchez Trail in 1801. The story tells of the adventures, the perils and the hardships of a family of pioneers who set out in search of husband and father long overdue home from a trip to New Orleans.

Booklist 50:303 Ap 1 '54

"Drawings by Joshua Tolford enhance the regional flavor, and the writing has sincerity and depth. Recommended for school and public library readers in grades 7-10." M. H. Edmonds

+ Library J 79:786 Ap 15 '54 80w

"Here is more thrilling adventure than history perhaps, but the era is well interpreted by the odd variety of characters met on the old Trace. Boys, from twelve up, will enjoy the excitement and appreciate Mr. Person's fine, adult style. We hope it leads them to his other excellent and more serious books, 'Bar-Face,' and 'The Land and the Water.'" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 28 '54 180w

Wis Lib Bul 50:184 Jl '54

PERSONAL column; a testimony of crime.
240p $3 Roy pubs.

364 Crime and criminals 54-5219

"An advertisement 'Publisher seeks gentleman who no longer pursues criminal activities, anonymity guaranteed' run in the personal column of the London Times turned up, out of many, these seven stories of criminal activity, told in the first person." Kirkus

Kirkus 22:23 Ja 1 '54 150w

"As fact, [the stories are] admittedly unreliable; as fiction, they're dull and usually subliterate. You can skip this one either way." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p20 F 21 '54 70w

"Excellent." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:52 Mr 13 '54 20w

PETER II, king of Yugoslavia. King's heritage. 304p il $5 Putnam

B or 92 Yugoslavia—Politics and government 54-10501

The first half of King Peter's autobiography deals with his early childhood in Belgrade. At eleven, after the assassination of his father, the boy left his English school to take his place on the throne. In 1941 he fled from Yugoslavia. The second half of the book tells of the attempts to restore him to the throne, and of his life since the movement failed.

"One finds no deep political analysis in this simply told story; the young king's interests were those of his age. But those who enjoy the glamor of royalty and distinguished names will enjoy these reminiscences." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 400w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 9 '54 650w

"Sympathetic and sentimental, this has the quiet strength of firm convictions and the pathos of an era that has passed."

+ Kirkus 22:624 S 1 '54 210w

Reviewed by F. L. Schick

Library J 79:2325 D 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by H. W. Baehr

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 D 5 '54 370w

"His story is important not because of any merit in the telling but because of the events it deals with. Others have written of these events with professional competence, but here for the first time the King gives his own version. And he has written with candor and honesty, and with a plainness verging on naïveté." Stoyan Christowe

+ N Y Times p51 N 7 '54 1350w

"King Peter's self-importance sometimes betrays him into unconscious humor, but, all in all, the book is an impressive testament to the undying tenacity of those who have once worn crowns."

+ — New Yorker 30:221 N 13 '54 200w

PETERSHAM, MRS MAUD (FULLER), and PETERSHAM, MISKA. Off to bed; 7 stories for wide-awakes. [28p] il $2.25 Macmillan (N Y)

54-13044

Little stories about baby animals' sleeping habits told for ages four and five.

"Charming illustrations. Just right stories. Save them, if you can, for bedtime." E. S. D.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 40w

+ Kirkus 22:726 N 1 '54 80w

"There are gentle, real, beautifully colored pictures on every page. It is an appealing addition to the group of books for the nursery by these popular artists." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p4 N 14 '54 50w

"Weary parents who find the bedtime-story hour the longest part of the day will welcome these seven brief tales of the animal world. Each story requires only five minutes for reading aloud and contains the simple but important moral that 'it's best to follow mother's advice.'" G. A. W.

+ N Y Times pt2 p42 N 14 '54 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 14 '54 70w

PETERSON, HOUSTON, ed. Treasury of the world's great speeches. 856p $7.50 Simon & Schuster

808.85 Orations. Speeches, addresses, etc. 53-9693

An anthology of famous speeches. The arrangement is chronological from the Ten Commandments to the inaugural address of President Eisenhower. Each selection has its historical and biographical remarks by the editor. Index.

Booklist 51:102 N 1 '54

"Ranging from the prophetic utterances of Moses and Isaiah down to the metaphorical roundnesses of Churchill and the soldierly directness of Eisenhower, the volume presents a magnificent cross-section of man's employment of the spoken word. . . . Altogether the collection is a model of what such a volume should be. The attentive reader will find it not merely a group of effective orations but a highlighted reflection of mankind's past. And he will discover what Emerson meant when he once said that a great speech 'is better than a battle.'" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 27 '54 650w

PETERSON, ISABEL J., comp. First book of poetry; pictures by Kathleen Elgin. 114p $1.75 Watts, F.

821.08 Children's poetry—Collections 53-8610

"During several years of teaching at the Laboratory School of the University of Chicago, Miss Peterson kept records of poems younger children like best. From often tested favorites, she has chosen about one hundred, here divided into groups of poems about animals, interesting people, journeying, make-believe, etc." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:364 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 11 '54 30w

"Today's poets are well represented and a good number of older favorites included. Simple, imaginative line drawings accompany the poems." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:179 Je '54 90w

Kirkus 22:200 Mr 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:713 Ap 15 '54 40w

"Attractively arranged collection." L. R. Markey

+ Library J 79:1238 Je 15 '54 50w

"Should have the same appeal as, for so many years, has been that of the treasured Little Library book, 'Silver Pennies.' The dashing decorations have little distinction."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 16 '54 200w

"Parents who deplore their children's lack of interest in poetry might do well to introduce this volume into the household—in a casual manner, of course." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p32 S 12 '54 120w

"If some of the old favorites are missing, many of the new favorites are present. . . . Kathleen Elgin has made black-and-white decorations for nearly every poem. The book is attractive, and can be used with older boys and girls as well as the younger ones for whom it was planned." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:58 My 15 '54 150w

PETERSON, PHYLLIS LEE. Log cabin in the forest; il. by Ati Forberg. 24p $2 Houghton 54-9050

"A well known magazine writer, who has contributed stories from her native Canada, writes of a log cabin through the centuries as it is lived in, abandoned and finally rediscovered to make a museum for a nearby town. Using an actual happening in Quebec as the basis for her story, Mrs. Peterson writes in a gently personalized tone about the cabin, its people and their doings and there is a warm feeling when modern children find it years later." Kirkus

"There is no story plot, yet the description of daily life around the cabin gives a warm sense of family life and stirs the imagination. It is like standing silently in a museum viewing relics of other days and pretending to have lived with them." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

Horn Bk 30:331 O '54 120w

+ Kirkus 22:480 Ag 1 '54 90w

"This is a well-written book. . . The illustrations by Ati Forberg add a great deal to the story. The book is recommended for fourth- and fifth-graders." M. C. Skinner

+ Library J 79:1666 S 15 '54 80w

Sat R 37:80 N 13 '54 200w

PETERSON, ROGER TORY, and others. Field guide to the birds of Britain and Europe; introd. by Julian Huxley. 318p il col il maps $5 Houghton

598.2 Birds—Europe 54-1305

"In the style and format of other books in the Peterson field guide series this guide covers the British Isles, Iceland, and continental Europe from Portugal eastward to the 30° line of longitude, including islands of the Mediterranean. Identification, voice, and habitat are given for each of 551 species and where necessary the vernacular names in Dutch, German, French, and Swedish and the North American equivalents. Illustrations in scale, some in black and white only, many in color. Silhouettes on end papers." Booklist

Booklist 50:336 My 1 '54

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 16 '54 80w

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 15 '54 200w

"This is an authoritative guide recommended for purchase for all subject collections and for libraries on the Atlantic Coast where European birds occasionally appear as accidentals." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:1403 Ag '54 140w

"The book we have needed for years. Bird-watchers in Britain, relying on the spate of books devoted largely to birds on the 'British list,' have tended to neglect the study of birds of the Continent, of which we are a part." A. W. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 9 '54 300w

Reviewed by Jon Wynne-Tyson

Spec p409 Ap 2 '54 170w

"This is a valuable contribution to bird literature and the two comments above should be taken not as criticisms but as small points which could perhaps be borne in mind when a new edition is called for, as it certainly will be."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p172 Mr 12 '54 450w

Wis Lib Bul 50:204 O '54

PETTERSSON, HANS. Westward ho with the Albatross. 218p il $4 Dutton

508.3 Albatross (schooner). Svenska djuphavsexpeditionen. Ocean 53-10865

"Tells the story of the deep-sea expedition of 1947-48 which the author led around the oceans of the world. The Pettersson expedition, in good part financed by private Swedish sources, was in every way a success. Enough information on the ocean floor, its age, contour and composition was obtained to keep the specialists busy analyzing for years to come." N Y Times

Booklist 50:234 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:106 F '54 30w

"In final analysis, the casual comment on travel impressions is uninspired, and dulls the impact of the more interesting scientific sections."

Kirkus 21:707 O 15 '53 140w

"Recommended for public libraries." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 78:2211 D 15 '53 130w

Reviewed by Honor Tracy

New Statesman & Nation 47:378 Mr 20 '54 120w

"In the present volume, an informal narrative of the voyage, Professor Pettersson gives an interesting and often delightful account, including many of the lighter moments of the expedition as well as defining its serious purpose." R. L. Carson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 10 '54 1100w

"Thoroughly readable and worth-while book." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 10 '54 550w

"Hans Pettersson has written an amiable and informative account of a 'round-the-world' survey voyage, but he certainly has not endangered Miss Carson's standing as a popularizer of ocean lore. Nevertheless, he frequently captures the reader's imagination with his speculations about the topography of the ocean floor and the weirdly specialized forms of life that grope around at depths of three and four miles." T. E. Cooney

+ Sat R 37:56 Ap 10 '54 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p124 F 19 '54 500w

PETTINGILL, OLIN SEWALL. Guide to bird finding west of the Mississippi; with il. by George Miksch Sutton. 709p $6 Oxford

598.2 Birds—West 53-9191

A companion volume to A Guide to Bird Finding East of the Mississippi (Book Review Digest 1951). This covers the twenty-two states west of the Mississippi. The birds are arranged by state and localities under each state. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:138 D 1 '53

"Solidly informative. . . George Miksch Sutton has done the illustrations for this indispensable handbook for the bird finder traveling west." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 27 '53 70w

"Bird enthusiasts are always on the alert for sight or sound of a new bird when they travel away from home. In the past it has always been necessary to go laboriously through identification or regional guides to discover what birds might be found in a given locality. Now, thanks to Dr. Pettingill, the bird lover need consult only two volumes—one for east, one for west of the Mississippi."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 24 '54 120w

Reviewed by I. R. Barnes

Sat R 37:27 Ag 21 '54 150w

PETTIT, PAUL. The Spaniard. 238p $3 Harper 54-6289

The setting is first Spain, then England. It is the story of a well-to-do young Spaniard, Ramon, who loved an English girl, Ann. When the civil war came to Spain Ramon lost his beloved sister, Pilar. Ramon's revenge on the Germans responsible for Pilar's death, had to be carried out before he felt free to marry Ann.

Booklist 50:342 My 1 '54

Kirkus 22:131 F 15 '54 150w

"The author is an English solicitor. I congratulate him. This concentrated story is more than nine and sixpence-worth of suspense and atmosphere." Giles Romilly

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:396 O 3 '53 90w

"So agreeably written, with such vivid descriptions of Spanish mountains and English moors and such a very fine feeling for Spanish character and culture, that you can almost overlook the fact that this is a markedly unsuspenseful suspense story." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p21 My 9 '54 30w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 30 '54 70w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 120w

"The author puts himself at a disadvantage by beginning at the end of his story, which he tells with confidence but without achieving conviction."

Times [London] Lit Sup p609 S 25 '53 60w

PEYREFITTE, ROGER. Diplomatic diversions; tr. from the French by James FitzMaurice. 279p $3 Thames (N Y)

53-35246

Satirical novel about life in diplomatic circles in Athens in 1937 and 1938.

"Diplomatic Diversions has understandably enjoyed a succès de scandale in France. It is hard, however, to take it seriously as satire, though many will doubtless enjoy it as an extravagant skit upon the vanities, rivalries, intrigues, and erotic adventures of diplomatic life in Athens between the wars." H. I'A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 F 20 '53 100w

"In the original French, Diplomatic Diversions is obviously an extremely witty and entertaining novel. In translation, though it is still amusing, the wit has largely evaporated. It is not a novel that could easily be written in English; the law of libel would see to that."

Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 45:214 F 21 '53 150w

"'Diplomatic Diversions' is packed with anecdotes and references to personages living and dead, fascinating shop talk for the reader who has ever even looked in the shop-window. But it does not make its hero, or anyone else for that matter, very sympathetic." James Hilton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 1 '54 500w

"A good, breezy book. . . In keeping with its subject, the tone of the novel has the icy efficiency of a good diplomatic report. Under the frosty breath of M. Peyrefitte's impersonal style the characters congeal into human icicles." William Barrett

+ N Y Times p23 Mr 28 '54 500w

"The picture he gives . . . is perverse and ignoble, but it is also devilishly amusing. The accounts of the feud between the literary Ambassador and the Military Attaché and of the activities of the Ambassador's staff as they pursue advancement, decorations, and the rarer pleasures among the Greeks are first-rate burlesque. . . There is some consolation, though not a great deal, in discovering the Achilles' heel of this aggravatingly gifted devil's advocate. He nourishes a platonic passion for an embodiment of the Aryan ideal of blond beauty in the person of a young German diplomat, and in the grip of this devotion he is as solemn as an owl and as clumsy as one that has been overtaken by the unkind light of day." Anthony West

+ New Yorker 30:155 Ap 24 '54 950w

"Those who enjoy the wit and pitiless sanity of 'Candide' will discover fitful adumbrations of it here, and may find in their satiric souls the kindness to excuse this author's lapses when they consider that he writes, perhaps in an age when it is difficult to be as sure of one's attitudes as Voltaire was able to be of his. The translation, by James Fitz Maurice, though careless in small matters, is adequate."

Jerome Stone

+ Sat R 37:39 Ag 14 '54 320w

"Intelligent, witty and frequently improper. Nothing positive is affirmed, except the eternal loveliness of Athens and the conclusion that war is foolish and diplomacy futile to prevent it. Everything else is laughed off or dismissed with a shrug as dust and ashes. True, there is a hint that once, perhaps, if things had happened otherwise, something else might be happening now; but . . . once again the shrug."

L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p396 Mr 27 '53 500w

"M. Peyrefitte must be admitted to be a lively and entertaining writer, who, when not attempting to analyse feeling, carries the reader along most enjoyably with his vivid picture of the worldly scenes he draws with such knowledge and venom."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p117 F 20 '53 300w

PEZERIL, DANIEL. Rue Notre Dame; with an introd. by Bruce Marshall [tr. by A. Gordon Smith] 148p $2.50 Sheed

53-9798

A novel in the form of an old French priest's diary. He has been retired from active parish work because of his age, but in his less responsible situation his active mind works in its accustomed philosophical way.

"A story of sanctity is certainly not one that can easily be written or even prudently undertaken; the recent history of Catholic writing is littered with the wreckage of attempts. But Father Pezeril has, in my opinion, here succeeded. I do not see how anyone could read this book without being very deeply moved." William Pfaff

+ Commonweal 59:44 O 16 '53 210w

"Abbé Daniel Pézeril, who appears to have been well served by his translator, A. Gordon Smith, has a style of grace and skill, together with warmth of spirit and psychological insight. Bruce Marshall's introduction performs the valuable function of setting up the background for the non-French reader. . . It is moving and cleansing to share this spiritual travail." Edmund Fuller

+ N Y Times p14 D 20 '53 260w

"The novel is a worth-while contribution to the world of good books. It is a sermon in humility, rich with the glowing colors of everyday life as seen through the eyes of a wise old philosopher." B. F. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p10C Mr 7 '54 60w

PFAENDER, ANN MCLELLAND. Miss Library Lady. 184p $2.50 Messner

54-6772

A novel for older girls. It describes Jean Muirhead's adventures in library service first in a small branch library in a poor section of Portland, Oregon, and later in a plantation library in Hawaii.

Booklist 50:364 My 15 '54

"The author, writing somewhat autobiographically, understands the satisfactions of such library service and thus offers a challenging bid for recruitment to this profession." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:102 Ap '54 140w

Kirkus 22:65 F 1 '54 140w

"Very light reading but may prove useful in recruiting girls for librarianship. The author, a librarian, knows Hawaiian life well. Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 79:791 Ap 15 '54 90w

"It is not first-rate in style, but we hope it inspires others even better." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 9 '54 320w

"Jean's experiences are happy, though there are hints that personality clashes and discontent are not unknown among her colleagues. One might wish that there were more emphasis on day-to-day problems, such as the difficulty of bringing fresh eagerness to deadly routines. Nonetheless, the over-all impression is that library work is a profession in which a normally intelligent, outgoing young person can find happiness and may possibly encounter adventure." Ethna Sheehan

PFAENDER, A. M.—Continued

+ N Y Times p18 Je 27 '54 220w

Wis Lib Bul 50:145 My '54

PFFATTEICHER, HELEN EMMA. In every corner sing. 214p $2.50 Muhlenberg press
245.09 Hymns 54-7588

A brief account of the development of hymnology and of the lives and works of some of the more important composers of them. The hymns are Protestant in the main, but the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin backgrounds are recorded. No music. The author is a musician, at present assistant librarian of the Wilbur Library of the University of Vermont. Bibliography. Indexes.

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune Bk ■ p8 Ap 25 '54 40w

Christian Century 71:765 Je 23 '54 20w

"An unpretentious volume, very appropriate for school library and family use." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:776 Ap 15 '54 80w

PFEFFER, LEO. Church, state, and freedom. 675p $10 Beacon press

261.7 Church and state in the U. S. Religious liberty 53-6617

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This is the most authoritative constitutional history of America's experience with the double-faceted principle of religious liberty and separation of government and religion. The author has had a distinguished career as counsel in many of the leading cases which define the law of the land. His is the first full-scale treatment by a legal scholar." L. W. Levy

+ Am Hist R 59:386 Ja '54 500w

"Students of political theory and law, as well as the general reader, will find this a well-written and skilfully organized volume which illuminates what is becoming once more an increasingly acute issue in American politics and thought." M. Q. Sibley

+ Am Pol Sci R 48:556 Je '54 900w

"This book is one of an increasing number of works dealing primarily with the present situation. . . . The interest and importance of this volume lie in the person of its author. Dr. Pfeffer is a constitutional lawyer who has appeared before our courts in cases where the issue has been tried—in particular the Supreme Court of the United States. His work is heavily documented, and fortunately we may trust him to have cited the relevant and most important sources. To this extent the book may be accepted as probably more definite than any of its many predecessors." W. L. Sperry

+ Ann Am Acad 291:188 Ja '54 350w

Reviewed by Kent Bush

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 21 '54 600w

"Mr. Pfeffer is to be commended not only for his close analyses of legal issues but also for the wealth of purely factual material that he has assembled. Indeed, viewed strictly as a law book, Church, State and Freedom is somewhat uneven. It contains not only detailed discussion of legal theory, but also equally detailed descriptions of the events that led the parties to take to the courts. Many of these little histories, well told in Mr. Pfeffer's concise prose, make exciting reading—Catholics tarred and feathered for refusing to read the King James version of the Bible, the struggle in a small Cincinnati suburb over incorporation of a parochial school in the public school system, the recent Melish controversy, and so forth. These stories serve to place the legal issues in a very real background and to give the reader a firm basis for drawing his own conclusions on the very difficult issues that Mr. Pfeffer has illumined." Shad Polier

+ Columbia Law R 54:1168 N '54 1750w

"An extensive treatment of the relationship between State and Church in the United States. Prepared by a lawyer, it is strongest in its analysis of the constitutional issue and its presentation of case material; less satisfactory in its coverage of the historical and philosophical aspects of the problem."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:675 Jl '54 40w

Reviewed by R. V. Holt

Hibbert J 52:198 Ja '54 200w

"To commend Mr. Pfeffer for his admirable and useful work is not to suggest that his study has the dispassionate balance of a book of reference. It has more of the qualities of a lawyer's brief than of a legal treatise and must therefore, for its generalities, be used with caution. It will seem to some readers, even to some who share Mr. Pfeffer's secularist convictions, that history does not as clearly compel his reading of the First Amendment as he believes that it does. . . . Mr. Pfeffer's discussion of the effectiveness of the Fourteenth Amendment in extending to the states the nation's disability to aid religion seems particularly unsatisfactory. . . . These disagreements with some of Mr. Pfeffer's hopeful pre-suppositions do not serve to weaken my conviction that his vigorous and learned work is an important contribution to contemporary studies of church and state." M. D. Howe

+ Pol Sci Q 69:127 Mr '54 900w

"Dr. Pfeffer presents the facts and arguments impartially, but shows plainly he believes in complete separation of church and state. . . . As a whole, the work is a sober outline of the casuistical problems in preserving religious freedom by divorcing church and state."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:439 D '53 250w

PHELPS, GILBERT. Heart in the desert. 312p $3.75 Day

54-5886

A British critic is asked to write the biography of his lifelong friend Martin Crystal, a novelist. As the story builds up it becomes much an autobiography as it is the proposed biography. In the end the man who had taken everything which Martin Crystal had wanted in life is shown up in his true character. Published in England, in a different version, as The Dry Stone.

Booklist 50:333; 342 My 1 '54

"The prose that Mr. Phelps has adopted for his critic is, at times, almost a parody of the leaden prose of the little magazines. He has hit on a marvelously adroit device for keeping his story in focus: he has the critic include patches from his subject's novels which deal with the same material as the biography. Most of these are charmingly written. Their grace and understanding act as an ironic counterpoise to the fulmination of the critic. In fact, they make one wish that Mr. Phelps had chosen to tell the story of the critic through the eyes of the novelist." D. I. Segal

Commonweal 60:279 Je 18 '54 390w

"A first novel, which is a precise transcription of the literary world from which it derives and which affords an indirect and caustic entertainment."

+ Kirkus 22:167 Mr 1 '54 170w

"Highly recommended for all public library collections." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:860 My 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 5 4 '53 120w

Reviewed by Antonia White

New Statesman ■ Nation 46:326 5 19 '53 300w

"Gilbert Phelps is an English literary man who writes for the B. B. C. His novel lacks the fascination of being a roman à clef. But the leading characters plainly bear some relation to the desiccated English intellectuals who looked down their noses at D. H. Lawrence and Lawrence himself. . . . If Mr. Phelps had been able to add sheen and sparkle to his novel it would have been absolutely first rate. Even as it stands it has point and substance. Nobody interested in contemporary England should miss it." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Times p26 My 16 '54 360w

"There have been many secretive, malicious, and envious villains in recent fiction, but surely few of them can equal in villainy this masterly creation of the unnamed biographer, companion, critic, and presumptive murderer of his only friend."

+ Sat R 37:34 My 22 '54 600w

"Mr. Phelps's first novel introduces us to a writer who combines tenderness with robust good sense, and never hesitates to say what he means for fear that his hearers may laugh at him." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p282 S 11 '53 130w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p5C J1 4 '54 390w

Times [London] Lit Sup p577 S 11 '53 120w

PHELPS, MRS MARGARET (NELSON). Jaro and the golden colt; il. by Evelyn Copelman. 168p $2.75 Macrae Smith co.

54-7151

Story of a Hopi Indian boy who was captured by a member of Coronado's army some four hundred years ago. After his escape the boy was able to help his tribe when the Spaniards came their way. For ages eight to twelve.

"An historical story, thoroughly readable and of some originality." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:249 Ag '54 90w

Kirkus 22:154 Mr 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:706 Ap 15 '54 20w

"Margaret Phelps spins one of her best colorful, informative tales of our Southwest. . . Evelyn Copelman's pen-and-ink drawings point up the simple strength of the Hopi peoples, and the book, as a whole, vividly contrasts primitive and Western cultures. It's a delightful dose of history, to boot." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p20 Je 13 '54 170w

PHILADELPHIA ART ALLIANCE. Philadelphia architecture in the nineteenth century. See White, T. B., ed.

PHILBROOK, CLEMENT E. Magic bat; decorations by Clifford N. Geary. 167p $2.50 Macmillan (N Y)

54-8603

"This is a story of Pony League baseball. The Pony League, beginning where the Little League leaves off, takes in 13-15-year-olds. The book would appeal, however, to boys of 10-12 or even younger." Library J

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 9 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:118 F 15 '54 70w

"There is a good understanding of boys, with lots of rivalry between gangs and enough humor and character development to make a good story. Recommended." M. C. Skinner

+ Library J 79:786 Ap 15 '54 40w

"The story is told in the first person, in a convincing vernacular which suggests that learning the lingo is as much a part of baseball as learning the rules." David Dempsey

N Y Times p16 J1 18 '54 140w

PHILBROOK, ELIZABETH. Hobo hill; il. by Don Freeman. 96p $2.50 Viking

54-9317

A group of young boys are accustomed to play on a wooded hill-top outside of their home town. When the hill is threatened with destruction they do what they can to save it and with the help of Hobo Bill they succeed.

Kirkus 22:114 F 15 '54 70w

"Of moderate length and with much conversation, it should appeal to the reluctant reader. Recommended for advanced fourth-sixth grades." F. M. Hensley

+ Library J 79:1064 Je 1 '54 90w

"The slight story is well told, and the boys with all their slang and bad grammar are reported more faithfully than usual. The pictures are very amusing." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 11 '54 230w

"Despite occasional bookish speeches in this sketchy tale, the characterizations are good, and the reader catches a glimpse of the sense of poetry that Nature can touch off in a boy. Don Freeman's clever drawings help round out the story." Rose Friedman

+ — N Y Times p14 My 30 '54 180w

PHILIPS, JUDSON PENTECOST (HUGH PENTECOST, pseud). Lieutenant Pascal's tastes in homicides. 245p $2.50 Dodd

54-5579

Three short detective stories: The murder machine; Eager victim; Murder in the dark.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ja 31 '54 90w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 F 21 '54 140w

"A collection of three novelettes faintly disappointing from such a highly skilled practitioner as Hugh Pentecost. . . But each novelette brings the dividend of a well-studied and off-trail background—quarrying, radio and the uncut diamond business—and its agreeable to read a set of mystery stories which seem compressed rather than padded in length." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p15 F 7 '54 90w

"There's a good twist to each story. The backgrounds are excellent, and—since Pentecost wrote them—all are done with simplicity and high competence." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 31 '54 60w

"Well-knit and adroit narratives are fine specimens of genre. Good hunting." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:34 Mr 27 '54 20w

PHILLIPS, ARTHUR, and others. Survey of African marriage and family life; published for the International African institute. 462p $9 Oxford

301.42 Marriage. Family

54-4454

"Three English experts on East Africa have joined together in producing this book wherein data on 77 tribes, 68 of them under British control, are compiled for purposes of comparison and synthesis. Although the survey was sponsored by two international bodies, one of them religious, little account is taken of 'foreign' anthropological and legal material, and none at all of African contributions to the subject. Religion, all through the book, remains the major consideration." Am Soc R

"Mair had a difficult assignment. . . Some of her statements are debatable, for example about the attitude of Africans toward sexual intercourse, and she does not distinguish clearly enough between the several forms of polygynous family in Southern Africa. But on the whole she has produced an accurate and able survey that will serve admirably as a basis for more detailed comparisons, both regional and topical, and her few pages of introduction and conclusion are masterly achievements in generalization. Most anthropologists concerned with Africa are familiar enough with the data brought together by Mair. They are less likely to be as well informed about the two other aspects of modern marriage dealt with in the book." I. Schapera

+ — Am Anthropol 56:499 Je '54 800w

"The account of divergent church policies, by the missionary member of the team makes fascinating reading, but the sociologist will miss a study of the relations between policies and social realities, both at home and in Africa." J. L. Comhaire

+ — Am Soc R 19:107 F '54 250w

PHILLIPS, ARTHUR—Continued

Reviewed by Maurice Freedman

New Statesman & Nation 45:646 My 30 '53 360w

"In general, this in an impartial, scholarly and very readable survey. Those interested in the moral nature of our political problems would do well to consult it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p618 S 25 '53 1600w

PHILLIPS, JOHN BERTRAM. Plain Christianity, and other broadcast talks. 87p $1.65 Macmillan (N Y)

252 Radio and television sermons 54-8822

The texts of nine radio sermons. The central purpose is to show how the Christian faith works in the lives of the average Christians today.

Christian Century 71:764 Je 23 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:191 Mr 15 '54 120w

"Heartily recommended for all types of libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 79:548 Mr 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by W. G. Robinson

+ Manchester Guardian p10 Mr 3 '54 150w

PICK, ROBERT. Escape of Socrates. 326p $3.95 Knopf

Socrates—Fiction 53-9480

A historical novel based on the life and times of Socrates.

Booklist 51:41 S 15 '54

Reviewed by E. S. Plisko

Christian Science Monitor p7 O 21 '54 850w

"For all its pertinence, it is a dull and wordy paraphrase of this period and of doubtful interest to the general market which looks for more popular virtues in historical fiction."

Kirkus 22:498 Ag 1 '54 210w

"Mr. Pick, a well-known writer of Austrian birth, has molded the facts, characters and conversations in the works of Plato into fiction of considerable intellectual appeal. A few new scenes and personages have been introduced but they in no sense do injustice to the original material. The Socratic irony comes through especially well. Recommended for larger fiction collections." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:1590 S 15 '54 80w

"A provocative book, despite a rather pedantic narrative." Stanley Cooperman

Nation 179:218 S 11 '54 40w

"This novel of Robert Pick, The Escape of Socrates, is an early and brilliant essay in our return to the Greeks. Written in the current vernacular of the American street, it is yet as profoundly Greek as the Phaedo." Alvin Johnson

+ New Repub 131:18 S 6 '54 600w

"Mr. Pick's Athens is at least as real as Athens has ever been made in fiction and the story is moving, considered merely as a story realistically told. One can, however, hardly escape assuming that it is for the moral that the tale is told, though we may still be less than sure just how that moral is to be applied or to whom it is applicable." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 19 '54 800w

"The book adds little to Plato. But it does present Socrates as perhaps the most delightful and charming of martyrs—and it may find him fresh friends whom the name of Plato would frighten. Any reader who has not already encountered Socrates in conversation with his friends must be grateful to a book that first introduces him to that company. He should be still more grateful if it leads him on to the drama of the 'Apology,' the tragedy of the 'Crito' and the comedy of some of the earlier dialogues." Basil Davenport

+ N Y Times p31 S 12 '54 420w

"Telling this story, Mr. Pick has taken his stand on solid ground; but this ground is more than solid, for it can—without exaggeration—be described as hallowed. . . I cannot believe that Mr. Pick had enough of his own to say to us regarding Socrates to justify the writing of this book. Even if he wished not to tamper with the classic accounts of the trial and the last days, he could have clarified the political background of the trial, he could have clarified and dramatized the motives of Socrates's accusers; but these things he has not done. . . There is nothing to add to this regretful report, unless it is to say that the anticipation with which I took up this book and the disappointment with which I put it down would both have been less keen if I had come to 'The Escape of Socrates' with less respect for its author." B. R. Redman

— Sat R 37:40 S 11 '54 700w

Time 64:105 S 27 '54 80w

PICK, ROBERT, ed. German stories and tales.

371p $3.95 Knopf

Short stories—Collections

53-9481

Contents: Youth, beautiful youth, by Hermann Hesse; Kannitverstan, by J. P. Hebel; An episode in the life of the Marshal de Bas-sompierre, by Hugo von Hofmannsthal; Lukardis, by Jakob Wassermann; Krambambuli, by Marie von Ebner-Eschenbach; Cardiac suture, by Ernst Weiss; The message that failed, by Moritz Heimann; Rock crystal, by Adalbert Stifter; The bachelor's death, by Arthur Schnitzler; Unexpected reunion, by J. P. Hebel; Mona Lisa, by Alexander Lernet-Holenia; The picnic of Mores the cat, by Clemens Brentano; Zerline, the old servant girl, by Hermann Broch; The friend in the closet, by Hermann Kesten; The metamorphosis, by Franz Kafka; A little legend of the dance, by Gottfried Keller; Death in Venice, by Thomas Mann; The hussar, by J. P. Hebel.

Booklist 50:279 Mr 15 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:155 My '54 250w

Kirkus 21:796 D 15 '53 170w

"The translations are generally good and preserve the 'feel' of the original. Because of the great variety all readers will find something which appeals to them. Recommended for larger public and educational libraries, especially with interest in foreign literature in translation." M. G. A. Bernt

+ Library J 79:455 Mr 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 14 '54 50w

"In the enormous task of giving us 'good reading' from five or six generations of German story-tellers, Robert Pick has succeeded admirably. He has resisted the temptation of selecting historically 'representative' stories—which often don't reach today's readers—and of presenting nothing but dazzling literary novelties. Like many successes, his is the result of pioneering, patience and, finally, an alert compromise." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 14 '53 550w

"In a short, direct introduction to this volume, Mr. Pick announces that his chief purpose in assembling these stories was to provide good reading. It is a pleasure to be able to say that he has been entirely successful."

+ New Yorker 30:116 F 27 '54 100w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 37:20 F 20 '54 450w

PIEPER, JOSEF. End of time; a meditation on the philosophy of history; tr. by Michael Bullock. 157p $2.75 Pantheon bks.

901 History—Philosophy. Philosophy and religion 54-9501

"It is all about time and the end of it; all about eternity, and its relation to the end of time. Eternity is conceived of as something following and completing time and the relationship between them such that we cannot think of our place in time and of our use of it, apart from the end of time, which is eternity. This conception is made not a matter of what ought to be but a matter of what actually is. Nobody, it is contended, can make heads or tails of temporal existence without orienting his mortal life with reference to eternity." (N Y Times) Index.

"In spite of Dr. Pieper's care to justify calling these meditations philosophical, one wonders whether they are not really theological—whether, in fact, Dr. Pieper does not too much blur the distinction between philosophy and theology." Benjamin Hunt

Cath World 180:155 N '54 250w

"This is a book as recondite as it is small." T. V. Smith

+ N Y Times p38 S 26 '54 450w

"Dr. Pieper does not lighten his task by evading issues or seeking for a facile answer, and he is careful to avoid 'the overheated interest in eschatological questions' which has before now served to discredit the Christian approach to the question. He faces the difficulties soberly, and it is a pity that the clarity of his style is sometimes lost in the translation, and, similarly, the quiet irony of the original. A calm approach not only enables the question to be seen, it reveals at once the difficulty of rejecting out of hand the Christian basis for a philosophy of history."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Je 25 '54 1000w

PIEPER, JOSEF. Fortitude, and Temperance; tr. by Daniel F. Coogan. 128p $2.75 Pantheon bks.

179.6 Fortitude, Temperance 53-9948

Essays on two of the cardinal virtues by a German Thomist philosopher

Cath World 179:240 Je '54 120w

"His writing combines clarity and profundity to a most unusual extent, and may be welcomed whatever the reader's religious convictions, or lack of them." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ap 11 '54 160w

"Josef Pieper has several advantages in writing philosophy. He has the ability to think closely and deeply on the great things of man and the universe. He has a rich background for the work. . . . As a result he can meet our world and our problems—in his view, our now terrifying world and terrifying problems—with a simplicity and candor and relevance that are indeed rare. Added to these qualities is a style which is said to be one of the finest prose styles in German today. The style is lucid and precise, and at the same time delicate and nice." L. R. Ward

+ Commonweal 60:154 My 14 '54 480w

PIERCE, HARRY HUBERT. Railroads of New York; a study of government aid, 1826-1875. 208p maps $3 Harvard univ. press

385.13 Railroads—New York (state). Railroads and state 52-5404

"The book is essentially a study of the part played by the state and its municipalities in financing the construction of New York railroads. It has been my objective to tell when, why, how, in what amount, and with what success these two branches of government contributed to the development of the railroad system of the state. In pursuit of this objective, I examined wherever possible all relevant private as well as public sources of information. Railroad companies deserve high praise for making their materials available to scholars. This industry has led all others in depositing and opening their records." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"This book is carefully written and amply supplied with excellent maps, pertinent statistics, and a workable bibliography and index. At times it would have been helpful in the text to have the countless predecessor companies identified with the present successor systems; but this is a detail. In general the study is a model of clarity, the style varied and eminently readable. Railroads of New York is a first-rate piece of work." R. C. Overton

+ Am Hist R 59:951 Jl '54 400w

"Unfortunately, the publisher has removed all footnotes to the end of the book. This practice distracts and wearies the reader and is wholly unsuitable in the presentation of scholarly work." J. T. Lambie

J Pol Econ 62:371 Ag '54 600w

"The Pierce study is highly specific and factual, and yet out of it emerges a more favorable judgment of railroad promoters and speculators than is usually current." R. E. Riegel

+ Pol Sci Q 69:300 Je '54 260w

"Based on careful examination of municipal and corporation records, this study of government aid is an almost unique investigation of how towns made an important contribution to the economic progress of their state and will be especially useful to scholars."

+ U S Quarterly Bk 10:213 Je '54 240w

PIKE, JAMES ALBERT. If you marry outside your faith; counsel on mixed marriages. 191p $2.50 Harper

301.45 [392.5] Marriage, Mixed 54-8983

"Dean Pike of the Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York has had much experience in counselling, and has talked to a great number of people about marriage, before, during and after. The points he makes are illustrated by descriptions of actual cases with which Dean Pike has had to deal. In discussing the problems inherent in Protestant-Catholic and Jewish-Christian marriages and in marriages between people of different Protestant denominations and between people who differ in the degree of their religious conviction, the author pleads for a frank and open-minded discussion of the issues involved before marriage and for a solution based on mutual consideration of the place of religion in their lives and in their family life." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 51:56 O 1 '54

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 3 '54 50w

"A very helpful book for those facing this problem and for those who would counsel others."

+ Kirkus 22:630 S 1 '54 180w

PINKERTON, KATHRENE SUTHERLAND (GEDNEY) (MRS R. E. PINKERTON). Peddler's crew. 243p $3 Harcourt

54-5155

A former actor takes his teen-aged son and daughter as crew on his sea-going store. Together they ply the inland waters of British Columbia, and come to like the life. Then comes a chance for the daughter to go to Hollywood, and Royal has to make the first important decision of her life.

Booklist 51:153 D 1 '54

"The excitement of their life, the role of the Argosy in this fast growing country, and Royal's decision between the stage and the sea provide an absorbing story." A. B. McG.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p38 N 14 '54 50w

"The cast-register sailors on the Argosy get to know and admire these independent, funny, brave people, and are rather wonderful, too, but don't know it. Nor do I know where one could have a finer trip for three dollars than this voyage of the Argosy, for 'Peddler's Crew' sails deep into the human heart as well as amid magnificent scenery." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 11 '54 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:487 Ag 1 '54 150w

"It is a long, leisurely story, full of the exact details of a business project plus the rich background of a beautiful, wild country, that have endeared many of Mrs. Pinkerton's books to young people over twelve. . . . It is a fine book for girls, that brings alive the varied beauty of the coast of British Columbia, and quietly

PINKERTON, K. S. G.—Continued
makes one respect the many skills needed for living either on its lonely fjords or its often dangerous waters." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p22
N 14 '54 330w

PINKERTON, ROBERT EUGENE. First overland mail; il. by Paul Lantz. (Landmark bks) 185p $1.50 Random house; to schools and school libs only $1.68 Hale, E.M.

383 Postal service—Juvenile literature.
Overland journeys to the Pacific. Butterfield, John 53-6259

"A narrative history of John Butterfield's line of stagecoaches that took passengers and mail across our continent 'on the swiftest journey horses have ever provided.' . . . Here are the men—Butterfield, his son, and their helpers—and their problems, from Apaches to station building and relay timing, in an exciting segment of our history that had its share of blood and thunder and the shaping of American ideals." (Kirkus) For grades 5-8.

Booklist 50:244 F 15 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p59 N 15 '53
40w

Kirkus 21:537 Ag 15 '53 70w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr
Library J 78:1857 O 15 '53 40w

"An unusual book for Western fans." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p28 F 14 '54 60w

Wis Lib Bul 50:79 Mr '54

PINKHAM, LUCILE. William III and the respectable revolution; the part played by William of Orange in the Revolution of 1688. 272p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

942.067 William III, king of Great Britain.
Great Britain—History—Revolution of 1688
54-5022

"An interpretation of the part played by William of Orange in the Revolution of 1688 which makes extensive use of the recently published correspondence of William III and Hans William Bentinck." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

"An important study, ably presented; will have to be considered by all who deal with the subject. Larger and scholarly libraries." Dorothy Sinclair

+ Library J 79:1223 Je 15 '54 160w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 29
'54 80w

PINNER, ERNA. Curious creatures; il. by [the author]. 256p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 54-32

An English artist-zoologist describes in pictures and text some of the world's strangest animals. Index.

"To have freshness, a new book in this heavily worked category needs some peculiar distinction. Erna Pinner's 'Curious Creatures' has one. If not a great deal of her information is new or the writing style memorable, Erna Pinner does offer a real and delightful novelty. This is her drawings. They are copious and captivating." Alan Devoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 7 '54
380w

"Miss Pinner somewhat overestimates our capacity for wonder in the presence of such things as flightless birds and winged mammals and mate-eating spiders, but since she writes with the enthusiasm of the genuine amateur and draws with considerable style, the result, on the whole, is an engagingly instructive trifle."

+ New Yorker 29:116 F 13 '54 80w

Reviewed by John Pfeiffer
Sat R 37:25 Je 26 '54 50w

PINSON, KOPPEL SHUB. Modern Germany, its history and civilization. 637p $10; text ed $7.50 Macmillan (N Y)

943.08 Germany—Civilization. Germany—History
54-12301

"Author, a Queens College history professor, actually gives us a history of Germany for the last two hundred years. The various epochs e.g. 1871-1914 or 1919-33, are taken up under different aspects such as political and social currents, economic life, intellectual life, etc." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:104 N 1 '54

"Well written and organized, the book makes use of all pertinent sources and gives a rounded picture, rightly stressing the intellectual and ideological movements which played so important a part in Germany. . . . Recommended for all larger public and educational libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:1510 S 1 '54 130w

"Pinson's brilliant multi-causal interpretation is subtly woven around the theme of 'the tragic efforts made by liberalism and democracy to assert themselves in modern German history, and how they have been inundated time and again by the opposing forces of militarism and nationalism.'" F. L. Schuman

+ Nation 179:233 S 18 '54 460w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 S 19 '54
100w

"Recently some of the best minds have applied themselves to this arduous task, among them the Englishman A. J. P. Taylor, whose running commentary is often brilliant though hardly completely satisfactory. Frenchmen, too, often write the worst but also the best books on Germany. Let it be said at once that Pinson's [book] is in many ways the most useful book of them all. It may lack the literary pungency of Taylor, but it is built on a more scholarly and thoroughly documented foundation, although the author's literary vignettes of Heine, Wagner and Nietzsche, Ernst Juenger and Spengler have both charm and depth." W. L. Dorn

+ Sat R 37:14 S 18 '54 1000w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54
700w

PINTO, ORESTE. Friend or foe? 245p $3 Putnam

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Secret service
54-5491

The author of this book was a Dutch counter-intelligence officer whose job was to interrogate the refugees entering England from Nazi-controlled Europe and to distinguish friend from foe. In this volume he recounts seven cases which were more or less puzzling.

Booklist 50:275 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:130 Mr '54 30w

"Pinto has an excellent insight into the nature of the 'confessions' made by accused Russians at their state trials. He is one of the world's experts on interrogation, and he details clearly the manner in which a man's mind may be broken down simply by prolonged and shrewd questioning. It is a diverting account, very different from the usual 'spy' stuff." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 28 '54
400w

"Once opened, this book will not be easily laid aside until the last page is reached. It is informative as well as entertaining and contains a timely exposition of the investigative techniques of the professional." Josephine Ripley

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 29
'54 550w

Kirkus 21:815 D 15 '53 180w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 21 '54
600w

Reviewed by Peter Blake

N Y Times p14 Je 27 '54 350w

"Although one could wish that his powers as a writer were as firm as his convictions, it cannot be denied that most of his stories make very entertaining reading."

+ — New Yorker 30:132 Mr 27 '54 100w

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p471 J1 24 '53 400w

PIONEERING leaders in librarianship; first series; ed. by Emily Miller Danton. (American library pioneers) 202p il $4.25 A.L.A.

920.2 Librarians (53-10258)

"Treats a wide assortment of distinguished persons who played a strong role in developing American libraries and librarianship, in creating new techniques, in evolving new theories, in lifting librarianship from a job to a profession." (Pref) Those included are: Clement Walker Andrews; Sarah B. Askew; Arthur E. Bostwick; Richard Rogers Bowker; Miriam E. Carey; Jennie M. Flexner; James L. Gillis; J. C. M. Hanson; Caroline Maria Hewins; Josephus Nelson Larned; Henry Eduard Legier; Eunice Rockwood Oberly; Ernest Cushing Richardson; Minerva Sanders; Katharine Lucinda Sharp; Elizabeth Putnam Sohler; Mary L. Titcomb; Alice Sarah Tyler. Index.

"Each sketch was written by a different author who, in most cases, knew his subject intimately and affectionately. Helpful as such qualifications might be, they can not substitute for competence in writing biographical sketches. These tributes, composed in highly complimentary terms, may be valued by librarians whose backgrounds will enable them to appreciate the accomplishments of their precursors. It is doubtful, however, that the subjects are convincingly enough delineated to bring recognition of the importance of their contributions to members of other professions. The publication as a whole presents little to praise, although there is a wide disparity of excellence in the sketches. In the main, they exhibit considerable naïveté and contain numerous clichés and nonsequiturs." R. H. Land

Am Hist R 59:1026 J1 '54 300w

"Among the essays—which understandably vary in quality—it would be difficult to praise too highly, for incisiveness, interest and information, Milton J. Ferguson on Bowker, Theodora R. Brewitt on Gillis, Sidney Ditzion on Larned, and Lewis C. Branscomb on Richardson. It is, however, an unhappy fact that, in this collection of biographical sketches, all the writers do not, as the editor asserts, 'succeed in presenting a person.'" J. A. Boromé

+ — Library Q 24:410 O '54 850w

PIPER, PETER, pseud. See Lang, T.

PISCATOR, MRS ERWIN. See Ley-Piscator, M. von C.

PITTSBURGH. UNIVERSITY. LIBRARY.

Darlington memorial library. George Mercer papers relating to the Ohio company of Virginia; compiled and edited by Lois Mulkearn. 731p il maps $10 Univ. of Pittsburgh press

977 Ohio company, 1747-1779. Ohio valley—History 53-5387

"Of historic interest, this scholarly volume presents annotated, original documents of the first organized effort to establish permanent English settlements west of the Allegheny mountains. Illustrations. Chronology of communications, bibliography, index." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:236 J1 '54 30w

"An impressive and informative volume." L. H. Butterfield

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 22 '54 1250w

"The letters, journals, and other documents brought together in this volume furnish a wealth of information on the operations of the Ohio Company and its agents and on the intense rivalry for trade and land among the various human elements on the colonial Western frontier. In addition the editor's 'Commentary on the Case of the Ohio Company' and her annotations are outstanding features of the book. They reveal a deep understanding of the early trans-Alleghany West and scholarship of the highest order." J. F. Hopkins

+ Sat R 37:39 S 16 '54 270w

PLACE, IRENE MAGDALINE (GLAZIK), and STRONY, MADELINE S. Road to secretarial success. 371p $3.95 McGraw

651.02 Secretaries, Private 53-11488

"Two experienced teachers outline in detail the way to progress on the job. Photographs, drawings, charts. Check lists, bibliography, index." Bookmark

Booklist 51:7 S 1 '54

Bookmark 13:179 My '54 20w

"This is not a handbook for secretaries, a reference tool of right and wrong procedures. Rather it is a top-level vocational book, written by two people who see this as a career, not a stopgap. . . It should be must reading for all secretaries in the making, and an eye-opener for many who supervise office operation, and for employers as well."

+ Kirkus 22:175 Mr 1 '54 130w

PLACE, MARIAN TEMPLETON (DALE WHITE, pseud). Johnny Cake mine; il. by Richard Bennett. 222p $2.75 Viking

54-8234

In the summer of 1873 Jim Norton and his cousin went to visit their uncle in Montana Territory. There Jim discovered silver. Claim jumping, robbery, and leaking mine shafts, were some of the difficulties they had to meet before order descended on the Johnny Cake mine. For ages twelve to sixteen.

Booklist 50:346 My 1 '54

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 90w

Horn Bk 30:185 Je '54 120w

Kirkus 22:120 F 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by M. K. Walraven

Library J 79:1066 Je 1 '54 80w

"It is interesting that this very manly tale, with its wealth of exact detail about silver mining, should be written by a woman. The author is a widely traveled journalist now living in Montana, where she found such a mountain as the one in her story." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 13 '54 230w

"The story is particularly good for its detailed, authentic account of silver mining and the colorful picture of a silver settlement. Action is briskly paced, and the exhilarating atmosphere of mining camp life comes across to the reader. Characterization is a bit flat, though, and the chief bad man is a stock character." Howard Boston

+ — N Y Times p28 My 16 '54 110w

"Boys who are interested in the Old West will strike it rich if they dig into 'The Johnny Cake Mine.'" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 16 '54 50w

PLAMENATZ, JOHN PETROV. German Marxism and Russian communism. 356p $4.25 Longmans

335.4 Communism—Germany. Communism—Russia 54-3188

"The author has tried to be as precise as he could in explaining exactly what he thinks is false about Marxism, and why, nevertheless, it is important, not merely historically as having inspired political action, but in itself as a social theory. This attempt has obliged him to discuss some of the most difficult and fundamental problems that concern the social theorist. The second part of the book describes how Russian Communist theories emerged out of Marxism." (Publisher's note) Index.

PLAMENATZ, J. P.—Continued

"The work by Mr. John Plamenatz of Oxford comes as a breath of fresh air into the stale vaporings of ignorant denunciation." James Eayrs

+ Canadian Forum 34:116 Ag '54 800w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 D 14 '54 600w

Foreign Affairs 33:156 O '54 110w

"It may seem unlikely that anyone should write at this time of day a book about Marxism which is both new and sensible; but Mr. Plamenatz has done it. . . . Though this is a good book, it is not the book that Mr. Plamenatz set out to write, if his title is any guide. The first and more important part is about Marx, not about German Marxism. But Marx cannot be treated as a purely German thinker even in his methods." A. J. P. Taylor

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:702 My 29 '54 2150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p353 Je 4 '54 1300w

PLANTY, EARL GERALD, and FREESTON, J. THOMAS. Developing management ability; 600 questions and answers [foreword by Philip B. Hofmann]. 447p $7 Ronald

658.386 Employment management 54-7651

In their Preface the authors state: "This book is a direct outgrowth of several thousand questions on training and management development which we have been asked over the past four years. . . . It soon became obvious to us that many questions kept recurring, that the majority of them had to do with specific problems, and that these problems affected all sorts of business enterprises. What we have done here is to make a careful selection of these repeatedly asked questions and provide practical-minded, self-help answers that embody both the ideas and practices most common among successful training men today, plus the working techniques we have evolved from our experiences in Johnson & Johnson and its affiliated companies."

Booklist 50:446 Jl 15 '54

Chem & Eng N 32:2423 Je 14 '54 10w

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker

Library J 79:1318 Jl '54 140w

PLENN, MRS DORIS TROUTMAN. Green song; il. by Paul Galdone. 126p $2.50 McKay 54-9468

Fantasy for children about a little green tree frog from Puerto Rico. It tells of his adventures at home and in New York, where he was presented with the key to the city, after landing from a plane.

"Pleasant reading, this shoots its gentle barbs at city life but should for its best be taken as good imagination."

+ Kirkus 22:152 Mr 1 '54 110w

"Although the quality sags in just one or two places, Pepe's adventures will appeal to discriminating readers in third to fifth grades and to a read-aloud audience as well. The story has the added value of presenting another culture with sensitive appreciation." M. H. Edmonds

+ Library J 79:1238 Je 15 '54 70w

"All this we found refreshing. Children will love Pepe's city adventures, especially his trip to the zoo. The theme of the 'green song' of these tiny creatures and its magic powers is cleverly carried out."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p20 My 16 '54 140w

PLIEVIER, THEODOR. Moscow [tr. by Stuart O. Hood]. 318p $3.95 Doubleday

54-5712

A novel which describes the course of events on the Moscow front from the German invasion of Russia in June, 1941, to the turn in the tide of battle in the winter of that year.

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 14 '54 400w

"One of the most thoughtful and most successful novels to come out of the last world war. Certainly it stands above anything yet produced in this country and, by comparison, makes the tough and profane stories of some American veterans seem to have been written about battles that were never analyzed and men who were never understood." J. A. Lynch

+ Commonweal 59:652 Ap 2 '54 470w

Kirkus 22:13 Ja 1 '54 170w

"A grim story, but well worth reading. Translation by Stuart Hood is adequate. Recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 79:452 Mr 1 '54 110w

"The constantly shifting viewpoints are excellently managed." Norman Shrapnel

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 6 '53 90w

"The story starts with conviction and quiet authority. . . . With the passing of H-hour, the novel begins to fall apart. Its inhabitants follow the carefully charted routes that have been marked for them, yet they possess little life of their own. . . . I am afraid that 'Moscow,' despite its compassionate intentions speaks more of bullets than of wounds." Fred-eric Morton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Mr 7 '54 800w

"If 'Moscow' does not quite come up to the standards of 'Stalingrad' it is nevertheless a powerful book. Here is a man who has something to say and says it well—with the bitter passion known only to those betrayed by their own illusions." J. H. Lichtblau

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 7 '54 450w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 30:156 Ap 24 '54 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 2 '54 250w

"Moscow would be called, I suppose, a documentary novel. I suppose, too, that is what it is. Yet in one way the documentary aspect of the work seems to me to matter less than its imaginative insight into the nature of war, today's or yesterday's. This is an unrheterical book, firmly disciplined in narrative power, but shattering in its illustration of the error and irresponsibility which go with the strategic and tactical direction of battle. . . . Allow for something at least of the distortion of German perspective which springs from Germany's defeat, and this is an overwhelmingly truthful book. It appears to have been well translated, though the German style of transliteration of Russian names may now and then confuse the reader." R. D. Charques

+ Spec p492 O 30 '53 500w

"Moscow, no novel in the ordinary sense of plot and character, is a stunning documentary of victory, defeat, brutality and horror."

+ Time 63:102 Mr 8 '54 800w

"Moscow is such a patchwork of communications, orders of the day, German staff conferences, Soviet staff conferences, military cross-talk between commissars, generals, peasants and refugees, that its effect is simply that of a series of rather badly cut news-reels. A novel requires some kind of human development, but Herr Plievier is never long enough with any of his characters for even their names to become familiar."

Times [London] Lit Sup p813 D 18 '53 120w

PLOMER, WILLIAM CHARLES FRANKLYN Museum pieces. 282p $3.50 Noonday

[53-40275]

"The museum pieces are Toby d'Arfey and his mother, Susannah Mountfaucn, symbols of an easier and a more dignified way of life, lingering on into the era of barrage balloons and prefabricated houses. Mr. Plomer records the financial decline and at last the deaths of Toby and his mother in a series of delightful comic incidents which at times read less like a novel than like reminiscences of some period immensely remote in feeling, though not in time." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 180:231 D '54 250w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 21 '54 550w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 26 '53 120w

"The best quality of Museum Pieces is a rich but unassuming charm that gently mocks at all pretentiousness. Comparisons with Evelyn Waugh and Henry Green come easily to mind—they are suggested on the dust jacket—but Museum Pieces, while it should be most appreciated by readers of Waugh and Green, is more casual, warm, and human than the comparable work of those intense artists." J. F. Sullivan

+ Commonweal 61:193 N 19 '54 1100w

"The 'museum pieces' who inhabit Mr. Plomer's novel are ingratiating indeed, and engage the sympathy with their gallantry and charm in facing a world in which they are out of date."

+ Kirkus 22:596 S 1 '54 180w

"This novel is one of the most readable of the modern customs-and-manners stories of the British scene and is recommended for general purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:2330 D 1 '54 150w

"A distinguished piece of writing, but I think—considering its author's powers—wanting in intensity." Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 5 '52 130w

"A beautiful piece of tragi-comedy: its echoes will remain long after more pretentious fiction is forgotten. . . It takes us about fifty pages to accept Toby and his mother. After that, Mr. Plomer's book becomes a triumph. It is witty, stylish, supremely entertaining and it has a wonderfully elegiac centre." John Raymond

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:327 S 20 '52 370w

"The odd thing is that with this almost standardized equipment Mr. Plomer has succeeded in making his characters highly individual. Beyond her snobbery, Mrs. Mount-faucon has a rueful gaiety nourished by a warm heart, while her relationship with Toby is far from the stereotyped silver cord. . . 'Museum Pieces' is full of quiet fun and the courage of those who grow older and older and more desperate." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p14 N 7 '54 550w

"William Plomer's first novel, 'Turbott Wolfe,' appeared nearly thirty years ago in London, and yet 'Museum Pieces' is only his third novel to appear in the United States. This is a pity, for he is a remarkably able novelist: intelligent, witty, with a true sense of style, and possessing in real measure Meredith's comic spirit." H. F. West

+ N Y Times p5 O 24 '54 460w

"A well-contrived British comedy of manners . . . The plot is a sound Trollopean affair with a surprise at the end, and the writing is pleasantly direct."

+ New Yorker 30:237 D 4 '54 90w

"Here is pleasant flippancy balanced with an acute apprehension of life, in a novel that is tonic, entertaining and does not leave the reader empty. American readers will thank E. M. Forster for his plug for Plomer." A. C.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 28 '54 420w

"Very deft, often witty novel." J. W. Krutch
+ Sat R 37:20 N 13 '54 470w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques
Spec p310 S 5 '52 160w

"An expertly fashioned literary paradox."
+ Time 64:107 N 1 '54 170w

"Mr. Plomer's skill and tact are such that his comedy never for a moment obscures his serious view of Toby d'Arfey's life as 'a joke made on the scaffold by a man about to be put to death as a punishment not for what he has done or not done but for what he is.'" + Times [London] Lit Sup p593 S 12 '52 450w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 44:318 winter '55 110w

POATS, RUTHERFORD M. Decision in Korea. with an introd. by George Fielding Eliot. 340p $4.75 McBride co.

951.9 Korean war, 1950- 54-7378

An eye-witness account of the Korean war by a United press war correspondent, head of its Japanese bureau. Index.

Booklist 50:415 J1 1 '54

Reviewed by Walter Simmons
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 23 '54 300w

"The facts of the war as capably chronicled by Mr. Poats do not bear out the theory that the war could have been won in the 'total victory' sense. For the author makes amply clear that there never was in Korea adequate United Nations military power to push the Chinese Reds out of the peninsula." G. W. Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 26 '54 850w

"While the publisher's blurb calls this a definitive history, the author, head of the Japan bureau of the United Press, more modestly, and properly, disavows the claim. It is, as he says, 'a reporter's survey' of the war from its beginning through the first half year of the armistice; a useful, unheated, tentative assessment."

+ Foreign Affairs 33:169 O '54 60w

Reviewed by H. P. Linton
Library J 79:1055 Je 1 '54 120w

PODENDORF, ILLA. True book of insects; il. by Chauncey Maltman. 47p $2 Childrens press

595.7 Insects—Juvenile literature 54-11857

A beginner's book about insects: butterflies; crickets; ants; bees; June bugs; moths; and others; showing their various stages of development in pictures and simple text.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 28 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:482 Ag 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by Jeanne Massey
N Y Times pt2 p38 N 14 '54 20w

PODENDORF, ILLA. True book of pebbles and shells; pictures by Mary Gehr. 47p $2 Childrens press

594 Shells—Juvenile literature 54-8739

"Collecting pebbles and shells is very popular with 6-9-year-olds. Here is a guide book they can read themselves—the text is well organized and easily understood, with enough information for simple identification." Library J

Booklist 50:328 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 22:231 Ap 1 '54 90w

"Beautiful format, very attractive ink drawings with color wash by Mary Gehr. Large, clear type. Sturdy binding. Recommended especially for nature collections." Anne Jackson

+ Library J 79:1063 Je 1 '54 80w

"A splendid reference to take along for a seashore vacation." Jeanne Massey
+ N Y Times p20 J1 25 '54 30w

PODENDORF, ILLA. True book of science experiments; pictures by Mary Salem. 45p $2 Childrens press

507.2 Science—Juvenile literature 54-11859

"Easy-to-do experiments demonstrating elementary facts about air, magnets, gravity,

PODENDORF, ILLA—Continued

water, sound, heat, and cold are presented in simple text and attractive, meaningful pictures. Fun and informative for primary grades." Booklist

Booklist 51:116 N 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 28 '54
30w

Kirkus 22:482 Ag 1 '54 60w

"Recommended for school libraries for their kindergarten and primary groups." H. E. Walker

+ Library J 79:2492 D 15 '54 90w

"The 'True Book of Science Experiments' offers over a dozen intriguing experiments—based on the properties of air, magnets, gravity, etc.—that happily can be performed without adult help." Jeanne Massey

+ N Y Times pt2 p38 N 14 '54 20w

PODENDORF, ILLA. True book of trees; il. by Richard Gates. 43p $2 Childrens press

582.16 Trees—Juvenile literature 54-11858

Beginners' book on trees, showing simple facts of construction and uses in pictures with brief descriptive text.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 28 '54
30w

Kirkus 22:482 Ag 1 '54 70w

"An excellent book for the primary science library." Jeanne Massey

+ N Y Times pt2 p38 N 14 '54 20w

POETS of today: Harry Duncan [and others] introd. by John Hall Wheelock. 179p $3.50 Scribner

811.082 American poetry—Collections
54-10439

Three separate books of poetry in one volume: Harry Duncan: Poems and translations; Murray Noss: Samurai and serpent poems; May Swenson: Another animal: poems. There is an introductory essay on the meaning of poetry today, which concludes with analyses of the three new poets.

"The choice of the three new poets . . . is a triumph of editorial taste. Each body of work sets off its companions, and both in the dissimilarities and in the likenesses of its contents Poets of Today is valuable as showing some major trends in the poetry now being written and published in America." Nicholas Joost

+ Commonweal 61:76 O 22 '54 950w

"Mr. Duncan's translations from Dante, Baudelaire, Rilke, and Apollinaire are excellent (his version of Apollinaire's 'Zone' is the first accurate and effective one in English); Mr. Noss's sincerity of approach to difficult and exotic material often compensates for his defects of style; and Miss Swenson, when she is not straining for originality and allows her lyricism and gift of precise observation to take over, becomes original in the best sense." Louise Bogan

+ — New Yorker 30:158 O 16 '54 450w

"John Hall Wheelock has written a superlative essay on the meaning of poetry today. . . Mr. Wheelock sees an extraordinary resemblance to Dante's way of making a poem in Mr. Duncan's 'Poems and Translations.' . . Technically, he knows what he is about, and he resolves his poetry in splendid end-lines. . . Mr. Noss in 'Samurai and Serpent Poems' is not the innovator Mr. Wheelock would have us believe. Mr. Noss . . . may have startled the poetry public of another day with his break from traditional poetry. But in 1954 free verse to be alive must of necessity possess an accumulative effect. . . These poems are all of a piece, but save for a handful they are merely sympathetic observations. . . May Swenson in 'Another Animal: Poems' is an experimentalist, and a very good one." I. L. Salomon

+ — Sat R 37:18 N 27 '54 500w

POHL, FREDERIK, and KORNBLUTH, CYRIL M. Search the sky. 165p $2.50; pa 35c Ballantine

54-6478

Science fiction.

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 9 '54
100w

Kirkus 22:15 Ja 1 '54 70w

"In one of the oddest and most individual of recent imaginative novels, the authors of last year's admirable 'The Space Merchants' combine an ingenious scientific theme (the effect of known genetic laws on small planetary colonies) with a lively picaresque adventure novel." H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 F 21
'54 190w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 13 '54
140w

POLLOCK, MORRIS P., and POLLOCK, MIRIAM. New hope for the retarded; enriching the lives of exceptional children. 176p il $4.50 Porter Edward Sargent, 11 Beacon St, Boston 8

371.92 Children, Abnormal and backward

53-12259

"Written especially for persons who work primarily with retarded children, [the book] offers specific ways of helping these boys and girls find their niche as worth-while citizens and family members in today's world. Through illustrations from actual day-by-day experiences with retarded children the authors have exemplified how they have helped these children solve their everyday problems of eating, overcoming fears, getting along with normal youngsters, expressing themselves, and contributing successfully to the work of a family group." (J Home Econ) Index.

"This book is intended for parents, students and workers in the field of mental health, teachers and interested laymen. Most professional persons concerned with problems of children will find in it a fresh and optimistic approach to the care of retarded children." E. F. Downs

+ Am J Pub Health 44:541 Ap '54 270w

"The experienced teacher of the educable mentally handicapped group will find in the numerous devices and techniques suggested in New Hope for the Retarded some material which may be helpful. The inexperienced teacher will find little assistance until he has sufficient background to choose the items appropriate to his own group." F. A. Mullen

El School J 54:367 F '54 850w

"Parents, teachers, and all persons who are interested in understanding and helping children will find Morris and Miriam Pollock's book, New Hope for the Retarded, a challenging portrayal of ingenuity and understanding in action." Beatrice Paolucci

+ J Home Econ 46:123 F '54 300w

Wis Lib Bul 50:64 Mr '54

POLLOCK, THOMAS CLARK, and CARGILL, OSCAR, eds. Thomas Wolfe at Washington Square. 163p il $7.50 N.Y. univ. press

B or 92 Wolfe, Thomas 54-5275

This book covers the six years, 1924-1930, Thomas Wolfe spent as an Instructor in English at the Washington Square College of New York University, years which were of great importance in his personal life and in his career as a writer. The book is made up of articles and reminiscences by various hands, friends, and associates of the writer.

Booklist 50:238 F 15 '54

"Included in this volume are reminiscences by several of Wolfe's former students and some of his colleagues. These form the kernel of the book. Through them one has intriguing glimpses of the overgrown shaggy-headed romantic trying to force-feed English literature to a class of astonished freshmen." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 29 '54 420w

"It is doubtful whether much is uncovered in this volume that is not available elsewhere, but it does highlight facets of Wolfe's living which might be superficially mentioned elsewhere. Specifically, there is found data on his alleged anti-semitism, and his savage attacks on the University and its 'weary and hate-laden air'. The authors' view is all-forgiving and both feel that Wolfe has no malicious intent."

Kirkus 21:806 D 15 '53 160w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:555 Mr 15 '54 90w

"Unfortunately, this collection has a contradictory and inconclusive air. Wolfe is still the controversial figure both as man and novelist, and it seems his students and colleagues, no less than literary critics, are in disagreement about him." Gene Baro

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 18 '54 450w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar

N Y Times p3 Ja 31 '54 250w

Reviewed by George Barker

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 7 '54 240w

Reviewed by Robert Gessner

Sat ■ 37:21 F 20 '54 900w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:159 Je '54 100w

PONCINS, GONTRAN DE MONTAIGNE, vicomte de. Ghost voyage; out of Eskimo land; tr. from the French by Bernard Frechtman. 222p il $3.50 Doubleday

910.45 Arctic regions. Voyages and travels 54-9843

In this volume the author of Kabloona (Book Review Digest 1941) describes the start of his return to civilization after fifteen months in the Arctic. His trip from Coppermine to Vancouver on the Audrey, a former rum-runner, took fifty-five days, and his only companions were the unsociable owners of the vessel. The fact that none of the three understood navigation nearly proved fatal.

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 12 '54 240w

"This is a high strung transcript of a tortuous transition from an adventure which had taught self control, patience, silence and mutual aid to a trail of nerves and body and the complex response is sensitively and emotionally recorded on its various levels, for an audience that is looking for more than physical excitement."

Kirkus 22:511 Ag 1 '54 210w

"The story gives some insight into the meaning of loneliness in the Arctic sense, an excellent description of a turbulent voyage under trying circumstances, and a highly entertaining perspective on Arctic adventure. Recommended for all libraries." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:1496 S 1 '54 120w

"Inevitable irritations with an author-ship-mate on a harrowing 4,600 mile voyage. When it is over, M. de Poncins emerges as a man of courage and heart and imagination. And if his fondness for reminiscing and philosophizing slows the action of his account, it leaves a richer residue." Archie Binns

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 O 3 '54 600w

"I often wonder if de Poncins is a great author who can create persons clearer and sharper than everyone else or is he just a keen observer from whom no little detail is hidden? In any case he has written a book like no other written before. . . It is well worth while to read this book. It is excellent autobiography." Peter Freuchen

+ N Y Times p7 S 26 '54 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 20 '54 550w

POPE, MRS EDITH EVERETT (TAYLOR). River in the wind. 392p $3.95 Scribner

54-6302

Historical novel of Florida and the Seminole wars in the 1830's.

Booklist 50:321 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:159 Ap '54 30w

"The story is not always a pretty one, but it's one of high literary integrity, based on a balanced combination of wildly willful hearts and a period touched both with pathos and grandeur." Henry Cavendish

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 11 '54 330w

Kirkus 22:74 F 1 '54 150w

"Thad's experiences in the war make up the greater and by far better portion of this novel which, in this reviewer's opinion, is undistinguished in plot and style." J. D. Marshall

Library J 79:452 Mr 1 '54 90w

"Edith Pope has here written the best and most real narrative of the Seminole wars in Florida, to date. It has been too easy to write sensational fiction about this most confused and difficult time on the southern frontier. She has made it human and believable without exaggeration." M. S. Douglas

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 21 '54 450w

"Lovers of historical fiction will find in 'River in the Wind' just about everything they could fairly ask: an epochal crisis impartially studied; an enchanted setting brought intensely near; lively characters; and a spirited story that rings true in all its incidental details, whether deriving from the author's diligence in archives of the Eighteen Thirties or her fresh perceptions. It is not the least of Mrs. Pope's virtues that, like the late Marjorie Kinman Rawlings, she loves the Florida she writes about." Frances Gaither

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 14 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Isabel Stradley

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 4 '54 80w

Wis Lib Bul 50:181 Jl '54

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. How to restore antique and classic cars; ed. by George A. Uskali and Curt L. Johnson. 190p il col il $2.95 Pop. mechanics 629.287 Automobiles—Repairing

"Specific information, both written and pictorial, on restoring old cars to original condition. The material is intended for the hobbyist and in addition to the directions applicable to general restoration work many case histories of work on specific models are included." Booklist

Booklist 50:314 Ap 15 '54

"Whether your problem is rebuilding an old engine, restoring the leather, or even fashioning from plastic a headlight lens to simulate the original, the answers are here, with scores of photographs and a directory on where to buy parts and material." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 My ■ '54 180w

Reviewed by William Murray

Sat R 37:38 Jl 31 '54 20w

PORTER, COLE, 103 lyrics; selected with an introduction and commentary by Fred Lounsberry. 224p $3.50 Random house 811

54-7814

The lyrics have been arranged under twenty headings: Loved and hated places; False sentiment; Parting; Alone; For love and/or money; Two against the world; Sales talks; etc.

Kirkus 22:424 Jl 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 79:2462 D 15 '54 20w

"Naturally they lose much of their magic, since musical comedy lyrics are not intended to appear alone, like poetry, but to be accented

PORTER, COLE—Continued

by certain musical and rhythmical devices. Nevertheless, such a collection is better than nothing, and Porter fans will enjoy re-reading the lyrics slowly and savoring the ingenious metrical tricks that make these songs unique." William Zinsser

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 12 '54 450w

"Sometimes lyrics, as the saying is, do not read so good. Fashioned for music, they limp when walking by themselves. Not so, these." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p3 S 12 '54 480w

"Even Noel Coward, Porter's only peer in the realm of old-fashioned sophistication, was desperately apologetic to his readers when he published his first volume of lyrics and sketches. And whoever was responsible for publishing the greatest lyrics of all made sure that Lorenz Hart's words were accompanied by Richard Rodgers's music. So to anyone who intends to read this book my final word of advice would be: Keep within reach of your phonograph." Sandy Wilson

Sat R 37:32 N 6 '54 750w

PORTERFIELD, AUSTIN LARIMORE, and TALBERT, ROBERT HARRIS. Mid-century crime in our culture; personality and crime in the cultural pattern of American states and cities. 113p il $2.25 Leo Potishman Foundation, Box 223, Tex. Christian Univ, Fort Worth 9, Texas

364 Crime and criminals—U.S.

"The authors, Professors in the Department of Sociology, Texas Christian University, are already well-known as experts on the specific crime problems of the American South. The present book is a collection of revised articles published in various sociological journals by Porterfield alone or in co-operation with Talbert or others. . . As in their previous book Crime, Suicide, and Social Well-being (1948), it is again the authors' principal object to examine, by the application of statistical and sociological techniques, the relationship between crime and various other indices of social disorganization." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

Reviewed by Karl Schuessler

Am Soc R 19:636 O '54 500w

"In the comparison, made in Chapter VI, of the crime rates of forty-three southern and forty-three non-southern cities of equal size and showing a much higher rate for the first group the method of selecting the second group is not explained, which may leave the reader with the feeling that a different selection might have produced different results. In spite of such doubts, the book is, however, a valuable and stimulating contribution to the understanding of the pattern of crime in the American South." Hermann Mannheim

+ — Ann Am Acad 295:172 S '54 500w

Reviewed by J. R. Hunter

Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54 80w

POTTER, CHARLES FRANCIS. Faiths men live by. 323p $3.95 Prentice-Hall

290 Religions

54-5679

Brief account of more than fifty religions. Explains how these religions differ, their rituals, customs, present strengths, etc. Dr Potter is the founder of the first Humanist society. Index.

Reviewed by C. S. Braden

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Jl 4 '54 400w

Christian Century 71:978 Ag 18 '54 200w

"The virtues of this book are its sweet-tempered liberalism, its catholicity, and its lively readable style. It is a popular excursion into comparative religion by a clergyman prepared to look for the best in all 'the faiths men live by' and to present each sympathetically as its own believers see it." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 6 '54 240w

"A valuable handbook on the religions of the world. Dr Potter writes well and although he has strong convictions they are not permitted to encroach upon his objectivity."

+ Kirkus 22:192 Mr 15 '54 200w

"Rarely does one find a single book on world religions so comprehensive, authoritative, and fascinating. Highly recommended for all libraries." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 79:548 Mr 15 '54 200w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 2 '54 30w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p21 Ag 15 '54 30w

Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54 170w

POTTER, DAVID MORRIS. People of plenty; economic abundance and the American character. 219p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

973 [917.3] National characteristics, American. U.S.—Economic conditions 54-12797

A study of the psychological effects of economic abundance on the character of the American people. The author is Coe professor of American history at Yale. Index.

Booklist 51:104 N 1 '54

"People of Plenty is less concerned with judging our society than with describing its characteristics. This is done with erudition, detachment and a fine sense of perspective. Mr. Potter utilizes both the tools of history and those of the cultural anthropologists, the social psychologists and other students of human behavior." Gary MacEoin

+ Commonweal 61:73 O 22 '54 650w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 179:411 N 6 '54 30w

"What Mr. Potter has to say is fresh and important. Unfortunately, he has adopted the style of the learned journals and the specialized vocabulary of the social scientists. To accomplish fully his purpose of communication, he could have used to advantage a collaborator able to demonstrate that plain language is suitable for philosophic expression—possibly the man who writes the Sears, Roebuck catalogue." Gerald Carson

+ — N Y Times p41 N 14 '54 450w

"What then is the American, this new man?" For generations this ever fascinating question, asked by Crèvecoeur in 1782, has been repeated the world over. Just how, we ask, does American behavior differ from that of other peoples, and why do we act the way we do? David M. Potter, Coe Professor of American History and Chairman of American Studies at Yale University, has summarized much of the unceasing debate in a brief, important book which lifts the whole problem to a new level of analysis and understanding." K. W. Deutsch

+ Yale R n s 44:292 winter '55 950w

POTTS, ABBIE FINDLAY. Wordsworth's Prelude; a study of its literary form. 392p $6 Cornell Univ. press

821 Wordsworth, William 53-13136

"Professor Potts' aim has been nothing less than to thread 'the tangle of literary life out of which "The Prelude" itself grew strong'; to show us 'the way in which the mind Wordsworth dealt with what he called "the great Nature that exists in the works of the mighty Poets"'; and to trace the steps of 'Wordsworth's pilgrimage into the poem finally known as "The Prelude".' In the course of her essay she has confirmed discoveries of her scholarly predecessors, made many discoveries of her own, and presented possibilities for consideration." (Sat R) Index.

"A book that is filled with information, ingenious speculation, and suggestions. One cannot read very far in 'The Prelude,' either with the help of a well-stocked memory or with the aid of Selincourt's notes, without discovering that literature and life were inextricably mingled in the substance of Wordsworth's poetry; that his experience of other men's poems was as real to him as his adventures in revolutionary France." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 37:23 Mr 20 '54 750w

"Minutely, patiently, understandingly, the poems [The Prelude and Thomson's The Seasons] are placed side by side until the reader can doubt no longer. Here surely, he thinks, is the key to the earlier books of The Prelude. But when, later on, the poem is shown to correspond, most miraculously, episode by episode, with the plan of The Pilgrim's Progress, and also with that of Paradise Lost, the reader begins to be dubious. And when, finally, it is shown that the poem follows the pattern of the action not only of Paradise Lost but also of Paradise Regained—the parallel between the three temptations of Christ and the three temptations of Wordsworth pursued with extreme persistence—then, at last, his credulity has been strained too far."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p376 Je 11 '54 2700w

POTTS, JEAN. Go, lovely Rose. 213p $2.75 Scribner

54-7919

Detective story.

Bookmark 14:9 O '54

"Clever plot conversationally unraveled." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 1 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:322 My 15 '54 50w

"Her mood slips quickly between grave and gay, laces in a romance with some determination and sorts out an answer that ought to have been more obvious. The consequence of this is a debut distinct, uncommon and fetchingly fresh." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p8 Jl 25 '54 120w

"Juxtaposes the adult (and murderous) world with that of teen-agers, with almost equally successful results." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 25 '54 100w
New Yorker 30:87 Ag 21 '54 50w

"Here's a first mystery novel in the small-town, middle-class vein, so easily and simply written that it turns out tops in its class." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 29 '54 90w

"On the populous side, but handling is deft, sympathetic." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:37 Ag 7 '54 20w

POU, MRS GENEVIEVE (LONG) (GENEVIEVE HOLDEN, pseud). Sound an alarm. 189p $2.75 Doubleday

54-5353

Detective story.

Kirkus 21:771 D 1 '53 80w

"Contrived with ingenuity, handled with competence." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 7 '54 160w

"Holden's first novel ('Killer Loose', 1953) was awkward but promising; this one is just plain awkward, from its interminable expository opening through its confused and cluttered investigations of kidnapping and murder on to a solution for which no psychological groundwork has been laid." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p16 Ja 31 '54 50w

"The story falls apart wildly. Characterization is pleasant and the style is readable; what a shame that these should be wasted for lack of organization." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 21 '54 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat ■ 37:40 F 27 '54 20w

Spring'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 100w

POUGH, FREDERICK HARVEY. All about volcanoes and earthquakes; il. by Kurt Wiese. 150p $1.95 Random house

551.21 Earthquakes—Juvenile literature. Volcanoes—Juvenile literature 53-6282

Stories of some famous volcanoes and their eruptions, interwoven with simply expressed technical explanations of the possible causes of volcanoes and earthquakes.

Booklist 50:245 F 15 '54

Kirkus 21:535 Ag 15 '53 70w

"Sentences are short and packed full of the kinds of information boys in intermediate grades particularly enjoy. Descriptions of actual eruptions, explanations of them, and precautions that are being taken to guard against fires following earthquakes are all here." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 79:74 Ja 1 '54 60w

Wis Lib Bul 50:77 Mr '54

POUGH, FREDERICK HARVEY. Field guide to rocks and minerals. (Peterson field guide ser) 333p il col il $3.75 Houghton

549 Mineralogy, Determinative 52-9593

"A compact guide for any part of the world. Introductory sections on collecting equipment and techniques, and on general characteristics and classifications. The concise mineral descriptions are by large groups. Well illustrated with photographs in black and white, and some in color, and with drawings of crystals. One of the Peterson field guide series. End-paper map and chart." Booklist

Booklist 50:179 Ja 1 '54

Reviewed by M. D. Read

Library J 79:390 F 15 '54 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:65 Mr '54

POUND, EZRA LOOMIS, tr. Classic anthology defined by Confucius. See Shih ching.

POUND, EZRA LOOMIS. Literary essays; ed. with ■ introd. by T. S. Eliot. 464p $6 New directions

804 Literature—History and criticism 54-7905

"A selection of Pound's criticism, most of it taken from four of Pound's books, plus a dozen previously uncollected brief essays from periodicals." New Yorker

Reviewed by Marshall McLuhan

Commonweal 60:492 Ag 20 '54 950w

Reviewed by David Daiches

Manchester Guardian p6 Mr 19 '54 600w

Nation 178:388 My 1 '54 240w

Reviewed by Donald Davie

New Statesman & Nation 47:410 Mr 27 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Je 6 '54 600w

"Mr. Eliot's introduction assures us that Pound's criticism constitutes 'the least dispensable body of critical writing in our time,' but ■ surprising amount of it fails to hold up—is now, indeed, visibly half-baked, rhetorically irresponsible, or hopelessly limited. . . . There are flashes of true merit, though, and the reiterated insistence that 'the work of maximum excellence' is the only standard and that 'one should weigh Theocritus and one's neighbour in one balance' seems as vital now as it ever was."

+ New Yorker 30:134 Mr 27 '54 190w

"Though Pound may annoy some readers into believing him a nuisance, none are likely to find him dull. . . . T. S. Eliot has performed a notable service in bringing together in one volume ■ coherent pattern of challenging essays." E. A. Bloom

+ Sat ■ 37:30 Ap 3 '54 450w

POUND, E. L.—Continued

"Our debt to the greatness and generosity of Ezra Pound is a vast one and in the essays on his contemporaries in this volume we are reminded of it most forcibly. Eliot, Joyce, Yeats—here we see Pound staking his reputation and proving solidly right. This is the Pound one admires, the Pound who underlines the relation of language with 'the health of the very matter of thought itself,' the Pound quick to see the virtues of Robert Frost and to dispose of the critical pretensions of Housman. But having assented to Pound's valuation of three major writers and having accepted his general dictums on good writing and on language in its relation to thought, one remains painfully aware that this is only half the matter, if quite that." Charles Tomlinson

+ — Spec p212 F 19 '54 900w

"Historically speaking the collection aptly fills its important place. But the documents themselves, detached from the mire and fury of their original contexts, and reread for what light they throw on poetics in general or the interpretation of specific poems, turn out to be somewhat embarrassing." Harry Levin

Yale R n s 43:602 summer '54 1150w

POURRAT, HENRI. Treasury of French tales; newly collected and told by [the author] tr. by Mary Mian and ill. by Pauline Baynes. 239p $3 Houghton

398.21 Folklore, French

53-9253

"A collection of forty-two stories which range from the traditional and touching fables handed down almost intact from the days of the troubadours to the many examples of peasant philosophy couched in a sly and often earthy humor." Publisher's note

Booklist 50:393 Je 15 '54

"This is one of the richest and freshest collections of wonder tales in many years, and Houghton Mifflin has made it into a beautiful book, filled with exquisitely dainty and unworldly illustrations. Pauline Baynes has a gift that recalls Rex Whistler. All in all—an amazing book bargain for these high-priced days." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 10 '54 370w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

Commonweal 61:203 N 19 '54 60w

Horn Bk 30:344 O '54 80w

"The book will be thoroughly satisfying to readers of all ages." Augusta Baker

+ Library J 79:1668 S 15 '54 70w

"We may have read them all before, and yet they are as fresh and novel in their French dress as if we had never heard of them. They revel in the shrewd homely touch, in saltiness, in brevity. Their stab is quick and to the heart. . . The translation itself is as fetching and graceful as a folk tune, and the illustrations match the text for delicacy and esprit." Marvin Lowenthal

N Y Herald Tribune ■ R p1 J1 4 '54 410w

"Young and old should enjoy this first comprehensive collection of French folk and fairy tales. It is heartening to be reminded of good standards, good taste and the quality of timelessness." Evelyn Eaton

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 1 '54 450w

"This unpretentious volume is lovable for its graceful simplicity, for its superb good health, for its sobriety and wisdom. The familiar and the extraordinary are very happily wedded. There is no gloom, no tragedy, no morbidity whatever in the imaginations which devised these stories. They are marked by a blending of critical sense and of unsentimental tenderness, of dignity and of simplicity, which the modern successors to such tales, films and comic strips, might well try to emulate." Henri Peyre

+ Sat ■ 37:21 Je 19 '54 800w

POVICH, SHIRLEY. Washington Senators. 246p il $3.50 Putnam

796.357 Washington, D.C. Baseball club (American league) 54-5493

An informal history of one of the oldest baseball teams in the United States, the Washington Senators. The author is sports editor of the Washington Post.

Booklist 51:9 S 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 16 '54 60w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:862 My 1 '54 30w

Reviewed by Irving Marsh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 6 '54 40w

"The Washington Senators' makes for engrossing reading and is a welcome addition to Putnam's Big League Library." Arthur Daley

+ N Y Times p10 My 2 '54 600w

POWDERMAKER, FLORENCE, and FRANK, JEROME DAVID. Group psychotherapy; studies in methodology of research and therapy; report of a group psychotherapy research project of the U.S. veterans administration; in collaboration with Joseph Abrahams [and others] pub. for the Commonwealth fund. 615p $6.50 Harvard univ. press

616.89 Group psychotherapy 52-10756

"Both of the authors of this book are experienced psychotherapists and teachers as well as experts in psychological methodology and group therapy. Their volume reports the results of a long-term experimental project conducted by the Veterans Administration at its Outpatient Clinic in Washington, D.C., and at its Perry Point Hospital in Maryland. Approximately twenty-five psychiatrists and a dozen research assistants collaborated on the staff work. The book consists of two main parts, a study of outpatient group therapy, and a survey of group therapy with hospitalized schizophrenics. Individual chapters range over a broad variety of subjects, from the organization of the group to treatment in the later stages." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. M. Hacker

Am Soc R 19:108 F '54 390w

"There are several useful and fascinating appendices. One of these, the 'Interpersonal-Relations Interview by the Social Worker,' is of especial value for those interested in research on the basis of social work interview data. . . Neither in this appendix nor in the related Chapter IV concerned with Group Composition is there any reference to Moreno's sociometric studies. This is a remarkable omission in view of Moreno's pioneering efforts, however these may be evaluated by the strict scientific standards evidently enjoyed by the collaborators." D. W. Abse, M.D.

+ — Social Forces 32:297 Mr '54 550w

"The data collected will support a number of hypotheses about what to do and what not to do in conducting group therapy. The work is not, however, a primer; it leaves plenty of room in which the reader may draw his own conclusions. . . The authors have presented a wealth of information in lucid and interesting form. Moreover, they have tried neither to oversell group therapy nor to underplay its possibilities."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:351 S '53 290w

POWELL, DAWN (MRS JOSEPH R. GOU-SHA). Wicked pavilion. 306p $3.50 Houghton

54-8134

"Scene, New York; time, the present, when 'baby sitters received a dollar an hour with torture concessions, universities dynamited acres of historic mansions and playgrounds to build halls for teaching history and child psychology.' A thread of plot, about two artists who palm off the work of a dead master as their own, connects their nymphomaniac patroness, and a proper Bostonian with odd notions about sex, among others." Library J

"The loves, quarrels, dishonorable schemes, and misadventures of Miss Powell's people form a narrative in which the going is always lively and unpredictable—a bitter-sweet commentary on a raffish section of Manhattan life." C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:97 N '54 550w

"For her audience, an entertainment which if deadly is never dull."

Kirkus 22:408 J1 1 '54 250w

"Mary McCarthy will have to sharpen her stiletto to equal this. Rental collection." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1504 S 1 '54 80w

"It is not story that makes this book a memorable experience in reading but what Miss Powell brings to her portraiture of individuals who made, and were made by, a period—an acid objective quality—and at the same time, tenderness." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 S 12 '54 850w

"Miss Powell can sound the tiniest Tom Collins ice cube clink as a knell of doom. She can retranslate the 'hello-darling!' hug into an overture of malice. The pompous must wilt under the volleys of her wit, since no pretense escapes her. Yet, strangely, disappointingly, it is often shadows we laugh at and not human beings. Why should that be? For one thing, her brilliances are random, incomplete. . . Miss Powell does not possess the pure indignation that moves Evelyn Waugh to his absurdities and forced Orwell into his haunting contortions. Her verbal equipment is probably unsurpassed among writers of her genre—but she views the antics of humanity with too surgical a calm." Frederic Morton

N Y Times p5 S 12 '54 700w

Reviewed by Brendan Gill

New Yorker 30:155 O 16 '54 550w

"Represents Miss Powell at the top of her form. It is a book which has as its hero not a person, but an environment. . . Miss Powell is taken in by nothing, not even by the gemütlichkeit of the Cafe Julien. If her wit has a base of wormwood, so had the stimulating Pernod which the Julien specialized in. 'The Wicked Pavilion' is a bitter book, but it communicates a warm regard for the era which fell apart with the Julien." Martin Levin

+ Sat R 37:62 O 2 '54 360w

POWELL, LAWRENCE CLARK. Alchemy of books, and other essays and addresses on books and writers. 263p $4.50 Anderson & Ritchie

028 Books and reading

54-10959

"Bookman and librarian are—or should be—synonymous. Lawrence Clark Powell, librarian of the University of California at Los Angeles, is a man whose passion for books and reading is very great. He is, furthermore, a librarian who wields a facile pen. These two facts about Dr. Powell are clearly indicated in The Alchemy of Books, a collection of his essays on books and writers. This handsome volume includes nineteen essays dealing with a 'Bookman in Britain,' 'Reading and Collecting,' 'People, Books, and Places.'" Library J

Booklist 51:31 S 15 '54

"Those who have enjoyed reading in the various professional journals Dr. Powell's informative and thoroughly delightful articles will welcome the publication of The Alchemy of Books. Those who have not read any of Dr. Powell's essays before (can there really be librarians in this category?) will not want to miss reading them now." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:1480 S 1 '54 450w

"Not all librarians are able to write with Mr. Powell's precision and clarity, much less in his pleasant, easy-rolling, gently humorous and always eminently sensible style. His colleagues should be happy that one of their fellow-workers in the field not only can but does speak for them all so well." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 24 '54 500w

POWELL, RICHARD PITTS. Say it with bullets. 218p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

53-10815

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ja 31 '54 120w

Kirkus 21:683 O 1 '53 40w

"It's amply diverting ■ a conscientiously preposterous exercise in agitato." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p12 Ja 24 '54 220w

"For deft, light suspense entertainment, excitingly plotted, lively in its portrayal of the battle of the sexes, and rich in some of the most amusing dialogue to be found in any field, give me Richard Powell. . . Say It With Bullets is Powell's first novel in almost two years and one of his best." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 3 '54 220w

"The villain's pretty visible, but the infallible Powell style keeps things so lively that you probably won't mind." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 24 '54 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:39 Mr ■ '54 30w

POWER, RHODA D. Redcap runs away; il. from drawings by C. Walter Hodges. 303p $3 Houghton

54-8384

The adventures of a ten-year-old English boy who joined a troupe of traveling minstrels hoping to find his minstrel uncle, Red Eric. The time is the fourteenth century. For ages ten to fourteen.

"The author describes fourteenth-century wandering minstrels with such a good ear that I put the book down having the distinct impression that I could hear the sound of a harp in the background." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 193:84 Je '54 70w

"The story gains interest and dangers, encounters with all kinds of people. Good to read aloud, the many vivid incidents of the tale build to a tense climax." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 25 '54 170w

"In describing their adventures in fourteenth-century England Miss Power has told a 'goodly tale' herself. Because so many of the minstrels' stories are included it will be most appreciated by children who are avid fairy-tale readers." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:175 Je '54 130w

+ Kirkus 22:154 Mr 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:767 Ap 15 '54 40w

"Many boys and girls of 11 to 14 would enjoy it; it also offers fine background material for story-tellers to adapt in their programs and for junior-high English classes." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 16 '54 140w

"Romantic, stirring and humorous. . . The book is excellent to read aloud. The story-telling is skillful and the characters are original and convincing." L. R. Davis

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 11 '54 200w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:213 N 27 '54 90w

POWICKE, SIR FREDERICK MAURICE.

Thirteenth century, 1216-1307. (Oxford history of England, v4) 829p maps $8 Oxford

942.034 Great Britain—History—13th century [A54-1403]

"Few people would question that the thirteenth century was one of the great centuries of history. . . Perhaps no historian has ever known so much about this great century as Sir Maurice Powicke. . . . He has taken advantage of his unique position to adopt his own approach to the century. He limits his treatment of the fashionable social, cultural, and economic history, in order to concentrate on political; but he interprets the political narrative in the broadest possible sense as the product and supreme expression of all the aspects of the community's life." Canadian Forum

POWICKE, F. M.—Continued

"This reviewer has long considered Sir Maurice Powicke the greatest of living medieval historians and The Thirteenth Century supplies ample evidence of the soundness of this view. A vast mass of minute detail is logically and effectively organized and brilliantly interpreted. Each individual and each institution is carefully and clearly set against the background of the period. Sir Maurice fully accepts the responsibility of the historian for explaining men's ideas and motives in the light of their times and his comprehensive knowledge of the thirteenth century enables him to do this with rare distinction. . . . A monumental work is bound to contain errors and no one with the possible exception of Sir Maurice himself has enough knowledge of the period to find all of them. . . . But it should be emphasized that considering the amazing amount of detail in the book the errors seem remarkably few."

Sidney Painter

+ — Am Hist R 60:76 O '54 700w

Reviewed by B. Wilkinson

+ — Canadian Forum 34:44 My '54 450w

"Its virtues are what we should expect: high scholarship, sensitivity, and an intimacy born of an unequalled familiarity with the age. Its defects, in the eyes of some critics, are its length, its exclusion of important aspects of the life of the period, its lack of selection and interpretation, its handling of some details of the constitution and of the law." B. Wilkinson

+ — Canadian Hist R 35:256 S '54 1350w

"It stands out as a strikingly original work of controlled erudition and imaginative insight on the politics and the social background of politics under Henry III and Edward I." C. R. Cheney

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 8 '53 850w

Reviewed by J. O. Prestwich

New Statesman & Nation 47:196 F 13 '54 1350w

"No volume of the Oxford History of England [has been] more eagerly awaited than that which has just appeared at the hands of Sir Maurice Powicke, and there can be little doubt that this large and substantial volume will become a standard work of reference. It is a summary of its character to say that no one else could have written it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p793 D 11 '53 3000w

PRAED, WINTHROP MACKWORTH. Selected poems; ed. with an introd. and commentary by Kenneth Allott. (Muses' lib) 362p $3.60 Harvard univ. press

821

A54-6533

"Winthrop Macworth Praed, who died at the age of 36 just as Queen Victoria began her reign, never considered himself a poet, but posterity has thought none the less well of him. At Eton and Cambridge he versified for his own and his friends' amusement, and during his brief career as a member of Parliament he continued the habit. He wrote verse-tales, verse-letters, political satires and odds and ends in verse, but his truly memorable work consisted of a dozen bits of rhyming banter perfectly adapted to the tone of well bred and witty society." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) This is a selection from his poetical works. Index of first lines.

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 11 '54 150w

"Mr. Allott's introduction is excellent and the notes are full and useful."

+ New Yorker 30:76 J1 10 '54 140w

"Excellent edited and introduced by Mr. Kenneth Allott."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p832 D 25 '53 2700w

PRATHER, RICHARD S. Pattern for panic. 256p $2.50 Abelard-Schuman

54-6463

Detective story.

"Provides enough crude excess to glut anyone's appetite for this season, culminating in a killing that might turn the stomach of a Spillane addict." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p27 Ap 4 '54 50w

"Lively narration can't take the curse off a plot so crammed." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 11 '54 50w

"Woozy as they come." Sergeant Cuff

— Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Stanton, Lincoln's secretary of war. 520p $5.95 Norton

B or 92 Stanton, Edwin McMasters. United States—History—Civil war

53-12171

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by R. P. Basler

Am Hist R 59:645 Ap '54 650w

"This book will bring pleasure to those who have wanted a new, virile, and appreciative book-length account of Edwin Stanton. . . . Some may criticize because Mr. Pratt did not delve extensively into new sources and come up with fresh facts. No new facts, however, will change the minds of those who accept what McClelland and Welles said about Stanton; and without discounting the importance of further research, one can urge that what was first needed was a reappraisal such as Mr. Pratt has given." K. P. Williams

+ Ann Am Acad 291:166 Ja '54 410w

Bookmark 13:106 F '54 30w

"It will be necessary to wait for the more monograph-like, documented and detailed work of a professional historian before making any final judgment of Stanton. Although his entire life is duly recorded here, the book is distorted by the disproportionate emphasis placed on the Civil War experience. As biography this fails. The account is more eloquent than enlightening. As a contribution to the growing literature of the Civil War, however, it deserves some attention, for it presents a new view of the war years as seen through the eyes of Edwin McMasters Stanton." D. N. Bigelow

+ — Pol Sci R 69:153 Mr '54 400w

"A preconceived frame of reference has led Mr. Pratt as a biographer into many pitfalls which his earlier books on military history have not had. And even in this biography Mr. Pratt shows his mastery of military campaigns; his awareness of wartime personalities and atmosphere; and his skill in telling a moving and thrilling episode. . . . It is Mr. Pratt's treatment of this characteristic mentioned earlier—Stanton's underhandedness and double-dealing—that mars the value of the book." H. R. Herington

— + Social Studies 45:113 Mr '54 480w

PRATT, MRS MARGARET. Flash of Washington square; il. by Roger Duvoisin. [26p] $2 Lothrop

54-10189

Story in pictures and verse about Flash, at first a too-active puppy, who lived with the Drews in Washington Square. For ages five to six.

Booklist 50:457 J1 15 '54

Kirkus 22:311 My 15 '54 50w

"Recommended to be read to 6-8-year olds." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ Library J 79:1324 J1 '54 70w

"A dog story in verse that will delight all families who ever have walked a dog in a big city, or who ever have taken their dog to an obedience training class. The lively verses do not live up to the clever idea, but they will appeal to age five up." L. S. Bechtel

+ — N Y Herald Tribune DK H p14 My 16 '54 120w

"Flash's antics, described by Margaret Pratt in brisk couplets and illustrated by Roger Duvoisin, are comically familiar to anyone who ever raised a cocker spaniel. They also provide Mr. Duvoisin with a vehicle for some very fine pictures of the famous Square in its gayest mood." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p14 My 30 '54 130w

Reviewed by F. L. Spain

Sat R 37:38 Je 19 '54 110w

PRATT, RICHARD, and PRATT, DOROTHY. Second treasury of early American homes. 144p il $12.50 Hawthorn bks.

728 Architecture, Domestic, Architecture, Colonial, U.S.—Historic houses, etc.

54-10656

"The 57 homes, illustrated with more than 200 colored photographs, that the Pratts feature this time, cover territory that ranges from Maine to Georgia and from the Hudson Valley to Tennessee." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 51:170 D 15 '54

"All of the more than 200 photographs in the book are in color, and rank along with those in the first 'Treasury,' which should be enough recommendation." Anne Douglas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 19 '54 250w

Kirkus 22:748 N 1 '54 210w

"Again the Pratts vary architectural styles and landscape. In composition their book has more than decorative value. There is an interest of vision (beauty and space) and of reflection (history and legend). If the house you are looking for is not included in this group, be hopeful. The Pratts promise another Treasury in five years." Ann Comfort

+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 28 '54 300w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

+ Sat R 37:22 D 4 '54 30w

Time 64:138 D 6 '54 10w

PRATT, ROBERTSON, and DUFRENOY, JEAN. Antibiotics. 2d ed 398p 87il $7.50 Lip-pincott

615 Antibiotics

53-7660

"In keeping with the continued expansion in the antibiotic field, the second edition of this text has been enlarged from 255 pages to the present 398 pages. Five new chapters have been written and there has been some expansion and rearrangement of the original material. The book is profusely illustrated with figures, tables, and formulas which graphically explain the points brought out in the text." Am J Pub Health

"Excellent text. . . In addition to the fundamental principles which are lucidly explained, the therapeutic potentialities of each antibiotic are discussed in such a way as to lay a firm groundwork for practical use. The book is documented with selected references and it is expressly asserted that no effort has been made to review the literature. However, it still is a valuable source of information for specialists in the antibiotic field who often forget many of the things treated in this text." Henry Welch
+ Am J Pub Health 44:543 Ap '54 180w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:118 Mr '54 200w

PRATT, WILLIS WINSLOW, ed. Galveston Island. See Sheridan, F. C.

PRESIDENTS of American colleges and universities; ed. by R. C. Cook. 2d ed 244p il $10; to libraries, 10% discount Who's who in American education, Nashville, Tenn.

923.7 Educators. U.S.—Biography (33-24185)

"The first edition of this work was published in 1933-34. . . According to the Preface, this work presents biographical data for 1433 out of a total of 1839 administrative heads of institutions of higher learning in the United States. The editors 'used the list compiled each year by the U.S. Office of Education as an authentic source of accredited colleges and universities in the United States.' The work is advertised as being up-to-date to October, 1952." Subscription Bks Bul

"Despite its limitations Presidents of American Colleges and Universities contains new information not found in similar works, is easy to handle, and will be useful for ready reference. For these reasons, it is recommended for college and university and large public libraries, where there is a need to supplement other biographical dictionaries, or a strong interest in the field of education."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:7 Ja '54 950w

PRESSLY, THOMAS JAMES. Americans interpret their Civil war. 347p $5 Princeton univ. press

973.7 U.S.—History—Civil war 52-13166

"The American Civil War is 'the classic example of a major event in the history of the United States which has been explained and interpreted in a wide variety of quite different ways.' In this excellent study, the author portrays the various interpretations which in his opinion have been most important from 1861 to the present. He has emphasized chiefly the writings of historians, and has limited his study to the United States because he feels 'that the study of changing interpretations of the American Civil War outside the United States is a separate and in many respects a different subject . . . from the one investigated here.'" Library J

Reviewed by K. M. Stamp

Am Hist R 59:948 Jl '54 650w

Reviewed by H. H. Bellot

Ann Am Acad 294:183 Jl '54 500w

Booklist 50:295 Ap 1 '54

"Mr. Pressly has written an indispensable book for any student of the period. His is a history of histories, a study of how Americans felt about their great conflict, and how with each generation their attitudes changed. As he points out, it is impossible today to formulate a synthesis which could reconcile all the current, widely divergent interpretations. He has at least summed them up." Francis Russell
+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 15 '54 210w

"Throughout, a pleasant style clothes scholarship with readability. Highly recommended for all college and university history collections, and for the large public library." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:455 Mr 1 '54 350w

"Mr. Pressly, visiting associate professor of history at Princeton, has performed notably well the difficult task of forming a meaningful pattern from a tangle of variation and confusion. His book is a useful, revealing and readable case study in historical relativism." B. I. Wiley

+ N Y Times p3 My 30 '54 320w

"The book sharpens and clarifies the classic interpretations of the coming of the war. Yet I do not believe that the author does justice to some historians. In digesting their views he sometimes presents them too starkly." J. M. England

+ Sat R 37:23 Je 19 '54 210w

"Professor Pressly has turned what might have been a pedestrian narrative and analysis of changing viewpoints into a really exciting piece of intellectual history, and that because he combines scholarship with a real grasp of the problems of historiography in any age or country and can see the problem of the Civil War, its causes, course and consequences, as a special case of a general problem. This is understanding, interpretation, not mere 'debunking' nor a resignation to the platitude that 'there is much to be said on both sides.' A book like this inspires hope that American history writing is entering a new and less parochial phase."

PRESSLY, T. J.—Continued

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p294 My 7 '54 1150w

"In any effort at classification such as this there are dangers of rigidity and over-simplification, and many of the living historians discussed are certain to protest the parts assigned to them. Although a lively controversy is likely to ensue from this book, the final result may be salutary in washing out lingering sectional bias and in promoting the movement toward an objective synthesis of interpretation which is already under way."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:177 Je '54 280w

PRESTON, JOHN FREDERICK. Developing farm woodlands. 386p il $4.50 McGraw

634.99 Wood lots. Forests and forestry 53-8011

Instructions for operating farm woodlands to produce a profit, as part of the farm business. For farmers and students of agriculture. Bibliography. Glossary. List of visual aids. Index.

Booklist 50:273 Mr 15 '54

Library J 79:914 My 15 '54 20w

PRESTON, STUART. El Greco [with] 46 reproductions including 12 in full color. 61p $4.75 Beechhurst press

759.6 Theotocopuli, Dominico, known as El Greco. Paintings, Spanish 53-13337

Brief monograph on El Greco with reproductions of his works in color and in black and white. The author is assistant art editor of the New York Times.

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ap 4 '54 30w

"Stuart Preston has written a concise and instructive text on El Greco, incorporating all the documentary material available on the subject." Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor D 3 '53 20w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:208 F 1 '53 10w

"Preston's essay on El Greco is enlivened by copious literary and historical references. It provides a competent summary of what is known about El Greco's development to the extent that this can be studied in fifty examples."

+ Nation 178:339 Ap 17 '54 170w

Reviewed by Robert Richman

New Repub 129:21 D 21 '53 20w

"Although it suffers from the same apparently money-saving devices of using color-plates of paintings in American collections and reproducing the far more significant European works in the less impressive black-and-white, the text by Stuart Preston makes up for these difficulties of emphasis and is, in addition, gracious and factual." Aline Louchheim

+ — N Y Times p4 D 6 '53 40w

PREYRE, EMILE ALEXIS. Freedom of doubt; reflections of a natural sceptic; rev. and tr. under the author's supervision. 228p $2.75 Pantheon bks.

190 [149.7] Skepticism 54-2691

"This philosophical journal, kept during the past thirty years or so, and now translated from the French under the author's supervision, chiefly records the development of his skepticism into religious mysticism, which he sees as a doubting so complete that it is nothing less than total affirmation. More than half the journal is an anthology of extracts from other works, ranging from Tibetan sacred books and Saint John of the Cross to Lewis Carroll and a nine-year-old poet identified only as Jenny." New Yorker

"M. Preyre's own entries are sometimes as succinct as 'Saw Gandhi' and sometimes lengthily obscure, but for the most part they are the product of a thinking mind that recalls Gide's except for the total absence of irony. Not for everyone."

New Yorker 30:139 O 30 '54 120w

"To the contemplative and self-examining reader who seeks mental stimulus in everything he reads, 'The Freedom of Doubt: Reflections of a Natural Sceptic' should prove a rewarding companion-book. There has been nothing of like caliber among the journals being published today." Richard McLaughlin

+ Springfield Republican p6C S 12 '54 650w

"The translation, supervised by the author with the help of Mr. G. S. Fraser and others, is fluent and effective. The literalness and beauty of some translated passages are even remarkable, as for instance, quotations from St. John of the Cross and Unamuno. . . If the reader compares this English version with the original French he will find that much has been improved. Where the translated French would seem stilted in English the author, it would appear, has wisely recast or been induced to recast, his thought in the idiom of our language."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p157 Mr 5 '54 500w

PRICE, DON KRASHER. Government and science; their dynamic relation in American democracy. 203p $3.75 N.Y. univ. press

509 Science and state 54-8164

"In this collection of lectures delivered at New York University in 1953 Don K. Price, now an associate director of the Ford Foundation and a former Government official who helped to formulate the legislation that created the Atomic Energy Commission and the National Science Foundation, develops the theme and emphasizes the important part that science played in shaping the Government and administrative institutions of the nation." N Y Times

"These lectures should do much to clarify the thinking of the more thoughtful members of Congress as well as of university trustees and professors. They are an important contribution to the philosophy of American Government and indicate the part that the scientist is likely to play in the social and political development of the United States even though he is destined to remain behind the scenes of the great drama of politics." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 15 '54 900w

"The trouble is, nearly all the discussion of these problems is done at a level which is both too abstract and not abstract enough. That is partly true even in Mr. Price's valuable book. What is wanted is a comparative study of the actual history in America and this country, down to the degree of personal detail which can take account of the interventions of personalities, of, say, a set of research topics, for example radar, conventional explosives, jet engines, insecticides." C. P. Snow

+ — Spec p29 J1 2 '54 850w

"Only on a few minor matters do I find flaws in this admirable study. It uses the term 'science' somewhat loosely. The author notes in the beginning that he defines science as descriptive of all forms of organized knowledge, but most of the book is devoted to science and technology in the conventional sense. I also feel that Mr. Price's chapter on 'Security and Public Risk' is an over-simplification of the problem, even though this may be deliberate. I cannot wholly agree that the hysteria of our time and surge of public emotion accompanying it can be dealt with mainly by firm and skilled administration in government, although such administration can certainly help." J. R. Killian

+ — Yale R n s 44:127 autumn '54 1150w

PRICE, LUCIEN. Dialogues of Alfred North Whitehead. See Whitehead, A. N.

PRICE, ROBERT. Johnny Appleseed; man and myth. 320p il $5 Ind. univ. press

B or 92 Chapman, John 54-7972

"More legend than fact, more poetry than legend, the Johnny Appleseed story has long belonged to literature rather than to history or biography. . . Robert Price, Professor of English at Otterbein College, has gently disengaged the biography of the historical John Chapman from the tradition and lore surrounding this appealing border hero of the Northwest Territory. The author, in 1944, of the complete bibliography of Chapman in history, literature and folklore, Mr. Price now tells the authenticated life story of Johnny." N Y Times

Booklist 51:175 D 15 '54

"Prof. Price has worked at his task for more than a quarter of a century. He has set down all the evidence about the real John Chapman, many bits collected from obscure sources. He tells of John's life and of the rise of legend and literature about him in exhaustive detail, taking pains to distinguish tall tales from authentic accounts." Walter Blair

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 O 31 '54 360w

"A vigorous, well-written biography of the fabulous John Chapman."

+ Kirkus 22:649 S 15 '54 260w

"The extensive appendices and bibliography attached to this book attest to the diligent research of the author in an attempt to make this the definitive life of Johnny Appleseed. It will undoubtedly be used by students of Americana for years to come but in addition it can be recommended highly as a distinguished biography of a lovable pioneer business man who dedicated his whole life to the service of humanity." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 79:2211 N 15 '54 210w

"Mr. Price's account of this singular Yankee peddler is equipped with scholarly apparatus, a genealogical chart and index. It is written with the grace and urbanity of a Richardson Wright; sound history touched with literature." Gerald Carson

+ N Y Times p7 O 31 '54 800w

New Yorker 30:154 D 18 '54 160w

Time 64:124 N 15 '54 180w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. The magicians. 246p $3 Harper

54-6024

"The three old magicians came along just in time to rescue Sir Charles Ravenstreet from embarking on a new enterprise, the manufacture of a drug that would kill off worry and anxiety. They made an odd looking trio of wonder-workers, masquerading as an engineer, optician, and a merchant, but they taught Sir Charles how to escape to the 'time alive' of another dimension, where he could be free to make over his past. That mission accomplished, they vanished as mysteriously as they had arrived. The writer gives free rein to his pet ideas about time and western man in a satirical fantasy that takes a long time to get its bearings. For devotees of Priestley." Booklist

Booklist 50:289; 401 Ap 1 '54; Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 30 '54 500w

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 3 '54 500w

Kirkus 22:213 Mr 15 '54 240w

"The familiar sermon which he preaches about the state of the contemporary world is getting a little trite. But certainly the story is novel in its incidents and he exploits skilfully the dramatic possibilities of extending human vision into normally hidden dimensions." H. P. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 23 '54 230w

Nation 179:17 Jl 3 '54 240w

"Mr. Priestley's new novel is a moral fable. Beautifully composed and splendidly written, it has great power and real point, and the power and the point alike come from Mr. Priestley's perception of the condition of contemporary man." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:264 F 27 '54 650w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 30 '54 750w

Reviewed by John Barkham

N Y Times p4 My 30 '54 550w

"Even a rather heavy touch of fantasy, which grows heavier as the end of the story approaches, does not spoil this intelligent and cheerful account of a successful London businessman who finds life frighteningly meaningless when he is forced to retire from the firm to which he has given his life."

+ New Yorker 30:135 Je 5 '54 80w

"Although 'The Magicians' is not this observer's idea of Mr. Priestley at his best, readers who like to let their minds wander in odd places may find its special merits. Certainly there's no other novel exactly like it." James Kelly

Sat R 37:26 My 29 '54 550w

"Unfortunately, this novel, aiming at two levels of reality, succeeds fully on neither. I must protest, on behalf of the Guild of Black Magicians, that a power capable of staging the supposed accident (Mervil, we are told, is protected 'by the other side') would not be so easily frustrated: and, on behalf of the opposition, that, far from vanishing into thin air, White Magicians are always in the telephone book. If The Magicians were not so stoutly on the side of the angels, and could be taken simply as an entertainment, there would be no need to cavil. As it is, these flaws expose to attack not only the book, but the theme it so bravely essays." L. A. G. Strong

Spec p272 Mr 5 '54 450w

Time 63:76 My 31 '54 350w

"The final impression must be one of disappointment. In Mr. Priestley's parlance, while one self is carried easily along by the flow of the story, another more critical self is extremely annoyed at being thrown such small change."

Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Mr 5 '54 270w

PRINGLE, PATRICK. Prisoners' friend: the story of Elizabeth Fry. 143p il $2.50 Roy pubs.

B or 92 Fry, Elizabeth (Gurney)—Juvenile literature 54-5223

An account of the life and work of Elizabeth Fry, the nineteenth century Quaker who instituted prison reform in England. For high school age.

"Based on Mrs. Fry's diaries, this story of her achievements and ideas now so generally accepted, and of her full and happy personal life, makes absorbing reading." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 F 21 '54 260w

"With the backgrounds it presents, of the Quaker tradition, of the social and penal codes, as well as Mrs. Fry's own character, this is solid reading."

+ Kirkus 22:5 Ja 1 '54 150w

"Despite pedestrian style and undistinguished appearance, book is a valuable record of human achievement against odds. Useful as background or historical material for high school courses in problems of democracy or, if properly introduced, for personal inspiration." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 79:461 Mr 1 '54 100w

N Y Times p22 Ag 22 '54 200w

PRINGLE, PATRICK. Romance of medical science; with a foreword by Alexander Franklin. 255p 27pl $3 Roy pubs.

610.9 Medicine—History

53-9774

A brief history of medical science from the earliest days of the medicine man to the discovery of such "miracle drugs" as penicillin and streptomycin. Suitable for high school age. Index.

PRINGLE, PATRICK—Continued

Booklist 50:148 D 1 '53

"Though written from a British point of view, the universality of the subject indicates a wide value."

+ Kirkus 21:438 J1 15 '53 40w

"Readable and well suited to high school students, although vocabulary will be difficult for freshmen. Most useful for biology and physical education classes in senior high school." Dorothy Schumacher

+ Library J 78:1861 O 15 '53 80w

PRITCHETT, CHARLES HERMAN. Civil liberties and the Vinson court. 296p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

323.4 Civil rights. U.S. Supreme court 54-8459

"This is a study of the seven years (1946-'53) during which Fred M. Vinson was Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court. It discusses the position of the Vinson Court on the basic issues of civil liberties and the position of the individual justices as seen in their dissenting opinions. Special attention is given to the rights of Negroes and aliens as affected by the decisions of the Court." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Table of cases. Index.

"History does not teach us that it is any easier for government to retreat from one excess than from the other. As an over-all product, however, the book is wonderfully well done, and a reading of it provides pleasure and enlightenment." A. A. White

Christian Century 71:824 J1 7 '54 1200w

"Mr Pritchett's recommendation to resolve the impasse faced by the Court has merit... Whether one agrees with the author's conclusions or not, the organization and analysis of the material contained in the book in itself is an important contribution to an understanding of the Supreme Court both as an institution, and as conceived by the men who compose it acting in their role of justices."

T. E. Kennelly

+ Commonweal 60:99 Ap 30 '54 900w

Current Hist 26:377 Je '54 150w

Foreign Affairs 33:161 O '54 50w

"Recommended for larger libraries and libraries of higher education." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:774 Ap 15 '54 150w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 21 '54 80w

"'Civil Liberties and The Vinson Court' is written not only for lawyers but for laymen who, as they read the newspapers, often must be puzzled by the sharp divergencies in constitutional interpretation. It is impossible, in the limited space allotted to this review, to do justice to Professor Pritchett's tightly packed, well documented, and carefully reasoned work."

Newman Levy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 8 '54 750w

"While death brought an early end to the Vinson Chief Justiceship and left unsolved many of the constitutional problems of the era, C. Herman Pritchett has good reason for attempting to tell the story of what he chooses to call 'the Vinson Court.' Moreover, he has wisely chosen to limit his excellent volume to the court's work in the civil liberty area."

R. K. Carr

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 21 '54 850w

"Pritchett's case summaries are clear and accurate, but too often are overbrief digests which perfunctorily tell what the Court did in a case without reasoned evaluation of the grounds of decision, discussion of policy, or explanation based on more than immediate facts. . . . Pritchett's acumen is tested to the breaking point by Frankfurter, a greatly gifted intelligence of unparalleled complexity, whose concept of the judicial function precludes crude instrumentalism and personal choice. An attempt to understand this exponent of 'libertarian restraint' approaches balanced appraisal only to explode in sarcastic and scorching exasperation. One may strongly disagree with Frankfurter without absurdly alleging that he oversimplifies the problem of judicial motivation or demonstrates the 'hollowness' of self-restraint. To speak of his 'pathological extremes' suggests, at the least, that the author might benefit from a dose of Frankfurter's self-restraint and humility. Excepting this distasteful lapse, Pritchett has increased our understanding of the Vinson Court. Needless to say, the book is excellent in the later chapters."

L. W. Levy

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:456 S '54 1150w

PRITCHETT, VICTOR SAWDON. Spanish temper. 269p $3.75 Knopf

946 [914.6] Spain. National characteristics, Spanish 53-6857

"In some sixty thousand words, England's leading literary critic has written what is virtually a pocket analysis of the Spanish character. At the same time this short book manages to cover almost every conceivable aspect of contemporary Spain that cannot be found in any guide. . . . V. S. Pritchett has known Spain for thirty years, has lived and worked there, speaks the language, is steeped in its literature, and has traveled the entire country by foot, bus and train." N Y Times

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 193:81 Je '54 10w

Booklist 50:356 My 15 '54

Reviewed by A. F. B. Clark

Canadian Forum 34:142 S '54 200w

"A reliable and interesting study of Spanish character." H. L. Johnson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 9 '54 200w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Ashe

Commonweal 60:252 Je 11 '54 600w

Foreign Affairs 32:678 J1 '54 20w

"A well known British literateur portrays the Spain he loves in penetrating and glowing terms, brilliant and often unforgettable."

+ Kirkus 22:176 Mr 1 '54 150w

"Recommended for large public, college and university libraries." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:1056 Je 1 '54 90w

"An admirable general introduction to Spain. With just the degree of unreasonable dogged assertiveness that suits the Spanish climate, Mr Pritchett acts as spiritual as well as topographical guide on a journey covering all the main regions and cities, and uses places as pegs on which to hang ideas and opinions and facts. There is more discussion than description, and spirit and topography are excellently mixed." Isabel Quigly

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 4 '54 350w

"'The Spanish Temper' is the second outstanding book on Spain to appear in recent months. Sacheverell Sitwell's 'Spain' was an excellent study of the timeless excellences of Spanish architecture and painting. Mr. Pritchett has placed lovers of Spain equally in his debt with this analysis of the unchanging characteristics of the peoples of Spain—the Basques, Catalans, Andalusians, and, particularly—for it is they who have placed their stamp on the language and everything that is summed up in the word Spanish—the Castilians." T. J. Hamilton

+ Nation 178:386 My 1 '54 850w

"Few people love Spain more than Mr. Pritchett does, or understand her better; and no English author, unless it is Mr. Gerald Brenan, writes of the country with such perception. Yet unlike so many Saxons in similar case he never loses his head or goes all Spanish on us. He sees the country for what it is, magnificent, indeed, but also harsh, morbid, excessive and obtuse; and he never for a moment abandons his own point of view, remaining throughout ironic, humane, dispassionate and English to the core. . . . Everyone should read this wise, witty and beautiful book." Honor Tracy

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:567 My 1 '54 470w

"This may not be a book for the hasty, look-see traveler. But for any one who has really tasted Spain, savoring its strong flavors and varied beauties it is vivid and enlightening reading." Geoffrey Parsons

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 25 '54 800w

Reviewed by James Stern

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 25 '54 800w

New Yorker 30:120 My 1 '54 140w

"V. S. Pritchett's new book is one for both those who know Spain and those planning to visit it. For the former, 'The Spanish Temper' is like talking with a friend about a valued acquaintance who has fallen on evil days but without wholly succumbing under adversity; for the latter, it is a concise, illuminating introduction to the physical, psychological, and cultural reality of Spain." Harriet de Onís

+ Sat R 37:14 Je 12 '54 650w

"A fine if often ■ biased guide book to the spirit of Spain as well as the lie of the land—and every guide has surely ■ right to his bias—it is illustrated with some excellently chosen photographs." Isabel Quigly

+ — Spec p598 My 14 '54 750w

"This is a sensitive, well-written book, which is commended to all who seek to understand the mainsprings of the modern Spaniard's attitude to the rest of Europe, and his apparent helplessness. The text is enhanced by nine excellent photographs."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p262 Ap 23 '54 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 50:132 My '54

"No great weight of erudition lies upon Mr. Pritchett's shoulders; yet for all that, his is no tourist's essay but a work of real insight into the Spanish character." T. G. Bergin

+ Yale R n s 44:135 autumn '54 340w

PROCHNOW, HERBERT VICTOR, ed. Determining the business outlook. 445p $6.50 Harper

338.54 Business forecasting 53-8549

"A corps of economists and business analysts discuss the techniques of forecasting business trends for the reader who wants to learn how to make predictions on his own. The experts, recruited from industry, universities, and the government, explain how economic factors influence business trends; they analyze such leading business barometers as money supply, capital expenditures, and industrial production, covering every segment of the economy. The businessman or student will probably prefer to consult the book as a reference tool instead of reading it consecutively." (Booklist) Index.

"From the point of view of the forecasting job, the chief weakness of the book lies in its failure to face squarely the forecasting of aggregate activity. Repeatedly, it is shown that given industries and processes are chiefly dependent upon aggregate activity, so that a careful consideration of the methods of forecasting it would have been particularly appropriate. The reader will look in vain for GNP model forecasting or for the National Bureau 'unseen cycle' (the proportion of indicators expanding) method. Nevertheless, it would be ungrateful to end this review on a note of criticism. The gaps are so great in the forecasting literature and the useful observations in the book are so numerous that it will be a valuable reference for some time to come." E. C. Bratt

+ — Am Econ R 44:965 D '54 650w

Booklist 50:351 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Anthony Wirry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 2 '54 250w

"If this book has the success it deserves readers will be encouraged to require relevance in the work of other economists. Its two dozen authors have certainly shown that the requirement can be met." Arthur Upgren

+ Sat R 37:17 S 4 '54 800w

Wis Lib Bul 50:128 My '54

PROSSER, CHARLES ALLEN. Selecting an occupation [by the author and] Calvin S. Sifferd. 3d ed rev 246p $2.50 McKnight

371.425 Occupations. Vocational guidance

"[In this book] an attempt has been made to present significant facts about representative types of work. This information reflects the situation during the early years of the second half of the twentieth century. . . . This book has the same title as a publication of McKnight & McKnight which was first produced in 1936 and revised in 1945. That work was prepared by C. A. Prosser and was widely used by schools over the United States. This 1953 publication of Selecting an Occupation is a new book—new in concept, new in organization, and new in writing. Portions of Mr. Prosser's original work are included, where they have been felt to be especially pertinent and valid." Pref

Booklist 50:196 Ja 15 '54

Management R 43:270 Ap '54 60w

PROUDMAN, JOSEPH. Dynamical oceanography. 409p $8.50 Wiley

551.46 Ocean

53-11111

"In this important treatise the phenomena of turbulence, currents, etc. in the ocean are analyzed in terms of basic dynamics and thermodynamics. The uses of mathematical and statistical techniques in the study of such phenomena are demonstrated in the exposition and in numerous worked examples embodied in the text. Literature references are included at the ends of the chapters. The book is of interest to professional oceanographers and to advanced college students preparing for this field of science. The author is Professor of Oceanography in the University of Liverpool." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Apparently the book is the first extensive mathematical approach to this field." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 78:2038 N 15 '53 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:73 S '53

PROUT, VERA JULIA. Race for land; il. by Kurt Wiese. 179p $2.75 Dodd

54-6050

Story of the race for land to the Cherokee Strip in 1889. Twelve-year-old Tom Gilbert and his older brother Sam succeed in settling ■ claim for their family, who arrive later. For ages ten to fourteen.

"Recommended for fifth- and sixth-graders." R. M. McEvoy

+ Library J 79:461 Mr 1 '54 80w

"This is ■ pleasant, folksy story of ■ event in expanding America that combines equal portions of history, humor and adventure." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p31 Je ■ '54 100w

PUGH, JOHN J. Captain of the Medici. 272p $3.75 Little

53-7310

Historical novel with the Republic of Florence in the sixteenth century as background. It is the story of Pietro Lucca, a blacksmith's son, who rose to be a captain in the Bande Nere.

"For all its fidelity to fact, Captain of the Medici skims lightly over the top of the Renaissance, which, name-dropping aside, merely provides ■ stylized backdrop for the action." Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:74 Ap '54 180w

"A historical romance written in the best tradition of grade B movies. This much may be added, however: There's never a dull moment from start to finish!" Henry Cavendish Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 24 '54

PUGH, J. J.—Continued

350w

Kirkus 21:747 N 15 '53 180w

"Mr. Pugh writes well and tells good story well out in front of historical background. . . Recommended for story value as well as history of period." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 78:2212 D 15 '53 80w

"Mr. Pugh does not quite achieve success. He knows the facts of history fairly well and he has chosen that dramatic moment when almost the last of the Italian republics went down. But he misses the significance and the feeling. He is far too concerned with the doings of his almost flawless hero and heroine . . . either to create real character or to bring Florence and that important age to life." T. C. Chubb

+ — N Y Times p21 Ja 31 '54 320w

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54
250w

Wis Lib Bul 50:73 Mr '54

PURCELL, JOHN WALLACE. True book of African animals; pictures by Katherine Evans. 46p $2 Childrens press

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 54-11860

"This gives a running commentary on a dozen animals, starting with the elephant. Joining his chapters with connecting phrases like 'Down the river away' or 'Far out on the plains'.—Mr. Purcell works his way through baboons, buffaloes, zebras, hippos, giraffes and so on." Kirkus

Booklist 51:140 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:12 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 28 '54
30w

+ Kirkus 22:482 Ag 1 '54 50w

Reviewed by Jeanne Massey

N Y Times pt 2 p38 N 14 '54 40w

PURCELL, THEODORE VINCENT. Worker speaks his mind on company and union. 344p $6 Harvard univ. press

331.89 Swift and company. CIO united packing house workers. Local 28. Industrial relations 53-9040

"In 1950 a sample of the 6,000 employees of Swift and Company in Chicago was questioned by Theodore V. Purcell, S.J., a psychologist at Loyola University, about their employer and their union, Local 28 of the United Packing-house Workers of America. In [this book] he presents a structured interpretation of their attitudes, illustrated by fascinating direct quotations. Father Purcell was primarily interested in employee 'allegiance' to company and union. He chose the case method to provide a 'global' approach which would detail the problems of this single plant community." (Sat R) Bibliography. Index.

"Father Purcell's answers to his three major questions are actually less interesting than much of the material he uncovers in the course of his investigation. . . This book should prove a useful source of data to those working in the fields of labor relations and social psychology. Its primary contribution is in the factual materials presented rather than in the analysis. I concur with Slichter's judgment, contained in the preface, that 'the most satisfying parts of Father Purcell's book are the numerous quotations from his interviews.'" N. W. Chamberlain

+ Am Econ R 44:707 S '54 650w

Reviewed by F. H. Blum

Am Soc 19:804 D '54 1350w

"The whole study is clearly conceived and efficiently executed, reflecting adherence to the best traditions of scientific research in the field of industrial relations. The book is a valuable addition to the literature of industrial psychology and labor economics, and will richly repay thoughtful reading by the representatives of management and of labor as well as by the specialist in personnel management and labor relations." G. S. Watkins

+ Ann Am Acad 293:182 My '54 550w

Booklist 50:233 F 15 '54

"About the only criticism that can be made of this book is that it is over-detailed. In shorter form, with a minimum of examples and conclusions, it could be a valuable handbook for enlightened management and union leadership." Philip Dodd

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 10 '54
550w

"Although this book contributes no startling new evidence on the subject of worker attitudes toward company or union, and deals with employees of one company only, the methods of approach and the conclusions reached should be of interest not only to employers and employees, but to anyone else who desires more intelligent understanding of the democratic, capitalistic, industrial era in which we live." Lyman Judson

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 27 '54
600w

"Father Purcell's case-method approach is eminently worth every moment of the time and every ounce of the energy which went into the gathering, correlating and analyzing of the material." T. K. Krug

+ Commonweal 60:155 My 14 '54 650w

"Several years of firsthand experience have produced a remarkably accurate portrayal of the men who work in Swift's Chicago plant, live in Negro Bronzeville and 'Back of the Yards,' and whose interests and attitudes are perhaps representative of American labor today. The interview content demonstrates clearly that Father Purcell was able to gain the confidence and respect of both workers and management, and careful word-for-word recording has preserved the drama for the reader."

+ Harvard Law R 67:1294 My '54 700w

"Here is material that should be of special interest to the union organizer or the personnel director. The author, who lived among these men and women as well as with his subject has created a lively, thoroughly scientific psychological picture. Recommended for all collections of labor-management materials." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 79:457 Mr 1 '54 180w

"A notable contribution to our knowledge of the impact of mass production on the lives of men and women who make up a plant community." Louis Stark

+ N Y Times p24 F 7 '54 450w

"Such an excellent case study as this need not be justified by the general application of its findings. It is amply justified as a source of promising questions and hypotheses to be tested in repeated, uniformly designed, segmental studies. Applied science has developed from the combination of preliminary case studies and subsequent additive research. This is a carefully planned case study and will stimulate the advance of the applied science of industrial relations." Dale Yoder

+ Sat R 37:44 Ja 23 '54 700w

"The extensive quotations from the interviews as well as the author's critical analysis make the volume a rich source of understanding for manager, union leader, and student of labor problems alike. It is a distinguished contribution, perhaps the best of its kind, to the growing list of attitudinal studies of labor-management relations."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:233 Je '54 240w

PURCELL, VICTOR WILLIAM WILLIAMS SAUNDERS. Malaya: communist or free? published under the auspices of the Institute of Pacific relations. 288p $3 Stanford univ. press

959.5 Malaya—Politics and government, Communism—Malaya
54-12854

"The body of doctrine which Dr. Purcell champions can be simply summarized. He believes that the present federal constitution is working against Malayan unity by fostering excessive parochialism in nine States and two Settlement Governments; that Britain is clinging too tenaciously to the substance of power while parting only with its shadow; that if this process continues, the peoples of the country, and especially the Chinese, will be driven into the arms of Communism. The author justifies these contentions to the hilt with ■ wealth of knowledge based on his own long experience of the country and his wide grasp of the development of nationalist movements in other southeast Asian lands." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

Christian Century 71:1521 D 15 '54 50w

Current Hist 27:326 N '54 170w

"General Templer apart, this book contains a great deal of information on the events of recent years in Malaya and a sound appraisal of what needs to be done to speed up the advance towards self-government." Derrick Sing-ton

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 J1 20 '54 250w

"There are many indications—repetitions of incidents and so on—that Dr. Purcell finished his book in a hurry. Its publication could not have been more timely for it contains an immense amount of material which will be useful to the increasing number of people interested in South-East Asia. But I hope he will now prepare a revised edition, less vindictive about General Templer (who anyhow has not left Malaya) and even more informative about a country he knows so well." Vernon Bartlett

+ — Spec p690 Je 4 '54 750w

"Dr. Purcell has written a book which is calculated to disturb the complacency of those who feel that things are on the whole going not too badly in Malaya; and, as is so often the case in such circumstances, he has not entirely resisted the temptation to paint the colours of his picture over-luridly. . . This is a courageous book. Dr. Purcell has always been a hard hitter in defence of his beliefs, and there are many passages here which will cause deep offence. But he is too good a friend of Malaya to mind risking this, if only he can rouse the policy-makers in Whitehall and Kuala Lumpur to do what is necessary before the opportunity has gone."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p371 Je 11 '54 650w

PUTNAM, MRS ANNE EISNER. Madami; my eight years of adventure with the Congo pigmies, by [the author] with Allan Keller; decorations by [the author]. 303p $3.95 Prentice-Hall

967.5 [916.75] Kongo, Belgian—Description and travel 54-9618

"Back in the 1940s Mrs. Putnam was an art student summering at Martha's Vineyard when she met and fell in love with Patrick Tracy Lowell Putnam, a young anthropologist who was at that time on a vacation from the Belgian Congo. In time they were married and Mrs. Putnam went with her husband to live among the pigmies. Here, a hundred miles from any other civilization, Mrs. Putnam took a liking to her new neighbors. She ate their food and watched their sacred ceremonies. She also sketched them as she pleased and, returning eight years later, wrote, with Allan Keller, her book about them." Sat R

Booklist 51:104 N 1 '54

Kirkus 22:512 Ag 1 '54 100w

"Recommended for public libraries as readable, non-patronizing book on African life." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 79:1500 S 1 '54 100w

"The often photographed pigmies gain stature under Mrs. Putnam's and Allan Keller's treatment. Flamboyant handling of this rich African lore would have spoiled it, but they spared it that fate. And added Mrs Putnam's fluid sketches and many fine photographs in the same spirit." M. C. Hubbard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 31 '54 400w

Reviewed by Ashley Montagu

N Y Times p51 O 17 '54 360w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat ■ 37:21 O 23 '54 150w

"An appealing and entertaining account." J. J. N.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 310w

PUTNAM, DONALD FULTON, ed. Canadian regions; a geography of Canada. 601p 11 maps $9 Crowell

917.1 Canada—Description and travel [53-1432]

"Four university professors have collaborated in this factual study of the geography of Canada. They have divided the country into eight regions: Newfoundland and Labrador, the Maritime Provinces, Quebec, Southern Ontario, Northern Ontario, the Prairie Provinces, British Columbia, and the Canadian Northland. . . As ■ rule, within each region space is devoted to land forms, relief, climate, vegetation, soils, the distribution of population, periods and patterns of settlement, and so on. Next, the economic geography of each region is considered, including agriculture, forestry, fishing, mining, manufacturing, power supply, transportation, and communication. Finally, the sub-regions and cities of each main region are taken up. An introductory chapter to the entire book sets forth the physical background to Canada as ■ whole." Canadian Hist R

"Should prove an invaluable source book for students, teachers, and men of affairs, at home and abroad. It is written with impeccable authority." John Nicol

+ Canadian Forum 32:284 Mr '53 250w

"According to the editor's preface, the purpose of this book is to provide ■ balanced up-to-date treatment of the available geographic information on Canada, and give Canadians and outsiders a better understanding of this country. As far as facts are concerned, this object has been attained. The book would have been greatly strengthened, however, if more prominence had been given to underlying causes. . . Despite the defective editing—which ought to be corrected in a later edition—this book is a significant contribution to geographic literature on Canada. It should materially strengthen the teaching of geography in our universities." A. W. Currie

+ — Canadian Hist R 34:353 D '53 650w

"This book is written by Canadians for 'outsiders' as well as for citizens of the Dominion. It is refreshing to note that its subtitle reads 'A Geography of Canada' and not 'The Geography of Canada.' The four contributors are geographers of much experience, both 'on campus' and 'in the field.' . . One might well feel that content is thus a bit out of balance. Granted such, and wincing in passing at the idea of Winnipeg as being in a region of 'cool temperate interior climate' (italics are the reviewer's), we may say that the volume is clearly written, well organized, profusely illustrated, and chock-full of pertinent and up-to-date information. Except for those who, unlike this reviewer, are long-time experts on Canadian geography, the volume should prove both interesting and useful." R. M. Glendinning

+ — Geog ■ 44:315 Ap '54 750w

PUTNAM, MRS MABEL RAEF. What every woman should know about finance. 254p $3.50 Scribner

332 Finance, Personal 54-8692

Practical advice for women on problems of personal finance. The author is a financial counselor. Partial contents: Savings-investment fund; Life insurance; Good securities; Bonds; Stocks of banks and insurance companies; Choice of a stock exchange house; How to read ■ financial page; Buying and building a home; Income for retirement; Inflation; Tax relief; A note on the gold standard; Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 51:76 O 15 '54

+ Bookmark 14:33 N '54 20w

"Mrs. Putnam has crammed a great deal of basic financial information and excellent advice into this volume. She has even found time to take up the cudgel against double taxation and needless federal subsidies. The book is cleverly written for special appeal to women."

PUTNAM, M. R.—Continued

William Clark

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 31 '54 80w

"For those who want to, or have to, cope with their finances, here are the fundamentals for immediate instruction and application."

Kirkus 22:510 Ag 1 '54 120w

"A clear, concise survey of the entire field of finance addressed specifically to women. . . Recommended." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:2334 D 1 '54 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 21 '54 300w

PYATT, EDWARD CHARLES, and NOYCE, WILFRID, comps. British crags and climbers; an anthology. 235p il $4.50 British bk. centre

796.52 Mountaineering. English literature—Collections

"This is an anthology of British mountaineering literature and is the first to be devoted entirely to climbing in this country. . . There are adventures to be found in Britain which can become quite ■■ exciting, and even as desperate, as those which draw us to more distant ranges. We therefore decided that it would be a worth-while object to choose some of the best pieces from this inaccessible storehouse of literature and to present them here to ■ wider public. The extracts have been arranged in ■ chronological series to illustrate the foundation, the development and the present state of British climbing. . . The book is planned for climbers and non-climbers alike." (Pref) No index.

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 78:2104 D 1 '53 20w

"An interesting anthology. . . The choice of passages, short or long, is representative and entertaining, wherein the grandfathers of the present fraternity more than hold their own." H. W. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 13 '53 60w

Reviewed by J. A. Smith

New Statesman & Nation 45:156 F 7 '53 210w

Q

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. Blue herring mystery. 214p $2.75 Little

54-8319

Mystery story for ages ten to fourteen.

"All is not right in that charming, old-fashioned place named Edenboro, but a boy named Djuna is on hand to set things straight. It is his eighth assignment, but the book has all the freshness of an opus one." T. M. L.

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 11 '54 140w

"Lively hide and seek."

Kirkus 22:435 Jl 15 '54 110w

"Recommended for mystery fans aged 10-14."

E. S. Yoneshige

+ Library J 79:2255 N 15 '54 40w

"This is a fast moving adventure story, colorfully told, but in general I do not find the characters well drawn. Djuna is himself such a mental and physical infant prodigy that he is unrealistic." D. D.

N Y Times pt2 p34 N 14 '54 120w

"Queen, Jr., never fails to make his story move and hold the young reader."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 14 '54 40w

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. Glass village. 281p $3.50 Little 54-8296

Detective story.

Booklist 51:42 S 15 '54

Kirkus 22:371 Je 15 '54 90w

"The primitive backwoodsmen out for revenge provide excellent entertainment; but things have come to a pretty pass when an Ellery Queen can only be recommended for its stage scenery." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 48:368 S 25 '54 120w

"It is Mr. Queen the plotter rather than Mr. Queen the perturbed observer or Mr. Queen the fancy worker in fine prose that will keep your attention. That he does so with encumbrances speaks well for the plotting of Mr. Queen." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 22 '54 400w

"The 'Glass Village' has a nice basic idea, a background which shows Queen has had a thoughtful eye on his less-than-hamlets, and a solution as reasonable as if Ellery had been there to provide it. In other words, the author is continuing in business, even though the character of the same name is absent on vacation." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 15 '54 1450w

"Full-statured and fast-paced yarn has overtones for our time." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 30w

Reviewed by Penelope Houston

Spec p645 N 19 '54 120w

"The book is frankly a tour de force, a sort of essay on the Constitution dressed up in the costume of a whodunit. There is a real mystery to solve, however, and the plot and settings are elegantly done in the Ellery Queen manner, even though the famed sleuth is absent. It is quite possible that some who read it to be entertained will begin to think a little about why Ellery Queen believed it a good idea to write such an unusual story." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p5C Ag 22 '54 320w

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE, ed. Queen's awards: ninth series; the winners of the ninth annual detective short-story contest; sponsored by Ellery Queen's mystery magazine. 276p $3 Little

Short stories—Collections (46-8129)

Contents: Double image, by Roy Vickers; The house party, by Stanley Ellin; The couple next door, by Margaret Millar; Wild goose chase, by J. R. Macdonald; Backward, turn backward, by D. S. Davis; You know what, teacher? by Zenna Henderson; A case of catnapping, by A. H. Z. Carr; Tall story, by Margery Allingham; The dipping of the candlemaker, by Hayden Howard; The pale sergeant, by Henry Myers; Heat spell, by J. L. Hayward; Mom in the spring, by James Yaffe; Anything new on the stranger? by J. M. Ullman; Due process, by Harry Miner; The man out of the rain, by Philip MacDonald; Banquet and a half, by Lee Hays; The day of the last rock fight, by Joseph Whitehill.

Booklist 51:152 D 1 '54

"The years' best still providing the best entertainment in this form. . . As always, a select selection."

+ Kirkus 22:460 Jl 15 '54 110w

"The Queen's Awards are excellent testimony year after year to the continuing vitality and diversity of the mystery and this volume, the youngest of the sequence, seems the ripest in a distinguished membership." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 D 5 '54 250w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p50 O 24 '54 40w

"Any reviewer faced with the annual Queen collection is tempted simply to repeat, 'Read it, read it,' about 30 times. Surely no other choice of new short stories can keep up such an impressive standard year after year." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 7 '54 40w

"Fine selection, fine performance, as usual. Aces up." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:37 N 27 '54 10w

QUEEN, STUART ALFRED, and CARPENTER, DAVID BAILEY. American city. 383p il $5.50 McGraw

301.36 [323.352] Cities and towns—U.S. 52-10338

"The authors stress the decline of the rural-urban dichotomy and its replacement by a continuum of rural-urban characteristics. They analyze the changing pattern of metropolitan life both internally and regionally. They refer to a wide variety of cities in different parts of the country, though they lean heavily on data from St. Louis, with whose Washington University both are connected. They summarize and weave into the text material from an uncommonly large number of research studies, thus making the book eminently useful both as a guide and a source." Social Studies

"This new volume provides us with a mature and competent work. Offering an impressive amount of well-organized and interestingly presented material, it should be a strong contender as a text in its field. The authors have done a scholarly and generally an up-to-the-minute job of summarizing and ordering research findings." D. L. Foley

+ Am J Soc 59:512 Mr '54 650w

"In addition to its explicit and systematic theoretical structure grounded in careful empirical research, the book has other merits, particularly as a text for classroom use. The style is clear, lucid, and uncomplicated. . . . The work does have its weakness and limitations, however. The principal defect is to be found in its concluding section—there is a slight tendency for it to 'peter out.'" H. W. Saunders

+ Am Soc R 18:455 Ag '53 1050w

"This book is recommended for classroom use for courses in urban sociology, which have come to be offered frequently at the sophomore level. But there is little in it which would be conducive to research or of special advantage to the advanced student of urban sociology." M. F. Lewis

+ Social Educ 18:94 F '54 550w

Reviewed by Leonard Logan

Social Forces 32:99 O '53 400w

"This book, like its predecessor, The City (1939), by Stuart A. Queen and Lewis F. Thomas, ranks among the best college texts in urban sociology. . . . The book is of convenient proportions—adequate as a text for a term course or as a reference, streamlined enough to permit additional assignments and special projects. The chapter bibliographies are selective, not extensive; there are no further teaching aids. Both research references and Census data are of recent vintage." W. C. Neely

+ Social Studies 44:312 D '53 250w

QUEFFELEC, HENRI. Saint Anthony of the Desert; tr. from the French by James Whitall. 251p $3.75 Dutton

B or 92 Anthony, Saint, 251-356 54-5040

"Few facts are known about this fourth century 'Father of Monks' who spent nearly all of his adult life making solitary retreats into the Egyptian desert. The incidents recorded by his distinguished contemporary, Saint Athanasius, are here beautifully transformed into drama with greater artistry than either Gustave Flaubert or Hieronymus Bosch used in their re-creations of St. Anthony's struggles with the flesh and the devil." Library J

"All in all, the book is one to charm and profit its readers, many of whom would be even more pleased had there been added a simple map." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 180:156 N '54 500w

Reviewed by Alban Baer

Commonweal 61:172 N 12 '54 400w

"It will delight discriminating readers both devout and skeptical. The translation from the French by James Whitall is exceptionally felicitous." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 79:1056 Je 1 '54 130w

"An excellent, popular life of the father of Christian monasticism." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p39 S 26 '54 20w

QUILICI, FOLCO. Blue continent; photographs by [the author] in collaboration with Giorgio Ravelli. 246p $5 Rinehart

591.92 Diving, Submarine. Marine biology 54-8252

"The head of the photographic unit of the Italian National Underwater Expedition recounts the dangers and fascinations of 'aquatic big-game hunting' in the Red Sea. Handsome photographs." Bookmark

Booklist 51:126 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:33 N '54 20w

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 14 '54 250w

"The book shows occasional signs of having been hastened into print to compete with other works of underwater exploration. Such minor flaws, however, scarcely disturb the lively vigor of the book, unfolding as it does a panorama of fascinating sights and events which only a handful of men to date have been given to enjoy. It took a hardy man, and an adventurer, to undergo the experiences needed to write this book, and both with his camera and his pen Mr. Quilici has been worthy of his subject." H. B. Ellis

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 12 '54 550w

"This joins a growing library of marine exploration and exploits and does not suffer by comparison."

+ Kirkus 22:466 Jl 15 '54 220w

"Definitely recommended for the deep-sea diving and fishing—and hunting—shelf." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1824 O 1 '54 140w

"The Blue Continent" is handsomely illustrated with more than sixty photographs—twenty-six in color. Although the underwater pictures do not equal the artistic and action shots Hans Hass has shown from the Red Sea or the unusual color pictures taken there by the Cousteau group, they are nevertheless a striking collection." Eugene Clark

+ N Y Times p7 N 28 '54 800w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 120w

QUILTY, GLENN. Food for men; a treasury of hearty and tasty cookery. 352p $3.50 Sheridan

641.5 Cookery 53-12495

"Mr. Quilty has written his tripartite life story as musician, author and cook and has included recipes that he has acquired or contrived in those careers. The anecdotes basted into the normal cookbook sequence of recipes make a confusing story. Most have to do with Mr. Quilty's turns in society or musical and royal circles." (N Y Times) Index.

"If you enjoy reading a cookbook as much as trying out the recipes, this book will find favor. The author, a triple career man—cook, writer, and painter—has a knack for describing noted persons he has met and places visited in connection with discovering or creating each recipe, which makes thoroly enjoyable reading." Rosemary Fox

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 21 '54 160w

"Unfortunately, I had no success with the 'food for men.' The few tried recipes that were offered to friends were rejected by them! Such unusual combinations!" K. T. Willis

Library J 79:1230 Je 15 '54 50w

QUILTY, GLENN—Continued

"The Quilty recipes are decidedly 'different'—turkey basted with grenadine syrup; asparagus cooked in red wine and served with hollandaise made with orange juice and covered with grated cocoanut; lobster and pineapple salad sauced with a combination of anchovies, capers, mayonnaise and bourbon. The recipes do not appeal to me, but I am only a woman." Charlotte Turgeon

N Y Times p19 My 2 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54 290w

R

RADIN, PAUL. World of primitive man. 370p $5 Schuman

572.7 Society, Primitive 53-10752

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Radin has chosen to follow the turn of the century pattern of writing, where quantitatively limited selective evidence is used to back up impressionistic statements. One cannot help feeling that almost every one of his illustrations could be matched with an illustration to the contrary drawn from the same ethnographic library. However, in the preface to his book, the author is quite frank about admitting the presence in it of 'over-statements, wrong stresses and subjective interpretations.' Thus, one can open the book in the knowledge of its speculative and tentative nature and read it for the enjoyment of its literary qualities." Joseph Bram

+ Am Anthropol 56:898 O '54 800w

"Radin's discussion is a welcome and needed change from the emphasis upon man's alleged basic irrationality which informs so much of the recent literature in psychology and psychoanalysis." F. E. Hartung

+ Ethics 64:235 Ap '54 750w

"Few anthropologists will agree with all of Dr. Radin's generalizations, and some will feel that he has selected materials to prove his points. They will question some of his conclusions on the nature of aboriginal society. But, as in his earlier publications, Dr. Radin has challenged many accepted ideas, and has opened vistas for worthwhile discussions."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 9:442 D '53 230w

Wis Lib Bul 50:24 Ja '54

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. Reluctant gunman. 246p $2.75 Houghton

Western story. ■4-6821

Booklist 51:64 O 1 '54

Kirkus 22:297 My 1 '54 40w

"The old master of Westerns closes his long career with another fine yarn." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p20 O 3 '54 100w

Time 64:82 Jl 19 '54 1250w

RAJU, POOLLA TIRUPATI. Idealistic thought of India. 454p $6.50 Harvard univ. press

181.4 Idealism. Philosophy, Hindu A53-5293

"Metaphysical idealism is still the dominant philosophy of India. Her leading contemporary thinkers like Gandhi, Radhakrishnan, Tagore, Aurobindo and Bhagavan Das are metaphysical idealists. . . Idealistic Thought of India is a serious attempt to fathom the depths of idealistic thought. It depicts the metaphysical strands of the life and philosophy of India in the light of those of the West and attempts to bring out the deeper implications of idealistic metaphysics. It is not, however, just an exposition of Indian idealism but a contribution to idealistic metaphysics, devoting two out of eight chapters to a discussion of the basic problems of Western idealism." Publisher's note

"A thoroughly sound and well documented guide to the subject." Sidney Spencer

+ Hibbert J 52:205 Ja '54 330w

"Philosophical interchange between Eastern and Western thinkers will be furthered by this able work from the pen of the Professor of Philosophy at the University of Rajputana, Jaipur, India." C. H. Hamilton

+ J Philos 51:307 My 13 '54 1350w

"Dr. Raju wished to write for two kinds of reader and has admirably succeeded. He addresses, on the one hand, the Indian student of philosophy, who will here find out the metaphysics implicit in the ethical and spiritual teaching traditional in his country, and, on the other hand, the European in either hemisphere in whom intimations of Oriental wisdom have stirred curiosity or even perhaps a new hope. By a stroke of ingenuity, this dual purpose is served by means of a single sequence of chapters."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p697 O 30 '53 750w

RALPH, PHILIP LEE. Story of our civilization; decorations by Johannes Troyer. 319p $3.75 Dutton

901 Civilization—History 54-8121

"The origins, development and present state of Western Civilization are here recorded in a brief and simple manner for the general reader. The author seeks to highlight the underlying causes of events which have shaped our civilization and also to evaluate the achievements and limitations of our society." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 51:10 S 1 '54

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 5 '54 330w

"The 'Story of Our Civilization' purports to be no more than its title intimates. Professor Ralph offers no panacea for today's enormous problems. But he does an excellent job in outlining those problems with the simplicity born of profound understanding. Thus, to the layman who is confused by the contradictions and unseen forces of the twentieth century, the author performs a great service." G. H. Favre

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 24 '54 600w

"In concentrated form, provocatively presented, the story of civilization is given new perspective. For the scholar, this will inevitably seem too slick a job; for the general reader whose historical background is sketchy, it provides a quick refresher, tying the panorama of history into a cohesive pattern."

Kirkus 22:356 Je 1 '54 270w

"Necessarily, even the interpretations are suggestive rather than full, and as they are somewhat personal, they may meet with disagreement. Nevertheless, the non-historically-minded reader will gain a great deal in knowledge and understanding if he will persist to the end. For most public libraries, some school and college libraries." Dorothy Sinclair

+ — Library J 79:1510 S 1 '54 120w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ag 8 '54 30w

"Here is no text for the primary grades but an essay for adults—one of the most lucid, provocative, and penetrating appraisals of European history that has appeared in recent years." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Sat R 37:12 Ag 7 '54 950w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas

Springf'd Republican 5C S 5 '54 900w

RAMA RAU, SANTHA. This is India. 155p $2.50 Harper

954 [915.4] India—Description and travel 54-6025

"To clear up the misunderstandings about India engendered by occidental writers, a young Indian woman reviews the trips she has enjoyed in her native country, stressing the large cities rather than the villages, where, she insists, the real life of India resides. She journeys from the princely states of northern India, last strongholds of pageantry, to the south, still embedded in the caste system of Hinduism." Booklist

Booklist 50:229; 296 F 15 '54; Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:183 My '54 20w

Reviewed by Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 4 '54 260w

"Within the pages of her slim book, Miss Rama Rau has savored, to a remarkable degree, the full flavor of this land of contrasts. In effect, she provides a lesson for all travelers, anywhere, attesting to the rewards that come to those who journey with the heart and the mind both open wide." M. W. Stoer

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 1 '54 500w

Foreign Affairs 33:167 D '54 30w

"A lady in whom Western readers have come to delight presents herself once again as a guide of her homeland, in a charming book directed to the tourist."

+ Kirkus 22:57 Ja 15 '54 150w

"An excellent introduction to India for the American traveller. . . For public libraries especially." J. W. Rogers

+ Library J 79:548 Mr 15 '54 90w

"All in all, this book, the value of which is enhanced by some excellent photographs, is a 'must' for anyone contemplating a visit to India. Less fortunate readers will find pleasure in its evocation of a fascinating civilization."

+ Nation 178:427 My 15 '54 380w

"This essay about places to see and people to watch in India is an ideal bon voyage gift—just the right mixture of concrete references to shops and temples with graceful descriptions of the cultural treasures India has in store. But with all its outward simplicity, the book also answers many of the questions that assail an American on his first contact with a newly independent nation about which, in spite of many years of demands for its liberation from Britain, we know astonishingly little—and often distort even that little by our insistence on equating East with West." V. M. Dean

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 18 '54 550w

Reviewed by Robert Payne

N Y Times p18 Ap 4 '54 470w

New Yorker 30:133 Ap 3 '54 130w

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 180w

Wis Lib Bul 50:132 My '54

RAMSBOTTOM, JOHN. Mushrooms and toadstools; a study of the activities of fungi; with 84 color photographs by Paul L. de Lazlo and others. (New naturalist monograph) 306p $6.25 Macmillan (N Y)

589.2 Fungi. Mushrooms [54-4214]

"For the curious here are details of edibility and poisonousness, with the intermediate power of intoxication; details of cultivation, reminiscences of truffle-hunters, explanations of luminosity and fairy rings, expositions of the more extraordinary forms among toadstools. For the more technical there are details of morphology, sex and habitats, accounts of dry rot and penicillin. The volume is completed with eighty colour illustrations of individual fungi, of the highest quality, as well as numerous half-tones." Spec

"For thoroughness of coverage and excellence of illustration, the Collins New Naturalist series, constituting a survey of British natural history, sets a high standard in nature publishing. The newest volume, 'Mushrooms and Toadstools,' is as outstanding as the earlier books on insects, flowers and other plants." A. C. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 14 '54 220w

"No one else could have written this book, which I am sure will become a classic. Dr. Ramsbottom combines style and humor with his learning, and cleverly intersperses technical material with old tales and intriguing facts, so that the layman's interest is fed and the knowledge of the more expert is expanded. . . The mycologist and the toadstool-hunting amateur cannot do without this book, and it should appeal too to anyone who has ever felt inquisitive about these peculiar and ubiquitous growths, the fungi." A. J. H.

+ Spec p26 Ja 1 '54 260w

"Though this book is undoubtedly technical in parts, it also offers a rich miscellany of odd, entertaining and interesting information to any reader who is a naturalist without being necessarily a specialist. The illustrations show, among other things, how very beautiful are some of our mushrooms and toadstools."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p44 Ja 15 '54 500w

RAMSDEN, E. H. Sculpture: theme and variations; towards a contemporary aesthetic. 56p 103pl $8 British bk. centre

735.29 Sculpture [53-13500]

"This work is a review of the sculptural achievement of the first half of the twentieth century, viewed in its historical perspective, as part of an evolutionary process. . . It is not a detailed history, nor a brief introduction to the plates. It is a study in which the author, who has for the past twenty years been preoccupied with the consideration of the sculpture of all periods in the East and in the West alike, has endeavoured to assess the aesthetic requirements of this art. These findings have been applied to the work of our own epoch, while at the same time relating the new developments to their social setting and to contemporary trends in all fields of intellectual activity." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:255 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:2104 N 1 '54 30w

"On the whole the best assessment of this book seems to be that its author has an acute mind remarkably free from fashionable (or unfashionable) clichés; that he knows and loves his subject and constantly makes penetrating and valuable observations; and, although closer reasoning and more logical presentation would have improved it, the book is a stimulating one of considerable value."

Stephen Bone

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 O 6 '53 290w

"Disagree with the conclusions or not, readers should find this a stimulating and valuable book." Stuart Preston

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 31 '54 400w

Reviewed by Belle Krasne

Sat R 37:40 My 8 '54 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p828 D 25 '53 1250w

RAMSEY, FREDERIC. Guide to longplay jazz records. 263p il $4.50; pa $3.50 Long Player Publications, Inc, Box 346, N.Y. 19

789.913 Phonograph records—Catalogs. Jazz music 54-3159

"This discography already hailed by specialists in the field, is arranged by title or name of leader or featured artist or group. Its aim is to bring order into a chaotic field. The unit of listing is the LP record or album, and there are artist and title indexes. None for composer. More than 4,000 titles are included." Library J

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 79:1592 S 15 '54 100w

"In his latest book Ramsey plunges into a relatively uncharted jungle to perform the long overdue service of providing information that, in many cases, is lacking on the discs themselves and to give a systematic critical winnowing to the recent helter-skelter flow of new and re-issued jazz. In the process, he has undermined a somewhat perverted variant of one of the simpler pleasures of the pre-atomic age." J. S. Wilson

+ Sat R 37:30 J 31 '54 1300w

RAMSEY, WARREN. Jules Laforgue and the ironic inheritance. 302p il $5 Oxford

B or 92 Laforgue, Jules 53-7617

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Distinguished and delightful book, which tells us all we really need to know about the author of the Complaintes," Justin O'Brien

+ Mod Philol 52:69 Ag '54 1200w

"Mr. Ramsey's book . . . is of value not only for the light it throws on many aspects of the poet's life and work, but also for an extended attempt to define his position with reference to modern poetry. . . Jules Laforgue and the Ironic Inheritance is concerned, for the most part, with the ideological background out of which the poet wrote, the concepts which he carried over into his poetry, and the way in which the imaginative formula of these concepts was to influence the poets of a later generation. . . All this is very well, and in writing of it and of other material with which Laforgue was inevitably familiar, the ideas being, as they were, in the air at the time, Mr. Ramsey gives us a good general basis for understanding Laforgue's work. But when he interprets individual poems completely in the light of these things, in an attempt to give an argument to his own book, he gives arguments to Laforgue's poetry which will not bear close inspection." W. J. Smith

+ — Poetry 83:331 Mr '54 1100w

"What sets this book above the general run of literary studies is its sheer readability, for Mr. Ramsey writes with verve and quietly underplays his brilliant catholicity. His book won the Modern Language Association of America-Oxford Press Award as 'a significant contribution to the understanding of a foreign literature.' It easily deserves that honor; it also contributes considerably to an understanding of twentieth-century English poetry." Robert Halsband

+ Sat R 37:64 F 20 '54 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p24 Ja 8 '54 1900w

"In spite of the acknowledged debt to him of such poets as T. S. Eliot, Ezra Pound, and Hart Crane, Jules Laforgue has not had full-length critical recognition in English until the publication of this volume. Dr. Ramsey's interpretation of the compatriot and contemporary of Baudelaire, Mallarmé, Verlaine, and Rimbaud is remarkable both for its critical acumen and for its avoidance of panegyric. To place an underestimated poet, the subject of long and devoted study, in his rightful place without making a romantic hero of him, is a difficult feat indeed. The author has skillfully woven biographical details into his main story of the intellectual and artistic growth of a poet."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:421 D '53 250w

RAND, McNALLY AND COMPANY. World guide [a concise il. encyclopedia of world places arranged by countries and continents] selected and adapted from the Columbia Lippincott gazetteer of the world; by arrangement with Columbia univ. press. 726p il $6.95 Rand McNally

910.3 Geography—Dictionaries 53-13329

"In one compact volume, all the important places of the world are described in detail and accompanied by numerous photographs and maps of major cities. . . All the information about a country appears in one place. The cities, towns, rivers, mountains, etc., within each country are alphabetically arranged under the country article. The countries themselves are organized regionally within their continent and generally follow the order of the maps in the Rand McNally World Atlases. For quick reference, all the entries in the World Guide appear alphabetically in a universal index at the back of the book. The articles in this book have been selected and adapted from the Columbia Lippincott Gazetteer of the World, published by Columbia University Press in 1952." Pref

Booklist 50:183 Ja 1 '54

"With it on hand, and one of the bigger atlases available, the average household will be able to pin down just about anything it needs to know about geography and related matters—certainly at least the kind of information that is useful for quick reference when, after reading a newspaper or magazine piece, or hearing a broadcast, you want to pursue the facts a bit more in detail." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 D 17 '53 170w

"For readers strategically planning a tour or looking for a concise, encyclopedic reference volume which contains historical, economic, and geographical data on all areas of this globe, the 'Rand McNally World Guide' should be especially attractive. . . Each entry, in addition to the basic gazetteer information, offers a capsule history, thus enhancing the volume's value as a reference. The text is ably abetted by numerous photographs." Siegfried Mandel

+ Sat R 36:54 Ja 2 '54 140w

"Because of its selectivity and arrangement, the Rand McNally World Guide will not take the place of standard comprehensive geographical reference works, nor will it serve the purposes of a gazetteer except in a secondary and limited way. It is recommended as a concise, classified encyclopedia of places, with excellent authority, useful for the purposes suggested by the publisher."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:43 Jl '54 1050w

RANDOLPH, ALEXANDER. Mail boat. 179p $2.50 Holt

54-5459

A short novel told in a series of letters, supposedly written by two of the characters. They are an innocent young American woman, who had been traveling in Europe when she met the other member of the cast: a sophisticated American writer. Their love affair on a lonely island off the coast of Italy has a tragic ending.

Booklist 50:241 F 15 '54

Reviewed by M. B. Snyder

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 28 '54 220w

"The letter form is handled skillfully to create and evoke an absorbing though not highly original study in mood and change."

+ Kirkus 22:12 Ja 1 '54 150w

"This brief novel is packed with vivid incident, but its many overtones, some of them reminiscent of Kafka, promise more than the book really gives. Large collections only."

R. B. Robertson

Library J 79:383 F 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by Anne Duchene

Manchester Guardian p4 N 23 '54 60w

"This is an exquisite novel. . . In its artistry—its delicate use of the resources of language, its taut suggestions of much in little—as well as in its atmospheric power, its pitilessness that amounts almost to sadism, 'The Mail Boat' reminds one sharply of the shorter novels of Evelyn Waugh. It is nevertheless the highly individualized first novel of a young Czech who recently came from Europe to live in Arizona." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 21 '54 270w

"The setting has been brilliantly sketched in. . . The method has, of course, the danger of a too-narrow framing; the reader may feel that it denies him certain facts, attitudes, background. This first novel will make most of its readers look for a second, perhaps fuller bodied in character and episode. However good it may be, it will probably not have a greater polish or understanding." H. T. Kane

+ N Y Times p4 F 21 '54 370w

"The author's device of telling this entirely through letters written from the island has its limitations, of course, but it is also surprisingly effective. Oscar Tower's story notes alone provide an excellent insight into his basic self-torturing sterility, while Martha's letters reveal the aggressive innocence with which she courts disaster for them both. Together they give an excellent picture of the harsh, colorful life of the old island, as seen through their very different eyes." L. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 25 '54 430w

Reviewed by William Murray
Sat R 37:33 Ag 28 '54 240w

RANNEY, AUSTIN. Doctrine of responsible party government; its origins and present state. 176p $4; pa $3 Univ. of Ill. press

329 Political parties—U.S. U.S.—Politics and government 53-5225

"In his brief volume Austin Ranney has made an analysis of the theories concerning party government formulated at the turn of the century by a distinguished group of scholars and publicists, all Americans except one, and has made an attempt to describe the status of these ideas today. Ranney's careful and precise summary of the ideas of Wilson, Lowell, Ford, Goodnow, Ostrogorski, and Croly is the first attempt to study the history of American theories about party politics." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by W. E. Binkley
Am Hist R 60:200 O '54 320w

"The intellectual materials examined are intrinsically so interesting and exciting that it is a sheer delight to rediscover them. It seems to the reviewer that Professor Ranney is a little less successful when he attempts to formulate a party theory of his own." E. E. Schattschneider

+ Ann Am Acad 295:152 S '54 450w

RASMUSSEN, ALBERT HENRY. China trader. 274p il $3.95 Crowell

B or 92 China—Description and travel 54-5530

An account of the author's thirty-two years, 1905 to 1937, in China. The book contains many anecdotes about "Old China hands," many of whom Mr Rasmussen met in the course of his long years in Mongolia and China. No index.

"China in a period of unrest from the viewpoint of a quickwitted foreign trader who neatly jumped the hurdles of anti-foreign action and sentiment; unforgettable as to character and milieu."

+ Kirkus 21:807 D 15 '53 160w

"I may have found this book pleasanter going than the average reader will, because I have my own memories of the China he knew, and of quite a few persons whom he knew, and he brings them back to me very vividly. But this reviewer is convinced that the reader who has never been in China will get from this a better understanding of the people and their ways than he ever had before." Rodney Gilbert

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 21 '54 600w

"An interesting personal history. . . A great deal has been written about life in Shanghai, Hong Kong, Canton, and Peiping during the years Mr. Rasmussen covers, but accounts of life in the small concessions are comparatively rare. Mr. Rasmussen's book bears all the marks of authenticity. Fortunately for him, he was both an avid reader and an active sportsman, able to create his own life." J. J. Espey

+ N Y Times p10 F 21 '54 500w

"Wisely [Mr Rasmussen] has little to say about the long years when he was twiddling his thumbs in the Concessions, and he splits the book in two and begins again in Tientsin in the Twenties when he was in charge of the wool department of Arnhold and Co., with power to buy wool over High Asia. . . He goes on, wool-gathering to the end, happier in Mongolia than in China, cursing, praising, drawing his occasional, sharply etched pictures, hugely enjoying his reminiscences of a China gone beyond recall." Robert Payne

+ Sat R 37:28 F 20 '54 800w

"These adventures are set down unpretentiously and clearly, with a delightful sense of humour, and regarded merely as an adventure book Mr. Rasmussen's experiences are admirable reading. But the author has done more than write an adventure book; he has produced the most true-to-life and vivid picture of China which has appeared for a long time, and the moods and attitudes of the Chinese and of the foreigners who used to live and travel in the Chinese interior have been captured with quite unusual fidelity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p517 Ag 13 '54 900w

RAU, SANTHA RAMA. See Rama Rau, S.

RAVIELLI, ANTHONY. Wonders of the human body; il. by [the author]. 125p $2.50 Viking

611 Anatomy, Human—Juvenile literature. Physiology—Juvenile literature 54-12372

"An introduction to anatomy and the nervous and digestive systems, written and illustrated by an excellent technician whose eye for page planning and comparative objects makes the pictures texts in themselves. Two long sections first, on bones and muscles, give basic information and the ideas that will make it stick. In the last two sections on the nervous and digestive systems facts are conveyed through more diagrams and overlays of familiar objects. A boy's figure is used throughout as the main model." Kirkus

Booklist 51:47 S 15 '54

"Excellent bookmanship. For youngsters of all ages."

+ Commonweal 61:202 N 19 '54 20w

Horn Bk 30:438 D '54 120w

"An appealing original and imaginative [work]. . . Fine for supplementary school use."

+ Kirkus 22:584 S 1 '54 120w

"In brief, clear text, and dramatic two-tone pictures, he makes physiology fascinating rather than grim or frightening." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p28 N 14 '54 120w

Reviewed by R. K. Plumb

N Y Times pt2 p22 N 14 '54 100w

"The book, which has been checked throughout by specialists, is a welcome addition to a rather meager area in children's literature."

A. B. McG.

+ Sat R 37:83 N 13 '54 180w

RAY, JESSE EDGAR. Graphic architectural drafting. 256p il $4.80 McKnight

744.4 Architectural drawing 54-8385

"An introductory text written by the chairman of the Department of Drafting of the Stout Institute. It is suited primarily for use as a text in vocational school courses. Also, it holds some potential interest for laymen who wish to be able to understand house plans and other architectural drawings because of a personal interest in building. Approximately half of the space is devoted to reproductions of samples of all of the varieties of architectural drawings ranging from floor plans to artistic renderings. Bibliography. Index." N Y New Tech Bks

"Many of the illustrations have been taken from other sources, hence the book lacks uniformity of style. Nevertheless, it is probably pedagogically sound, and the variety of illustrations will increase its usefulness for some readers." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:990 My 15 '54 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:21 Mr '54

RAYMOND, RENE. I'll bury my dead, by James Hadley Chase [pseud]. 220p $2.50 Dutton

Detective story. 53-10847

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 21 '54 50w

Kirkus 21:722 N 1 '53 50w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 7 '54 120w

RAYMOND, RENE—Continued

"My theory that Mr. Chase's writing was faintly improving and certainly couldn't get worse has been definitely shattered." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p26 Ja 10 '54 30w

"The story makes no pretense of plausibility. C minus." L. G. Offord

— San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 24 '54 40w

RAYNAL, MAURICE. Picasso biographical and critical studies; tr. by James Emmons. (Taste of our time) 135p il col il $4.95 Skira

759.6 Picasso, Pablo (Pablo Ruys) [53-11066]

"Here are 63 reproductions of Picasso's work in full, brilliant color; Raynal, who has admired the artist for some fifty years, provides biographical and critical studies; these are translated by James Emmons. There is a chronological survey, a selected bibliography, and an index of names." Library J

Booklist 50:281 Mr 15 '54

"A readable account of the artistic achievements of a man [the author] has known personally for 50 years and who may have wielded the greatest single influence in the development of 20th century painting." Edward Barry + Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 F 21 '54 50w

"Art librarians everywhere are finding 'Skira' an increasingly frequently used word. Patrons ask for 'a Skira'; no other illustrated book pleases them as well. So this fourth volume in 'The Taste of our Time' Series will be much in demand. . . Attractive, readable, these small volumes may cause a mass conversion to modern art. Recommended." A. S. Plaut + Library J 79:208 F 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by Robert Richman
New Repub 129:21 D 21 '53 40w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 2 '54 10w

Reviewed by Aline Louchheim
N Y Times p4 D 6 '53 20w

RAYTER, JOE. Victim was important. 192p $2.50 Scribner 54-5916

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:46 Ja 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 My 16 '54 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p27 Ap 11 '54 40w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 25 '54 40w

"Average." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:35 Ap 17 '54 20w

REACH, JAMES. Blind gambit. 186p $2.75 Coward-McCann 54-5798

Mystery story.

Kirkus 22:349 Je 1 '54 60w

"The tale is busy but tiresome and terribly predictable." James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 15 '54 80w

"A book which is, oddly, almost as enjoyable as it is foolish and familiar." Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p15 Ag 8 '54 70w

"Grade-B Commie-chase." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:37 Ag 21 '54 20w

READ, GARDNER. Thesaurus of orchestral devices [with a foreword by Aaron Copland]. 631p $15 Pitman

781.63 Instrumentation and orchestration. Musical instrument 53-13253

"In the Preface the author states, 'This Thesaurus of Orchestral Devices is intended to be a lexicon of instrumentation which will serve the student and/or professional orchestrator in the same manner and to the same degree that Bartlett's Familiar Quotations, Roget's Thesaurus of English Words, or Webster's New International Dictionary aid both the student of literature and the established writer. As far as is known, no such thesaurus of orchestration has ever before been compiled.' The book is designed for practical and specific guidance rather than for theoretical or aesthetic treatment. . . The major portion of the book (p.36-581) deals with special effects in scoring for six instrumental groups: woodwinds, brasses, percussion, keyboard instruments, harp, and strings. . . The outstanding feature of the work is its wealth of illustrative references drawn from scores that, in the author's opinion, afford striking examples for the devices under discussion." Subscription Bks Bul

"The Thesaurus of Orchestral Devices should be of definite value to composers, arrangers, and music students. Its method of citing by reference to scores rather than by direct quotation has obvious advantages for the musician, for it enables him to look up the cited passage within its general context, and thereby to gain an insight into the musical reasons for each orchestral effect. At the same time, this method gives the Thesaurus the features of an index whose practical usefulness depends in large measure on the availability of the study scores cited in its pages. With this understanding, the Thesaurus is recommended for homes and libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:57 O '54 1100w

READ, WILLIAM THORNTON. Dislocations in crystals. 228p il $5 McGraw

548.5 Crystallography. Deformations (mechanics) 53-6049

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"It may be stated that this is a specialized book written to expound the relatively pragmatic view of a single investigator, who has placed emphasis on an important group of problems. Unquestionably it belongs on the shelves of anyone who is interested in undertaking detailed calculations with dislocation models. It probably has somewhat limited use for the individual interested in broad applications of dislocation theory or for those who desire something approaching a general review of the subject." Frederick Seitz

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:2283 Ap 20 '54 900w

Reviewed by F. E. Williams
Chem Eng 61:386 My '54 150w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:6 Ja '54

"A twofold contribution is made by Mr. Read's book. It first supplies a lucid and reasonably complete account of the basic properties of dislocations, relying largely on geometrical description and minimizing mathematical complications. Secondly, it elucidates the present position of dislocation theory by distinguishing clearly between qualitative and quantitative applications. It is therefore, of interest to all physicists and metallurgists working in this field, though the level of treatment makes it accessible to advanced undergraduates."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:267 Je '54 240w

REDDING, JAY SAUNDERS. An American in India; a personal report on the Indian dilemma and the nature of her conflicts. 277p $3.50 Bobbs

954 [915.4] India—Social conditions. India—Intellectual life 54-9489

"The author, Professor of Literature and Creative Writing at Hampton Institute, was sent in 1952 by the Truman Administration to India to present the American way of life to the Indian people. His trip was an extensive one, including the important cities, many university centers, and a number of small villages. He met university people, intellectuals, writers, journalists, and political office holders, and entered many Indian homes." Library J

Booklist 51:105 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:59 D '54 30w

Reviewed by Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 17 '54 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

Commonweal 60:591 S 17 '54 90w

"As a Negro, he was accepted socially and with an intimacy seldom accorded white visitors. His report is an interesting and valuable one, informal and highly readable. An excellent book, highly recommended." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 79:1589 S 15 '54 150w

"His story is told with the eyes and ears of a skilled novelist, and the personalities he meets emerge as real and vivid, if often baffling, people. He gives the impression of being honest and accurate in reporting what little he saw of progress made under the Indian government, and he warmly acknowledges generosity and good-will wherever he encountered it. He does not fail to point out shortcomings of individual Americans abroad and their offenses against good manners and good relations. But it is not probable that such indications of objectivity in his report will make it any more palatable to Indian sensibilities." Edgar Snow

+ Nation 61:387 O 30 '54 1150w

"When he is not pressing his lopsided political message, Redding often achieves penetrating vignettes of the Indian scene. . . Redding is, in fact, so painstaking a reporter of sights, sounds and human interest that he manages to describe in absorbing, deadpan detail the very episodes which churned him most severely within." Selig Harrison

+ New Repub 131:15 N 1 '54 2850w

"Mr. Redding is never dogmatic, in the manner of some of our fast-moving correspondents and V. I. P.'s. He tells us of his own problems and unanswered questions. His book is lively, colorful, consistently thought-provoking, bewilderingly honest. I know no other book dealing with India which remotely resembles it." Lewis Gannett

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 12 '54 800w

Reviewed by M. A. Brown

N Y Times p16 S 26 '54 1050w

"Another look at the biggest and shakiest of the new democracies, and a hard one. Mr. Redding's passage through India, like that of most recent Western reporters, was something less than leisurely, but the impressions he here records are of far more than ordinary interest. . . They are not very comforting impressions."

+ New Yorker 30:143 O 2 '54 280w

Reviewed by Ralph McGill

Sat R 37:14 D 25 '54 700w

Time 64:116 S 20 '54 900w

REDGRAVE, MICHAEL. Actor's ways and means. 90p il $3 Theatre arts

792.9 Acting

54-38459

"How the author approaches his roles, together with his views on his craft and on the theater. The text is that of the Rockefeller Foundation Lectures which Mr. Redgrave delivered at Bristol University during the session of 1952-'53." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Recommended for theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:779 Ap 15 '54 10w

"This review of the actor's art and possibilities is highly concentrated, erudite, written with great clarity and of quite absorbing interest." Arthur Marshall

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:724 D 5 '53 210w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 28 '54 30w

"Mr. Redgrave's erudition is considerable but he makes light and graceful use of it. One sets down his little book with delight at having made the acquaintance of a cultivated gentleman who can talk seriously but with flecks of humor, authoritatively but with modesty about a subject that he knows well." Morris Houghton

+ Sat R 37:32 Je 26 '54 800w

Reviewed by Iain Hamilton

Spec p546 N 13 '53 900w

REDMAN, ALVIN, ed. Epigrams of Oscar Wilde. See Wilde, O.

REES, ALBERT LLOYD GEORGE. Chemistry of the defect solid state. 136p $2 Wiley

541.22 Solids

54-1972

"Most of the recent books on the solid state have been written either from the physical or electronic viewpoint. This one therefore has an element of novelty. However, even though the viewpoint is chemical, more than half of the space has necessarily been devoted to the physical and electronic aspects of solids. Only the latter four chapters are essentially chemical. These will serve to give the alert chemist some awareness of the chemical implications of solid state phenomena and also of the inadequacy of present-day chemical techniques in appraising them. The bibliography comprises about 75 references." N Y New Tech Bks

"The account hits certain high spots only, and it will be most useful to the graduate chemist who wants a quick view of the field with perhaps a list of some of the outstanding literature." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1594 S 15 '54 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:51 Jl '54

REES, GILBERT. Respectable women. 342p $3.50 Random house

54-7795

A story of Kansas in the 1890s; and of three women, two girls and their mother. The mother's driving need for a "respectable" life for herself and her children is the theme of the novel, seen thru the eyes of the younger girl.

Booklist 51:63 O 1 '54

"A lyric quality and a sensitive understanding add to the picture of a rowdy, raw and robust midwest and make for a living period portrait."

+ Kirkus 22:450 Jl 15 '54 200w

"Completely original and completely unde-rivative, Gilbert Rees' fine novel, 'Respectable Women' paints the portrait of an undistinguished family. He writes with a hard to define quality that holds the knowledge and warmth of kinship, that recognizes the innumerable and frequently conflicting layers of temperament in seemingly uncomplicated people. In language that holds the earthy texture of folk literature, he portrays them without criticism for their weakness and without banners for their strength." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 29 '54 850w

"Mr. Rees is an unfortunately slow starter. Some of his earlier scenes are so lugubriously in the father-dear-father-come-home-with-memow tradition as to suggest he is writing a parody. But once he knocks off Pa he settles down to some robust story-telling." V. P. Haas

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 29 '54 450w

"A folksy reminiscence in the Mark Twain tradition, a mixture of ingenuousness and exaggeration, of naive and salty wit, a homespun chronicle shot through with flashes of startling color and beauty. What gives it a difference is the subtle shift of emphasis from the story told to the storyteller; from a recreation, however authentic and picturesque, of a colorful era to the poetic and sensitive creation of a character—the ostensible narrator, Clara Barnes." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 37:22 S 4 '54 450w

REESE, GUSTAVE. Music in the renaissance. 1022p il $15 Norton

780.9 Music, Renaissance 54-10623

A sequel to the author's Music in the Middle Ages (Book Review Digest 1940). The present volume carries this scholarly study of music and musicians thru the early part of the seventeenth century. Bibliography. Index.

"This is a book for the musicologist, the practicing musician, or the musical layman whose interests exceed the range of the hobbyist. As a reference work it is superlative. It is a requirement for all libraries. It is a monumental piece of scholarship." Harold Rogers

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 24 '54 350w

Manchester Guardian p4 O 26 '54 180w

"There is no book on this period in any language which covers the ground in so much detail or with such abundant documentation. The documentation is above all practical. Its object is not merely to refer scholars to authoritative works but also to direct the reader to any reprints of sources which may happen to be available in his library." J. A. Westrup

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:547 S '54 1600w

"Mr. Reese has written a book for musicians. Not that he has ignored biographical information or handsome pictorial illustrations. But he has wisely decided that a book on music cannot, for the sake of easy popularity, bypass the very stuff of which music is made—staves, clefs, sharps, flats—nor the technical names for the procedures current in the period—caccia, canon, descant, faux-bourbon. With the ample bibliographical references and the admirable index, he who is willing to seek can always find the answer. The scholarship is meticulous, the coverage unusually complete and the presentation always fair." F. W. Sternfeld

+ N Y Times p17 Jl 25 '54 390w

"As a textbook 'Music in the Renaissance' will of course be indispensable, if not all-sufficient. Scholars working in certain departments of the subject may expand and develop their materials beyond what Reese has supplied, but they will find their sources here. And specialists in the related fields of literature—the liturgy, theatre, dance, etc.—will profit endlessly by his researches." P. L. Miller

+ Sat R 37:16 Jl 3 '54 800w

REEVES, JAMES, ed. Holy Bible in brief. See Bible. Whole. Selections

REID, PATRICK ROBERT. Men of Colditz [Eng title: Latter days]. 287p $3.95 Lippincott

940.547 Colditz, Germany. Castle. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German 54-6923

A sequel to The Colditz Story (Book Review Digest 1953). This tells what the Allied prisoners of war confined in the Saxon prison did after the author's own escape in 1942 up to the time of the coming of the Americans in 1945.

Booklist 50:338 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:183 My '54 30w

"Reid is a superb story teller, quiet, humorous, capable of evoking thru his narrative that grandeur that touches men in adversity." Wayne Carver

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 18 '54 280w

Kirkus 22:93 F 1 '54 180w

"Book makes for attractive reading, though it could hardly be termed essential. Libraries with comprehensive collections on the last war will wish to acquire it." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 79:774 Ap 15 '54 130w

"Those who read 'The Colditz Story' may not enjoy its companion volume so much, for it is a case-history of escapes rather than a personal story. The incidents described are often immensely exciting and undoubtedly need to be recorded—if only because they show the astonishing zest, courage, and morale of the 'bad boys.' But the reader will miss the essential 'I' of the writer who is telling his own story his own way and who can identify each reader with the mingled ecstasy and nightmare which makes escape in itself a special sounding-board for human emotions." T. C. F. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 11 '53 130w

"So successful was Mr. Reid's book, 'The Colditz Story,' that he has written a sequel to it—a worthy sequel, although of necessity lacking some of the impact of his first revelations about how Allied officer-prisoners squirmed out of the mediaeval castle which the Germans considered to be escape-proof." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p4 Ap 18 '54 900w

Reviewed by Peter Blake

N Y Times p29 My 9 '54 750w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 22 '54 500w

Reviewed by Merle Miller

Sat R 37:14 Ag 28 '54 650w

"If the book has a fault, it is that it lacks a central character; it offers us a hundred heroes where we should prefer one. This may seem unfair criticism, where the author has pledged himself to give the facts; yet there is an attractive figure, around whom the others could be shown revolving—namely, the British O. i/c Escapes, who so occupied his time in aiding and coordinating the plans of his comrades that he was never able to contrive his own getaway. It would not seriously have falsified history to show him a little larger than life-size. Such a technical criticism, however, is perhaps ungracious. The book is alive from its first page to its last, and if anyone is collecting the classic escape stories of the recent war, he must add The Latter Days to his lengthening list."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p60 Ja 22 '54 420w

Wis Lib Bul 50:134 My '54

REIK, THEODOR. Haunting melody: psychoanalytic experiences in life and music. 376p $4 Farrar, Straus

780.1 Psychoanalysis. Music—Psychology 53-9681

A psychoanalyst discourses on music and life. He is especially interested in the melodies which haunt us, and what they indicate. The first section of the book contains case material; the second attempts an analysis of the haunting melodies; the third presents an experience of the author's concerning Mahler's Second Symphony. No index.

Kirkus 21:526 Ag 1 '53 150w

"Another worthwhile and readable contribution to the psychology of unconscious processes... Highly educational observations and insights for general and technical reading circles." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 78:1843 O 15 '53 140w

Reviewed by C. C. Pratt

Music Lib Assn Notes 11:308 Mr '54 1000w

"The major part of the book, which can be viewed in part as an autobiography laced with music, deals with the author's associations with the opening bars of the chorale from the last movement of Gustav Mahler's 'Second Symphony.'... The search for the hidden meaning of the Mahler theme involved Reik in many years of self-analytic work and ended but recently—in fact, with the publication of this book... In giving the history of this piece of psychoanalytic detective work, Reik has many true and original things to say about life, love, death, and the confusing creature, man." John Dollard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 31 '54 650w

"This book is informal, not dogmatic, not 'caught in the tangle of theoretical sophistication' nor 'filled with terminological labels and thought clichés.' It is written with great literary felicity by a constantly observing and searching mind. There are analysts, who may differ with some opinions of Reik just as he disagrees with some of their ideas. In its essence his book is not only an original contribution to psychoanalysis but also a unique psychoanalytic self-portrait of the author, exhibiting, with great courage, his human weaknesses and the heroic struggle of his life." Hermann Vollmer

+ N Y Times p6 D 27 '53 650w

"While the conclusion is neither especially startling nor even very profound, the book is intelligently written and an interesting excursion into human thoughts." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p10C D 20 '53 80w

REILEY, CATHARINE CONWAY. Group fun; games and activities for girls; techniques for leaders; il. by Margaret E. Dieckerhoff. 341p $3.95 Dodd

790 Games, Girls

54-6680

"This work aims to combine the techniques of group leadership and the activities which over the years have been found to be of general interest to girls. It is primarily addressed to the lay leader who is interested in both the theory and practice of working with groups. The first section is devoted to the why, how, and what of youth leadership and offers practical guides. The remaining three sections present a variety of activities popular with youth groups in an easy to follow, 'how-to-do' fashion. In addition, diagrammatical illustrations accompany the text." Foreword

Booklist 50:455 J1 15 '54

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:714 Ap 15 '54 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:206 O '54

REILLY, DAVID ROBIN. Portrait waxes; an introd. for collectors. 160p 59pl $9 British bk. centre

731 Wax modeling. Collectors and collecting [53-35948]

Describes the achievements of the British and Continental artists who specialized in portraits in wax. Discusses the works of the craftsmen of the Italian Renaissance, and of German and French artists, but stresses the works of English artists in this line. Bibliography. Index.

"As so little has been written on this subject perhaps the high price of this volume should be disregarded." A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:208 F 1 '54 90w

"Although it is such a comparatively minor branch of the arts it is satisfactory to have at last an authoritative and well produced work on the subject."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p456 J1 17 '53 320w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERAN). Tell her it's murder. 242p $2.75 Random house

Detective story.

54-5392

Booklist 51:134 N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:460 J1 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p17 O 3 '54 30w

"A little overcomplex at the end, but otherwise one of Mrs. Reilly's most adroit blends of romance and homicide."

+ New Yorker 30:167 O 16 '54 80w

"Well characterized and constructed, this is an example of tradition at its best. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 O 24 '54 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:63 N 6 '54 20w

REILLY, WILLIAM JOHN. Life planning for college students. 173p $2.50 Harper

371.425 Vocational guidance. Counseling 54-8984

"The purpose of this book is to define the fundamental principles of orderly thinking and intelligent action, and to show how college students can successfully use these tested principles in arriving at satisfactory solutions to the various problems of life planning. The book is based on case studies of thousands of undergraduates and graduates of more than a hundred leading colleges and universities throughout the United States. The earliest studies, prior to 1932, were made while the author was on the research staffs at Carnegie Institute of Technology, The University of Chicago, and The University of Texas." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 51:5 S 1 '54

Kirkus 22:305 My 1 '54 170w

"The author has written several other good books in the fields of human relations and career planning. Highly recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 79:1308 J1 '54 130w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p7C N 28 '54 180w

Wis Lib Bul 50:203 O '54

REINFELD, FRED. Coin collectors' handbook. 127p il $2.50 Sterling

737.4 Coins

54-9358

"One of the great chess players of the world and a leading numismatist, gives some expert guidance on identifying coins, determining their condition, and judging their value. He gives a complete catalog of American and Canadian coins and shows on a chart those of the rest of the world." Library J

Booklist 51:153 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:59 D '54 30w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:722 Ap 15 '54 30w

REINFELD, FRED. Commemorative stamps of the U.S.A.; an illustrated history of our country. 344p $4.50 Crowell

383.22 Postage stamps—U.S.

54-5616

Text and pictures of 330 stamps, arranged in chronological order to commemorate the high spots in North American history. Scott catalog numbers have been used. There is a section on Sources of stamp designs, and an index. For ages twelve and older.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:96 D '54 30w

Booklist 51:181 D 15 '54

"There is an occasional hint as to rarity, but no indication as to value. A final chapter lists sources of designs. Here's one way to tie a hobby to history. The scope of coverage is wide."

+ Kirkus 22:713 O 15 '54 160w

"The illustrations are good, the descriptive matter is adequate. Recommended for 10 years and up." L. T. Bulman

+ Library J 79:2257 N 15 '54 80w

"The book can be heartily recommended to non-stamp-collectors of about twelve up, as a most enjoyable, unusual way to read about American history. This reviewer was absorbed." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 21 '54 240w

"The collector who seeks the details and perspective behind each stamp that honors men and events will find it a valuable companion to his album." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p44 O 24 '54 140w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:222 N 27 '54 30w

REINFELD, FRED. Treasury of the world's coins. 224p il $3.95; pa $2.95 Sterling
737.4 Coins 53-13410

"Arranged by country, this comprehensive guide, equally useful to collector and investor, gives practical advice on the care of a collection and lists market values, rates of exchange and American coin clubs. Photographs. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:224 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:85 Ja '54 40w

Reviewed by E. G. Bradfield
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 7 '54
80w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22
'54 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p30 S '54

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 79:628 Ap 1 '54 50w

REINHARDT, GEORGE COOPER, and KINTNER, WILLIAM ROSCOE. Atomic weapons in land combat. 182p il $3.95 Military service
623.451 Atomic bomb 53-12214

"The present book is concerned primarily with 'the problems which atomic warfare poses to division, regimental, and battalion commanders' of ground forces. The discussion is based on map experiments and tests of opposing forces, each supported by tactical air forces and using a limited number of atomic weapons in offensive, defensive, airborne, amphibious, and special operations. The effects of naval but not of strategic air force operations on land combat are mentioned." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"Written primarily for military men and students, is also important to citizens who are not soldiers because it offers an opportunity to view part of the future through the Army's eyes. The authors are former instructors in atomic weapons at the Command and General Staff College in Fort Leavenworth, Kans." John Pfeiffer

+ Sat R 37:14 Ja 30 '54 320w

"A timely, controversial, and well-illustrated survey."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:132 Mr '54
320w

REISS, MALCOLM. China boat boy; il. by Jeanyee Wong. 157p $2.50 Lippincott 54-7302

The adventures of a young sampan boy of Kunming and of his friend and companion Precious Grief, a silver cormorant, given to the boy's father by a mysterious stranger. A World war II American flyer helps bring good luck to the Chinese family. For ages ten to fourteen.

"Precious Grief with his conversational cackling and his intimate attachment to Chuck is as real a personality as is each member of the Tien family. A non-contrived story, rich in realistic views of a little-known way of life and of a family's hope and stamina in the face of disaster." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:335 O '54 150w

"Sensitively and seriously told."

+ Kirkus 22:488 Ag 1 '54 180w

"Mr. Reiss charmingly and simply pictures for readers 10-14 a very different civilization but one which they can readily understand. Line drawings by Jean Wong add an authentic Oriental flavor." Barbara Dillon

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 14 '54
80w

REISZ, KAREL. Technique of film editing; basic principles for TV; with the guidance of [a] committee appointed by the British film academy, Thorold Dickinson (chairman) introd. by Thorold Dickinson. (Visual arts bks) 288p il $7.50 Farrar, Straus

778.58 Moving pictures—Production and direction 53-12481

A book of British origin, in which nine experts have pooled their knowledge and experiences to set forth the techniques involved in editing moving pictures from the days of the first productions of silent story films to the present.

"Highly recommended for cinema and theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 78:2222 D 15 '53 20w

Special Libraries 44:381 N '53 20w

REITSCH, HANNA. Flying is my life; tr. by Lawrence Wilson. 246p il $4 Putnam

B or 92 Aviators—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-10502

The life story of the German aviatrix whose final flight to Berlin with General von Greim took her to Hitler's bunker just four days before his end. Index.

Kirkus 22:619 S 1 '54 180w

"An informative book—the glider and aeronautical detail is simply and fascinatingly presented—it is also a personal document communicating the great joy of flying and the disciplines it imposes. It will delight readers young and old. Recommended for all collections." R. B. Robertson

+ Library J 79:2325 D 1 '54 140w

"In her book we get a pleasing picture of Hanna Reitsch, the intrepid flyer, but not of the great flyer as a human being." W. L. Shirer

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p4 D 19 '54
850w

"Reading 'Flying Is My Life' by Hanna Reitsch is like making a flight in a jet. The beginning of the book is smooth, gentle and quiet. The finale—involving the flights she made in and out of burning Berlin when the last bombs were being dumped—is like a crashing thunderous airplane dive. Between the sailplane flights and the visit to the Fuehrerbunker in Berlin, just before Hitler destroyed himself, there is chapter after chapter that will tow-glide the reader right through this fascinating book." B. K. Thorne

+ N Y Times p26 N 14 '54 400w

RELIGION and freedom of thought, by Perry Miller [and others] foreword by Henry P. Van Dusen. 64p $1 Doubleday

261.73 Religious liberty. Church and education 54-9677

"Here are four essays appraising free intellectual enquiry and the Christian religion. In order of the authorship given above the essays are: The Location of American Religious Freedom, The Historical Relations between Religion and Intellectual Freedom, Religion's Role in Liberal Education, and The Commitment of the Self and the Freedom of the Mind." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"A book that should have a wide appeal in educational and religious circles."

+ Kirkus 22:528 Ag 1 '54 210w

"This volume belongs in any size library, but is probably best suited to the college and large public library." E. M. Oboler

+ Library J 79:1509 S 1 '54 210w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 12 '54
40w

REMARQUE, ERICH MARIA. Time to love and a time to die; tr. from the German by Denver Lindley. 378p $3.95 Harcourt 54-7899

A historical novel, the background of which is World war II. The hero is a young German soldier, Private Graeber. He fights the Russians, returns to his native city for a three-weeks furlough, is married, returns to the fighting, and is killed. The effects of the war on Private Graeber and his Elisabeth are the main theme.

"Mr. Remarque's novel is a gripping story, full of vivid incident, and at times genuinely moving. But all in all, it has a slightly glib, faintly manufactured flavor." C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:83 J1 '54 200w

Booklist 50:333; 359 My 1 '54; My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:219 Je '54 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:393 Ag '54 350w

"Here is one more of Remarque's closely composed stories of war and its impacts on men and women. Like all the others, it has an authentic feeling for the small details of street and food and smell, and for the individual qualities of men. The whole story is told with great restraint, with little sentimentality for those in misery and with little open rage at those who caused it." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 23 '54 550w

"To many, this book may well seem inferior to 'All Quiet on the Western Front.' Its theme is more difficult, its milieu even more sordid and its over-all impression more depressing. On the other hand, it is an accurate evocation of an historical experience which it is still far too early for the world to forget with safety." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 20 '54 700w

"The good and the bad, a plea for tolerance, a view of corruption, love conquers all: this is the novel. Yet its visual properties are good and clean and its political intentions, although often clumsily stated, honorable." J. A. Lynch

+ Commonweal 60:251 Je 11 '54 450w

Kirkus 22:239 Ap 1 '54 320w

"Strongly recommended for all libraries."

F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 79:983 My 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 S 7 '54 140w

"Remarque places his stress on events rather than insight, movement rather than motivation. The result is a fast-paced and readable novel whose main effect lies in external description—a horizontal narrative seldom reaching beneath the surface of its material."

Nation 179:238 S 18 '54 300w

"His latest book not only re-establishes Remarque as an artist, but also demonstrates to the post-war German that he understands the land of his birth." W. H. Nelson

+ New Repub 130:20 Ag 23 '54 900w

"Remarque's voice somehow carries beyond the other voices speaking for our times, for he has not ceased throughout his career as a writer to use the full power of his emotion to exorcise war's inhumanity." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 My 23 '54 650w

"What gives this novel its real distinction are the images of life in a devastated city in the final months of the war. . . . This is an agreeable book in its attitudes and it is told with well-practiced talent. But the inner realities do not measure up to the outer ones. Instead of being made more intense and complex by the violences which surround it, the love affair takes on some of the unreality of the ruined city itself, seen at night with only the moon to light it." R. G. Davis

+ — N Y Times p4 My 23 '54 600w

New Yorker 30:133 My 22 '54 100w

"In none of his novels has Remarque integrated as admirably as he has in this one the parallel truths that destruction and growth co-exist but man prevails." Jane Volles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 20 '54 750w

"Unpretentious as this story is, it encompasses all the panicked perversions of war, all the brave incorrigibility of peaceful hope, and the tragic paradox that both these things root deeply in the human heart. It is a story refracted entirely through the nerves and thoughts of its protagonist. . . . The book's other theme has run through all of Remarque's work. Handled masterfully even in his weaker novels, it is the realization that the preciousness of existence may be distilled out of its very precariousness, that life is doubly sweet because, as Graeber says, 'we are no longer dead and we are not yet dead.'" Frederic Morton

+ Sat R 37:14 My 22 '54 2650w

Reviewed by Kingsley Amis

Spec p350 S 17 '54 180w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 600w

Time 63:110 My 24 '54 420w

"The book is competently written; but re-hashed war reporting is depressing to read when, as in this instance, it lacks the novelist's graces and compulsion."

Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 15 '54 80w

Wis Lib Bul 50:137 My '54

REMBRANDT HERMANSZOOM VAN RIJN.

Rembrandt [text by] Ludwig Münz. (Library of great painters) 158p 50 col pl $12.50 Abrams

759.9492 Paintings, Dutch 54-14560

"[Includes] fifty plates in color and a generous selection of monochrome reproductions of drawings and etchings. . . . Ludwig Münz has written an introductory text and separate comments for each masterpiece reproduced." Christian Science Monitor

"There are never too many books on the great Dutch master and this one provides illustrations of the most famous and most loved of his works. The color approximates the originals, suggesting the rich palette and the golden light." Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 2 '54 40w

"Dr. Münz, director of the Academy Picture gallery in Vienna, is acknowledged as one of the world's leading Rembrandt scholars and his introductory remarks on the development of the artist and of the man, as well as his notes on the etchings and the drawings, are penetrating, reliable and readable. He is the rare scholarly writer whose formidable learning does not interfere with, but actually clarifies, what he has to say. And the many, excellent and well-chosen illustrations alone should make this book a valuable possession." Stuart Preston

+ N Y Times p22 D 5 '54 180w

RENCK, ALEX T., pseud. Wrong way home; [tr. from the German by E. M. Valk]. 318p $3.75 Lippincott

53-11116

"This is the story of the return of a German soldier from the first World War. Disillusioned, he turned to the early racist movements in Germany and inevitably became a Nazi. His convictions were not strong and his motivations were purely personal as were those of many who joined the party, probably, and it is this fact that gives the book its interest." (Library J) "Alex T. Renck [is the] pseudonym of the Paris-born daughter of an international business man and a Rumanian princess." (N Y Times)

Booklist 50:279 Mr 15 '54

"Engrossing reading, if at times superficial, it still has a meaning for the present quiescent period, though will probably be more satisfying as a story alone."

+ Kirkus 21:718 N 1 '53 190w

"The characters are shadowy and continuity of plot is sometimes not clear, but on the whole, this is a worthwhile novel." Donald Wasson

+ — Library J 79:146 Ja 15 '54 120w

"It is not easy to define why 'The Wrong Way Home' fails to convince even a willing reader. . . The road to a good novel couldn't be paved with better intentions, yet the novel never materializes." Richard Plant

RENCK, A. T.—Continued

N Y Times p20 Ja 31 '54 500w

"A moving novel—powerful, honest, penetrating." Isabel Stradley
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 4 '54 60w

"Miss Renck obviously knows whereof she wails. But the authenticity of her milieu is smothered by the ferocious melodramatics of her plot. . . If Miss Renck's novel does anything, it points to a lack. . . This least rational and most demonic perversion of the political impulse [nazism] requires something on the order of Dostoevsky's 'The Possessed' to impale it. 'The Wrong Way Home' is an abortive if hard-breathing try at a difficult genre." Frederic Morton
Sat R 37:16 Ja 16 '54 700w

RENDALL, FRANCIS GEOFFREY. Clarinet; some notes upon its history and construction. 182p il $6 Philosophical lib.

788.6 Clarinet 53-7905

"Includes such matters as: problems of pitch and intonation; characteristics of tone; materials, mechanism, reeds; acoustics from the player's standpoint; history and description of the various members of the clarinet family; famous players of the past; the use of the instrument in orchestral and chamber music; the differences in national types, etc. Illustrations; selective lists of music, makers, and literature." (Library J) Index.

"The book is the most valuable yet written in English on the subject." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 79:776 Ap 15 '54 100w

"The matter of the book may interest only those who want to know about clarinets (and inevitably those interested in the kindred woodwind instruments) but its manner, its engaging blend of modest wisdom with painstaking lore, could serve as a model for all who write about any facet of music." William Lichtenwanger

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:561 S '54 800w

"This being the only book of its kind written in English, it will prove interesting to the interested, for Mr. Rendall has a very explicit way of writing about his favorite subject. So close was he in spirit, he gives the impression that he was there when the old makers of the eighteenth century were forging sheet-metal flaps to be used as keys, and that he took part in the general celebration when the bore of the clarinet was increased in size by a single millimeter. . . But don't let me create a wrong impression. Mr. Randall has done a fine and needed job, and without this personal affiliation with all that has gone before a great deal of detail and interest would be missing from the book." Reginald Kell
+ Sat R 37:17 Jl 3 '54 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p422 Jl 2 '54 250w

RENICK, MRS MARION (LEWIS). John's back yard camp; il. by Pru Herring. 124p $2 Scribner

54-6303

The adventures of an eight-year-old the summer he learned to camp in his own back yard with a pup tent for shelter.

Booklist 51:69 O 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 14 '54 70w

"Good fare, by an author who knows how kids feel."
+ Kirkus 22:484 Ag 1 '54 110w

"Older boys and girls who have reading difficulties may enjoy it, but it is generally recommended for the 7-10-year-olds." M. O. Skinner
+ Library J 79:1661 S 15 '54 40w

"Parents who can't afford to send their children to camp may well treasure this up for another summer. Small boys who read its easy, bit-type pages could start their camp at any season when outdoor play is possible. The cheerful realism of the style carries the purposeful idea." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 26 '54 200w

RENNIE, MRS YSABEL (FISK). Blue Chip. 307p $3.50 Harper 53-11857

This is the story of a boyhood in an Arizona mining town in the late nineteenth century. The narrator was the son of a prospector who tried to make a fortune in the Blue Chip mine but met eventual defeat.

Booklist 50:177; 222 Ja 1 '54; F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:108 F '54 30w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 24 '54 350w

"All this is the story of a mine, and the men whose hopes died with it, and while it may not hit the paydirt, there's a warmth and honesty to this return to a childhood which the author experienced, and has revitalized here."

+ Kirkus 21:745 N 15 '53 210w

"Not another My Name is Aram but a satisfying story which plods along with a certain pleasant charm." R. H. Dillon
+ Library J 79:143 Ja 15 '54 140w

"Above and beyond its authentic account of mining in the Southwest of the 1890s and earlier, 'The Blue Chip' creates and sustains a very refreshing atmosphere of honesty and simplicity. One savors with satisfaction the rich world of a boy who found the Arizona of those days 'a good place to be young in.'"
F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 24 '54 650w

"This is the best hill-hound novel to come out of the mining West in a long time." Lewis Nordyke

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 24 '54 400w

"Mrs. Rennie is to be congratulated on telling her tale directly and simply, taking for granted that no one will mistake it for a 'formula' Western (a perfectly good form but usually on another story-telling level). It will be interesting to see what she will do next, particularly if she stays with fiction." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 1 '54 750w

"This entertaining novel is told with humor and poignancy. Occasionally, however, the illusion is broken by anachronisms." Mari Sandoz

+ Sat R 37:13 F 6 '54 550w
Time 63:112 Ja 25 '54 330w

REVESZ, GEZA. Introduction to the psychology of music; tr. from the German by G. I. C. de Courcy. 261p il $4 Univ. of Okla. press 781.1 Music—Psychology 54-5937

"Book by the director of the Department of the Psychology of Music at the University of Amsterdam. The first section covers familiar ground: the generation of sound and its impingement on the ear. The second has to do with hearing: the psychology of sound. The third, 'Fundamental Problems of the Psychology of Music,' accounts for about half the book, and takes up a series of fascinating subjects such as musicality, the prodigy, blind musicians, the development of musical capacity, the origin of music, and the love of music by unmusical people." Library J

"When he speaks as an historian, the author is not always on firm ground, but the book is so stimulating and carries such weight as to put the few blemishes out of mind. Not easy reading; frequently technical. Illustrations; extended bibliography." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 79:776 Ap 15 '54 150w

"This is an excellent book as far as it goes, and can be recommended without reservation to musicians who want to be well informed about such matters ■ the dependence of sounds on physical stimuli, the production of tone by the human voice and various instruments, consonance and dissonance, relative and absolute pitch, the properties of perceived sounds and their relation to tonal intervals, the problems involved in the discovery and development of musical capacities, and so on. To psychologists in this country the book will bring nothing that is new or for them particularly significant." C. C. Pratt

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 11:465 Je '54 800w

"The book is indeed full of facts, theories, historical reviews of past and other theorists' theories, close argument, reasonably sound acquaintance with the literature and repertory of actual music, all of which are valuable and command respect. But it is an unsystematic book, which nowhere nearly covers the whole field of musical psychology; some of its inquiries are so thorough and so vigorously argued with tabulated facts, and some are so superficial, that the mixture is not the best possible introduction to a wide-ranging subject."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p198 Mr 26 '54 550w

REX, MRS STELLA (HAY). Choice hooked rugs. 250p il $6 Prentice-Hall
746.74 Rugs 53-10936

"An experienced teacher and craftsman presents a complete guide to rug hooking from beginning to advanced stages, including its history, a teachers' manual and the commercial side. Photographs and designs. Bibliography, index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:180 Ja 1 '54

Bookmark 13:85 Ja '54 30w

REYHER, FERDINAND. David Farragut, sailor. 238p il $3 Lippincott

B or 92 Farragut, David Glasgow—Juvenile literature 53-10218

"The narrative spans only the early years, especially Farragut's four years at sea from age 9-13 and his part in the War of 1812." Library J

Reviewed by Richard Philbrick

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 22 '53 50w

Horn Bk 30:44 F '54 50w

Kirkus 21:632 S 15 '53 120w

"The Reyher account is robust, colorful, even dramatic in some episodes, and is unimpeded by superfluous fictional dialogue." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 79:77 Ja 1 '54 40w

"Mr. Reyher's book is the work of an able journalist and ex-war correspondent, who knows what boys and men like in the way of exciting adventure scenes. His brief chapters are well divided for action; he uses occasional bits of source material: letters, songs, exciting official documents." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p6 N 15 '53 80w

"This factual story of the boyhood and young manhood of America's first admiral is exciting enough to fascinate any boy who loves adventure."

+ Sat R 37:53 F 13 '54 40w

REYNOLDS, BARBARA LEONARD. Hamlet and Brownswiggle; il. by Robert Henneberger. 203p $2.50 Scribner

54-5925

"Ricky Stern, homeward bound to Ohio with his family, lost Hamlet, the hamster he had bought in Colorado, and thereby started a train of events that united boys from four states in a Hamster Club." N Y Times

Booklist 50:303 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 2 '54 160w

"Readers of the author's earlier Pepper will agree that she knows how to write about small boys and their pets. This new book is just as real and lively and even funnier." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:98 Ap '54 120w

Kirkus 22:114 F 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by F. M. Hensey

Library J 79:787 Ap 15 '54 80w

"Young readers will warm to the engaging Stern family and follow the fortunes of the hamsters enthusiastically. Mr. Henneberger's lively drawings point up the interesting animal lore in the story." Rose Friedman

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 21 '54 180w

"Younger boys will enjoy this story of hamsters and the four boys to whom they belonged. . . Robert Henneberger has made many fine pictures of Ricky and the hamsters." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:60 My 15 '54 180w

Wis Lib Bul 50:143 My '54

REYNOLDS, JAMES. Pageant of Italy. 361p il $7.50 Putnam

945 [914.5] Italy—Description and travel

54-5494

An intimate account of the author-artist's journey thru Italy, illustrated with his own drawings. Includes glimpses of Italian history, as well as anecdotes of the author's trips, and accounts of meals partaken on the way. Index.

Booklist 51:149 D 1 '54

"Reynolds' style is friendly—almost affectionate like that of an indulgent uncle writing to an adult and intelligent niece or nephew—and takes for granted that every unimportant detail of daily doings will be of interest. He is a painter of recognized merit and overlooks no art gallery or museum. The book is profusely illustrated with noteworthy black and white sketches by the author. No matter how often or how long one has been in Italy, the reader will get information and diversion in 'Pageant of Italy's' descriptions of the pagan air of Paestum, the wild gorges of Sardinia, the ducal towns of medieval history, the thundering torrent of Abruzzi, and up to date Trieste." Mason Warner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 21 '54 350w

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 2 '54 400w

"Described in heady, flowery prose often proving more of an opiate than a stimulant, it is nevertheless a product of a sharp observance that is loathe to let even the smallest thing, the wayside shrub, the light in a tiny restaurant, go unnoticed. . . Definitely for particular tastes, this will be an overdose of candy for some, but a perfect diet for the Italian sweet tooth."

Kirkus 22:608 S 1 '54 180w

"Particular attention is devoted to the great galleries and Italy's artistic contribution to the world. For leavening, he does give a partial view of the world of the fisherman, the shopkeeper, and the peasant. For specialized tastes." W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:2464 D 15 '54 70w

"One of the charms of 'Pageant of Italy' is that it moves from south to north, unlike the reminiscences of most writers who, coming the old barbarians' way over the Alps, are surfeited with the riches of Tuscany and Umbria before they reach the more subtle—and harder to get at—beauties of Calabria. . . Mr. Reynolds is artist as well as traveler, novelist, historian, and student of the supernatural; his book is enhanced by charming black-and-white sketches of the Italian countryside and its people, and he further shows himself a man of parts in his appreciation of the Italian cuisine." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 19 '54 600w

"From the moment islands off Sicily come into view as he sails across the Tyrrhenian Sea until he makes his departure through a Piedmontese valley he is in a state of continuously infectious euphoria. Furthermore, he has profusely illustrated his journey with dashing black-and-white drawings that convey more succinctly than his travelogue-type prose the spell that the incomparable peninsula has cast on him. . . But it is not beside the point to wish that the author had revised his proofs with a bit more care." Stuart Preston

REYNOLDS, JAMES—Continued

+ — N Y Times p30 N 28 '54 400w

REYNOLDS, QUENTIN JAMES. The F. B. I. (Landmark bks) 180p il $1.50 Random house 353.5 U.S. Federal bureau of investigation
—Juvenile literature 54-6267

"A brisk, authentic account of the F.B.I. and its operations in peacetime and in war. Describes the beginning and functions of the organization, the requirements for a career in the F.B.I., the training of recruits into skilled investigators, and the actual methods used in breaking several cases, among them the Bremer kidnapping case and that of an atom bomb spy." (Booklist) There is a school edition titled Story of the F. B. I. published by E. M. Hale and Company, priced at $1.68.

Booklist 51:117 N 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p32 N 14 '54 20w

"A full, factual account, definitely meat for young interested." + Kirkus 22:448 J1 15 '54 130w

"Recommended for all libraries." M. M. Gantt + Library J 79:2501 D 15 '54 70w

"Done with the author's usual dash, it is a good introduction." E. L. B.
N Y Times p50 N 7 '54 40w

RHINE, JOSEPH BANKS. New world of the mind. 339p $3.75 Sloane 133.8 Occult sciences 53-9339

"This is the third book by Dr. Rhine on his researches in parapsychology at Duke University. He briefly reviews the work done, presents proof of extrasensory perception, defends his work against the hostile criticism of orthodox psychologists, and discusses at length the tremendous importance of his discoveries to mankind." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:178 Ja 1 '54

Christian Century 71:208 F 17 '54 230w

Kirkus 21:651 S 15 '53 150w

"Dr. Rhine will undoubtedly be accused again of wild speculation not justified by the known facts, but he has written a stimulating and exciting book nevertheless. Recommended for college and public libraries." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 78:1930 N 1 '53 130w

"In the much-debated problems of parapsychology (the psychological aspects of such phenomena as telepathy and clairvoyance, called 'psi' for short) J. B. Rhine speaks with an authority that commands respectful attention. 'New World of the Mind' seems to the present reviewer the most thoughtful and persuasive of his books." E. W. Sinnott

+ N Y Times p6 D 27 '53 1000w

"What was not quite clear in Dr. Rhine's earlier books suddenly becomes obvious: the word 'science' is being used in Mrs Eddy's sense, not in Mme. Curie's."

New Yorker 29:102 Ja 23 '54 130w

Sat R 37:55 F 13 '54 220w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 8 '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:21 Ja '54

RHODE, JOHN, pseud. See Street, C. J. C.

RIBBANDS, CHARLES RONALD. Behaviour and social life of honeybees. 352p il $4.50 Hale Pub. Co, 724 N. Central, Hapeville, Ga.
595.799 Bees [54-15306]

"For beekeepers, farmers and fruit growers, this is a non-technical account of the honeybee community. The author discusses many practical beekeeping problems, the findings of recent research, pollination and the possibility of directing honeybees to particular crops. The volume is illustrated with drawings and photographs." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R.

"It will interest many more than beekeepers, who will gain much from it, and it will take its place among the best of recent books in this field."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 11 '53 30w
New Statesman & Nation 47:267 F 27 '54 260w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Ap 25 '54 60w

RICE, CHARLES DUANE. Minty's magic garden; pictures by Charles D. Saxon. [56p] $2.25
Dodd

54-9233

Minty was an imaginative small girl with three big wishes: she wished her dog could talk; she wished she could fly; and she wanted a baby brother. This story for ages five to eight tells how she got all three wishes with the help of some magic flowers.

Booklist 51:91 O 15 '54

"Magic and the reality of sleep are so blended that the reader finds it hard to tell which is which. The line drawings of Charles D. Saxon add to the humor of the story. Eight-ten-year-olds will be able to read the book for themselves; younger children will enjoy hearing it read. Paper, print, and binding are good. Recommended." Juanita Walker

+ Library J 79:1668 S 15 '54 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 14 '54 50w

RICE, GRANTLAND ed. Bobby Jones story. See Keeler, O. B.

RICE, GRANTLAND. Tumult and the shouting; my life in sport. 368p il $5 Barnes, A.S.

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Sports 54-9173

"Grantland Rice was hunched over his new typewriter, big and round-shouldered and pigeon toed, pecking at the last of more than 22,000 sports columns when his heart ran down. He had written more than 67,000,000 words and must have been getting warmed up, although he hadn't taken his coat off, or his bow tie or Confederate gray hat. . . For years publishers had sought his memoirs, unsuccessfully. . . Only in the last year was Granny induced to try autobiography, with Barnes' Dave Camerer reading over his shoulder. The job was finished three weeks before his death and publication set for Nov. 1, the seventy-fourth anniversary of the birth of Henry Grantland Rice in Murfreesboro, Tenn." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The book is warm, intimate, and anecdotal, and to those who knew Granny well, his way of saying things and his laugh will sound on many a page and that will be enough." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 195:78 Ja '55 450w

Bookmark 14:59 D '54 20w

"His 'autobiography,' which deals far more with fellow writers and outstanding sports figures than it does with 'Granny' himself, is written in an informal and conversational style which makes it delightfully easy to read." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 28 '54 350w

"This isn't, praise be, a formal book. It is no literary exercise in balanced sentences and the painfully selected word. This is Grant Rice talking, rambling happily along, telling again in his wonderful way the wonderful stories he loved to tell. They are great tales of men and deeds, of Ty Cobb and Bobby Jones and Babe Ruth and Jack Dempsey and Jim Thorpe and a hundred others, told with affection and warmth and gentle humor by the one who knew these men best and never forgot anything except non-essentials, such as rancor and his working-press ticket." Red Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 7 '54 700w

"Granny spun back twenty years to write 'The Tumult and the Shouting,' a book he completed only three weeks before his death last July. This is the master writing again, a fascinating book by a fascinating guy. . . There was poetry in Granny's soul and poetry in his pen—or typewriter. Technically speaking, he was one of America's great poets, a talent obscured by the richness of his prose and the field in which he operated." Arthur Daley

+ N Y Times p18 N 21 '54 650w

RICHARDSON, JAMES HUGH. For the life of me; memoirs of a city editor. 312p $4 Putnam

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-10503

The autobiography of a city editor, a member of the Hard Guy school, who has been City editor of the Los Angeles Examiner since 1937.

Reviewed by Seymour Korman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 24 '54 120w

"Romantically written, this has its moments of melodrama in and out of the press rooms, and a strong behind-the-scenes appeal."

Kirkus 22:462 J1 15 '54 210w

"Mr. Richardson has been city editor of 'The Los Angeles Examiner' since 1937. His kind in the newspaper business is supposed to be practically extinct. He belongs to the old hard-boiled school of editors, the fire-breathers who made a religion of news and demanded perfection of reporters. That, at least, is the legend. And Mr. Richardson, as a tough practitioner of the art of getting news, has joyfully told his story. It is excellent stuff—brisk entertaining, easy to take." L. L. Engelking

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 7 '54 550w

Reviewed by Gladwin Hill

N Y Times p12 S 26 '54 420w

"It is a fascinating story, written in the swift-paced style which is the Hearst school in its purest flower. It has movement, bathos, sentimentality, shocking incident, crisp conversation, and now and then a plug for the human race, God, and civic righteousness." Stanley Walker

Sat R 37:20 S 25 '54 750w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 250w

RICHBERG, DONALD RANDALL. My hero; the indiscreet memoirs of an eventful but unheroic life. 367p il $5 Putnam

B or 92 54-10504

Personal autobiography, self styled "rambling reminiscences," of an American lawyer, who looking back from his seventies, reviews a life-time of public service, recording the high hopes and ambitions, the disillusion and failures.

Booklist 51:150 D 1 '54

"This discursive and amiable autobiography of an overeager and unseasoned liberal changing into a thoughtful conservative deserves not only reading but study." Walter Trohan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 10 '54 550w

"By the very nature of the book Mr. Richberg is more concerned about things past than things present or things future. He writes that the purpose of the volume is 'to provide an explanation for the apparent failure of social leadership to keep pace with the terrific material progress of mankind.' And while this 'failure' may hold the reader's interest during the larger portions of the autobiography, it is more than likely that the look ahead which Mr. Richberg takes in the final chapter will prove to have greater staying powers. At least, so it seemed to this reviewer." Stafford Derby

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 18 '54 500w

"Richberg writes without much style, nor does he have the sympathetic appeal or even the hot-pepper personality of his one time law partner, Ickes, but it adds to the panorama of 20th century politics."

Kirkus 22:521 Ag 1 '54 240w

"There is much of value in this account, but more careful and logical arrangement of it would have made it a more effective book. Recommended for all collections." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 79:2101 N 1 '54 110w

"Donald Richberg has written a remarkable book. Its contribution to history is not very great and as a collection of memoirs it is only mildly entertaining, but as a clinical study of a psychological progression from optimism to despair it is fascinating and to some extent terrifying." G. W. Johnson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 28 '54 900w

"Mr. Richberg's self-portrait is disarming without precisely being appealing: he seems excessively concerned with his own reputation, even with his own physical appearance, as well as with the level of his income; and some may regard his account of his first two marriages as a trifle ungallant. But the work in its public aspects remains a useful if modest contribution to the literature of American reform." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

N Y Times p20 O 31 '54 850w

New Yorker 30:164 O 16 '54 180w

Reviewed by G. E. Mowry

Sat R 37:21 N 6 '54 800w

Reviewed by R. S. Babcock

Yale R n s 44:314 winter '55 300w

RICHER, CLEMENT. Son of Ti-Coyo [tr. from the French by Gerard Hopkins]. 245p $3 Knopf

54-7200

A sequel to Ti-Coyo and His Shark (Book Review Digest 1951). In this story Guiné, Ti-Coyo's son, follows his father's practice of feeding Manidou, the great shark, with signal success.

Booklist 51:16 S 1 '54

"A book at times beautifully poetic, at others almost terrifying but, strangely, in both its beauty and its terrors, always satirically comic." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 25 '54 260w

"Ingratiating and light of touch."

+ Kirkus 22:343 Je 1 '54 120w

"The story is highly diverting, partly because it is simply a story, not an allegory nor surrealist tale (although it has some elements of this). But the charm and entertainment value are mainly due to the combination of roundeyed naïveté and bland disregard of accepted human values with a cool, elegant and witty style, admirably carried over into simple-seeming but highly sophisticated English. Recommended to libraries having a demand for exquisitely done nonsense." Mary Barrett

+ Library J 79:1310 J1 '54 170w

"On their first appearance in 1951, Ti-Coyo and Manidou delighted a good many critics—one of the tributes to M. Richer's talents placed him in the tradition of Voltaire. He is, unmistakably, a clever and fluent writer; and readers who were charmed by his first book may be agreeably entertained by its successor. But to this reviewer the gimmick of the loyal shark and the blandly murderous primitives—fresh and engaging for a short time—quickly lost its appeal." C. J. Rolo

N Y Times p4 J1 25 '54 650w

"Should have been left unwritten. Some jokes are good only once, and this particular joke is one of them."

— New Yorker 30:67 J1 31 '54 40w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 J1 28 '54 600w

"By the book's end, the novelty of exuberant fantasy, perverse humor, and wanton cruelty has worn slightly thin. But those who were first drawn by the impishly wicked imagination of 'Ti-Coyo and His Shark' will find that, here and there, some of the magic has brushed off on Mr. Richer's latest book." Otis Fellows

RICHER, CLEMENT—Continued

+ — Sat R 37:13 J1 31 '54 550w

"So neatly laced with urbane craft and malice that many parents will think twice before sharing it with the kiddies."

Time 64:82 J1 26 '54 330w

"Son of Ti-Coyo takes some getting used to; but once the intricacies of half-caste family life in Martinique, especially the affectionate relationship between one Ti-Coyo and his greedy, worldly shark Manidou are mastered, then this elegant, touching and surprisingly unphilosophical little tale speeds along with the lightest of touches and hardly a concession to sentiment or whimsy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p261 Ap 23 '54 220w

RICHLER, MORDECAI. The acrobats. 246p $3.50 Putnam

54-10488

"A novel set in Valencia, Spain that depicts the human animal as an entertainer—hurtling through space—who either falls or is pushed to his doom. Taking a pinch of the lives of a Jewish-American businessman, his nymphomaniac wife; his homosexual brother-in-law, a Canadian expatriate painter; a passportless Jew, a stupid Nazi, the author stirs well." Library J

"An impressionistic parade of polygots, the casualties of a confused and confusing civilization, emphasizes portraiture rather than plot. The market here is difficult to define."

Kirkus 22:452 J1 15 '54 150w

"An odoriferous brew which strangely has no taste. This is traceable to the book's lack of form, a deficiency not palliated by brilliance in characterization or prose style. But this first novel makes some trenchant comments about modern Spain, humans, humanity in general. Acceptable." M. S. Byam

+ — Library J 79:1504 S 1 '54 60w

"The quality of the book's emotions is honest, even though many of the scenes that convey them are inchoate or awkwardly contrived. Mr. Richler isn't afraid of trying and, all in all, he tries pretty well. In addition, and perhaps without realizing it, his casual picture of the seamy surface of street-life in urban Spain is a bitterly accurate one." Jerome Stone

+ Sat R 37:62 O 2 '54 300w

"No doubt about it, this is an astonishing book. As a guide to intelligent, contemporary pastiche it is unique." John Metcalf

Spec p503 Ap 23 '54 450w

"A very young, opinionated, unnecessarily sordid tale of people who live in a world without moral principles." R. McL.

— Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 150w

RICHMAN, ROBERT, ed. Arts at mid-century [by Stephen Spender and others]. 306p $5 Horizon press

709.04 Art

54-7896

"Here such critics as Stephen Spender, Archibald MacLeish and Malcolm Cowley examine the contemporary status of the arts in the United States, France, England, Italy and Germany. They also discuss important modern figures in the fields of literature, music, art, the drama and films." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:395 Je 15 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 J1 18 '54 40w

RICHMOND, ANTHONY H. Colour prejudice in Britain; a study of West Indian workers in Liverpool, 1941-1951. (International library of sociology and social reconstruction ser) 184p $4 Grove

301.451 West Indians in Liverpool [54-3262]

"The subtitle of this book is an accurate description of its contents. The men included in the study were 'recruits' ranging from skilled technicians to unskilled laborers who were brought to Britain because of its manpower shortage in 1941. Their reaction and adjustment to the prejudice they encounter in the 'motherland' constitute the core of this work." Library J

"A thorough piece of sociological research that will interest the professional sociologist and advanced students of the subject. Recommended for college, special libraries and reference collections." Seymour Amlen

+ Library J 79:1835 O 1 '54 140w

"Mr. Richmond's book is doubly welcome. It not only clarifies a pressing and specific problem, but throws light on dark areas of the human soul." Adam Curle

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:443 Ap 1 '54 650w

Reviewed by G. M. Carstairs
Spec p98 J1 16 '54 450w

RICHMOND, SIR HERBERT WILLIAM. Navy as an instrument of policy, 1558-1727; ed. by E. A. Hughes. 404p $12 Cambridge

942.05 Great Britain—History, Naval

[53-13130]

"This is a straight narrative history (a large part of which has been told before) of military operations at sea, designed to reveal the development of the Royal Navy as a decisive instrument of national power. Military strength forms the main thread of the argument, and the battle is vital to the theme; but the author strengthens his conclusions by emphasizing the contributions of politics, diplomacy, and land operations to the final result." Ann Am Acad

"The admiral was, with Mahan and Corbett, one of the three outstanding naval historians of this century. He had all the assets of a great historian, including a succinct and lucid style, a profound grasp of his subject, and a brilliant ability to analyze situations and to deduce from them fundamental principles. His last published work is a showcase for these talents. As regards his materials, he made full use of the more important secondary works and published collections of documents (to 1942)." A. J. Marder

+ Am Hist R 59:918 J1 '54 500w

"Full and accurate footnote references were never Admiral Richmond's forte, and an editor's eye, however eagle-like, could hardly discover every error or omission of name, place, and date, of which there are many. . . Both the list of sources and the index are flimsy, but only a very ill-conditioned reviewer could refuse to rejoice at the posthumous publication of the last work of a master." G. S. Graham

+ — Ann Am Acad 294:217 J1 '54 550w

"This posthumous study of the use made of the Navy by statesmen from the time of Elizabeth I until the end of the Northern War, like all the works of its author, combines wide knowledge with admirable style. . . All interested in defence problems should read this book." E. R.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 12 '54 200w

New Statesman & Nation 47:267 F 27 '54 280w

Spec p162 F 5 '54 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p570 S 10 '54 800w

RICKERT, MARGARET JOSEPHINE. Painting in Britain: the middle ages. (Pelican history of art) 253p il 192pl maps $8.50 Penguin

750.942 Painting, British. Painting, Medieval

"The period of history covered by this volume dates from the Anglo-Saxon Heptarchy (when England was divided among the seven Kingdoms of Kent, Sussex, Wessex, Essex, Northumbria, East Anglia, and Mercia) to the end of the Middle Ages. Although most of the important surviving material is in the form of illuminated manuscripts, there still exist enough notable pieces of panel-painting, wall painting, stained glass, and embroidery to show the greatness, catholicity, and virility of art in Britain during this period. Amongst other matters Dr Rickert discusses the development and flowering of the great native schools of painting at ecclesiastical centres such as Winchester, Canterbury, St Albans, and Westminster." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Miss Rickert's survey is a clear, business-like description of the evidence, written in attractive style, not in the least fussy or showy... Altogether, this is an excellent book. Not the least of its merits is its careful and accurate production; it has brief notes, always to the point, a glossary, a bibliography, and indexes. The plates—nearly two hundred pages of them—are well chosen and well produced." C. R. Cheney

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 21 '54 550w

"As an effort to present a coherent picture of medieval painting in Britain the text is disappointing. It is too unsure of the orientation of this art in relation to contemporary developments in the rest of Europe to fulfil the best possibilities of the subject. Not infrequently writers on English art become unnecessarily defensive, even insular, in their viewpoint; the danger is not quite avoided here." Harry Bober

Sat R 37:62 N 6 '54 1000w

"This is not by any means the only book that has appeared on English art of the mediaeval period in the years since the war. After a long period of neglect, except in specialist journals, the earlier phases of our national heritage are at last being given the attention they deserve. There is still much to be learnt but we do know enough to make a general picture possible. Miss Rickert's book goes a long way towards providing this picture, and, in spite of the criticisms, it deserves a very warm welcome from all those interested in the mediaeval world." D. T. Rice

+ Spec p530 O 29 '54 650w

RIDDELL, JAMES. Holy Land. 96p il $6.50 Seabury

915.694 Palestine—Views 54-12938

"Palestine, sacred to Jew, Christian and Mohammedan, is pictured in [this book, which is] a large, handsome volume with over 100 photographs and maps of well-known sites. Each photograph is accompanied by a descriptive Biblical quotation and comment by Mr. Riddell." N Y Times

"Having recently visited many of these scenes and tried with very limited success to photograph some of them, I am prepared to appreciate the excellence of this job. It really shows what the terrain and the ancient landmarks look like. Modern developments are not within its scope." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1398 N 17 '54 70w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p33 O 17 '54 20w

RIDEOUT, VINCENT C. Active networks. 485p $10.65 Prentice-Hall

621.343 Electric circuits 54-8157

"A textbook designed for students of communications engineering who have completed basic courses in vacuum tubes and linear networks. Its scope is 'all networks capable of amplification.' It offers a fairly inclusive view of what the modern communication engineer is concerned with in designing networks. Some aspects are treated rather briefly. . . . Aside from its use as a text the book will be useful as a reference book of concise information on network elements, such as phase discriminators, and citations of the source literature pertaining to them. The author is Associate Professor of Electrical Engineering in the University of Wisconsin." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 79:1594 S 15 '54 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:38 My '54

RIEDMAN, SARAH REGAL. Food for people [with a foreword by Lord John Boyd Orr] il. by Helen Ludwig. 192p $2.50 Abelard-Schuman

612.39 Food. Nutrition 53-10844

"The author discusses many aspects of food—why people of long ago ate as they did, scientific discoveries, how food is used by the body, nutritional needs and food values, planning the diet, fads and facts, why part of the world is hungry, and what can be done about feeding the world. Includes books for further reading. Grades 8-10." Booklist

Booklist 50:457 JI 15 '54

"An important book in the field of elementary science. Recommended." I. E. Stafford + Library J 79:1328 JI '54 80w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p9C JI 11 '54 100w

RIEMAN, TERRY. Vamp till ready. 312p $2.75 Harper

Mystery story. 54-10081

Kirkus 22:552 Ag 15 '54 60w

"The earnestly sophisticated Miss Rieman manages things pretty well and makes her tale proceed infectiously." James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 O 24 '54 120w

"Very nearly devoid of forward movement. It does have some pleasing characters, and an agreeable glitter to its description of Manhattan musical circles (Miss Rieman writes about food almost as well as Stout); and the author seems to know a good deal about jazz (which is the central theme)." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p40 N 7 '54 40w

"Some surprisingly nasty people act out her murder plot (which keeps disappearing under words and music) but there's an unusual gangster and a love story. Billed as a suspense novel, this doesn't suspend you very high. C plus." L. G. Offord

— San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 31 '54 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 30w

RIESE, WALTHER. Conception of disease; its history, its versions and its nature. 120p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

616.01 Medicine—Philosophy 53-8960

"This little volume is a discussion of medical people through the ages and their efforts to formulate an intellectual understanding of the nature of disease. It is organized as a historical study, but the orientation throughout is philosophical. The author is concerned not with typologies of diseases but with the major conceptual schemes which have been employed to make disease intelligible. Although written by a doctor for doctors, in the language of the philosopher, there is much of interest to the sociology of knowledge." Am J Soc

"Despite good intentions and a significant problem, the result has not been successful. There are several reasons for this. In the first place, while there are a number of provocative ideas in the volume, the thinking lacks precision and it is sometimes difficult to know just what the author is driving at. Second, lack of clarity in use of language creates a further barrier to understanding. Public health workers sufficiently interested in the philosophy of disease and health who take the trouble to read this essay carefully will track down a few significant ideas. Others can afford to pass it by." George Rosen

— + Am J Pub Health 44:270 F '54 250w

Reviewed by Oswald Hall
Am J Soc 59:518 Mr '54 360w

RIESMAN, DAVID. Individualism reconsidered, and other essays. 529p $6 Free press

304 Social sciences. Individualism 54-2285

"Essays in defense of individualism, by a sociologist who wants to rescue Americans from the conformity imposed by the 'lonely crowd.' He looks at popular culture, utopianism, totalitarianism, Freudianism, and the methods of the social sciences; he stresses the need to develop persons who, instead of trying to escape from freedom, thrive on it. They are, he claims, the saving remnant in any society. In writing these 30 essays, the author had a scholarly audience in mind, but his phrase-making ability and sense of humor put these articles well within reach of the general reader." Booklist

Booklist 50:444 J1 15 '54

"I should say that Riesman has carried sociological analysis to the very borders of ■ theological depth-understanding of man, and though he has not found it possible to go beyond, we should be deeply grateful that he has taken us as far as he has." Will Herberg

+ — Commonweal 60:538 S 3 '54 1900w

"No one is more aware than the author of the ambiguities of such a task as his. Since he is interested mainly in freeing people from pressure, he wants to contribute his ideas just to the spots where they will actually liberate, but there is no way of focussing an idea on a narrow target, so Mr. Riesman has to face the problem that the unshielded X-rays of his thinking may burn as well as heal. . . Mr. Riesman is truly in that great western tradition which has for centuries striven to put the individual in the spot of first importance, whether as a soul to be saved or as a citizen for our state to protect." Priscilla Robertson
New Repub 132:19 J1 26 '54 1200w

"Mr. Riesman's mind is as powerful, as unpredictable, as dazzling as Veblen's was, but it is not so shy and defensive and needs no shield of stiff irony. At times Mr. Riesman writes as clumsily as Veblen, but this is due to inattention, not design, and the felicitous parts betray an ease and a light-heartedness which Veblen would surely have been embarrassed to own." Jacques Barzun

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 13 '54 1000w

"In this collection of lectures and essays, the author has a great deal to say on a wide variety of topics. Much of it, unfortunately, suffers from the terrible jargon of modern sociology. . . A funny political fantasy called 'The Nylon War' suggests that Professor Riesman is at his best when he does not take himself too seriously."

+ — New Yorker 30:77 S 4 '54 140w

"The essays as a whole sustain no single thesis and judgments as to content can only be disparate and diffuse. The level of discourse is another matter. Riesman is utterly prolific with ideas. Where some sociologists need six articles to elaborate one idea, he reverses the proportion. It may be that we shall have to use these ideas as catalysts rather than as conclusions. In any event, we have in Riesman a sociologist with 'style,' a moralist with a new vocabulary, a critic whose judgments illuminate some of the darker corners of the contemporary scene, and a writer whose insights are often spectacular." Robert Bierstedt

+ Sat R 37:10 Ag 7 '54 1650w

RIESMAN, DAVID. Thorstein Veblen; a critical interpretation. 221p $3 Scribner

330.1 Veblen, Thorstein 53-12337

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"An entertaining and provocative sketch, both sympathetic and critical, which will anger some Veblenites but will seem generally reasonable to the less devout." T. C. Cochran

+ Am J Soc 59:601 My '54 550w

Reviewed by H. B. Woolston

Am Soc ■ 19:370 Je '54 260w

Booklist 50:242 F 15 '54

"David Riesman of the University of Chicago is uniquely well-equipped to write ■ critical analysis of Thorstein Veblen. Like Veblen, Riesman works in many disciplines, ranging from history, political science and law to sociology and psychology. His psychological insights are especially valuable in his analysis of Veblen. Riesman makes clear at the very outset that he is not a devotee of Veblen. 'I find him,' he writes, 'more often interesting than attractive, more often pungent than wise.' Nevertheless he writes sympathetically, and is quick to note the intellectual achievements of this strange and unusual man, as well as his shortcomings." David Fellman

+ New Repub 129:18 N 30 '53 700w

"The devotees of Riesman will relish this little book; the devotees of Veblen will not. It bears the traits and mannerisms that the Riesman fan finds delightful: an illuminating psychological hypothesis; an iconoclasm applied to Leftwing idols; a tremendous erudition; and a habit of stringing several thoughts and afterthoughts on the stem of a single sentence. Unlike most of the other authors contributing to Scribner's Twentieth Century Library series, this one does not take his subject at face value, or find much of high value in his subject. . . He finds ambiguities in Veblen's thought and traces them to confused motivations. He shows how much Veblen borrowed from his age, and how little of the present age he foretold. The net result is that Riesman ably discloses wherein Veblen was entirely subjective, sometimes ordinary and often wrong. But he does not succeed in disclosing wherein Veblen also was great." W. G. Metzger

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:461 S '54 850w

"In his highly readable little book, Professor Riesman addresses a more general public than academic specialists. The influences that shaped Veblen's life and thought interest him more than the content of Veblen's writings, and his explanation stresses the childhood experiences of Veblen more than his formal training and the intellectual currents of the day."

+ U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:11 Mr '54 200w

RILKE, RAINER MARIA. Letters to ■ young poet; tr. by M. D. Herter Norton. rev ed 123p $3 Norton

B or 92 Poetry

54-11483

"In this new revised edition (first edition, 1934 [Book Review Digest 1935]) Mrs. Norton has improved her English translation. Besides the ten letters, and a brief introduction from the 'young poet' of the title (dated Berlin, 1929), the translator furnishes a valuable chronicle of Rilke's personal history at the time (1903-1908), comprising a third of the volume." Cath World

"While one can hardly agree with Mrs. Norton regarding 'the eminently positive philosopher of these letters,' the work has its own value. For it throws ■ clear light on Rilke at an epochal period of his life; and it reveals among other things his deep tenderness and sympathy—shown here toward Kappus, the unknown correspondent whose letters evoking these deeply concerned responses are unfortunately not given." M. W. Hess

+ — Cath World 180:75 O '54 400w

"Rilke's delicacy and fineness of perception make this book one which librarians can give to young people with troubled spirits." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 79:1401 Ag '54 80w

RIPLEY, ELIZABETH. Michelangelo; ■ biography; with drawings, paintings and sculpture by Michelangelo. 68p $3 Oxford

B or 92 Michelangelo Buonarroti—Juvenile literature 53-3955

A companion volume to the author's Leonardo da Vinci (Book Review Digest 1952). This is a biography of Michelangelo for grades 8 to 10. Copiously illustrated. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 50:190 Ja 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ja 10 '54 140w

Commonweal 59:178 N 20 '53 10w

"Attractive bookmaking and good writing and reproductions make this an effective way of presenting a great artist to children." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:43 F '54 70w

"I recommend this book most highly for junior and senior high school students as well as adults. It is a good springboard for more scholarly study."

+ Horn Bk 30:354 O '54 120w

"Recommended for all libraries." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 79:77 Ja 1 '54 80w

"The thirty-one photographs are well chosen and beautifully reproduced. Especial intelligence is shown by the author in choice of incident to bring out the effect of a driving creative power on a human being. . . Though her style is not thrilling, her deep feeling for her great subject pervades it. It is as fine an introduction to an artist as was Leonardo da Vinci, her first book in the art field. Both books belong in discriminating homes and in all junior high school libraries." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 17 '54 160w

"Mature and dignified. Although, like her study of Leonardo, this is not a portrait in the fullest term, it is indefinably warmer in tone than was the first book." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 14 '54 110w

"This intelligent, simply written study brings out the fury and dedication of the artist's personality and career." K. T. Kinkad

+ New Yorker 29:193 N 28 '53 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:81 Mr '54

RIPLEY, ELIZABETH. Vincent van Gogh; with drawings and paintings. 68p $3 Oxford B or 92 Gogh, Vincent van 54-10010

"This companion volume to the author's biographies of Michelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci treats the life of the Dutch artist with the same conciseness, vividness, and sympathy and, as in the earlier books, places the excellent black-and-white reproductions of the paintings and drawings in precise relationship to the textual account of each work. Because much of the story is told through excerpts from van Gogh's letters the portrayal of his personality is particularly telling. Grades 7-10." Booklist

Booklist 51:69 O 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p44 N 14 '54 150w

"Even without color this is a very worthwhile book. The text is excellent for teenagers and they can also familiarize themselves with the subjects of Van Gogh's paintings."

+ Commonweal 61:201 N 19 '54 30w

"As Mr. Day suggests in discussing another book about van Gogh, it is too bad not to have his work represented by color reproductions. However, this book is so good in every other way that it is a very worthwhile addition to the field." J. D. L.

+ — Horn Bk 30:341 O '54 100w

Kirkus 22:539 Ag 15 '54 70w

"Recommended for all libraries." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 79:2502 D 15 '54 80w

"Mrs. Ripley has done a notable task, introducing the man and the pictures to any one over twelve, young or old. Her use of the artist's own words is dramatic and impressive. They illuminate both his special genius and his deep, sad understanding of life, art and people." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt ■ p2 N 14 '54 340w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkad

New Yorker 30:222 N 27 '54 80w

Wis Lib Bul 50:219 O '54

RIPPER, CHARLES L. Bats; il. by [the author]. 63p $2 Morrow

599.4 Bats

54-6380

A book for young readers which tells in non-technical language, all about bats, how and where they live, how they feed, how they give birth and care for their young, and what their enemies are. Some information is given as to kinds of bats found in various parts of the world.

Booklist 51:22 S 1 '54

"This book is just the thing to win friends for bats. It is beautifully and amply illustrated. The readable text is long enough to satisfy and short enough not to tire. Young [or older] readers of this book will be able to substitute appreciation for any fear of or superstition about bats they may have had." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 14 '54 70w

"An artist-naturalist provides a study of bats that is wholly scientific and absorbing reading, as well." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:339 O '54 80w

Kirkus 22:437 Jl 15 '54 90w

"Similar in format to Zim's Snakes, Owls, etc., this authoritative book will be valuable in helping to dispel children's fears of bats and similar animals, and those who like bats will be fascinated by the detailed information and excellent illustrations. Writing is not as clear and simple as Dr. Zim's, but the book as a whole is well done and fills a definite need in children's natural history collections. . . Recommended for ages 9-13." Anne Jackson

+ Library J 79:1668 S 15 '54 80w

"A fascinating nature book. . . It is a fine addition to our nature book shelf, on a subject not covered before for children." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 3 '54 110w

Reviewed by R. K. Plumb

N Y Times pt2 p22 N 14 '54 50w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkad

New Yorker 30:218 N 27 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:218 O '54

RITCHESON, CHARLES RAY. British politics and the American revolution. 320p il $4 Univ. of Okla. press

942.073 Great Britain—Politics and government. U.S.—History—Revolution—Causes 54-5933

"The fifteen years from 1763 to 1778 possess some measure of unity from the standpoint of British-American relations. The period opened with an earnest, if not a wise, attempt by the British Government under the leadership of George Grenville, then First Minister of the Crown under George III, to reconstruct and reform the old British colonial system. . . It closed with the Carlisle Peace Commission and the Franco-American Alliance, which ended the possibility of imperial reorganization on the lines Grenville had laid down and virtually insured disruption of the old British Empire and independence of the United States. This is the period with which Charles Ritcheson, Associate Professor of History at Kenyon College, deals." N Y Times

Reviewed by Max Beloff

Ann Am Acad 296:205 N '54 550w

"Students of both the American Revolution and of English history will find this work thoroughly enjoyable. Those still entertaining many of the popular stereotypes of the villains George III and Prime Minister North and of the hero Burke will be forced to make many reversals in their previous judgments."

+ Current Hist 27:127 Ag '54 200w

"Mr. Ritcheson has overlooked much of the work done by other scholars on problems with which he is concerned. . . These matters are not wholly peripheral to an understanding of British politics in this period, and Mr. Ritcheson's ignorance of them mars his work. Nevertheless the book does make a contribution to our understanding of the Revolution. From an intensive examination of the public and private papers collected in the great British repositories, including the newly opened Wentworth-Woodhouse Papers at Sheffield, Mr. Ritcheson is able to construct an intimate picture of

RITCHESON, C. R.—Continued

British politics. . . It is only to be regretted that he did not balance his special knowledge with the common knowledge so readily available to him in any research library." D. S. Morgan

+ — New Eng Q 27:410 S '54 1300w

"It should be said emphatically that he has written an important book which throws new light on the difficult, complicated and often baffling subject of British politics in the era of the American Revolution. . . It is unfortunate that on his very first page the author implies that France had possessed or controlled the whole of India before the Seven Year's War. And what made him suppose that the well-known Royal Proclamation of 1763 had anything to do with Nova Scotia. . . But the fact that the author, like Homer, has occasionally nodded does not in any serious way detract from the value of his book." R. L. Schuyler

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 20 '54 800w

"This is a useful and readable monograph."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p332 My 21 '54 150w

RITTER, CHRISTIANE. Woman in the polar night; tr. from the German by Jane Degras; with a map and 24 line drawings by the author. 223p $3 Dutton

919.81 Spitsbergen 54-9305

An account of a long year spent on Spitsbergen by a young German artist, whose husband was a trapper in that barren land. Illustrated with drawings by the author.

Booklist 50:442; 51:149 J1 15 '54; D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:5 O '54 20w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 30:466 D '54 120w

"Unusual, thoughtful, this has beauty in the simple expression of immense interior experience."

+ Kirkus 22:425 J1 1 '54 160w

"Graphic as are the details of their struggle to survive physically and mentally it is not these the author stresses; it is the beauty of the strange land, its dramatic changes and the compulsion it exerts on those who live its seasons that she describes, with such skill and immediacy that the book will find enthusiastic readers. For all general collections." R. B. Robertson

+ Library J 79:1500 S 1 '54 100w

"Something of the quality of Anne Lindbergh's writing enters into Mrs. Ritter's unassuming story of the space and splendors of the setting about them, the beasts and birds that shared their domain and provided their food and livelihood, and a range of experience and emotion far off-center from the usual run. It is an unusual and appealing book." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 19 '54 450w

Reviewed by L. D. Rich
N Y Times p43 S 26 '54 320w

Reviewed by Berton Roueché
New Yorker 30:183 N 6 '54 270w

Reviewed by Oswald Wynd
Spec p178 Ag 6 '54 40w

Springfd Republican p9C O 31 '54 420w

"An unpretentious but arresting book about life south of nowhere."

Time 64:122 S 13 '54 170w

"Her tale is interesting enough as another tough and prolonged effort in physical adjustment; but there is more to it than that. She had to accept the vigorous method in this male madness: she had, as the winter pressed harder on her survival, to do as she was told. . . At the end of her year she was at her husband's shoulder. She knew why she went home rebelliously, and why he remained."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p559 S 3 '54 650w

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINE (CAROL CAR-NAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseud.). Policeman at the door. 192p $2.75 Doubleday

54-5722

Detective story.

"Excellent set up puzzle that drifts thru colorless byways." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 25 '54 160w

Kirkus 22:136 F 15 '54 60w

"Able but less absorbing than a good many others among her tales." James Sandoe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 My 16 '54 90w

"Carol Carnac is, if anything, even better than usual at humanizing the British police in A Policeman at the Door." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p28 My 2 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 16 '54 60w

"Intelligent save for safaris." Sergeant Cuff
+ — Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

+ Springfd Republican p9C My 2 '54 80w

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINE (CAROL CAR-NAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseud.). Shroud of darkness, by E. C. R. Lorac [pseud]. 221p $2.75 Doubleday

54-10256

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:503 Ag 1 '54 70w

"The Lorac virtues are all present from the outset and the admirable Macdonald (C. I. D.) presides in the maneuvers of detection. There are few writers who could have handled extravagances such as those involved with such impeccable composure as Miss Lorac." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 O 3 '54 90w

"Miss Lorac achieves a notable atmospheric job in setting her crime in the midst of England's worst fog in fifty years, and skillfully blends a number of contrasting subplots with an artful use of psychological subtleties. . . The Lorac by-line continues to stand for the formal Scotland Yard novel at its best and most human." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p43 O 10 '54 100w

"Above the average of its kind."

+ New Yorker 30:168 O 16 '54 90w

"You can't miss here." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:37 N 27 '54 30w

"The backgrounds are carefully established and the methodical style serves its purpose well." Penelope Houston

+ Spec p408 Ap 11 '54 20w

RIWKIN-BRICK, ANNA. See Brick, A. R.

ROARK, GARLAND (GEORGE GARLAND, pseud.). Star in the rigging; a novel of the Texas navy. 345p $3.95 Doubleday

54-7316

"This is the story of one of the forgotten men who helped make Texas free, a commander of the tiny fleet that sailed without tradition or security, that ran the winds down, and fought and blockaded with unsurpassed audacity. In writing this novel [the author says] I have endeavored to portray the true cause of the Texas Revolution. . . While holding close to history, I have exercised a novelist's privilege by drawing on the imagination in depicting the lives, loves, passions, cruelties, triumphs, and disappointments that existed at the time." Foreword

Kirkus 22:271 Ap 15 '54 230w

"Garland Roark is a popular writer of historical sea tales and deservedly so, since he picks his settings with care and embellishes them with plots and characters that are plausible. He has done an especially effective job in 'Star In the Rigging.'"

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 11 '54 160w

"This is a historical novel that sticks close to facts. But it has the Roark-style romance—conflict between strong men and the presence of two beautiful women, one of them a spy whose allure came close to leading astray Capt. Jeremiah H. Brown, commander of the Texas Navy." Lewis Nordyke

+ N Y Times p24 Je 6 '54 280w

ROBB, FRANK. Master of the Dauntless. 216p $3 Longmans

53-11682

A tale of deep sea fishing off the coast of South Africa, and of the brave struggle of the owners of the Dauntless to overcome a crushing debt.

"There is an unassuming, sincere quality thruout. It is especially effective in this novel because it brings the master, his crew, and their hard life into sharp focus. What emerges is an engrossing story of hard work, courage, and real adventure." Richard Philbrick

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 7 '54 70w

"South African fishermen, the skills and factors of memory and eyesight in small boat handling, and a shoot or bust trip add up to a compact tale of strange waters and the men who live and die in them. Something for the young and old men of the sea."

+ Kirkus 21:720 N 1 '53 140w

"There is a fine ring about this tale of the sea: a ring that may only be perceptible to those who have gone to sea and felt the ambivalent passion of love and hate which it imposes on its servants. Certainly that feeling can only be conveyed by one who knows the sea and is in addition a talented and honest writer." E. L. Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 14 '54 700w

"From first to last, this is a good, salty adventure yarn—and, like the skipper, at its best when the Dauntless is out of sight of land." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p23 Mr 28 '54 230w

ROBBINS, MRS ANN BROKAW (ROE). Annuals; il. by Rebecca and Douglas Merrilees. (Rinehart's garden lib) 95p $1.50 Rinehart

635.931 Flowers 54-5328

Instructions for the novice in gardening. Includes transplanting seedlings, proper watering, seed buying, when and how to plant, cultivation, care, tools, records, etc. There are also instructions on planting and caring for specific annuals.

Booklist 50:281 Mr 15 '54

"Annuals seemed to me particularly good—the answer to the query, 'Can you recommend any book to someone who knows literally nothing about gardening?'"

+ Kirkus 21:781 D 1 '53 130w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 79:207 F 1 '54 30w

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 15 '54 20w

ROBBINS, JHAN, and ROBBINS, JUNE. Eight weeks to live. 23p $1 Doubleday

B or 92 Taft, Robert Alphonso 54-8110

"The last chapter in the life of Senator Robert A. Taft." (Subtitle) This is a reprint of an article first published in This Week Magazine, later in the April 1954 issue of the Reader's Digest.

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Je 6 '54 320w

Kirkus 22:259 Ap 1 '54 150w

"It is ironic indeed that all of the efforts to 'humanize' Senator Taft during his many campaigns had to wait for his death for their final fruition. Then it was simply the man acting precisely as he had during his lifetime that made him seem so remarkable to many who had disregarded or discounted him in the past. His last days and his gallant struggle for life captured the heart of America and no one would have been more surprised than Senator Taft, for he was just being himself, as he had been all through the years." C. W. Weinberger

San Francisco Chronicle p17 J1 18 '54 180w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 70w

ROBBINS, SIDNEY MARTIN. Managing securities; the basic principles of investment. 598p $6 Houghton

332.6 Investments. Securities 54-9646

"Although this large-scale introduction to the basic principles of investment was written for college students, it can be consulted with profit by the beginning or experienced investor. After a short introduction, the author treats five different aspects of securities management. These include the mechanics of trading, investment problems, sources of investment information, security analysis, and market analysis." Booklist

"The book will be useful to those who desire to stress security analysis. On this topic the exposition is excellent and should be readily grasped by the student who has had relatively little previous accounting and financial training." F. C. Joerg

+ Am Econ R 44:968 D '54 700w

Booklist 51:76 O 15 '54

"An excellent basic text for students, and a readable guide for anyone wanting a working knowledge of the operations and functions of securities markets... Recommended." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:2216 N 15 '54 80w

ROBERTS, CECIL. Remarkable young man. 272p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

Severn, Joseph—Fiction. Keats, John—Fiction 54-11649

A novel retelling the story of Joseph Severn, the young English painter who accompanied Keats to Rome and nursed him during his last months. The story covers the period from the friends' arrival in Rome to Severn's marriage to the ward of his patroness, Lady Westmoreland.

Booklist 51:42 S 15 '54

Kirkus 22:318 My 15 '54 160w

"The Remarkable Young Man' is meat for the antiquarian rather than the reader in search of a rousing love story. But Mr. Roberts, knowing Rome like the palm of his hand and the literary and other gossip of the period like a well-thumbed book, enriches an otherwise feebly told tale with a great deal of fascinating local color." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 J1 25 '54 650w

"One gets the impression that Mr. Roberts gave loving care to gathering background notes for a historical novel. But he has ended by printing the notes instead of writing the novel." DeLancey Ferguson

N Y Times p4 J1 25 '54 750w

"Many of his vignettes are quite effective... his descriptions of Rome are excellent. 'The Remarkable Young Man' is, of course, necessarily superficial. The author has been willing to sacrifice subtlety for sweep, has chosen to give us incident rather than insight. We have to hand it to him, all the same—it can't have been easy to compress the doings of so large an era into so small a volume, or material enough for thirty novels into one." Lewis Volger

+ Sat R 37:16 S 4 '54 650w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 8 '54 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p133 F 26 '54 160w

ROBERTS, DOROTHY JAMES. Launcelot, my brother. 373p $3.95 Appleton

Arthur, king of Britain—Fiction 54-10109

A retelling of the Arthurian legend in which the narrator is Bors de Ganis, brother of Sir Launcelot. In this tale the liaison between Launcelot and the Queen brings about the destruction of the Round Table because of the search for the Grail, which Sir Gawaine insisted upon.

Booklist 51:85 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:9 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 17 '54
350w

Kirkus 22:458 J1 15 '54 210w

"'Launcelot, My Brother' is no emasculated analysis of ancient characters, and in retelling the legend, Miss Roberts has lost none of its vigor of action and suspense and climax. . . It is to Miss Roberts' special gifts as a writer and the integrity of her own vision that we owe the successful telling of this tale immortalized by the ages." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 O 3 '54
600w

"Dorothy James Roberts is only the latest to find in the Arthur cycle an ideal framework in which to express her own ideas. . . Once again Miss Roberts builds around a famous love story. It is a difficult one to tell, for on the one side love and on the other loyalty and duty, come to inevitable clash. . . She tells it with great psychological reality. She also uses it to point a moral, which is not that of Tennyson." T. C. Chubb

N Y Times p5 S 26 '54 500w

"In a field so cluttered with mediocrity as that of historical fiction this book seems quite an accomplishment, and its author might have said, with Thomas Mallory, 'Lo, thus was the old custom and usage of this land.'" Jerome Stone

+ Sat R 37:46 S 16 '54 270w

Time 64:105 S 27 '54 40w

Wis Lib Bul 50:211 O '54

ROBERTS, EDWARD BARRY. Television writing and selling; with an introd. by Ira L. Avery. 499p il $5.75 Writer

808.22 [029.6] Television authorship 54-6433

"Complete coverage of writing for television from idea to production, including scripts and the television code. Photographs." (Bookmark)
No index.

Booklist 50:294 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:130 Mr '54 20w

"One technically valuable section of the book offers a comparative analysis of 'On Borrowed Time,' examined as a novel, stage play, film, radio play, and television play. In a chapter on adaptations, Mr. Roberts comments on the pioneering hour-long TV version of 'Wuthering Heights' and traces the steps in making a TV play from a paralysis victim's autobiographical story. A war documentary also is scrutinized. The chapter on selling can save a beginner from many a wasted effort. A detailed table of contents inadequately compensates for the omission of an index." Rod Nordell

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 4 '54 550w

"Remarkably comprehensive coverage of the subject described by the title. Recommended for libraries used by TV writers." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1894 O 15 '54 20w

ROBERTS, MARION. Farmwife. 224p il $3 Dutton

630.9429 Farm life. Women as farmers
54-7629

This book contains reprintings of a series of articles the author wrote for various British magazines and weeklies. They describe the day-by-day life on a farm in the Welsh hills.

Booklist 50:374 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:215 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by P. O. Marsh
Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 17 '54
300w

"If for no other reason than the sweet humility and modest pride with which she records her achievements, Marion Roberts' chronicle of life on a Welsh farm should be read. . . There are many touching bits in the book, concerned with her family and friends, with her attempts at writing and the rewards in terms of a new coat for a child, with her first frightening experience with a telephone. But best of all is the final chapter, the summing up when her oldest daughter sends a letter about her student life in Cambridge and her son puts his first pay envelope in her lap."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 23 '54 260w

"Mrs. Roberts, a natural writer who got her start by entering and winning a competition in a rural weekly for the best letter from a farm wife, does not hesitate to set down the most trivial matters—the price of a calf, the way to bottle fruit and jam, a back-door conversation with an insolent gypsy girl—and by some magic of artlessness, she brings everything she touches to life."

+ New Yorker 30:139 Je 5 '54 120w

Reviewed by W. R. White

San Francisco Chronicle p15 J1 4 '54
220w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54
160w

ROBERTS, MYRTLE. Pattern for freedom; a history of the United States. 680p il $3.96 Winston

973 U.S.—History 53-1187

"New high school text by a former president of the National Council. It begins with the English settlement of North America. The volume is profusely illustrated and most of the pictures are contemporary prints or photographs of the period being studied. . . Pattern for Freedom is divided into eight chronological units, although chapters within units may be devoted to specific topics. About one-half of the text is concerned with the years prior to the end of Reconstruction. One-third covers the period since 1900. The appendix is extensive (60 pages) and contains such unusual items as the United States Flag Code, biographical sketches of the presidents, and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights." Social Educ

"Pattern for Freedom apparently is not designed for the high ability youngster. Where the reading problem is a pressing one, and teachers are looking for an interesting narrative style text that is easier to read than most United States history books, Myrtle Roberts volume should be considered." W. B. Fink

+ Social Educ 17:406 D '53 320w

"One of the most interesting and fascinating American History textbooks that have been written for young people in recent years. . . This text includes an understanding of the geographic, political, economic and social history of the United States and will hold the attention and interest of young people." D. W. Harr

+ Social Studies 44:156 Ap '53 150w

ROBERTS, PAUL. Understanding grammar. 550p $5 Harper

425 English language—Grammar 54-5158

"In this textbook of modern English grammar, the author explains assumptions underlying grammatical structure, describes how rules are arrived at and definitions made, and shows how grammarians often disagree about terms and subdivisions." Publisher's note

Booklist 50:216 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:155 Ap '54 20w

Wis Lib Bul 50:64 Mr '54

ROBERTS, THOMAS D'ESTERRE, abp. Black popes: authority; its use and abuse. 139p $2.50 Sheed

230.2 Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works. Jesuits 54-11141

"As a member of the Jesuit Order and for years the Catholic Archbishop of Bombay the author is well qualified to write of Catholic authority and power. His book was prompted, we feel sure, by attacks on Catholic authoritarianism such as Blanchard's American Freedom and Catholic Power. The issues raised are faced frankly and answered, often in an ironic spirit. He admits the dangers in authoritarianism and acknowledges that many Catholic priests have succumbed to the danger. He quotes frequently Lord Acton's dictum: 'All power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely'. But he defends vigorously the Catholic position that authority and obedience are necessary inside and outside the Church." Kirkus

"That a member of the Society of Jesus should entitle his book 'Black Popes' is in itself interesting. But here is a book by an archbishop, bearing neither the nihil obstat nor the ecclesiastical imprimatur, and 'dedicated devotedly to those who asked for it.' What could it mean? As I read the answer became clear. It is a book on obedience by a most independent mind for which no censor could take responsibility." C. H. Moehlman

Christian Century 71:1465 D 1 '54 700w

"This book, small only in its physical dimensions, gives the reader the experience of listening to the table talk of one of the great churchmen of our generation, a missionary archbishop who has been employed extensively by the Holy see in the provisio ecclesiarum, that supreme function of the Church's power to rule. It is by any standard a remarkable book, revealing a humble and witty personality, courteous in controversy, apostolic in compassion, a liberal in the best Catholic sense." Francis Sweeney

+ Commonweal 61:99 O 29 '54 750w

"A book which deserves wide reading by both Catholics and non-Catholics, who are concerned with the relation of Catholic power and authority to democratic principles."

+ Kirkus 22:704 O 1 '54 210w

"The author, a Jesuit and an archbishop with much experience in India, is qualified to discuss the subject, and does with complete frankness. . . . Although well written, this is not easy reading, especially in the second part. It is intended for serious readers troubled by the problem of Catholic authority accentuated in our times by the growth of communism. Highly recommended for large public, college, and university libraries." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 79:2101 N 1 '54 210w

ROBERTSON, EILEEN ARBUTHNOT (LADY TURNER). Devices and desires. 229p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

54-11838

This story of the aftermath of war follows the fortunes of the girl Hebe, from the time she watches her father die and takes over the leadership of a band of refugees, until several years later she reaches her heart's desire, the dull, secure life of an English boarding school. The scene is first the Greek-Macedonian border country and then Trinidad in the West Indies.

Booklist 51:63 O 1 '54

Canadian Forum 34:192 N '54 70w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 12 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:369 Je 15 '54 280w

"As an adventure story this is splendid; Mrs Robertson writes with imagination and power about post-war Greece, but her portrayal of Hebe is perhaps too objective to make one feel deeply about her fate." Patricia Hodgart

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 2 '54 140w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 47:264 F 27 '54 300w

"The book ends as a sardonic fairy-tale. It is as though we had been led to expect a bitter but somehow nourishing bread, and found ourselves left with a small, cold, highly-polished stone. Never remotely a sentimentalist, Miss Robertson seems, here, to be weary of all emotions, and detached from the human beings who feel them. Pervaded by a curious, intellectual chill, her book holds our interest but leaves us unmoved, unsatisfied, ultimately unconvinced." Dan Wickenden

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p5 Ag 29 '54 600w

"If she does not allow another decade to elapse between this book and her next, it looks as though England may soon have in E. Arnot Robertson a novelist of the highest order. As it is, there can be precious few writers alive with Miss Robertson's command of English, capable of writing a prose of such wit and lucidity and of convincing the reader that, no matter how strange the circumstances, human beings would behave just as she makes them." James Stern

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 29 '54 850w

"Miss Robertson's young heroine is completely convincing and delightful, but only a miracle could make us believe in the daring and dangerous adventure that ends, finally, in just the kind of English boarding school she has dreamed of."

+ — New Yorker 30:178 O 9 '54 500w

"She shows all her great talent for telling a story of danger and violence coolly and with mild irony." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 29 '54 550w

"With her usual brilliance, E. Arnot Robertson has conjured up an unusual plot, taut, exciting, ironical, and attuned to subtle vibrations of human agony. The tautness relaxes about the time the steel-willed Hebe discovers her heart. It is a test of Mrs. Robertson's sympathetic way with people that she makes of her super-child an endearing character." A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R 37:17 Ag 28 '54 500w

"Hebe herself, a mixture of weary age and bubbling twelve-year-oldness, is a believable child, and the backgrounds are blocked in with knowledge and confidence. Although I found the West Indian chapters a little overdone, the first two-thirds of the book, with its description of Greece at the height of the civil war, succeeds well enough to make up for that; and the minor characters are alive. Devices and Desires is a good, professional job." John Metcalf

+ — Spec p216 F 19 '54 120w

Time 64:122 S 13 '54 180w

"The book has been constructed with skill and care, yet the total effect is curiously disjointed. The scenes of Macedonian village life have a fine air of authenticity, but the fates of the refugees are unmoving and almost uninteresting."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Mr 5 '54 220w

ROBERTSON, KEITH. Three stuffed owls; il. by Jack Weaver. 198p $2.50 Viking

54-12165

Mystery story for grades seven to nine.

Booklist 51:69 O 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p30 N 14 '54 110w

Kirkus 22:394 Jl 1 '54 90w

"The writing has a quality that lifts it above usual mysteries for about eleven to fourteen. We approve it because the boys' relation to adults (parents, police, a lawyer, an innocent foreign taxidermist unhappily involved) is real and sensible; the boys make a real contribution in brain work and courage." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p10 O 31 '54 150w

ROBERTSON, KEITH—Continued

N Y Times pt2 p2 N 14 '54 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 14 '54 110w

"The sixteen-year-old detectives are not Dick Tracys, nor do they have the help of a Little Orphan Annie. They are normal boys, and though the mysteries are a little unusual, they are solved in a plausible manner. There are also some illuminating conversations on the subject of taxidermy which might arouse an interest in that subject. The style is smooth and the interest is sustained." M. M.

+ Sat R 37:91 N 13 '54 100w

ROBERTSON, KEITH. Wreck of the Saginaw; il. by Jack Weaver. 144p $2.50 Viking

54-9318

On October 29, 1870, the U.S.S. Saginaw sank somewhere west of Hawaii marooning her ninety-three men on an unknown atoll. Five of the crew sailed a gig fifteen hundred miles to get help. This is a fictionalized version of the affair for ages twelve to sixteen.

Booklist 50:364 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:165 Ap '54 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"From information in the logs and diaries available, the author has written an exciting and moving story of the wreck and the hazardous journey that followed. Everything except the exact words spoken by the men is a matter of historical record. The locale, made familiar by World War II, gives the story added appeal." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:251 Ag '54 140w

Kirkus 22:119 F 15 '54 110w

"Recommended for ages 10-14." Robert Van Benthuyssen

+ Library J 79:866 My 1 '54 70w

"Mr. Weaver has decorated the book with powerful, interesting pictures that have a period feeling, touches of humor and also exact information as to the ship and the gig." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 16 '54 150w

"The story is true, based on a log and a diary, and the author of the current reconstruction has done a skillful and wholly believable job in creating dialogue, resorting neither to shouts nor gee-whiz explosions to bare the drama." Nathan Aleskovsky

+ N Y Times p26 My 2 '54 210w

"Mr. Robertson's gift for characterization his tight, unemotional writing, his matter-of-fact style serve admirably to describe the comradeship and the courage, the privations and the sufferings, and the elementary struggles of the lifeboat's crew. It is a handsome book, appropriately illustrated. Some of the drawings were made by the Saginaw's captain. For older boys and their fathers." A. O. Murphy

+ Sat R 37:30 J1 24 '54 180w

ROBERTSON, RICHARD AUSTIN. Chats on old glass. 179p il $3 Wyn

748 Glassware

54-6946

After a brief explanation of glassmaking this volume contains a description of the materials, techniques and designs used in making Egyptian, Roman, Islamic, Venetian, English, German, and other types of glass. Index.

Booklist 50:375 Je 1 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p301 S '54 20w

ROBERTSON, ROBERT BLACKWOOD. Of whales and men. 299p il $4.50 Knopf

639.28 Whaling

53-6858

The author, a Scottish doctor, specialising in psychiatry, signed on as senior medical officer to a whaling expedition sailing for the Southern Ocean in the 1950-51 season. His book is a fairly sober, detailed, and explicit account of life on a whaling expedition in modern times with considerable emphasis on the personalities and problems of the men who follow "one of the world's most unusual occupations."

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 193:72 My '54 200w

Booklist 50:336 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:183 My '54 30w

"The author has a dry, quiet vein of humor running thru his writing, which rises at times to hilarity. Even if whaling is the smelliest, hardest work of all salt water jobs, you should enjoy 'Of Whales and Men,' especially if you like fine writing, good characterizations, and lively action." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 25 '54 300w

"Dr. Robertson, who was appointed senior medical officer to one of the big expeditions, has a story to tell of the wonders seen and experienced. A portion of these observations appeared in The New Yorker, and 'Of Whales and Men' is the Book-of-the Month Club's May offering. I believe that these rewards are only the beginning of this fine book's career." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 29 '54 800w

Kirkus 22:138 F 15 '54 240w

"Whaling books of the last five years deal with Arctic whaling of the last century. Robertson supplies vital and vibrant information on modern whaling and whalemens in fine narrative style. Reviewer did not see photographs, but you can bet your flensing knife this will be a popular book." F. J. Anderson

+ Library J 79:448 Mr 1 '54 140w

"Of Whales and Men is a wonderful book. Dr. Robertson has written an inspired study of an industry of which little is known, a study that pays equal attention to the motives, the men, and the machinery of the enterprise. With a pen that is servant to his alert, questioning mind, his easy gaiety and grave compassion—two qualities rarely joined—he discusses whales, modern whaling methods, and whalemens. The result is a happy combination of facts and insights." Jeanette Mirsky

+ Nation 179:55 J1 17 '54 800w

Reviewed by R. C. Murphy

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ap 25 '54 1000w

"'Of Whales and Men,' a Book of the Month Club selection for May, is remarkable for its communication of things seen and unseen about both the subjects of its title." H. B. Hough

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 25 '54 1300w

"The author, a born writer and fittingly enough a psychiatrist, makes vivid every emotion and every process of the great hunt, from the excitement of the first cry of 'Hval-blast!' to the awesome hush which settles around great sacks of whale meat lying deep in the hold." Lewis Vogler

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 9 '54 950w

"'Of Whales and Men' is never profound, but it is an extremely honest and readable report of a remarkable adventure in a little-known commercial enterprise. . . [It] is so packed with adventure that Hollywood may bid for it as a vehicle. A word of warning is in order. The book has no love interest, as the phrase is understood in Hollywood." William McFee

+ Sat R 37:19 My 22 '54 1300w

Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54 650w

ROBINSON, CHARLES ALEXANDER, ed. Spring of civilization: Periclean Athens. 464p il maps $7.50 Dutton

880.8 Greek literature—Translations into English. Art—Greece 53-10849

An anthology of Greek drama, philosophy, history and art, from the Periclean age. The editor, professor of classics at Brown university, supplies brief notes to provide necessary background. Chronological summary of ancient Greek history. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 50:354 My 15 '54

Kirkus 22:55 Ja 15 '54 200w

"Recommended for college libraries, Great Books discussion groups, and as an attractive addition to the home library." Beatrice Libaire

+ Library J 79:548 Mr 15 '54 130w

"It is a mark of respect to the reader to give him original documents rather than a discussion of them, and no one can deny that the documents Professor Robinson has chosen are central. But we may question the adequacy of the book nevertheless. Whether (as I think likely) the reader who takes this book up is already familiar with these classics or (as Professor Robinson apparently thinks) he encounters them, as everyone sometime must, for the first time, he should be given some more extended explication, particularly of the tragedies and the 'Symposium.'... Having once got the attention of 'the general reader and him alone,' to whom Professor Robinson addresses his book, it is something of a pity that he does not exploit his opportunity more fully." Moses Hadas

+ — Sat R 37:13 Ag 7 '54 600w

ROBINSON, GERTRUDE. Spindleshanks; pictures [by] Peter Burchard. 187p $3 Oxford 54-5710

Spy story for ages ten to fourteen. It is the story of Cal Doane, a lanky youth living in the Hudson valley in 1777, who became a spy for the colonists.

Booklist 50:364 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 20w

"Excellent historical novel." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 8 '54 100w

Kirkus 22:235 Ap 1 '54 100w

"The horrors of life aboard these vessels in this period are not minimized. After completion of his mission, Caleb meets personal danger in many forms. The suspense is well sustained and characterization good." Margaret McFate

+ Library J 79:791 Ap 15 '54 90w

"Spy stories, when well told, make most welcome reading for both boys and girls. This is an unusually good one for readers of ten or eleven to thirteen." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 18 '54 170w

Wis Lib Bul 50:184 Jl '54

ROBLES, EMMANUEL. Dawn on our darkness; tr. from the French by Therese Pol. 248p $3.75 Messner 54-6774

The doctor in a Sardinian village is the hero. The doctor's childlike wife was often away with her parents on the mainland, and the doctor was happy in his affair with Clara. Then came a justified murder in the town and the doctor found himself shielding the murderer, which provides the core of the story.

"A short novel, translated from the French, 'Dawn on Our Darkness,' seems designed to carry some very special message concerning anguish and endurance. Yet, while everything that happens in the book is clear enough, the writing is moody, portentous, and occasionally strained, and the over-all effect is cloudy. . . One leaves the book suspecting that, behind all this murk and melodrama this is, after all, simply an expression of warm but unfocused sentimentality about the human capacity for suffering." Richard Sullivan

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 2 '54 350w

"Robles writes with energy rather than subtlety; with much of the senuous delectation of Moravia, but a stronger moral concern. His novel however is less likely to attract American tastes and has a very foreign flavor." Kirkus 22:131 F 15 '54 170w

"A thoughtful though violent novel which should enhance his reputation. Some libraries may prefer to sequester it in the rental collection." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:771 Ap 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Douglas Hewitt

Manchester Guardian p4 N 16 '54 150w

"If the craft in this French novel is slick and the tone journalistic, at least it is based on genuine experience in the world that exists today." Maxwell Geismar

+ — Nation 178:368 Ap 24 '54 130w

"I have stressed moral issues because they are germinal to this exciting novel, but also because Mr. Robles has succeeded so well in rendering the agonized sensibilities and raw disillusionment with which so many Europeans came out of the war. This book has other strengths—those of characterization and description; the wretched Sardinian mining town comes to life, and its people speak and cry out in recognizable human accents. Indeed, it is instructive to note that Mr. Robles' writing seems closer to Moravia than to Camus." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 11 '54 550w

"It is compact in structure, colorfully detailed in its unusual setting (the island of Sardinia) and concentrated on the interaction of character evoked by a murder." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p25 My 16 '54 260w

ROBSJOHN-GIBBINGS, TERENCE HAROLD. Homes of the brave; with drawings by Mary Petty. 113p $3.50 Knopf

728 Architecture, Domestic. House decoration 53-6859

A study and criticism of the changes in American interior decoration over the past sixty years. Illustrated with humorous drawings by Mary Petty.

Booklist 50:274 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:131 Mr '54 20w

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 21 '54 400w

"Gives brilliant proof that brevity is indeed the soul of wit. Rarely has a book been so informative, so amusing, so concise." Kathleen Cannell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 18 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:22 Ja 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1317 Jl '54 20w

"Billed as a 'very funny book,' this brief and cogent bill of particulars is deadly serious cultural criticism—cultural criticism in an area that touches every man, woman and child that sleeps in a bed under a roof. There is an adroit lightness in Mr. Robsjohn-Gibbings' own touch, to be sure, but be not deceived thereby; here is a man with a message." J. T. Winterich

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 14 '54 310w

"If the book consisted only of the thirty pages which bear Miss Petty's satirical drawings, it would convincingly accomplish an important purpose. . . But whereas the drawings are good-humored, the text tends to petulance. . . Despite the spritely, gay style, the diatribe becomes ■ Don Quixotism. What the jacket describes as 'a bomb, perhaps, wrapped in cellophane' seems to me to be essentially ■ dud." A. B. Saarinen

+ — N Y Times p7 F 14 '54 450w

"A scolding lecture, nearly always just but never very acute or powerful. . . Miss Petty is one of the wittiest artists alive, and her gentle and merciless slides are well worth the price of admission."

+ — New Yorker 30:127 Mr 20 '54 80w

"[Mary Petty's] wonderful illustrations are the perfect complement to his text. At the same time, kidding or no kidding, the author says plenty that will interest anyone who thinks of his house ■ something more than just shelter. If you've read Mr. Robsjohn Gibbings' 'Goodbye, Mr. Chippendale' for instance, you'll know his approach—a combination of sharp satire and broad humor which

ROBSJOHN-GIBBINGS, T. H.—Continued
very often conceals the fact that he's talking tremendously good sense." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 F 11 '54
480w

"Since this reviewer shares many of Mr. Robsjohn-Gibbings's more violent prejudices, he would be only too happy if he could say a good word about these random remarks on modern American architecture. The sad truth, however, is that the text of this book is bound to disappoint the fanciers of Miss Petty's drawings. Mr. Robsjohn-Gibbings, who turns out to be a serious fellow, insists that certain architects are on the wrong track, not because they lack what it takes, but because they are natives of that horrid old continent of Europe. He also feels that all our troubles will be over once we get rid of our delusions and sit in commonsense chairs in commonsense houses." W. A.

Sat R 37:18 F 20 '54 220w

"This book is for all who are contemplating building a home, have built one or just enjoy reading a clever satire. It shows a mature intelligence in seeing through fads and the blind acceptance of their followers. Mr. Robsjohn-Gibbings has a penetrating sense of humor and his crystal clear word pictures are well executed by artist Mary Petty." Harriet Sterling

+ Springfield Republican p10C Mr 7 '54
160w

ROCHE, ALOYSIUS. Animals under the rainbow; with wood-engravings by Agnes Miller Parker. 173p $2.75 Sheed 398.21 Animals, Legends and stories of 54-6140

Legends of the saints and birds and beasts. A few of the stories are taken from the Bible. Illustrated with woodcuts.

"Though primarily written for children, the engrossing stories are rendered in a manner that should appeal to adults as well; the anecdotes are enhanced with wood engravings by Agnes Miller Parker. Altogether a most delightful book." Frank Dell'Isola

+ Cath World 179:238 Je '54 200w

"Catholic boys and girls will welcome the excellent storytelling of an English parish priest in Animals Under the Rainbow. It is further distinguished by superb, dramatic wood engravings by Agnes Miller Parker."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p25 My 16
'54 50w

"An example of a polished literary style put to the service of juvenile readers." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 4 '54 40w

ROCHOW, EUGENE GEORGE, and WILSON, MATHEW KENT. General chemistry; a topical introduction; il. by Maryellin Reinecke. 602p $6 Wiley

540 Chemistry 54-7715

"A new introductory college text authored by two faculty members of the Department of Chemistry of Harvard University. It is readable and reliable and well worth adding to those library collections which are planned to include a selection of the better elementary texts." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1406 Ag '54 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:50 Jl '54

ROCKWELL, FREDERICK FRYE, and GRAYSON, ESTHER C. Complete book of bulbs; 87 halftones, 19 line drawings, and 31 natural color photographs of the author's garden. 352p $5.95 Am. garden guild, 444 Madison av, N.Y. 22; Doubleday

635.9 Bulbs 53-7520

"A practical manual on the uses, cultivation, and propagation of more than 100 species, hardy and tender, which the amateur gardener can enjoy outdoors and in the home." (Subtitle) List of recommended varieties of garden bulbs. Index.

"Fine book. One of the outstanding publications of the year, on a subject of interest to most gardeners, it is a 'must' book for libraries."

+ Bookmark 13:137 Mr '54 30w

"Nontechnical, yet completely informative, this book offers the reader all he needs to know for successful handling of bulbs." Art Kozelka

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 18 '53
90w

Kirkus 21:473 Jl 15 '53 120w

"This is a thoroughly comprehensive volume on growing bulbs of whatever description." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 O 18 '53
80w

RODEWALD, FRED C. Commercial art as a business. 129p $2.95 Viking

741.67 Art, Commercial 54-5756

A handbook for artists, art buyers, and artists' representatives, giving practices and procedures for buying and selling commercial art work. No index.

Booklist 50:315 Ap 15 '54

"An essential handbook for experienced commercial artists."

+ Kirkus 21:807 D 15 '53 160w

"Clearly and concisely written, this is a genuine contribution to better understanding of the artist's place and work in the business world." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:988 My 15 '54 150w

Management R 43:555 Ag '54 40w

RODICK, BURLEIGH CUSHING. American constitutional custom: a forgotten factor in the founding. 244p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

342.739 U.S.—Constitutional history 53-12238

"The theme of this volume is that the United States has a political and constitutional heritage derived from English customs and at the same time from constitutional customs which were the product of the American political climate. In support of this conclusion Mr. Rodick mobilizes documentary and secondary materials from English history and American colonial and national history from 1620 to 1829." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by Frank Grace

Am Pol Sci R 48:567 Je '54 800w

"By failing to confine his use of custom to a more scientific definition and by introducing interesting, but nonetheless irrelevant items, the author has impaired the effectiveness of his general theme. At the same time, however, he has compiled much valuable material in a short volume and has rendered a service in reminding us once again that American institutions, doctrines, and practices are neither so new and original nor so different as the mystical patriots would endeavor to make us believe." R. J. Harris

+ Ann Am Acad 291:167 Ja '54 600w

"This is the fruit of a diligent scholar's attempt to summarize the story of three centuries in less than 150 pages. No other book on the same subject rivals it in the simple, lucid imparting of scholarly conclusions... This is a solid and welcome book."

+ Cath World 178:399 F '54 150w

"This interesting little book is a classic example of too much of a good thing." S. G. Brown

Ethics 64:230 Ap '54 800w

Reviewed by M. DeW. Howe

New Eng Q 26:560 D '53 160w

ROE, ALBERT SUTHERLAND. Blake's illustrations to the Divine comedy. 236p 112il $20 Princeton univ. press

741.9 Blake, William. Dante Alighieri
52-13167

"William Blake's last and perhaps greatest work, the complete series of his illustrations for Dante's Divine Comedy is here made available to the general public for the first time—a century and a quarter after their execution though small selections from the series have been shown. And here also Albert S. Roe gives us the first extensive analysis of the culmination of Blake's creative life. . . . A detailed examination of each drawing includes a key to meanings from Blake's own writings." Christian Science Monitor

"The superb illustrations are concentrated at the end of the text, each in full-page reproduction, two-thirds the original size, with the engravings facing their preliminary drawings. Thus they permit one to trace the development of Blake's idea, or simply without interruption to delight in their beauty." Kathleen Cannell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 21 '54 600w

"The reproductions and the interpretation together will surely prove useful for any study of Blake as poet and/or artist." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:628 Ap 1 '54 110w

"Both commentary and the production of the illustrations make this a book to be treasured. It is a fitting tribute to two great artists." Ruthven Todd

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 10 '54 600w

"Mr. Roe's book will take its place as one of the essential volumes in the rapidly growing literature surrounding Blake's art, which is itself so essentially literary in its range and feeling."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p240 Ap 1 '54 1300w

"This is primarily a literary study, as it must be; the comments on Blake's graphic art leave much more to be said. But the book is an important one for the study of Blake, and it can provide an excellent introduction to Blake's symbolic method for those who have not yet braved the long poems." Martin Price

+ Yale R n s 43:629 summer '54 800w

ROEBURT, JOHN. Hollow man. 186p $2.50
Simon & Schuster

54-5467

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:169 Mr 1 '54 60w

"Mr. Roeburt has written the whole thing in tanglefoot prose which looks to have been muddled up oddly from a long experience in radio writing and a fierce avocation for little magazines. Distinctly gummy." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 25 '54 140w

"I found the novel as compelling as it is tortuous." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p16 Je 13 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 4 '54 50w

"Different, but what of it." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:31 Jl 10 '54 20w

ROEDER, WILLIAM S., comp. Dictionary of European history; with an introd. by Harry Elmer Barnes. (Midcentury reference lib) 316p $6 Philosophical lib.

940.03 Europe—History 54-11096

"The period covered here is from 500 A.D. to the present. Specifically European, it cannot help bringing in areas of thought and action involving other areas, like the Near and Far East and even our own Western Hemisphere. Alphabetized by the identifying item—whether person, group, area, movement, or event—the information is compact and reliable. Cross references clear up many items." Wis Lib Bul

Current Hist 27:191 S '54 80w

"Though it is relatively inexpensive, and though a good dictionary of European history is needed, this volume cannot be recommended without reservations, except as a quick identification source followed by consultation of other works. Much of the material could be found in general encyclopedic and biographical works." Dorothy Sinclair

Library J 79:1515 S 1 '54 200w

"Excellent for student, public speaker, and the librarian for quick reference."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:179 Jl '54

ROEMER, LAWRENCE. Brownson on democracy and the trend toward socialism. 173p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

191 Brownson, Orestes Augustus. Democracy 53-11667

"Orestes Brownson was at various times a Presbyterian, Universalist, and Unitarian. As an able orator, Brownson was a well-known figure in the Age of Jackson. Consequently, his conversion to Roman Catholicism, in 1844, caused considerable comment, which his vigorous attacks on Protestantism and all its works did not reduce. Added to this, he ridiculed the ideas of equality and democracy, viewing the latter as the inevitable step to socialism. This book, an outgrowth of ideas originally presented in a doctoral dissertation written at the graduate school of philosophy of Loyola University, seeks to explain and defend Brownson's viewpoint." Library J

Reviewed by Henry Wells

Ann Am Acad 291:188 Ja '54 550w

"Roemer's book is adequately equipped with references, notes and index. Had he included a chapter on the historical framework of Brownson's ideas, he would in the reviewer's opinion have measurably strengthened his argument. Notwithstanding, the book's appearance last year fittingly commemorated the sesquicentennial of Brownson's birth." A. I. Abell

+ Cath World 178:476 Mr '54 400w

"This is certainly an interesting volume for those interested in the future of democracy in this country, although it by no means represents the whole of the Catholic political outlook." J. A. Torres

+ Ethics 65:74 O '54 250w

"Roemer's essay is mostly an annotated summary of the Republic; in fact, it is as a guide to the rambling magnum opus, which Woodrow Wilson described as the most important contribution to political theory by an American in the nineteenth century, that Roemer's Brownson has merit. One can only regret the author's effort to give his study a topical twist by exalting Brownson into a seer who saw the police state as the end of the road for non-Catholic liberalism." Donald Dewey

J Pol Econ 62:91 F '54 280w

Reviewed by James Heslin

Library J 78:1325 Ag '53 100w

School & Society 78:64 Ag 22 '53 20w

"Many readers will disagree with Mr. Roemer's contention that Orestes Brownson was a first-rate political philosopher because of his second-hand espousal of the concept of 'territorial sovereignty.' More will question Brownson's philosophical efforts to bring political harmony between Catholic doctrine and American democracy. But all will give Mr. Roemer credit for an able presentation in which he has made available to the average intelligent reader the political thoughts of a controversial American author and clergyman." H. M. Helfman

+ — Social Studies 45:194 My '54 650w

ROETHKE, THEODORE. The waking; poems, 1933-1953. 120p $3 Doubleday

811

53-9125

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"The Waking' is a good title for this book in more ways than one, because the collection as a whole somewhat gives the impression of a poet gradually waking to himself or discovering his own 'identity.' And there is a quite considerable increase in poetic powers as the poet goes on." L. F.

ROETHKE, THEODORE—Continued

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 10 '54
130w

Reviewed by G. P. Meyer

Sat R 37:18 Ja 16 '54 650w

"We think by feeling," says Mr. Roethke in the closing poem. When his feeling is strong and the poet is content merely to give it the form that it demands, he provides passages and, in places, poems of beauty and power. Yet in other spots, cleverness usurps the role of passion and affords, not mysteries, but puzzles. Mr. Roethke has still to reveal the sustained strength of a major poet."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:55 Mr '54 230w

ROGERS, BRUCE. Pi; a hodge-podge of [his] letters, papers and addresses written during the last sixty years. 185p il $6 World pub. 655.08 Printing 53-6647

"This collection of writings by Bruce Rogers, a great American typographical artist, begins with a bit of college journalism published in 1892 and ends with a one-page note on a book which he printed in 1951. Between these dates are a total of forty-five short pieces—speeches, essays, announcements, printer's notes, and letters—especially valuable in tracing the growth of the esthetic theory upon which Rogers founded his art." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Planned by Mr. Rogers himself, the book is one that all lovers of printing will want to have, partly for its inclusion of 30-odd reproductions of fine Rogers title-pages, and partly for its reflection of its author's lifelong fascination with type, printing and book design." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 D 25 '53
600w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:186 Je '54 200w

ROGERS, GARET, pseud. Prisoner in paradise. 438p $3.95 Putnam

54-10489

"The novel's plot is built on an ironic theme: kind, brilliant, young Spartan McClintock, of possibly doubtful parentage and possibly weak heredity, tries democratically to rise above his humble lot in the Southern State of 'Kennassee.' He has almost qualified in 1927 as a physician, when he is 'railroaded' to prison for a so-called murder. Freed in 1941, the broken-hearted man arrives in Los Angeles where later he organizes the powerful 'Healthopathy Clinic' whose disreputable medical members are not always as humane as McClintock. In the end, the protagonist finds his soul by deliberately tearing down his world of charlatany and surrendering to life imprisonment." Library J

"This is neither a very convincing nor a very penetrating novel; its values are dim. But it has the lurid fascination of a gossip column; it tells 'secrets'; it makes 'revelations.'" Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 24 '54
300w

"It is a horrifying and frightening portrait of humanity with sick souls. It is the sort of book one can attack on a dozen scores. It has its sordid and its filthy aspects, often beyond the point of necessity, often leaving a nasty taste. It isn't really a good novel. But it tells a holding story and it drives home a lesson."

Kirkus 22:545 Ag 15 '54 280w

"Recommended." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:1826 O 1 '54 210w

"Garet Rogers is the pen name of a young lawyer in Southern California who studied medicine for a time before embarking on the law. This is her first book. It is long, lively and hard-hitting, with some excursions into the farcical and burlesque. Its plain-speaking accounts of life in a 'Kennassee' town, medical school and prison and among Southern California's cultists and movie hangers-on will hold the attention of many and probably offend some." Mary Ross

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p18 O 24
'54 400w

"This is a loose, over-large novel without much organization and often badly over-written. There are some good bits in it. . . By and large, however, the reading this gets will be because of its reflection of the inside—a quite plausible inside, too—of how such rack-ets are conducted." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 29
'54 500w

"'Prisoner in Paradise' is not a pleasant or an inspiring novel. It is raw, terrifying, and brutal, a portrait of humanity with sick souls, and of unscrupulous and ruthless men who take advantage of them. . . Yet the novel is compelling and difficult to forget. It cannot be recommended to sensitive readers, who may be somewhat astounded to discover that Garet Rogers is the pseudonym of an attractive young woman who practices law in California." Harrison Smith

Sat R 37:28 N 6 '54 700w

ROGERS, MATILDA. First book of cotton; pictures by Mimi Korach. 68p $1.75 Watts, F.

633.5 Cotton—Juvenile literature 53-8607

"Explicit text and action-filled green and brown drawings on each page answer many everyday questions about cotton, keeping interest at a high level for the reader-by-chance, as well as for the one seeking specific information. Here, in one of the briefer 'First Books,' are explained the history and science of cultivating cotton, the machines for picking, spinning and weaving, and the derivation of an impressive array of by-products." Horn Bk

Booklist 50:406 Je 15 '54

Horn Bk 30:182 Je '54 80w

"This compact book contains a wealth of information. . . Useful for cotton units and for the study of our own southern states. Grades 4-7." Edna Rose

+ Library J 79:1064 Je 1 '54 60w

ROGERS, MATILDA. Flower arrangements anyone can do anywhere; il. with photographs and with drawings by Robert Pious. 190p $2.75 Dodd

635.96 Floral decoration 54-8875

"A small volume containing 'practical tricks and short cuts' helpful to the seasoned as well as to beginners." Bookmark

Booklist 50:374 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:232 Jl '54 20w

"It is a straight-forward book for people who want explicit information of the what, how and why character, helpfully illustrated with pertinent line drawings and photographs and replete with details too often omitted elsewhere."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ag 8
'54 70w

Wis Lib Bul 50:174 Jl '54

ROGERS, PHILLIPS, pseud. See Idell, A. E.

ROGOFF, NATALIE. Recent trends in occupational mobility; foreword by Herbert Goldhamer. 131p $4 Free press

331.12 Labor supply 54-7390

"This is a study of occupational mobility the measure of which is intergenerational, a comparison of the occupation of sons relative to the occupation of their fathers. The data, obtained from marriage license applications in Marion County, Indiana, in 1910 and 1940, provide materials for comparing occupational mobility rates in the early years of the century with corresponding rates thirty years later." Am Soc R

Reviewed by E. W. Noland

Am Soc R 19:802 D '54 700w

"This is the most significant study on occupational mobility since Davidson and Anderson's Occupational Mobility in an American Community. . . The most important criticism of this excellent study is the general lack of interpretation of the findings. No attention is given to changes in the general social structure of the United States or changes in the industrial structure which may account for changing patterns of occupational mobility. Failure to do so limits the general applicability of the findings, or a consideration of probable future trends in occupational mobility." W. H. Form
+ — Ann Am Acad 294:201 J1 '54 360w

ROHDENBURG, THEODOR KARL. History of the School of architecture, Columbia university. (Bicentennial history of Columbia university) 114p il $2.50 Columbia univ. press
720.7 Columbia university. School of architecture 54-5196

Part of the Bicentennial History of Columbia University. Elective courses in architecture were introduced as early as 1836, and a full course was offered in 1881. Starting with two students, the school now has an enrollment of a hundred and fifty. Includes reminiscences of alumni; staff and fellows are listed. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 79:1060 Je 1 '54 50w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p3 Ap 4 '54 60w

ROHEIM, GEZA. Gates of the dream. 554p $10
Int. univ. press

135 Dreams. Psychoanalysis 53-10679

"The late Géza Róheim was one of the first to apply insight derived from psychoanalytic theory to the data of anthropology. This last ambitious work is an attempt to make anthropology contribute to psychoanalysis, and to the validating of a particular psychoanalytic theory proposed by the author." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by D. M. Schneider
Am Anthropol 56:299 Ap '54 600w

Reviewed by W. A. Harvey
Ann Am Acad 291:182 Ja '54 750w

ROMANIS, ROBERT. Holy foot. 224p $3 Dutton
54-5059

"The story told in this novel begins several hundred years ago in the village of Sant' Antonio, when an event of great significance occurred—the discovery of a holy relic, a part of the left foot of St. Stephen. The citizens of the little Italian community were proud and happy that the long-lost foot of St. Stephen had at last been found—and near their village. They prepared to erect a shrine in which to keep 'the holy foot.' This story tells of the people's efforts to build the shrine and of the events which ultimately led to the erection of a shrine to Friar Giacomo, Martyr of God." Library J

Booklist 50:321 Ap 15 '54

"Even the final catastrophe becomes a felix culpa as faith and fact merge in this witty, tender, and reverent reading of the uses men make of one another." Riley Hughes
+ Commonweal 60:20 Ap 9 '54 390w

"All this is told with humor, with irony, and with a pervasive understanding of the frailties of men, and provides a pleasant parable."
+ Kirkus 22:41 Ja 15 '54 160w

"Recommended." J. D. Marshall
+ Library J 79:551 Mr 15 '54 120w

"Dr. Romanis reports the issue in his own whimsical, indulgent, skeptical yet tender fashion. And his fanciful story of long ago, charmingly, gleefully written, is given a piquant flavor by anachronisms thick as blueberries in a Connecticut cow pasture. Obviously Dr. Romanis likes anachronisms." F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 28 '54 400w

"Mr. Romanis has written a delightful novel around the Incident of the Foot—a tale full of charm and warmth and irony and fear and violence and love." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 21 '54 550w

"The Holy Foot' is first-rate. Here is a civilized, pleasantly ironic short novel, a thoroughly engaging tale just in itself." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 2 '54 700w

"Deceptive, Mr. Romanis's novel certainly is. Conceived in a leisurely fashion, written in an extremely agreeable tone reminiscent at times of the best of English travel books on Italy at the turn of the century, it manages quite deftly to convey in a light fashion a real historical sensitivity and critical sharpness. These two qualities, which raise the novel quite far above the commonplace, are simply there, unobtrusively pervasive." Serge Hughes
+ Sat R 37:57 Ap 10 '54 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p757 N 27 '53 120w

ROMBI, PARIDE. Perdu; tr. from the Italian [Eng title: Perdu and his father]. 215p $2.75 Harper

54-6026

"His mother was fifteen when Perdu was born in a wild district of Sardinia. The boy spends a short lifetime trying to find out the identity of his father, and finally, killed as much spiritually by his discoveries as physically by the harshness of his circumstances, is found, an unclaimed and repulsive corpse, three weeks after his death." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 23 '54 280w

"It is too bad that this novel cannot be published simply as what it is, an unaffected brief tale by a man who evidently saw similar events in real life from a position on the sidelines (the author is an Examining Magistrate in an Italian court). Its dust jacket bears a doubly unfair statement that Perdu is 'a drama acted out . . . under the same merciless Mediterranean sun that shone on the murder of Agamemnon, the blinding of Oedipus, the sacrifice of Iphigenia.' It is unfair not only because it can cause the reader to expect more or less than he is going to get—depending on how he feels about jacket copy—but because the novel itself does not ask for such treatment." Edwin Kennebeck
Commonweal 60:124 My 7 '54 420w

"The translation from the Italian by Henry Reed sustains the drowsy monotony of the little farming region, the wild ferment of the poverty ridden people and the relentlessness of Perdu's doomed odyssey, with power and compassion."

+ Kirkus 22:134 F 15 '54 180w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 79:772 Ap 15 '54 90w

"The ingredients of tragedy are there; there is extreme restraint in the telling and an effectively reined-in pity, but Perdu cannot support—except pathetically—the weight of so large a theme. Henry Reed's translation, though it has an occasional un-English-sounding phrase like 'shabby rags,' is sensitive and melodious, with just the degree of formality needed to counter the savagery of the tale." Isabel Quigly

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 F 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar
Nation 178:368 Ap 24 '54 80w

"Turning over the pages of Perdu and His Father, we find an atmosphere of such authenticity that we can accept the fact that the author knows what he is talking about without having to check it with any background knowledge of our own. . . This is no cheerful picture of quaint, simple people moving in Don Camillo's little world of kindness and charm. There is violence throughout the whole of the book; murder, rape, incest and arson. Yet the story is told with such sobriety,

ROMBI, PARIDE—Continued

such economy and such simplicity that the reader feels a touch of the classical catharsis." Betty Kewith

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:201 F 13 '54 500w

"Paride Rombi's 'Perdu' possesses some of the integrity, the clean drive and the unforced power that distinguishes the good 'primitive' novel. . . . But while Mr. Rombi often jolts and nearly always convinces, it is surprising how infrequently he succeeds in tapping the reader's sympathy. He describes with adept detail customs and landscapes, or the external consequences of Perdu's bafflement, but he doesn't always take equal pains in projecting the psychological shadings which build up to the appalling climax." Frederic Morton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 9 '54 650w

"This is a story of passion and revenge in the main-stream of the Italian peasant novel. Yet it is as fresh as if it were the first of its kind. . . . It is a complex plot that is fitted into a small number of pages, but the writer's greatest gift, after a narrative power which insures that the book will be read at a single sitting, is his economy of words. Without tedious description, the barren landscape of the Sulcis region of southwestern Sardinia is indelibly impressed upon the reader's mind, as are the vivid scenes of the two murders, the court-room, the wealthy man's barnyard and the prison where Perdu receives an unbearable paternal blessing." Frances Frenaye

+ N Y Times p4 My 2 '54 400w

"While 'Perdu' which won a major literary prize in Europe, will perhaps strike you as being stark and merciless, it will be hard not to be impressed with the author's simplicity and power, and the almost lyrical intensity with which he describes a strange land." L. V. San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 9 '54 200w

"An artistic achievement of the first rank." William Murray

+ Sat R 37:16 My 22 '54 550w

"There is nothing freakish about Perdu and His Father, because Signor Rombi has in him the stuff of a great novelist. This is his first novel, and he writes already with authority. The detail is beautifully filled in, the smallest characters are warm and human. . . . This is a wild, strange, beautiful book; the people who express themselves so savagely are all the time acting upon normal human impulses. Not for years have I read a first novel which made me await more confidently whatever its author may give us next." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p190 F 12 '54 210w

"A number of delightful descriptions of the Sardinian landscape are set in admirable contrast to scenes of violence. . . . Throughout Signor Rombi writes with a formidable calm and an absence of emotion which leaves a strong impression of the controlled power of the Hellenic world."

Times [London] Lit Sup p133 F 26 '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:138 My '54

RONALD, E. B. Cat and fiddle murders. 250p $2.75 Rinehart

Detective story. 54-8258

Kirkus 22:600 S 1 '54 70w

"Any serious attempt to thread one's way through the murk will bring on a headache. But frivolous readers will enjoy Mr. Ronald's dashing style. He writes in the hybrid Anglo-American idiom with zest; his astringent wisecracks have an original flavour; and his insouciant hero is a fellow one would like to meet again in more congenial surroundings." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 48:368 S 25 '54 110w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 21 '54 90w

"E. B. Ronald's The Cat and Fiddle Murders presents the curious spectacle of a formal British puzzle told by a tough private eye with an American accent; the combination could be agreeable, but neither puzzle nor telling rises above mediocrity." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p43 N 14 '54 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 12 '54 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 30w

"The murder concerned takes place in a night club on top of a ten-story hotel in Bloomsbury, and in this unlikely setting the American veneer shows signs of cracking; the pace keeps up, but the wisecracks look a little strained." Penelope Houston

Spec p266 Ag 27 '54 80w

RONAN, TOM. Vision splendid. 354p $3.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-12753

At fifty, sitting alone on the veranda at Return Creek Cattle Station, Mr Toppingham reviews his twenty-five years in Australia, the small successes, the friendships, the hardships, and the tragedy of a lost love.

Booklist 51:85 O 15 '54

Kirkus 22:366 Je 15 '54 210w

"The book has little to offer in the way of excitement or suspense, but the author's gift for characterization, and his skill in recreating a little-known way of life of a passing era, will capture the reader's attention from beginning to end. Recommended." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:1512 S 1 '54 110w

"With such material 'Vision Splendid' could have been mawkish, but Tom Ronan's skillful handling gives the story a powerful, appealing and almost documentary quality. Indeed, there is something epic about Old Top—his life a compound of minor triumphs, minor setbacks and overshadowed by Stephanie." Alden Whitman

+ N Y Times p29 O 3 '54 430w

ROONEY, FRANK. Courts of memory. 507p $3.95 Vanguard

54-6989

A family chronicle, the scenes of which are Los Angeles and New York. The youngest member of the Griffin family, Dick, is the narrator; his beautiful sister, Brace, is the chief character. The time is from the 1930's to the present.

Booklist 50:421 J1 1 '54

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 1 '54 430w

"Conservatives may take offense, but one must recognize sincerity and sympathy, if little discipline."

Kirkus 22:83 F 1 '54 170w

"A novel, boasting a style without tricks, that will stand proudly beside the best of John P. Marquand with its valued insights into people, situations and the upper middleclass entrepreneur of the West. For all fiction collections and PC." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:861 My 1 '54 130w

"Mr. Rooney writes extremely well. His prose, under perfect control, serves well the ultra-modern content of 'The Courts of Memory.'" F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 1 '54 550w

"Although it drags somewhat when Brace and Dick are grown up and floundering, his book would be worth while if it contained nothing but the portrait of them as vivid, precocious, infuriating and memorable Hollywood children." John Brooks

+ — N Y Times p25 My 2 '54 450w

"A beautifully done novel, and one in which the reader may well discover, unexpectedly, that he is reading about himself." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 4 '54 500w

Reviewed by Oliver La Farge
Sat R 37:13 J1 17 '54 550w

"It is among the year's best first novels—until it bogs down in psychological probings."
+ — Time 63:124 My 17 '54 500w

ROOSE, KENNETH DAVID. Economics of recession and revival; an interpretation of 1937-38. 280p $4 Yale univ. press
338.54 Business cycles 54-5090

A study of the sharp depression of 1937-38 which interrupted the recovery of the thirties in the United States. Professor Roose analyses the various components of national income: private investment; consumption; and government expenditures, and demonstrates to the layman how far economic science has advanced in understanding business ups and downs. Bibliography. Index.

"The style of the work betrays its origin in a Doctor of Philosophy thesis. . . The presentation of the data is not always done in a way that makes it easy for the reader. Nevertheless, a great deal of interesting material has been collected, and one hopes that Dr. Roose's interest in this area will inspire him to continue a similar type of analysis for other depressions because the value of this type of study grows by the availability of comparisons." K. E. Boulding

+ — Ann Am Acad 296:178 N '54 450w

"His very able treatment of the recession and revival of 1937-1938 indicates the extent to which the economist can reconstruct the casual chain of economic contraction and expansion." Charles Hoffmann

+ Sat R 37:43 Je 19 '54 850w

ROOSEVELT, MRS ELEANOR (ROOSEVELT)
It seems to me. 188p $2.75 Norton
170 Conduct of life 54-12748

"For a number of years Mrs. Roosevelt has answered the questions of readers, first for The Ladies' Home Journal and now for McCall's. 'It Seems to Me' is a collection of these questions and answers classified under twenty-four different headings, from Adolescents and Adversity to the United Nations and War and Peace." N Y Times

Booklist 51:107 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:33 N '54 10w

Kirkus 22:690 O 1 '54 150w

"This is not a book to be read at one sitting, but occasional dipping into it will be rewarding as a contact with the mind of America's dean of stateswomen." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 D 5 '54 450w

"One may disagree with some of the advice Mrs. Roosevelt gives perplexed boys and girls as to how best to solve personal problems, but there is little disagreement with her views on prejudice, education, religion." Lucy Freeman
N Y Times p12 O 10 '54 270w

ROOSEVELT, MRS ELEANOR (ROOSEVELT) and HICKOK, LORENA A. Ladies of courage. 312p $3.75 Putnam

396.9 Women in politics. Women in the U.S. 53-5327

An account of women in American politics from the days of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, in 1848, to the present. It contains the highlights of the political careers of almost every American woman who has been in politics. There is one chapter devoted to Eleanor Roosevelt. Index.

Booklist 50:372 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:236 J1 '54 30w

"Though the authors are Democrats, 'Ladies of Courage' covers woman politicians from Elizabeth Cady Stanton to Oveta Culp Hobby. Personal weaknesses are disclosed, but these only add to the down-to-earth character of the book, which should inspire many of its readers to report to their local precincts for the long, uphill haul to the halls of Congress or perhaps—who knows?—some day—the White House." Mary Hornaday

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 27 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:262 Ap 1 '54 200w

"The political experience of both authors gives the book a practical, authoritative ring. It ought somehow to reach every woman in the country." Bernice MacDonald

+ Library J 79:980 My 15 '54 90w

"The material of the book is heartening as it submits the proof of how many women in this country have overcome even these God-imposed and man-sustained handicaps. . . There is a separate chapter on Mrs. Roosevelt for which Miss Hickok alone is responsible. It is a warm and often moving account of a life. . . The style is of a sort often called 'breezy,' which usually means that a steady wind moans through the holes in the prose." Paul Engle

+ — New Repub 130:23 Je 14 '54 1100w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54 270w

ROOSEVELT, LEILA (MRS WILLIAM WESTLEY), and WESTLEY, WILLIAM.
Pet parade. 240p il $3.50 Harper

636 Pets

54-6034

"In a lighthearted account of their experiences with a variety of wild and domestic animals, the authors provide 'information, facts, and advice' about the choice of pets, their care and training and the pleasure they bring to the whole family. Photographs. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:394 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:236 J1 '54 30w

Reviewed by Bob Becker

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 5 '54 220w

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 11 '54 330w

"Although this can be used as a guide and how-to-do book, the natural history—domesticated, as it were—has its own fascination, and again, with the picture of adults and children engrossed in the same hobby, this has a definite family participation market."

+ Kirkus 22:182 Mr 1 '54 130w

"An entertaining book for readers who like animals and an enthusiastic introduction for those who are choosing a pet." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:1314 J1 '54 100w

"Altogether, this pleasant book is a wealth of information and temptation. Occasionally the authors allow coynesses to slip into their writing, but on the whole their handbook makes good reading even if you're considering nothing more daring than a chameleon. 'Pet Parade' has sixteen pages of excellent photographs."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 5 '54 320w

Wis Lib Bul 50:174 J1 '54

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE. Cowboys and kings: three great letters; with an introd. by Elting E. Morison. 128p il $2.75 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-9117

"This little book consists entirely of three letters. One was written to Secretary of State John Hay in August, 1903, giving a full account of a trip the President had made to the West the previous spring. The two others were written in the fall of 1911 to Sir George Otto Trevelyan, the English historian, and to David Grayson, the American novelist, which together give an even fuller account of his trip that year from Khartoum to London by way of most of the capitals of Europe." N Y Times

Reviewed by Stafford Derby

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 29 '54 700w

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE—Continued

"Acumen, hardihood, warmth bear witness to the amazing and admirable first Roosevelt in these fascinating messages, a triumphant addition to American letters."

+ Kirkus 22:617 S 1 '54 180w

"Recommended for collections of American history and T. R. biography." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1501 S 1 '54 110w

"By far the most remarkable [letter] is the second, which alone fills sixty-seven pages and purveys a great deal of gossip about the aristocracy and royalty of Europe, who, Roosevelt reported, were always fascinated to meet a man who was at once a democrat and a gentleman. . . Much of it [is] consciously, a little of it unconsciously, amusing, most of it observant and penetrating. The book justifies Editor Morison's feeling that it was worth while to extract these generous samples from the bulk of Roosevelt's correspondence and make of them a separate volume." Richard Hofstadter

+ N Y Times p26 O 31 '54 400w

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE. Letters; selected and ed. by Elting E. Morison; John M. Blum, associate ed. 8v v7-8 il $20 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (51-10037)

"With the publication of the letters of 1909-1919, this collection is complete. . . The work was issued in 2-volume sets entitled Years of Preparation, The Square Deal, The Big Stick and The Days of Armageddon, with indexes in vols. 2, 4, 6, and 8. Arrangement is chronological and final volumes include Roosevelt's African hunting expedition, European visit, unsuccessful campaign for the presidency as leader of the Progressive Movement, and his activities in urging American participation in World War I." Library J

Reviewed by C. O. Johnson
Ann Am Acad 294:182 J1 '54 550w
Booklist 50:258 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by A. S. Henning
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 7 '54 550w

"This is a truly magnificent collection of letters. . . This reviewer would recommend for the casual reader a less comprehensive selection; publishing each letter in full makes for discouraging bulk. But for what these volumes are—an accurate presentation of Theodore Roosevelt's most important correspondence—they can be unstintingly praised for selection, editing and printing." Donovan Richardson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 4 '54 800w

Reviewed by W. V. Shannon
+ Commonweal 60:225 Je 4 '54 1550w
Foreign Affairs 32:673 J1 '54 40w

"Mirror of a man and of an era, the complete set is highly recommended." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:380 F 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by Max Beloff
Manchester Guardian p4 J1 30 '54 350w

Reviewed by C. A. Madison
Nation 178:242 Mr 20 '54 650w

"These two volumes mark the end of an extraordinarily fruitful enterprise. In scholarship, accuracy, and aids to readers, the series to which they belong challenges, and sometimes surpasses, the best documentary collections previously published in this country or now in progress." R. W. Leopold

+ New Eng Q 27:408 S '54 850w

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson
New Repub 131:18 Ag 16 '54 320w

"The excellent labors by Mr. Morison and his staff may well stand as a model for the publication of presidential papers. The profuse footnotes deserve the warmest commendation. The letters now published cover an absorbing span in T. R.'s career, perhaps even more interesting than even the presidency. . . Volumes VII and VIII contain letters that are of interest quite apart from their historical value, though. They reveal more than has ever been published concerning Roosevelt as a tender, loving thoughtful father and husband." H. F. Pringle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 28 '54 1000w

"With these volumes Editor Elting Morison and his staff bring to a conclusion six years of fruitful labor in the papers of Theodore Roosevelt. They have done a superb editorial job and they have produced a very noteworthy addition to the sum total of printed collections of basic Americana." Richard Hofstadter

+ N Y Times p7 F 28 '54 700w

New Yorker 30:133 Mr 27 '54 230w

"Six years of massive editorial labors have brought to completion this invaluable addition to American history and biography. 'The Letters of Theodore Roosevelt' contains nearly seven thousand letters, countless footnotes explaining the important, but now forgotten allusions and persons mentioned, and a set of superb appendices—this unmatched storehouse of our history and of the life and work of one of our great men is now a complete and lasting tribute to its hero and to those who devoted their very conspicuous talents to its compilation." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 1 '54 950w

"The important point is—and it is abundantly confirmed by the eight volumes of letters—that Theodore Roosevelt remains the most creative and, along with his distant cousin, the most influential American public leader of the twentieth century. He gave chief voice to the progressive ideals that Wilson ironically first wrote into legislation and Franklin D. Roosevelt later implemented more fully. He preached the doctrines of realism and responsibility in international relations that the American people finally comprehended after participation in two world wars. Thoughtful Americans can still learn from him." A. S. Link

+ Sat R 37:17 F 27 '54 600w
Time 63:92 Mr 1 '54 850w

"This great, valuable and highly entertaining enterprise of scholarship and literature has been brought to a triumphant close. Triumphant for the editors, not for their hero, for the last two volumes of the letters show a Roosevelt not only sinking into the grave but losing his battle for a political come-back, seeing power in the hands of men almost all of whom he despised and detested, feeling his health shattered and, in his last year, his happiness shattered, too, by the death in action of his youngest son Quentin. It is a sad and moving story. But it is a story of very great interest."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p549 3 '54 2500w

Reviewed by A. S. Link

+ Yale R n s 43:589 summer '54 5000w
(Review of v1-8)

ROOT, ROBERT WALTER. How to make friends abroad; a guidebook to understanding yourself and others overseas; il. by Don Peterson. 118p $2 Assn. press

910.2 Travel. National characteristics, American 54-8026

"A former foreign Monitor correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor offers some simple, vital suggestions for touring Americans. . . If a traveller goes abroad searching for things American, he'd have done himself, his country and the people he visits a good turn by staying home, Mr. Root advises." Springf'd Republican

Bookmark 13:157 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Mary Skaggs
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 28 '54 70w

Christian Century 71:1042 S 1 '54 220w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 21 '54 50w

Springf'd Republican p6C F 28 '54 120w

RORTY, JAMES, and DECTER, MOSHE. McCarthy and the Communists. 163p $2; pa $1
Beacon press

B or 92 McCarthy, Joseph Raymond, Communism—U.S. 54-11622

"This book, published under the auspices of the American Committee for Cultural Freedom, is a study of the effectiveness of Senator McCarthy as a fighter against Communism. The authors do not believe that the Wisconsin Senator has created a state of hysteria in the United States; they do not consider that he is a totalitarian; they hold that his initial attack on Communists in the State Department in 1950 was essentially valid. . . In chronology, then, the book takes up where 'McCarthy and his Enemies,' by Messrs. Buckley and Bozell left off. Its point of view, however, is certainly not that of active partisans of McCarthy's cause; the book is, rather, a coldly rational dissection of the Senator and his methods." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:61 O 1 '54

Reviewed by E. D. Canham

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 30 '54
470w

"To write objectively about current affairs is not easy; to do so about McCarthy and 'McCarthyism' would seem to be impossible. Yet James Rorty and Moshe Decter have accomplished something like the impossible in this book. That does not mean that they are 'impartial'; they could not write knowledgeably about the subject if they were. It does mean that they do not write out of partisan fury, but out of sincere desire to deal with the man and the problem fairly and responsibly. And I do not think it is possible to deny that they have in a great measure succeeded." Will Herberg

+ Commonweal 60:610 S 24 '54 1050w

Kirkus 22:507 Ag 1 '54 150w

"Should be widely read; recommended for all public libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:1510 S 1 '54 90w

"The Rorty-Decter opus is tough, remorseless, brilliant dissection. It is beyond a doubt the most thoroughly documented examination of the McCarthy record available, better even than the excellent special issue of the Progressive, from which, I suppose, no little material was adapted." Dan Gillmore

+ — Nation 179:554 D 25 '54 500w

"This book is a useful tool for every discriminating devotee of democratic institutions." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ New Repub 131:19 Ag 30 '54 900w

Reviewed by H. W. Baehr

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 29 '54
750w

"The great value of this book is not that it tells anything new about McCarthy but that it coldly measures his investigations, his methods and his accomplishments against the requirements of a genuine fight on communism and Communist subversion. But this is by no means a merely negative study of McCarthy's activities. Some common sense ideas are offered on 'how to combat communism responsibly'—which is a vital problem that many persons continually overlook in their intensive opposition to McCarthy. The threat McCarthy posed in the recent Army hearings to the Constitutional structure of the United States is inadequately treated. And the organization of the book leaves much to be desired. But it is an enormously useful compilation of the Senator's recent deeds and misdeeds, and it comes at a particularly opportune moment in the story of Joseph McCarthy." J. B. Oakes

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 29 '54 900w

Reviewed by Macalister Jones

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 3 '54
900w

"At last someone has written a critical—but non-hysterical—book about Senator McCarthy which will serve as an antidote to the doting treatises turned out recently by his friends and apologists." Jack Steele

+ Sat R 37:42 S 11 '54 950w

Time 64:114 S 13 '54 550w

ROSBOROUGH, MRS MARY FREELS. Don't you cry for me. 249p $3 Crowell

54-6334

Jump Williams, just out of the army, puts his bonus and savings into a salvage outfit. It is his hope to raise cedar logs from the Suwannee River, where they had lain some seventy years, and with the money earned buy a farm and marry True Martin. His plans were upset at first by a syndicate searching for pirate gold, but he persisted and finally won.

Booklist 50:342 My 1 '54

"A refreshing, sweet, simple story." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 30:260 Ag '54 70w

Kirkus 22:133 F 15 '54 130w

"Good colorful story useful to small public libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 79:772 Ap 15 '54 70w

"The author is not averse to using melodrama to heighten the sentimental effect—but the tale compels belief from start to finish." Henry Cavendish

+ — N Y Times p25 Mr 21 '54 600w

ROSCOE, MIKE, pseud. of JOHN ROSCOE and MICHAEL RUSO. Slice of hell. 211p $2.50 Crown

54-6631

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:135 F 15 '54 60w

"Occasionally crudely written and overloaded with corpses (most of whom Johnny is responsible for, personally), it still possesses marked vigor and economy." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p27 Ap 25 '54 60w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 9 '54
70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

ROSE, ANNA PERROTT. See Wright, A. M. R.

ROSE, ARNOLD MARSHALL. Theory and method in the social sciences. 351p $5 Univ. of Minn. press

301.01 Social science research. Social sciences—Methodology 54-6369

"Dr. Rose, who is professor of sociology at the University of Minnesota, has collected twenty-two essays addressed to a variety of theoretical, methodological and technical issues in social science research, particularly within the fields of sociology and social psychology. Thus, although there are linkages between the individual chapters, the treatment is neither systematic nor comprehensive. Rather, the intent is primarily to 'encourage research in sociology along certain neglected channels and with certain relatively neglected research tools.'" (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"With the exception of the first four chapters . . . the book lacks the coherence and systematization which the title would lead one to expect. There is, however, an important compensating factor in the consistency with which clearly stated premises are applied to various subjects. On the whole the book impresses one as a genuine contribution to general theory, and puts Dr. Rose in the forefront of sociologists currently concerned with the logical and methodological foundation of their science. The book is especially commendable for its clear and vigorous style." Theodore Abel

+ — Am Soc ■ 19:629 O '54 550w

Reviewed by J. B. Casagrande

Ann Am Acad 296:185 N '54 450w

"In general, the work will be maximally useful for the specialized student or established scholar, but it can also serve as a supplement to a general textbook in advanced courses in sociology or social psychology. Professor Rose has supplied a number of aids for students using the work, such as introductory passages for orientation and extensive citations. Inevitably, in such work the essays are of somewhat uneven quality and not of uniform interest." H. H. Hyman

ROSE, A. M.—Continued
+ — Pol Sci Q 69:614 D '54 750w

ROSE, ERNESTINE. Public library in American life. 238p $3.25 Columbia univ. press
027.473 Libraries—U.S. 53-11454

A survey of the American library as an institution and as a part of the American scene from its beginnings to the present. Includes a section on: The public library of tomorrow. Index.

Booklist 50:214 F 1 '54

"Especially valuable for the layman and prospective librarian."
+ Bookmark 13:106 F '54 20w

"Ernestine Rose, an eminent librarian and teacher, has written a fresh, informal, and enthusiastic book about the American public library." Gertrude Gscheidle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ja 31 '54 180w

"Miss Rose's book is highly personal. She is not bound by any sampling of libraries, and she is not committed to a scientific method. Her book is the distillation of the experiences, observations, and convictions of a lifetime of active and distinguished library service. The book is Ernestine Rose—a strong personality, not an impersonalized inquiry. And because she has never been afraid of controversial questions, her book will bring rumblings from some librarians and library school faculties." Ralph Munn
+ Library J 79:128 Ja 15 '54 450w

"Who will find the book useful? In her Preface the author says that it was written primarily for students and beginners but that she hopes it will be read by the patrons of libraries. It is lively enough and sufficiently thought-provoking for any of these groups, and it seems particularly well suited for use in the education of library trustees." Haynes McMullen
+ Library Q 24:413 O '54 650w

"While the research and writings of others are not disregarded, the book is primarily a reflection of the author's personal experience and beliefs. It faces controversial matters squarely and, though well aware of the deficiencies in public libraries, is optimistic about their worth and future. The book is an excellent introduction to its subject."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:216 Je '54 220w

"For all public libraries."
+ Wis Lib Bul 50:21 Ja '54

ROSENBERG, STUART E. Jewish community in Rochester, 1843-1925. 325p $4.50 Columbia univ. press
301.452 Jews in Rochester, New York 54-6713

"This book tells how a complex immigrant group settled in a provincial American city to the consequent benefit of people and community. Through the eyes of Jewish settlers, the social, cultural, and economic changes in Rochester, New York, from 1843 through 1925, are traced. The study shows also how the Rochester Jews resolved their inner conflicts, slowly placing common cause above European sectionalism, and gradually but perceptibly established an authentic, indigenous American Jewish community." Publisher's note

"The Jewish and the general historian who seeks to learn what is characteristic in American Jewish history would do well to read this book. It is brief, well-written, documented, and informative." J. R. Marcus
+ Am Hist R 60:211 O '54 400w

Reviewed by Solomon Grayzel
Ann Am Acad 296:188 N '54 500w

"Rabbi Rosenberg does not write with the same warmth or insight found in Rabbi Gordon's volume on Minneapolis Jewry; nevertheless, his is an important contribution to American-Jewish history in the United States." H. U. Ribalow
+ Sat H 37:32 S 18 '54 270w

ROSENBLATT, SAMUEL. Yossele Rosenblatt; the story of his life, as told by his son. 371p il $4.50 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Rosenblatt, Joseph 54-9989

A biography of Cantor Rosenblatt, "the Jewish Caruso," a beloved figure of the early twentieth century. The author is one of his sons. Glossary. Discography. No index.

"This has the warmth and love of a son's devotion."
+ Kirkus 22:380 Je 15 '54 180w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 79:1893 O 15 '54 180w

"The author is at his best depicting the rich ancestral soil from which Yossele sprang. . . In his eagerness to show his father's greatness, the author crowds the biography with quotations from European and American critics, but whenever he lets his father speak for himself, the living Yossele Rosenblatt comes through." Anzia Yezierska
+ — N Y Times p26 O 10 '54 460w

"The artist's oldest son has written a book which is full of love and which bravely attempts to explain and apologize for his father's troubles. Unfortunately, so many pages are devoted to finances that the reader sometimes forgets that Yossele Rosenblatt is remembered not for his financial complications, but for his sweet, tenor voice, which enthralled hundreds of thousands of Jews and non-Jews all over the world." H. U. Ribalow
+ — Sat R 37:31 S 25 '54 360w

ROSENHAUPT, HANS WILHELM. True deceivers. 378p $3.50 Dodd 54-11232

"In a psychological war novel, Lt. Charles Croft, American Army officer interrogating captured German officers, struggles with a loyalty divided between a native Coblenz and an adopted America, and a personal ethic divided between moral decency and psychological warfare. Action and suspense are combined with dialogue and soliloquy to develop a good war story from a new point of view." Library J

Booklist 51:152 D 1 '54

"A few dragging flashbacks threaten to impair the movement of the tale, but are redeemed by a good picture of liberators and liberated in the European Theatre. Recommended for the adult collection." C. R. Gough
+ — Library J 79:1832 O 1 '54 80w

"There is no special pleading in this book for or against any group or classification of men, no flag-waving, no axe to grind. Here, rather, is the grimly exciting account of one corner of men's wars, one corner in which wits become lethal weapons, in which upon the ability to unearth a fact—the whereabouts of a gun emplacement, the use of the Schnorkel, the site of the rocket—hangs survival. Read this book, not as a novel but as a new and incontestable piece of evidence of what war does to man." Virgilia Peterson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 7 '54 650w

"Unfortunately, the author subjects the reader to many pages of repetitious and extraneous material. Every now and then he drops his characters to tell us that 'there was a war on, Hitler was moving his generals about, cursing Luftwaffe, Eisenhower was getting ready for his Sunday punch,' etc. Because of such interruptions and because he is so intent on every small detail, the novel—including an ineffectual love story—is lost in the hedgerows of uncalled-for personal opinions and biography." Herbert Mitgang
— N Y Times p37 O 10 '54 200w

ROSNER, CHARLES. Growth of the book-jacket. 74p il $4 Harvard univ. press

741.64 Book jackets [54-33889]

Pictorial survey of the art of the book jacket. The text traces the early history of book jackets, analyzes the technical problems of making them, and outlines trends in various countries.

Booklist 51:34 S 15 '54

"The illustrations make one wish that more of this talent could be used on the bigger scale of the hoardings. If only our posters to-day had as high a standard as our book jackets!" S. B.

+ Manchester Guardian 11 O 8 '54 90w

"In his text Mr. Rosner discusses the evolution, the function and the art of the dust-jacket. To deal faithfully with a complicated subject on an international scale in twenty pages requires more powers of compression and digestion than he has found time to bring to bear on his material, so that although the several chapters contain much useful information and much good sense, the survey as a whole has inevitably a rather cursory air. It is none the less a useful introduction to a neglected subject, and potential readers must not be put off by its own dust-jacket."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p664 O 15 '54 390w

ROSS, FRANK XAVIER. Radar and other electronic inventions. 244p il $3 Lothrop

621.38 Electronic apparatus and appliances. Radar 54-10296

The first chapter reviews the development of electronics to date. Later chapters describe the use of electronic devices in war, industry, medicine, etc. Copiously illustrated. Index.

"Another of these fascinating books for electronic minded boys from twelve on. Plenty of interesting photographs."

+ Commonweal 61:200 N 19 '54 20w

"Good supplementary reading for young physicists by an established writer."

+ Kirkus 22:682 O 1 '54 120w

"The first chapter... is too technical for average high school students, and could discourage them from reading the rest of the book, which may be within their comprehension... Recommended for public and high school libraries, as reference material, and for general reading with selected students." Dorothy Schumacher

+ Library J 79:2259 N 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p16 N 28 '54 30w

Reviewed by Creighton Peet
N Y Times p28 D 12 '54 120w

ROSS, FRANK XAVIER. Space ships and space travel; the scientifically accurate story of man's attempts and plans to travel into interplanetary space. 166p il $2.75 Lothrop

629.14353 [629.1388] Interplanetary voyages. Rockets (aeronautics) 53-6739

"Theoretical calculations and high altitude flights have provided data for this book, and it is, therefore, scientifically accurate. Dealing with the problems of interplanetary and space flights, the author in non-technical language tells of space ships that will carry man across the new frontier and man's reactions to this environment. He adds a new note in telling of the training that will be necessary for the spaceman." Library J

Booklist 50:324 Ap 15 '54

"Good background for science fiction."

+ Bookmark 13:165 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by John Lewellen
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 11 '54 60w

Commonweal 61:200 N 19 '54 20w

"Authoritative coverage of recent progress, this will find its ready market in the growing space science audience."

+ Kirkus 21:741 N 15 '53 150w

"For young and old." M. I. Ross
+ Library J 78:2111 D 1 '53 80w

Reviewed by Creighton Peet
N Y Times p16 Ag 8 '54 60w

ROSS, FRANK XAVIER. Work boats, by R. Frank, jr [pseud] il. by Rus Anderson. 146p $2.50 Crowell

623.82 Boats and boating—Juvenile literature 54-5618

Describes the setups and activities of fifteen kinds of work boats. Contents: The harbor tugboat; The dredge; The menhaden fishing boat; The sponge fishing boat; The towboat; River and canal barges; Harbor barges; The lightship; The fireboat; The salmon fishing boat; Iron ore and wheat freighters of the Great Lakes; The ferryboat 'Kalakala'; The New York harbor ferry; The harbor sweeper; Floating cranes. For ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 50:457 J1 15 '54

"A guidebook, interesting to read with children who are about to take a trip where they will have an opportunity to see such boats." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:254 Ag '54 80w

"Fascinating fact gathering about the ships that do the chores in our harbors and rivers and off our shores."

+ Kirkus 22:363 Je 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Elenora Alexander
Library J 79:1324 J1 '54 80w

Reviewed by H. L. Hultz
N Y Times p28 D 12 '54 50w

"Younger children will find this easy-to-read book entertaining and invaluable in their social-studies work; the better readers, who will enjoy the subject matter, will feel that the short sentence style is somewhat monotonous." F. L. S.

+ Sat ■ 37:36 Ag 21 '54 140w

ROSS, FRANK XAVIER. Young people's book of jet propulsion; new revised and enlarged edition containing foreign jets. 192p il $2.75 Lothrop

629.14353 [629.13338] Jet propulsion—Juvenile literature. Rockets (aeronautics)—Juvenile literature 54-10041

"To the 1950 revised edition of this book has been added a 60-page section on foreign jet planes. Material on American jets has been brought up to date. An introductory chapter explains the principles of jet propulsion, and the rest of the book consists of brief descriptions of the different types of jet- and rocket-powered aircraft." Library J

Booklist 50:404 Je 15 '54

"Well illustrated with excellent photographs of the planes described. A useful book on a timely subject." Dorothy Schumacher

+ Library J 79:1240 Je 15 '54 60w

+ N Y Herald Tribune ■ ■ p23 My 16 '54 30w

ROSS, ISHBEL (MRS BRUCE RAE). Rebel Rose; life of Rose O'Neal Greenhow, Confederate spy. 294p il $4 Harper

B or 92 Greenhow, Rose (O'Neal) 54-8986

A biography of Rose O'Neal Greenhow, a famous Washington hostess and woman spy for the Confederacy during the Civil war.

Booklist 50:389; 51:40 Je 15 '54; S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:7 O '54 20w

Reviewed by B. P. Thomas
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 29 '54 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

Kirkus 22:379 Je 15 '54 240w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 79:1308 J1 '54 140w

Reviewed by E. H. Smith
N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p1 Ag 29 '54 800w

ROSS, ISHBEL—Continued

"Ishbel Ross, who has specialized in revivifying American women of power—her study of Kate Chase Sprague, 'Proud Kate,' will be recalled with particular pleasure—has turned out, in this life of Rose Greenhow, another believable and intelligent biography. Such failings as there are in this book are Rose's and nobody else's." H. F. Graff

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 29 '54 550w

"The author, who did her research both here and abroad, must have been disappointed at the scarcity of fresh material on her subject. Her extensive investigation hasn't unearthed anything particularly new, and at times one feels her book is slightly padded. However, this is the first full-length biography of Mrs. Greenhow, which has been badly needed. The author has done a superb job of tracing the life and times of this melodramatic but dangerous woman who rightfully considered Manassas something of a personal triumph." J. D. Horan

+ — Sat R 37:22 Ag 28 '54 950w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 700w

Time 64:84 Ag 30 '54 230w

Wis Lib Bul 50:208 O '54

ROSS, JAMES BRUCE, and MCLAUGHLIN, MARY MARTIN, eds. Portable renaissance reader; with an introduction. (Viking portable lib) 756p $2.50 Viking

808.8 Literature—Collections 53-5725

"Not merely an anthology but an attempt to document the spirit of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries in Europe. Besides the obvious great, many of the moderately and some of the extremely obscure are represented, and the fields of literature, art, science, politics, and religion are covered." Nation

Booklist 50:206 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by Clorinda Clarke

Cath World 178:478 Mr '54 260w

Reviewed by Warren Beck

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Mr 14 '54 270w

"The diligence of the editors is remarkable. They have brought much interesting material from little known or hidden sources. . . . Considering the role religion played in the Renaissance, it seems to me that this most important subject is somewhat neglected. We have, for example, excerpts from Luther and Calvin, but none from Ignatius of Loyola. The rich life of the Catholic Reformation is presented only by Teresa of Avila and John of the Cross. There exists to the best of my knowledge, however, no better and certainly no less expensive book which presents such a rich survey of the diverse elements of the period." Max Fischer

+ — Commonweal 59:481 F 12 '54 350w

"The selections are very carefully chosen and a sound introduction, biographical notes, and extensive bibliography are included—all in all a great deal for the money."

+ Nation 178:77 Ja 23 '54 180w

"This highly useful anthology is equipped with an informative introduction, a well chosen list of suggestions for wider reading, a biographical list of authors and a chronological table." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Ek R p17 F 28 '54 220w

"Altogether, one of the best anthologies in an excellent series."

+ New Yorker 29:112 F 6 '54 160w

ROSS, ZOLA HELEN. Cassy Scandal. 278p $3 Bobbs

54-6499

Character sketch of Cassy Scandal, Seattle's prettiest girl, who was married and widowed on the same day. The race riots against the Chinese and a disastrous fire are among the scenes in this picture of Seattle in the 1800's.

Booklist 50:421 J1 1 '54

"A much better novel than the title would indicate."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Ek R p6 My 30 '54 220w

"'Cassy Scandal' is not Zola Ross' first novel of the Great Northwest, but it is certainly her gustiest." Ann Wolfe

N Y Times p12 My 30 '54 220w

ROSSI, BONIFACE E. Welding engineering. 786p il $8 McGraw

671.52 Welding 52-12362

"Covers all aspects of welding as it is practiced today, the processes, techniques for various metals, welding jigs, design for welding and inspection. Of interest both to practical welders and engineers." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 50:374 Je 1 '54

Library J 79:921 My 15 '54 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:32 Mr '54

ROSTOW, WALT WHITMAN. Dynamics of Soviet society; in collaboration with Alfred Levin and with the assistance of others at the Center for international studies, Massachusetts institute of technology. 282p $3.95 Norton

947 Russia—Politics and government. Communism—Russia 53-13131

"American economic historian devotes greater part of book to evolution of Soviet rule, taking up various aspects such as Party, economy, ideology, Russian heritage, foreign relations etc., with stress on bureaucratization of life. In second part the cohesive forces as well as the tensions are discussed and in last chapter some predictions ventured. Author does not, and does not intend to bring any new facts, but analyses conditions and men as we know them from a new angle." Library J

"An economic historian, not a Russian specialist, and thus an uncommitted outsider, Mr. Rostow was asked by the Center for International Studies to summarize and integrate the findings of a large number of specialists on Russia. His interpretation is one which the specialists characterize as 'a useful approximation,' ably done. I concur." R. H. Fisher

+ Am Hist R 60:107 O '54 320w

Reviewed by D. A. Tomasic

Am J Soc 60:102 J1 '54 900w

Reviewed by W. W. Kulski

Am Pol Sci R 48:541 Je '54 600w

Reviewed by N. S. Timasheff

Am Soc R 19:790 D '54 850w

"The book is admirably divided into properly headed chapters and sections, making for clarity, logical development of thought, and balanced conclusions. It is neither propaganda nor counter-propaganda. In this respect, it is stronger than most of the books of defectors or eye-witnesses." P. B. Anderson

+ Ann Am Acad 293:200 My '54 550w

Booklist 50:202 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 3 '54 400w

Foreign Affairs 32:513 Ap '54 40w

"A study which presumes a philosophical approach to the subject, and that demands more capacity for abstract assessments than this reader affords. Limited."

Kirkus 21:689 O 1 '53 240w

"Work is model of clear presentation and good organization. Recommended for all educational and all but smallest public libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 78:2027 N 15 '53 130w

"It is very much to be hoped that this book will be widely and carefully read, even though the style is rather opaque and the paper all too translucent." Max Beloff

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 5 '54 550w

Reviewed by Will Starnes

Nation 178:75 Ja 23 '54 400w

"The material, distilled from earlier studies of the subject, is neatly, economically and logically arranged. . . Since there was no need to rush this volume to the already saturated market, there is no excuse for the numerous factual errors and sloppy spelling not only of foreign and some American names, but of simple words. . . This may seem petty, but as a teacher I have noticed that errors are somehow absorbed quicker than anything else by students, and no doubt also by the government 'operator' and the voter behind him, the target 'public' of the book." S. L. Sharp
+ — New Repub 130:19 Ja 11 '54 650w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

New Statesman ■ Nation 47:376 Mr 20 '54 320w

"The style is not always turgid, but the non-expert reader will almost certainly find Mr. Hindus' largely personalized account much more readable." W. B. Walsh

N Y Times p20 D 20 '53 700w

"Without any notable originality, this book presents a summary of what is already commonly known in the field of Russian studies about the Soviet state and society. . . A select annotated bibliography at the book's end is good, except for some injudicious enthusiasm for Isaac Deutscher's works. Still, the book could have been planned far better. The historical part is too long; it could have been cut in favor of a more expanded and deeper-reaching contemporary section. . . The language of the book is too often unnecessarily heavy, concealing rather than elucidating the book's essentially simple ideas. . . On balance, this is a well-meaning and painstaking book, but somehow its focus is too artificial and thus blurred." Albert Parry

— + Pol Sci Q 69:278 Je '54 750w

"For all students and teachers, who wish to gain a deeper insight into the dynamics of Soviet society, this book can be highly recommended." R. H. Bauer

+ Social Studies 45:232 O '54 380w

"This is just the book for the educated layman who wants to know, in two hundred and fifty pages, what present-day Russia adds up to." David Footman

+ Spec p336 Mr 19 '54 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p396 Je 18 '54 650w

"Professor Rostow has not provided here a study of the dynamics of Soviet society, but only an essay on the priority-of-power considerations among the Soviet leadership. Consequently, his prognoses in the final chapter are little more than intelligent layman's guesses."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:224 Je '54 350w

Reviewed by Waldemar Gurian

Yale R n s 43:462 spring '54 220w

ROTH, HOLLY. Content assignment. 177p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

53-10808

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 21 '54 90w

Kirkus 21:749 N 15 '53 60w

"Very flimsy but rather fetching thriller." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 F 21 '54 80w

"A spy story with low marks in both credibility and excitement." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p25 Ja 24 '54 50w

"Flashbacks and chases are well handled, the last lines pack a nice little wallop, and if the story seems contrived it's excellent contrivance." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 7 '54 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:52 Mr 13 '54 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p357 Je 4 '54 170w

ROTH, HOLLY. Mask of glass. 221p $2.50 Vanguard

54-6988

Mystery story.

Kirkus 22:136 F 15 '54 40w

"Here, as in 'The Content Assignment' which introduced her to us last January, Miss Roth works extravagance ingeniously. She makes do with remarkably little plot, yet sustains excitement straight through the proceeding." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 6 '54 200w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p16 Je 13 '54 30w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 11 '54 100w

"Medium." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:31 Jl 10 '54 20w

ROTH, LILLIAN. I'll cry tomorrow; written in collaboration with Mike Connolly [and] Gerold Frank. 347p $3.95 Fell

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-8073

The story of an entertainer's battle with alcohol and mental disease. Beginning as a child actress, Lillian Roth spent years on the stage and in the movies. After her long fight against alcoholism she is once more in the entertainment field as a TV performer.

"From the writing standpoint, the book has the synthetic ring which so often afflicts 'as told' stories; and as a human document, the level of perception is altogether commonplace. What, in spite of this, makes Miss Roth's book such compelling reading is the incredible and inspiring fact that a human being has not merely survived this descent into the abyss: she has, to revert to Faulkner's word, prevailed." C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:81 S '54 250w

Booklist 50:399 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Robert Kass

Cath World 179:399 Ag '54 300w

Reviewed by William Leonard

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 27 '54 180w

"Her book is a song of grace—and a tribute as well to the human patience, kindness, forgiveness and sympathy of many of her friends. She ends it by quoting François Mauriac to the effect that we are constantly being remade by the people who love us." John Cogley

+ Commonweal 60:375 Jl 16 '54 900w

"It is a book which will be read at ■ sitting, and leaves the reader gasping. There is no self-pity, and no whining in her account. She makes no excuses, and casts no blame on others. There is also no doubt when she has finished that here is a woman of courage and resilience and honesty. 'I'll Cry Tomorrow' will undoubtedly and deservedly be on the best seller lists for many weeks to come." Joanna Spencer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 20 '54 800w

"A valid book and possibly a valuable contribution to the literature on alcoholism. As a piece of writing, it is badly flawed for at least one reason: Lillian Roth's collaborators appear to have come between her and what she had to say and have laden her heavily with the obvious." Gilbert Millstein

+ — N Y Times p17 Jl 11 '54 550w

"The whole book, including the tale of regeneration as an Alcoholic Anonymous, is characterized by violent and extreme emotion, and is likely to have considerable morbid as well as inspirational attraction." Joseph Hirsh

Sat R 37:17 Ag 7 '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:208 O '54

ROTHMULLER, ARON MARKO. Music of the Jews; an historical appreciation [tr. by H. C. Stevens]. 254p il $5 Beechurst press

780.9 Music, Jewish

54-3325

Historical outline of music which can be attributed to ■ recognized Jewish tradition

ROTHMULLER, A. M.—Continued
from the Biblical era to the present. Bibliography. Index.

"Rothmüller, ■ baritone and composer of some stature, is widely read and serious in intent but has yet to cultivate style in writing; or perhaps his translator is partly at fault." C. K. Miller

Library J 79:776 Ap 15 '54 140w

"Antiphonal and responsorial chanting are surprisingly not discussed, instruments on the plates are too loosely identified, doubts on the Jewishness of Susskind the Minnesinger go unmentioned, and the folksong question is presented in the customary naive and over-generalized fashion. While these weaknesses detract from its usefulness, the book's final chapters should prove valuable sources of information on Israeli composers and their music." Joel Newman

+ — Sat R 37:39 J1 31 '54 290w

Spec p665 My 28 '54 90w

"An historical appreciation by a profound scholar and musician. . . Rothmüller is firm in his conviction that geographic and social conditions have had the greatest part in shaping Jewish musical expression. This is revealed in practically every chapter of a book that shows the results of long and painstaking research." W. M. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p348 My 28 '54 350w

ROUART, DENIS. Renoir; biographical and critical studies; tr. by James Emmons. 119p il col il $4.95 Skira

B or 92 Renoir, Auguste 54-7293

"Renoir, a man of practical insight and deep wisdom in his art, is studied and analyzed in this book. There is no attempt made to read into the artist's work abstract or esoteric meanings. In fact, the author claims there is only a fine, down-to-earth quality in Renoir's work that makes it what it is today—the work of a great artist." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 50:454 J1 15 '54

"If there could be found such an idea as a candid shot of the mentality of a group or individual, possibly it would offer a small understanding of a Renoir painting. Each canvas seems alive all the way into its depth, even as remarkably reproduced in this little book." O. D. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 15 '54 40w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1832 O 1 '54

Reviewed by Howard Devree

N Y Times p5 J1 4 '54 90w

"Mr. Rouart's text is instructive, and his account of Renoir's artistic development manages, in a remarkably effortless fashion, to serve as a survey of the course of Impressionism, too. The whole book is a happy combination of the immensely readable and the unobtrusively authoritative."

+ New Yorker 30:84 Ag 28 '54 90w

ROUECHE, BERTON. Eleven blue men, and other narratives of medical detection [Eng title: Annals of medical detection]. 215p $3.50 Little

610 Medicine 54-5121

A collection of twelve magazine articles, reprinted from the New Yorker, describing cases of medical detection by the health departments of various large cities, tho predominantly New York.

Booklist 50:254 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:157 Ap '54 40w

Reviewed by Roy Gibbons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ap 18 '54 280w

Horn Bk 30:193 Je '54 40w

Kirkus 21:813 D 15 '53 200w

Reviewed by Karl Brown

Library J 79:380 F 15 '54 130w

Nation 178:204 Mr 6 '54 160w

"Mr. Roueché writes in the demure, almost monotonous prose style that is common to many contributors to The New Yorker. His very colorlessness is reassuring to hypochondriacal readers, who cannot hear of any disease without developing its symptoms. Without any seeming attempt to do so, he fills you with admiration for the men who are so alert to the danger it is their business to checkmate, who over and over take personal risks beyond the call of duty." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 30:22 My 10 '54 500w

Reviewed by Alex Comfort

New Statesman & Nation 47:573 My

1 '54 100w

"This is ■ book that will entertain and enlighten many readers, and is particularly recommended to medical publicists who overdramatize their themes." John Pfeiffer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 7 '54 550w

"Mr. Roueché is a regular contributor to The New Yorker in which all these narratives first appeared. He writes in the lively style sui generis of the magazine and makes exciting adventure even of the most medical aspects of his tales. Indeed, he succeeds in maintaining an atmosphere of suspense and expectation while recounting the history of a particular disease through the ages, and giving thus the background of technical knowledge which guides the medical officers in their detective work." R. J. Dubos

+ N Y Times p6 F 28 '54 1100w

"These narratives are notable for a style which might be envied by true-crime and fiction writers alike." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 19 '54 500w

"Berton Roueché writes in spirited fashion, with the rapidly mounting suspense of a modern crime story. Lay folk will be entertained by these detective tales in which microbes, not men, are the criminals, and patient scientists in remote laboratories, the sleuths. The scientists themselves may learn from these detective devices new and more efficient ways of interpreting pre-epidemic symptoms." Marguerite Clark

+ Sat R 37:22 Ap 10 '54 800w

"This is smooth and expert reporting, a pleasure to read, and a delightful way to broaden horizons—in its field, one of the most rewarding books in many moons." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p10C Mr 7 '54 480w

ROUNDS, GLEN. Whitey takes a trip [il. by the author]. 87p $2 Holiday

54-2822

That famous small cowboy, Whitey, is sent on an errand into town—a trip that took two days, included an adventure with a cattleman with ■ broken leg, and won Whitey a pair of fancy boots and Stetson hat.

"A fine western for small boys." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 J1 18 '54 70w

"Glen Rounds' stories and pictures have ■ flavor and an authenticity so often lacking in the trumped-up 'westerns' for this younger age group." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:247 Ag '54 90w

Kirkus 22:113 F 15 '54 40w

"Recommended for grades 2-4." Juanita Walker

+ Library J 79:1238 Je 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 27 '54 80w

"Self-reliant, matter-of-fact, ready to whip his weight in rattlesnakes, Whitey is one of my favorite cowboys—and he wins my respect all over again in this new adventure." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p28 My 16 '54 140w

"Here's another Whitey story for younger boys. . . Glen Rounds has provided illustrations that fit Whitey and the spirit of his adventure perfectly." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:38 Je 19 '54 130w

ROUNDS, RUTH. It happened to Hannah; il. by Dorothy Bayley Morse. 122p $2.50 Dutton 54-5062

Hannah, a young Methodist, moves into a Jewish neighborhood and at first makes no headway with her schoolmates. Later she finds a Star of David pendant, and claims she is Jewish. She also seeks help at a Catholic shrine. This story of religious tolerance is for grades 4 to 6.

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 60w

Kirkus 22:198 Mr 15 '54 180w

"This delightful story of Hannah's adjustment to school and life in a new community will promote understanding of different creeds among children before they acquire adult prejudices. . . Recommended." Helen Perdue

+ Library J 79:92 My 15 '54 80w

"How Hannah extricates herself from [her] web of deception, will be plot enough to appeal to many girls. The psychology underlying the theme, however, is open to question. Would a bewildered child evolve a philosophy of brotherhood in a few weeks? Should not the majority group have learned something of Hannah's religion? Why has Hannah shut out the minority—non-Jewish 4 B's? Despite its moving climax, the story plays up superficialities, and emphasizes differences rather than similarities among creeds." Rose Friedman

+ — N Y Times p18 Je 27 '54 230w

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 90w

ROUSE, RUTH, and NEILL, STEPHEN CHARLES, bp, eds. History of the ecumenical movement, 1517-1948; published on behalf of the Ecumenical Institute, Château de Bossey. 822p $9 Westminster press

280.1 Ecumenical movement. Church history—Modern period 54-10944

"In progress since 1946 under a committee of eminent religious scholars from North America and Europe, this book is edited by its permanent secretary, a woman who has written widely in the field of church unity and missionary activities. Miss Rouse defines ecumenical as 'that which concerns the unity and world-wide mission of the Church of Jesus Christ.' . . . Each chapter is written by an authority; the roster includes such well known names as K. S. Latourette, Don Yoder, and the Right Rev. S. T. Neill. At least half the book is devoted to twentieth century developments, particularly the activities of the famous conferences on faith, law and order beginning with the World Missionary Conference at Edinburgh in 1910." Library J

"This great history appears at an opportune time. Here are mountains of material about the ecumenical movement past and present, and for all who will gather at Evanston or otherwise study or promote unity there's gold in those hills." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:703 Je 9 '54 1300w

"The book is massive, detailed, scholarly but very readable, and includes extensive bibliographies of archives, books, and periodical articles in several languages. Its purpose is perhaps to inform laymen even more than the clergy though perhaps only students will read it in its entirety. Yet many others will want the thrill of realizing the strides already made in church unity and the tasks still to be accomplished. Uniquely valuable. Recommended for all religious and university collections, and for not only the larger public libraries but also all readers of religious books who sense the importance of church unity." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 79:1056 Je 1 '54 370w

"Clearly written, fully documented, this comprehensive volume covers the growth of the churches toward unity and cooperation, topically, geographically and chronologically over the last four centuries. The several contributors are outstanding scholars and writers in the field of church history and doctrine. They have produced a book that will be widely read and used by laymen and scholars for many years to come." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 15 '54 150w

"The editing of such a book must have been an immensely difficult task, and it has been admirably carried through, for, contrary to what one might perhaps expect, the book never ceases to be easily readable, and, available as it should be in any public library, it should do something to reduce ignorance of the movement, and even to ease the minds of some of its critics. There is a seriousness of purpose evident all the time—a seriousness that should allay the alarm which is sometimes felt lest the conferences should issue in an attempt to stampede the Churches into an ill-considered unity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p ii Ap 30 '54 1050w

ROWANS, VIRGINIA, pseud. See Tanner, E. E.

ROWLAND, BENJAMIN. Art and architecture of India: Buddhist, Hindu [and] Jain. (Pelican history of art ser) 288p 190pl $8.50 Penguin

709.54 Art, Indic. Architecture, Indic

53-12998

"Benjamin Rowland offers a brief survey of the whole long history not only of Indian art in India, but of countries strongly influenced by various phases of Indian art. There is a chapter on the Buddhist art of Turkestan, one which includes Tibet and Nepal, one on Ceylon, one on Cambodia, one on Burma, and one on Java. The text is supplemented with 300 half-tone illustrations as well as ground plans for temples, line drawings, and an excellent bibliography." Sat R

Reviewed by Hans Huth

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 5 '53 220w

"Surely an admirable text for general use and for study by the erudite. . . Recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ — Library J 79:65 Ja 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Lawrence Haward

Manchester Guardian p2 Je 8 '53 180w

Reviewed by Lawrence Gowing

New Statesman & Nation 45:620 My 23 '53 210w

"The field surveyed is a vast one, both simplified and complicated by a paucity of facts, dates and names of artists, but Mr. Rowland extracts order from it without seeming to do it violence and without ever losing sight of the esthetic point." Clement Greenberg

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 17 '54 240w

"The book is enormously informative and enlightening." Alfred Frankenstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 4 '54 80w

"At the present time Americans honestly want to understand India past and present. Mr. Rowland's report covers one aspect of it very well indeed. As far as art and architecture are concerned, I would make it required reading for any student, and would then require the student to go on to the books in the bibliography and hope that he could travel and see for himself." Alan Priest

+ Sat R 36:14 Ja 2 '54 850w

"The book is beautifully illustrated by 190 plates, exceptionally well photographed and well reproduced. There are perhaps too many architectural photographs. These vast temples reduced to page or half-page format tend to look exactly the same, and this may underline the monotonous aspect they have for many a Westerner. But a good index, some admirable notes—placed, fortunately, at the ends of the chapters—and a useful short glossary of terms make this book, in spite of its shortcomings in the wider terms of Indian art, a brave and sensible incursion into an extremely complicated and difficult subject for those Western readers who have not touched this field at all."

ROWLAND, BENJAMIN—Continued

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p260 Ap 23 '54 900w

ROWLAND, FLORENCE WIGHTMAN. Jade dragons [il. by Douglas Gorsline]. 128p $2.75 Oxford

54-10011

A realistic tale of the life of a Chinese river-boat family. The story centers around young Wong Ting, whose secret ambition is to go ashore. His wish is granted when he finds a valuable bracelet for the Kind Lady. For ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 51:91 O 15 '54

"A vivid, appealing story of a hard working and devoted Chinese family." Polly Goodwin + Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 7 '54 150w

"Charmingly illustrated, 'Jade Dragons' is a poignant tale. It can be well recommended for young boys who want to know what happens on the other side of the world." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '54 100w

Kirkus 22:532 Ag 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges

Library J 79:2255 N 15 '54 100w

"Customs, traditions, and philosophies of the river people, related here in text and pictures, form the background of this story of a young boy learning the responsibilities and pleasures of family life." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:34 S 18 '54 180w

RUBINSTEIN, S. LEONARD. The battle done. 244p $3.50 Morrow

54-8434

"For the German POW's in the South Carolina prison camp, where the action of this novel occurs, the battle is done. Master Sergeant Ben Hoffman, a Jew, is in charge of the prisoners, many of whom are Nazis. It is through Hoffman's eyes that the reader comes to know the prisoners and their guards." Library J

"We have had any number of excellent novels about American troops in action in World War II but this, so far as I know, is the first we have had that deals with men of war in prison camps when battle is done. It, too, qualifies for the accolade, 'excellent.'" V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 12 '54 400w

"An insubstantial narrative, this puts no flesh on its concepts and convictions, valid as they may be."

Kirkus 22:407 Jl 1 '54 180w

"A distinguished first novel. Recommended." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:1590 S 15 '54 90w

"This is a fast and readable book, although the story of the German P. O. W. in America has yet to be given full literary dimension." Stanley Cooperman

Nation 179:217 S 11 '54 30w

"Some of the dialog is trite (but few GI's talked in epigrams), some labored, particularly the boy-girl talk. Overall plotting is subordinated to a presentation of ideas, but the individual incidents are well done. Underneath the wit, keen observation and good story telling are serious considerations of the nature of Nazism and the German people, and of the feelings and problems of a Jew in a Gentile world." Taliaferro Boatwright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 12 '54 500w

"Mr. Rubinstein writes sparsely and cleanly. His dialogue is suggestive rather than explicit, and there is not a synthetic situation or a hollow character in the book. What more, then, could one want? In this reviewer's opinion, 'The Battle Done' is too casually organized." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p10 D 26 '54 400w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 10 '54 150w

RUBY, LIONEL. Art of making sense; a guide to logical thinking. 286p $3.75 Lip-pincott

160 Logic. Thought and thinking 54-6108

"A Professor of Philosophy at Roosevelt College here discourses on 'the art of making sense,' and its components in a conversational tone that should thaw the wary. In probing semantics, logic, and scientific methods of thinking he considers such points as the nature of an argument, the law of the excluded middle, deductive and inductive reasoning, syllogisms, etc. . . . Under chapter headings which include 'How Not to Argue' and 'On Sticking to the Point' he sandwiches principles of logical thought and entertaining illustrations from such sources as Socrates, Moliere, Conan Doyle, Cronin." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 51:122 N 15 '54

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 28 '54 360w

"A good come-and-get-it on the popular level."

+ Kirkus 22:617 S 1 '54 120w

"Some readers will have difficulty in following the more symbolic representations which the author includes. But every library patron interested in improving his logical thinking will find Mr. Ruby's guidance helpful and his numerous illustrations captivating and pertinent." J. W. Stein

+ Library J 79:2326 D 1 '54 120w

"Mr. Ruby, taking the driest and hardest branch of philosophy, has given logic a whirl in the name of public enlightenment. His efforts have proved so popular, nevertheless, that the results, extended and enhanced, are here presented in permanent form. There is merriment in his methods and high seriousness in his material." T. V. Smith

+ N Y Times p6 D 19 '54 600w

RUCHAMES, LOUIS. Race, jobs, and politics; the story of FEPC. 255p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

331.1 U.S. Committee on fair employment practice. Negroes—Employment. Discrimination in employment 53-10015

History of the federal FEPC and an evaluation of its services. The 1943-1944 transit strike in Philadelphia, which started because of the employment of Negroes, is one of the cases which is studied. Index.

"This is not only a much-needed and temperate volume but it is also a well-written, well-organized, and well-documented one." J. A. Boromé

+ Am Hist R 59:1028 Jl '54 250w

"The book is factual and well-documented for the area it covers, although this reviewer wishes that more attention might have been given to the state and municipal bodies even at the expense of some of the historical materials. The book is well-written and should prove of interest both to general readers as well as to social scientists." Preston Valien

+ Am Soc R 19:642 O '54 350w

Reviewed by F. S. Loescher

Ann Am Acad 294:204 Jl '54 650w

Booklist 50:196 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by D. H. Wrong

Canadian Forum 34:71 Je '54 220w

"As might be expected readability is not the book's strong point. . . . Not a popular treatment but a book of interest to researchers in the field. For larger public and for college and university libraries." R. P. Bartolini

Library J 78:1844 O 15 '53 120w

"A convincing and up-to-the minute account recommended for general purchase." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 79:458 Mr 1 '54 120w

"The volume is worth reading for it adds ■ constructive note toward the solution of ■ pressing social problem." Louis Stark

+ N Y Times p16 D 27 '53 600w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:233 Je '54 200w

"His account is frankly sympathetic with the aims of the movement he describes but well documented and convincing." C. V. Woodward

+ Yale R n s 43:605 summer '54 280w

RUDGE, FRED. Bargaining on productivity; ■ management guide. 146p il spir pa $5.75
Bur. of nat. affairs

331.21 Labor productivity. Wages. Collective bargaining

"This monograph on productivity as a factor in wage determination traces the history of this labor demand, clarifies the labor position on it, describes and evaluates yardsticks that are available to measure it, and gives practical suggestions to management negotiators. The author outlines ■ method by which a company can construct its own productivity index." Management R

"This book provides considerable literary food for thought for both company and union labor negotiators. Strongly recommended for collections aimed at these groups." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 79:211 F 1 '54 130w

Management R 42:691 N '53 50w

RUDOLPH, MARGUERITA. Living and learning in nursery school; foreword by Jessie Stanton. 174p $2.75 Harper

372.24 Nursery schools 54-6448

Part one concerns the meaning of nursery school to children; part two, explains the nursery school curriculum in action; and part three is an evaluation of nursery school education. Index.

Booklist 50:412 J1 1 '54

"This book is intended, primarily, for nursery school teachers and/or student teachers. However, since it presents real children in certain aspects of their nursery school life and does so with liveliness and humor—it will be enjoyable and profitable reading for parents, too... Recommended for general library collections and for college libraries offering appropriate courses." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:858 My 1 '54 140w

"An excellent book for both parents and teachers." Ethel Dexter

+ Springfield Republican p5C Ag 22 '54 130w

RUMBALL-PETRE, EDWIN ALFRED ROBERT. Rare Bibles; ■ introduction for collectors and a descriptive checklist. 2d ed rev 53p $6 Duschne

016.2204 Bible. Whole—Bibliography. Bibliography—Rare books 54-11281

Revised edition of a small manual first published in 1938. Contents: Incunabula Bibles; Polyglots, interlinear and parallel-column Bibles; English Bibles and Testaments; Bibles printed in America; Hebrew, Greek and Latin Bibles; Bibles in modern languages other than English; Curious editions of the Bible; Miscellaneous Bible portions; Bibliography for Bible collectors.

"Comparing the present revised edition with the primary edition of 1938, certain omissions appear outstanding. Most conspicuous is the absence of facsimile pages from rare Bibles that enriched the first edition... Less regrettable is the omission of a considerable amount of text discussing the fluctuating monetary values assigned to rare Bibles. Fascinating as such phenomena are, any record of them becomes quickly outdated... Much more meaningful than the omissions are the additions to lists and text that characterize the revised volume. The check lists are enlarged by 10 percent on the average. The number of Incunabula listed has been doubled and the number of Polyglots has been increased by one-half... Thus the 1954 edition of Rare Bibles has been rendered a considerably more useful guidebook than was its distinguished predecessor." H. R. Willoughby

+ Christian Century 71:926 Ag 4 '54 360w

"It is a valuable and authoritative work." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:1515 S 1 '54 130w

"This book was not designed for bibliographers or professors of Latin; and even if those for whom it was designed may grumble at having to pay six dollars for fifty-two pages, they will not be able to find elsewhere, within a single pair of covers, the particular collection of interesting and curious information which Dr. Rumball-Petre has here assembled with such enthusiastic diligence."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p448 J1 9 '54 400w

RUNCIMAN, STEVEN. History of the crusades; 3v; v3, Kingdom of Acre and the later crusades. 529p il maps $6.50 Cambridge

940.18 Crusades (51-10801)

"This third and final volume of his comprehensive history of the duel between Cross and Crescent, deals with the Crusaders' attempt at re-establishment; with their partial success, and with their irrevocable and final fall." (N Y Times) For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest 1951, 1953.

"No public, college or university library can afford to be without this magnificent example of felicitous narrative style and historical scholarship." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:2326 D 1 '54 190w

"Mr. Runciman's third volume completes the only large-scale history of the Crusades in English. This is the equal of the preceding volumes, admirably written, direct and positive and witty, and at the same time very learned. A reader who is not a professional historian can enjoy it from beginning to end." C. R. Cheney

+ Manchester Guardian p12 O 8 '54 800w

"Altogether, it is a book every student of history should own." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p22 N 21 '54 850w

Time 64:95 O 25 '54 750w

"With characteristic lucidity and penetration, Mr. Steven Runciman defines the irremovable flaw in the design to set up a fortress in the name of the Prince of Peace, as he approaches the end of his nobly proportioned survey of the whole history of the Crusades."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p681 O 29 '54 3100w

RUNYON, ALFRED MILTON, and BERGANE, VILMA F., eds. Around the world in 1,000 pictures; a photographic encyclopedia of travel to foreign lands; foreword by Richard Joseph; 10 maps by Rafael Palacios. 448p $7.50 Doubleday

910.41 Views 54-5260

"The first book that tries to be a sort of foreign guide using a minimum of words and a maximum of photographs. It is, in fact, nearly 450 pages of pictures, some snapshots, some fine photographs, covering just about every locale that is likely to know a tourist, and that includes Nicaragua and New Zealand and ten dozen points between. The wide world has been divided into a number of trips as they might be taken by travelers, so that the Caribbean islands get lumped together in one section, Scandinavia in another, the progression more or less following normal touring." (Sat R) Index.

Booklist 50:276 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:184 My '54 40w

"This is indeed a browsing book, not to be swallowed at one gulp... High spots of the book are the color plates at the beginning of each section. Because of their excellence, one wishes that more of them could have been included."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p12 My ■ '54 290w

RUNYON, A. M.—Continued

"You'll find a few slips here and there, of course; no book can be perfect. In a section on Mexico, for instance, the caption describes the men in the bullring who stick those little darts into the bull's shoulder muscles as 'banderilleros'; the darts are 'banderillas' and the men are the 'banderilleros'. As happens over and over again in books, French and German words are usually carefully correct; Spanish words get scrambled. . . This kind of thing will doubtless be caught in future editions. For the rest, you'll find the entire free world represented here—in photography at best in really fine pictures, at worst in fully adequate ones."

J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 4 '54 450w

"The short takes of text tell you in fairly general terms how to get there, and the cut lines tell you in a handful of words about the customs of the land. While the technique is not altogether novel, it has been successful in bringing out the travelers all these years, and I must say it does serve to stoke the urge to hit the road." H. S.

+ Sat R 37:47 F 13 '54 340w

"Those who have been to some of these places and those who hope to go, as well as those who never expect to go much of anywhere, can enjoy the book." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p5C F 14 '54 160w

RUNYON, DAMON, 1918-. Father's footsteps.
181p $2.95 Random house

B or 92 Runyon, Damon, 1880-1946 54-7452

"In a kind of testimonial autobiography, Damon Runyon, Jr. traces the steps of his famous father and the family which shared his life in part. We come to know Damon Runyon as he works up from the six-gun West through a period of Kiplingesque poetry on the Spanish-American War, through years of alcoholism which ended with marriage, on to the years on Broadway and the Hearst column, contact with guys and dolls, and the final devastating illness, cancer." Kirkus

Booklist 51:40 S 15 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 5 '54 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

Kirkus 22:380 Je 15 '54 210w

"As a psychological study of a man whose life has been twisted by a 'giant' he feared, 'Father's Footsteps' has a claim to interest, particularly because the 'giant' was a public and popular figure. But, strangely enough, it evokes little sympathy for the self-pitying victim who, tardily, seems to be learning that he can slough off the obligation, onerous to him, of following in footsteps that are obviously too large for him." David Tilden

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 5 '54 800w

"A sad, odd, revelatory and banally written memoir." Gilbert Millstein

N Y Times p31 S 19 '54 270w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 7 '54 600w

"Fascinating and extraordinary memoir. . . This is not a pretty story. It is colored throughout by the author's memory scars that reach back through a bitter lifetime, scars that cannot be healed simply because the father who inflicted them is dead. It is, however, an enormously engrossing story, written with admirable clarity and courage." Lee Rogow

+ Sat R 37:22 Ag 28 '54 750w

"Damon Jr. is not much of a writer, and his resentment against his father is still so intense that at times his book is painful. But his unique story shows the sad and bitter side of a man who, to millions, has only meant a racetrack kind of gaiety, a Broadway kind of sentimentality."

Time 64:90 ■ ■ '54 700w

Wis Lib Bul 50:208 O '54

RUNYON, TOM. In for life; a convict's story.
314p $3.75 Norton

B or 92 Iowa. State penitentiary, Fort Madison 53-12618

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"For the serious penologist, Runyon's book is a case history with implications and possibilities for use of extraordinary value. For the citizen it is an eye-opening, dramatic and sobering account of the prison world, which presents an increasing challenge. Both readers will find Runyon a man worth knowing."

Stafford Derby

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 13 '54 300w

Reviewed by C. H. Rolph

New Statesman & Nation 47:738 Je 5 '54 260w

"Runyon's autobiography is useful. It has qualities of a sociological study of the prison system, and at the same time is a highly readable convict's eye-view of life behind the bars." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ja 24 '54 360w

Springf'd Republican p10D Ja 17 '54 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p518 Ag 13 '54 280w

"Within its genre, this memoir of a prison inmate is an exception, since, without resort to fiction or sensationalism, it is a convincing social and human document. Here is the well-written, but not ghost-written, story of a man who, apparently without being a member of the so-called criminalistic substructure, became quite skillful during the great depression in the techniques of robbing banks, until he was seized, tried, and received a life sentence of penal servitude."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:12 Mr '54 220w

Wis Lib Bul 50:23 Ja '54

RUSHMORE, HELEN. Ghost cat; il. by Reisie Lonette. 150p $2.50 Harcourt

Cats—Legends and stories 54-5156

A haunted house in the Ozark mountains is the beginning of this story for ages eight to twelve. Ten-year-old Glory goes to the haunted house at sunset hoping to see the ghost of long-dead Miss Nancy Rose. Instead she finds a live white cat. Glory's devotion to the cat, which she names after the ghost, brings good luck after a streak of bad luck.

Booklist 50:364 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 29 '54 40w

Kirkus 22:232 Ap 1 '54 90w

"Recommended for grades 4-6." F. M. Hensley

+ Library J 79:787 Ap 15 '54 80w

"Glory and her family are a lovable, real group; their story is not of top rank, perhaps, but it adds a rather different note to the many, many tales of isolated mountain people." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 16 '54 110w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges

N Y Times p22 Ap 18 '54 100w

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:143 My '54

RUSSELL, EDWARD FREDERICK LANGLEY, 2d baron RUSSELL OF LIVERPOOL.
See Russell of Liverpool, E. F. L. R.

RUSSELL, MRS MARY (MCSORLEY). Skeet
[with pictures by Jeanne C. Manget]. 55p $2 Little Asses and mules—Legends and stories

54-8305

Story of a smart little burro who was leader of a California pack train for a tourist camp in the mountains. When the automobile road was built to the camp Skeet's usefulness was finished, and he was sold. Eventually Skeet settled his future in his own way. For grades three to four.

Booklist 51:22 S 1 '54

"An absorbing little story." M. M. R.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54
100w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon
Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54
50w

Kirkus 22:362 Je 15 '54 90w

"The drawings by Jeanne C. Manget add to the attractiveness of the well-designed book which will provide an easy story for boys and girls in third and fourth grades. Not a necessary purchase unless additional titles for this reading level are needed." A. B. Martin
+ Library J 79:1668 S 15 '54 80w

RUSSELL, WILLIAM FLETCHER. How to judge a school; handbook for puzzled parents and tired taxpayers. 143p $2.50 Harper

370.973 Education—U.S. Education—Aims and objectives 54-6449

"The President of Teachers College, Columbia University, offers admonition and explanation on clarifying the objectives of education before criticizing the methods. This involves inquiry into the meaning of Americanism, equality, liberty, and happiness, and examination of the joint task of school, home, and community in the formation of the citizen." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 50:372 Je 1 '54

Kirkus 22:100 F 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by Benjamin Fine
Sat R 37:29 S 11 '54 320w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas
Springf'd Republican p5C J1 4 '54 270w
Wis Lib Bul 50:172 J1 '54

RUSSELL, SIR WILLIAM HOWARD. My diary North and South; ed. and introduced by Fletcher Pratt [Eng title: My Civil war diary]. 268p il $4 Harper

973.7 U.S.—History—Civil war. South—Description and travel 54-6027

"In 1861 the London Times sent William Howard Russell, its correspondent who had achieved fame for his coverage of the Crimean War, to the United States to report on events in this country where his editors correctly believed, a very fine row was in the making. Mr. Russell arrived in March and remained here for a year, leaving in April 1862... Mr. Russell's diary, first published in 1863, has been abridged for modern reading by Fletcher Pratt who provides an admirable preface to the book." Library J

Booklist 50:454 J1 15 '54

Reviewed by B. P. Thomas
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 11 '54
300w

"It is a fascinatingly vivid account by an impartial, trained observer of what America was really like at the time." Francis Russell
+ Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 15 '54
180w

Kirkus 22:283 Ap 15 '54 220w

"This, writes Mr. Pratt in his preface, 'is a book of pictures in movement; a picture book of what the war looked like as it was about to begin. No one else has left anything comparable.' With these words, your reviewer is in complete agreement. It is quite a book, and highly recommended." J. D. Marshall
+ Library J 79:1223 Je 15 '54 340w

Manchester Guardian p4 S 14 '54 240w

"It is good to have a new edition of this classic work which has never been republished since it first appeared. Unfortunately considerations of cost have necessitated much cutting which lessens its value for students even though Mr. Pratt assures us that nothing of interest to the modern reader has been omitted. Moreover the cuts, which are not indicated by breaks in the text, have been made in a way that causes many awkward transitions. There are also numerous typographical errors."

+ Nation 179:36 J1 10 '54 300w

"This is an entertaining volume, which has been condensed from a much longer original." Norman MacKenzie

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:298 S 11 '54 900w

"Very fine reading. Russell was a reporter of the first rank—a good deal better, it would seem, than any of the Americans who were practicing the art at that time, if only because he was better able to assume a detached point of view—and 'My Diary North and South' presents a whole series of unforgettable sketches of what was going on at the moment when the flames reached the magazine." Bruce Catton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 25 '54
1050w

"For the general reader this book is better than the original; the specialist will still go to the older edition. It is regrettable that Mr. Pratt did not supply footnote identifications of some of the characters, many of whom are known only to the specialists. Nor is there an index." T. H. Williams

+ N Y Times p6 Je 27 '54 700w

Reviewed by A. N. Chamberlain
San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 3 '54
400w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins
Sat R 37:117 J1 31 '54 850w

Reviewed by Gerard Fay
Spec p372 S 24 '54 800w

"A durable and worthwhile dispatch to posterity."

+ Time 64:84 J1 5 '54 1150w

"The brevity of his American stay makes it unfortunate that Mr. Pratt should have decided to substitute a new title for Russell's own title, My Diary North and South, for it was the descriptions of North and South preparing for war, the estimates of Northern and Southern leaders, and the appreciation of the situation, military, economic, political and social, between North and South, which made Russell's reporting so rare in his own day, and which holds it still among the most valuable documents in the record of a nation acting on the early scenes of tragedy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p729 N 19 '54
3000w

Wis Lib Bul 50:179 J1 '54

RUSSELL OF LIVERPOOL, EDWARD FREDERICK LANGLEY RUSSELL, 2d baron. Scourge of the swastika; a short history of Nazi war crimes. 259p il $4.50 Philosophical lib.

940.54 World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities. World war, 1939-1945—Germany 54-4660

"Sir Hartley Shawcross, speaking to the International Military Tribunal at Nürnberg, estimated that 'on the lowest computation' the Nazi masters of the Third Reich murdered in cold blood 'twelve million men, women, and children.' Lord Russell, legal adviser to the commander-in-chief in respect to trials of war criminals in the British zone, here presents a 'short history' of Nazi atrocities, with pictures." Nation

"This is truly a remarkable book—remarkable for the infinite care with which its author has gathered all the relevant facts and for the almost superhuman self-discipline he exercised in keeping passion out of a tale in which each word could burn like a torch." E. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 11 '54
150w

"Lord Russell felt so strongly about presenting his case that he resigned his post as assistant judge advocate general of the British armed forces, and this, together with government efforts at suppression, have brought considerable notoriety to his book. Probably only larger libraries will want." Louis Barron

Library J 79:2210 N 15 '54 220w

RUSSELL OF LIVERPOOL, E. F. L. R.— Continued

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman
Nation 179:427 N 13 '54 40w

"Lord Russell provides a cold, factual, and unchallengeable record. The only comment I wish to add is that the book should be made compulsory reading in every German school." Kingsley Martin

New Statesman & Nation 48:212 Ag 21 '54 950w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p14 N 14 '54 80w

"It is all there. The shame and the filth and the horror of the camps. The absurd posturing of the Germans in power—one officer announcing the execution of fifty French hostages ended his letter, 'I have the honor of making this decision known to you.' It takes a strong stomach to read it. But it should be read if an American is to understand either the Germans or their neighbors. This is as much a part of German history as Goethe or Adenauer." Drew Middleton

+ N Y Times p37 N 14 '54 550w

"The photographs fit the text—that is to say, they turn the stomach but demand attention. There are also some sketches by a Frenchwoman who spent eighteen months in Ravensbruck as a Nacht und Nebel prisoner but survived to give her graphic description of what went on there. This book contains a true story, fairly told."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p567 S 10 '54 650w

RYAN, ALFRED PATRICK. Islands apart. 256p $4 Morrow

941.5 Ireland—History 54-11114

A historical account of Ireland "from St Patrick to De Valera." The first half traces Irish history from pagan days to the British occupation. The second half tells in greater detail the story of Ireland's history in the present century. No index.

Bookmark 14:33 N '54 20w

Kirkus 22:627 S 1 '54 300w

"No history of Ireland could be definitive, nor could there ever be an unbiased one, but this comes close to being understandable and explains why so much of Ireland's story is due to the fact that she is an island. . . Recommended." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 79:2099 N 1 '54 80w

"A British subject, and a Protestant, A. P. Ryan writes on Ireland's history with compassion, understanding and often with wit. . . Mr. Ryan obviously loves Ireland, but he sees her faults and he prescribes intelligently for their cure." W. P. Clancy

+ N Y Times p18 N 14 '54 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 12 '54 90w

RYAN, DON. Devil's brigadier. 312p $3.50 Coward-McCann

54-5799

Fictionized version of the stories of the two Harpe brothers whose loyalist father was murdered by a post-Revolutionary nationalist group. The brothers have been renamed Heath, and the story of their vengeance follows ■ bloody trail from North Carolina, west to the Ohio and New Orleans.

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 18 '54 500w

"Quite ■ yarn of ■ blood feud, Indians, revivals, crimes, treachery and ■ long trail of vengeance. Hot blooded and spirited."

Kirkus 22:78 F 1 '54 150w

"Ryan has taken pains with his story, based on the historical Harpe brothers, even to telling where 'liberties' have been taken with actual events; but the result is tedious. He provides some well-imagined and unromanticized background atmosphere of the wild country, his characters are outwardly plausible but without depth, incident is too profuse, and style is pedestrian. Read before multiple purchase." Karl Brown

Library J 79:775 Ap 15 '54 120w

"A nice case work-up perhaps, but the catch phrases of 1954 sound almighty strange on the tongues of 1787." Richard Match

N Y Times p21 Ap 18 '54 350w

Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54 70w

RYAN, MRS MILDRED (GRAVES). Thrift with a needle; the complete book of mending. 164p il $2.95 Scribner

646.2 Clothing and dress—Repairing. Sewing 54-7567

This book contains simple instructions on how to darn, patch and reweave; make simple alterations; mend the entire family's clothes; repair draperies, rugs, upholstery; and generally spruce up tired clothes.

Booklist 50:273 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:131 Mr '54 20w

"The illustrations and text are both clear enough for even a novice to follow. But the book is also of interest to the experienced sewer, because it is almost an encyclopedia of general mending, patching, darning, and simple alterations." R. R. Craft

+ J Home Econ 46:613 O '54 220w

Kirkus 22:22 Ja 1 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:67 Mr '54

RYDBERG, ERNIE. Bright summer; il. by Vera Neville. 131p $2.50 Longmans

53-8761

Story of a large family of Mexican-Americans who live and work in the orange grove section of southern California. The heroine is eleven-year-old Teresita, who is handicapped by a leg brace, but helps her own cause along by her ability to draw. Grades 4 to 6.

Booklist 50:263 Mr 1 '54

Kirkus 21:427 J1 15 '53 80w

"Useful, where needed, as ■ modern story because of its intercultural value and its picture of crop harvesting for girl readers in grades 4-5. Format is good with drawings in black and white by Vera Neville. Recommended." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:150 Ja 15 '54 80w

"The book is full of other people: brothers and sisters, Mama who cannot read but does not let her children know it; workers in the orchard. Mr. Rydberg tells ■ warming story." E. E.

+ Sat R 37:43 F ■ '54 110w

S

SACHS, PAUL JOSEPH. Modern prints and drawings; ■ guide to better understanding of modern draughtsmanship; selected and with an explanatory text. 261p $7.50 Knopf

769 Engravings. Drawings 54-6137

"Covers the creative history of prints and drawings from the time of David, Goya, Delacroix, Daumier, and Corot to that of the mid-twentieth century in Europe, the United States, and Mexico." (Publisher's note) Bibliography.

Booklist 51:170 D 15 '54

Reviewed by Dorothy Adlow

Christian Science Monitor p14 D ■ '54 450w

Kirkus 22:648 S 15 '54 210w

Reviewed by S. L. Faison

Nation 179:492 D 4 '54 90w

"The reproductions are good. Richness of blacks, subtleties of tone, clarity of line, the drag of ■ brush, the delicacy of a wash—such qualities as these are respected in the manufacture of the book. It is true the format is far too crowded. The introductory chapters are in two columns and the desirable marginal white space around the illustrations is crammed with captions and comments. But somehow this does not matter. It seems simply further evidence of the author's exuberance and enthusiasm. A rather abbreviated text on technical processes and an excellent bibliography are also included in this pleasant adventure." A. B. Saarinen

+ N Y Times p7 N 7 '54 650w

"Although Dr. Sachs modestly states in his introduction that this 'is a picture book with brief comments about prints and drawings made in modern times,' it is no ordinary picture book. Rather, it is a thoroughly delightful and illuminating journey through 150 years of graphic expression. New and refreshing vistas are seen through the keen perception, warm understanding, and mature taste of an enthusiastic connoisseur and youthful-minded scholar." U. E. Johnson

+ Sat R 37:63 D 4 '54 750w

SADOUL, GEORGES. French film. (National cinema ser) 131p il $3.50 British bk. centre 792.93 Moving pictures [54-4714]

"The latest in Roger Manvell's valuable National Cinema Series examines the origins of the French film but passes rapidly to the modern era. What Sadoul has done so effectively is to sketch in the background, both industrial and social, against which the pictures themselves emerged. Thus we find that René Clair's delightful 'Le Million' is one of the last carefree splurges of pre-Depression film production in France; by the time he made his next picture 'A Nous la Liberté,' all Europe was in the grip of the economic crisis, and the film's utopian finale was hardly in accordance with the temper of the times." (Sat R) Index.

"Highly recommended for theatre and cinema collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1894 O 15 '54 20w

"M. Georges Sadoul's French Film ends with 1950: that indeed is its chief fault. Otherwise it gives its 125 pages of history readably and intelligently, with few prejudices."

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:203 F 13 '54 40w

"Brief but closely-written and highly informative book." A. K.

+ Sat R 37:34 Je 26 '54 450w

"A useful addition to the National Cinema series is French Film by Georges Sadoul, a historian who is also a critic of considerable distinction. The publishers of this series are generous with their illustrations—although these sometimes become a little cramped on the page—but less so with their text; and, in covering the facts, the personalities and the films in only 120 pages, M. Sadoul has had to resist an obvious temptation to let the book collapse into a catalogue of dates and achievements." P. H.

+ — Spec p219 F 19 '54 210w

Times [London] Lit Sup p247 Ap 16 '54 80w

SAGE, ROBERT, ed. Private diaries of Stendhal. See Beyle, M. H.

SAHGAL, NAYANTARA (PANDIT). Prison and chocolate cake. 236p il $3.50 Knopf

B or 92 India—Social life and customs. U.S.—Description and travel 54-5974

Autobiography of the young daughter of Mme Pandit and niece of Nehru, who was educated in part in the United States. Index.

Booklist 50:357 My 15 '54

+ Bookmark 13:236 J1 '54 30w

Reviewed by Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 2 '54 300w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 3 '54 460w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 My '54

"Her portrayal of her family is warm and delightful; her close-ups of India's great modern figures such as Gandhi and Nehru make real people of them. The title refers to an occasion when she once enjoyed a special chocolate cake just before her father was arrested and is an apt description of the odd mixture of luxury and prison terms which characterized her family's lives. Many older and thoughtful girls will appreciate this autobiography." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 30:262 Ag '54 130w

"Devotion to beloved people and a beloved country, a warm humor bridging the ways of East to those of the West characterize this lovely book."

+ Kirkus 22:219 Mr 15 '54 240w

"Highly recommended for general public." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:858 My 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson

New Statesman & Nation 48:48 J1 10 '54 50w

"In 'Prison and Chocolate Cake' Tara Sahgal, who is now married to a young Bombay business man, has given us in the most simple, charming and generous terms the spirit of the Indian struggle for freedom, and the idealism and dignity of her parents, her illustrious uncle and their associates as she knew them as a child." Dorothy Bowles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 9 '54 300w

"At a time when writers on Indo-American relations are likely to be somber and 'significant' it is refreshing to read a relaxed account of life in both worlds by a young Indian woman, who not only is charming and beautiful but intelligent as well." Marguerite Brown

+ N Y Times p7 Je 27 '54 700w

"In this memoir, she writes of her turbulent childhood, her inquisitive travels, and the friends she has acquired along the way in the happiest possible combination of high spirits and good sense."

+ New Yorker 30:102 My 29 '54 180w

"It is given to few mortals to lead all their life in the public eye, to become objects of something like adoration to millions of their countrymen, and yet to remain simple, natural, and above all lovable. But the Nehrus have succeeded in doing it, and this delightful book, so warmly human, shows how greatly it was done."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p444 J1 11 '54 550w

Wis Lib Bul 50:178 J1 '54

ST JOHN, PHILIP. Rockets to nowhere. 214p $2 Winston

53-7337

Science fiction for young readers.

Kirkus 22:121 F 15 '54 150w

"Effective suspense-melodrama leads to an unexpected but logical solution, to make one of the best books in the Winston series in well over a year." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 23 '54 100w

"The ending is illogical and demonstrates that Mr. St. John, an old hand at science fiction, has made much ado about nothing. His mystery is easily solved." Villiers Gerson

— N Y Times p16 Ag 8 '54 80w

ST JOHN, ROBERT. Through Malan's Africa. 317p $3.95 Doubleday

301.451 South Africa—Race question

54-7662

A report on the author's trip thru the Union of South Africa in 1953. Mr St John, a journalist and writer, describes what he heard and saw with some bitterness. Index.

ST JOHN, ROBERT—Continued

Booklist 50:369; 412 Je 1 '54; J1 1 '54

Bookmark 14:6 O '54

Christian Century 71:1467 D 1 '54 420w

"In view of the attention which South Africa has been receiving, it is not surprising if there is little new in this latest volume of Robert St. John. This is in no sense a criticism of the author, for once again he has done a careful, kindly, readable job of reporting. Rather it is a compliment to the thoroughness of his predecessors." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 J1 '54 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 Ag '54

"This is a disturbing but revealing book."

+ Kirkus 22:303 My 1 '54 200w

"A bit choppy, but otherwise well-written. Highly recommended for general reader, for author is concerned with people not institutions." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 79:1224 Je 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by M. J. Herskovits

Nation 179:154 Ag 21 '54 230w

"South Africa's racial problem is so complex that visiting writers seldom succeed in doing it full justice. Mr. St. John makes a brave try. He scans Malan's multi-racial world with an observant eye and a ready notebook. . . . An assiduous note-taker, he has filled out his picture of the human side of South Africa with much colorful detail and challenging comment."

A. T. Steele

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 8 '54 700w

"What sets this book apart is its below-the-surface analyses and the variety of experiences it records. South Africans who read it may (and probably will) disagree with its generally liberal tone, but they will certainly concede its authenticity." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p3 J1 11 '54 650w

"An instructive book, written by a man of good will whose good instincts are reinforced at every turn by refreshing good sense."

+ New Yorker 30:75 J1 17 '54 200w

Reviewed by G. A. Barker

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 8 '54 550w

"Reading a book so packed with documented descriptions of inequality, one can feel Mr. St. John's strong sympathy for the underdog. . . . Revealing, though not perhaps completely, are conversations he records with Africans (some unidentified at their request) and others. He writes by name of many more. He met and spoke to the quiet, earnest, unassuming Alan Paton, who has devoted his earnings from 'Cry, the Beloved Country' to helping the Negroes he portrayed so well. One of his most impressive interviews was with Manilal Gandhi and wife." Emory Ross

+ Sat R 37:10 J1 10 '54 1300w

Springf'd Republican p12D J1 18 '54 180w

Wis Lib Bul 50:202 O '54

SAINT-PAULIEN, Bulls of San Isidro; adapted from the French by Herma Briffault. 298p $3.75 Farrar, Straus

54-7969

"Present day Spain is the setting of this novel which concerns the San Isidros, an aristocratic family. There are Dona Ana, her son Don Manuel who breeds fine bulls, his spoiled wife, and their children: Silvano, Carmen, and Dulce. The first section of the novel is concerned with the Civil War. . . . The second section takes place in the 1950's and features Dulce who has fallen in love with a bullfighter Diego." Library J

"The whole complex, contradictory panorama of Spain's Civil War provides background for a story of the San Isidro family. . . . The final episode, which the title suggests, doesn't really mesh in with the major part of the story, unless one writes into it a symbolic significance for Spain. But the whole has somehow more appeal for the Anglo-Saxon market, than most of the contemporary writing from Spain."

+ Kirkus 22:316 My 15 '54 270w

"For medium and large public library collections." W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1225 Je 15 '54 140w

"The author has his prejudices: he tells only one side of the story of the civil war; he appears to worship medieval romanticism; and there is a feeling one gets that despite knowing them, he dislikes the Spanish whether of high or low degree. But he knows bullfighting and he is the sort of author whom the reader finds it hard to put down."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 J1 25 '54 380w

"The rugged virtues of the modern Spaniard, and the bitter intransigence that will always isolate him from his fellow-Europeans, is stated rather than explained in this awkward, sincere, and wholly unconvincing novel." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p21 Je 27 '54 350w

"The book remains strictly capa y espada stuff, and as such should be fine for intense vicarious living in the hammock." Laurent LeSage

+ Sat R 37:14 J1 31 '54 550w

SAINT-PIERRE, MICHEL DE. Bernadette and Lourdes; tr. from the French by Edward Fitzgerald. 267p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Soubirous, Bernadette, Saint. Lourdes 54-7310

Translation of a French version of the life of Bernadette, highly endorsed by church authorities.

"Highly competent judges ranked the French original of this book as a study of exceptional value on a subject that has occasioned the writing of many volumes. . . . Fortunately the translator has been able to reproduce the fine qualities of the original."

+ Cath World 179:vi S '54 50w

"This is of course a Catholic interpretation of the remarkable personality of Bernadette and the still more remarkable events which have taken place at Lourdes. But it is a non-controversial account of this striking phenomenon, with the essential facts presented within a brief compass. Recommended for Catholic readers and non-Catholics who are interested in the official Catholic interpretation."

+ Kirkus 22:188 Mr 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p21 Ag 15 '54 30w

SALVADORI, MARIO GEORGE, and SCHWARZ, RALPH J. Differential equations in engineering problems. 432p $8.65 Prentice-Hall

517.38 Differential equations 54-695

"Written by two engineering professors at Columbia University and designed to teach the use of differential equations in any field of engineering. Previous courses in calculus and college algebra are essential." Library J

Library J 79:920 My 15 '54 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:24 Mr '54

SALVEMINI, GAETANO. French revolution, 1788-1792; tr. from the Italian by I. M. Rawson. 343p $5 Holt

944.04 France—History—Revolution 54-10529

"This book was first published in Italy in 1905. Since then it has run through many new editions, and has come to be regarded as a classic in its field. . . . It may seem strange that a work so well known on the continent should not have been made available to English readers long ago. The explanation lies in part in the fact that the author, an exile for over twenty years from his own country and actively engaged in the struggle against Fascism, as well as in writing a number of works on modern politics, had no time to give his study of the great Revolution a further revision in the light of recent historical research, and was unwilling to allow it to appear in English before this had been done. The present version has been made from a text carefully revised by the author. It differs in a number of ways from the latest Italian edition (1949) and contains many minor emendations as well as new material." (Translator's note) Index.

Booklist 51:172 D 15 '54

"It is a lively and penetrating analysis that has been praised by both Mathiez and Aulard and which will be a highly welcome addition to the general books in English on the French Revolution, especially useful to the college student and the general reader. The translation has been very well done so that the book comes to us in good readable English." R. M. Saunders

+ Canadian Hist R 35:262 S '54 230w

"At first sight there is something odd in now translating a book on the French Revolution which is nearly fifty years old. True, Professor Salvemini issued a revised edition as late as 1949 and has further revised this translation, but the difficulty remains. This is a book written from another age, between us and 1907 what a gulf lies! . . . Yet the decision to publish this English translation is fully justified. For the great merit of this book is its sagacity--and sagacity keeps." D. W. Brogan

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 2 '54 490w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman
Nation 179:340 O 16 '54 60w

"Though Professor Salvemini wrote his history in 1907, he has revised it steadily; and there is not much wrong with the scholarship by present-day standards. The translation is admirable. Anyone starting to read about the French Revolution for the first time would do very well with this book. But such readers are rare. . . . The judgments, though original enough in 1907, are by now conventional; and some of them would be challenged by present scholars. There is too much about the bourgeoisie, and not enough about the revolution of the nobility."

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:138 Ja 20 '54 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 14 '54 70w

"The first English translation of what has long been considered a classic in Europe. . . . It is easy to see why the work has been held in such esteem abroad."

+ New Yorker 30:185 O 9 '54 180w

"The drama of the French Revolution remains, not in scenes of sensation but in the spectacle of a nation finding itself, through all the excesses and mistakes of which it was guilty groping ultimately towards ideals of liberty and equality. The historian who could not produce from these ingredients an absorbing narrative would be incompetent to engage in his craft. It is because Professor Salvemini does more than this, because he lays bare some of the passions and dreams on which the Revolution was built that his book is worth the attention of anyone who cares to read of an ideal translated into abrupt and violent action." Philip Sandeman

+ Spec p158 F 5 '54 900w

"Professor Salvemini's work is backed by a very human understanding of the effort the Revolution involved and he is quick to appreciate moments of idealism and disinterestedness, even where they are dwarfed by more material motives. What above all makes his book particularly interesting is that he clearly does not consider the French Revolution merely as a detached subject for historical study, but as a period very closely linked with the present day, from which we can learn much that will guide us in our own problems."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p151 Mr 5 '54 1050w

SALVEMINI, GAETANO. Prelude to World war II [tr. by Mrs Hélène Cantarella]. 519p $7.50 Doubleday

940.51 Europe—Politics. Italy—Foreign relations. World war, 1939-1945—Causes

53-13510

A survey of international relations in Europe between the two World wars, emphasizing the role played by Italy between Mussolini's seizure of Corfu in 1923 and the attack on Ethiopia in 1935. The author is an Italian historian who after years of exile is again teaching in the University of Florence.

"Unfortunately this was written some years ago and was not revised before publication to include materials which have recently become available. We cannot, however, gainsay the fact that it contains the most searching analysis of Mussolini's diplomacy in English. Moreover, it throws much light on the general diplomatic muddle between the wars." Robert Ergang

Am Hist R 59:973 Jl '54 300w

"An extremely able, witty, provocative, even needling analysis, based on an industrious combing of available sources, containing much that is undoubtedly true, full of original judgments, though rehashing much that has been said before by Feis and Schuman. While any work of so distinguished an historian must command respect, it is too insecurely based to be accepted as revisionist history." R. A. Spencer

+ Canadian Forum 34:94 Jl '54 450w

Reviewed by H. J. Morgenthau
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 10 '54 370w

"Here is a book seething with an exile's implacable anger. Even the turn of fortune which made possible Professor Salvemini's return to Italy has not softened him. His return, however, has diverted the course of his wrath to those foreign governments and shapers of foreign public opinion who helped to maintain Mussolini in power and the Italian people in slavery. Prelude to World War II, then, is a work of national piety, a vindication of Salvemini's countrymen against their liberators, particularly the British." M. A. Fitzsimons

Commonweal 60:102 Ap 30 '54 500w

Foreign Affairs 32:669 Jl '54 60w

"For students of contemporary history, this is a must."

+ Kirkus 21:776 D 1 '53 150w

"One does not have to agree with Mr. Salvemini's conclusions in order to enjoy this work which is a valuable contribution to history. Recommended." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 79:144 Ja 15 '54 110w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor
Manchester Guardian p4 S 25 '53 420w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman
Nation 178:180 F 27 '54 850w

Reviewed by R. E. Osgood
New Repub 130:21 Mr 15 '54 900w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman
New Statesman & Nation 47:169 F 6 '54 370w

"As might be expected, the work is rather disjointed. Moreover, it seems to have been completed four and a half years ago, and no attempt has been made to introduce needed modifications (especially in the final chapters) on the basis of materials which have become available in the period between its completion and its publication. These deficiencies are offset to some extent by the literary brilliance, the incisive wit and the argumentative skill which mark every part of the volume and make it like all of Salvemini's work, a pleasure to read." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 17 '54 900w

"The book shows all the qualities which have endeared Salvemini to so many students and readers. It combines high moral purpose and love of mankind with a pithy style." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 10 '54 700w
New Yorker 30:130 Mr 27 '54 200w

Reviewed by René Albrecht-Carrié
Pol Sci Q 69:274 Je '54 600w

SALVEMINI, GAETANO—Continued

"Professor Salvemini's long and detailed work proves that he knows how to harness these resources to the historian's purpose." Quincy Howe

+ Sat R 37:15 F ■ '53 800w

"Two dangerous fallacies appear to lurk behind Professor Salvemini's logic... Scholars will be grateful to Professor Salvemini for the evidence he provides concerning certain points. On the other hand, they will regret the unfortunate slip which refers to Memel as annexed to Estonia instead of Lithuania. Most of all they will regret the delay in the publication of this book in English. For it was written at least four years ago. Now we are within sight of the publication of the British, Italian and German Foreign Office archives covering the period of the Ethiopian War. Very soon we should be able to judge very much better whether British foreign policy, was Machiavellian or muddled at that time." + — Times [London] Lit Sup p722 N 13 '53 700w

"As Professor Salvemini admits, many of the pertinent documents are still inaccessible and, as a consequence, truth must be arrived at by indirection. In this volume, however, the hand of a skillful and scholarly analyst has been at work. This study is of fundamental importance."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:164 Je '54 220w

SAMACHSON, JOSEPH (WILLIAM MORRISON, pseud). Mel Oliver and Space Rover on Mars. 191p $2.50 Gnome press

Science fiction for young readers.

Kirkus 22:235 Ap 1 '54 70w

"Recommended for ages 12-16." L. T. Bulman + Library J 79:1327 Jl '54 70w

"Mr. Morrison's fantastic creatures are not as brilliantly devised as are Robert Heinlein's flat cats and bouncers, and his mystery is pretty obvious. Nevertheless, there is something very diverting about these new-fangled creatures carrying on the traditions of the old-fashioned circus in outer space." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 8 '54 160w

SANDBURG, CARL. Abraham Lincoln: The prairie years and The war years. 1v ed 762p il maps $7.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 54-9720

"This one-volume biography of approximately 800 pages is drawn from the author's well-known work in six volumes. Information that has been revealed in the intervening years has been taken into account. The shorter work concentrates on Lincoln and retains the appreciative approach of the larger work." Booklist

Booklist 51:30; 61 S 15 '54; O 1 '54

Reviewed by R. P. Basler

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 10 '54 500w

"Is this book of Sandburg's a work of literature? It tends to be loose, rambling, diffuse. It does not matter here. Carl Sandburg was possessed by Lincoln, and in the result he has created not so much a book as a man. You forget that you are reading a book, so obsessed are you with the man he has written about in this long record, from which little is omitted. The author seems to have followed Saint John's counsel: 'Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.' And from these fragments he has wrought a heroic figure which none should neglect, a figure of integrity, of wholeness." John Cournos

+ Commonweal 61:43 O 15 '54 1700w

Kirkus 22:520 Ag 1 '54 210w

"Highly recommended." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:1587 S 15 '54 80w

"In either book, the short one or the long one, we have a Lincoln whom no other man than Carl Sandburg could have given us, and even the short one gives us that man in abundance. Nor do we finally complain of the discrepancy between Lincoln's mathematical imagination and Mr. Sandburg's poetic one. If we waited until Lincoln's double wrote his biography we would wait forever. Meanwhile we have this figure: unique and vast, and by some means we cannot measure, clear." Mark Van Doren

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 O 10 '54 1100w

"Our American poet, historian, minnesinger and goat-breeder, Carl Sandburg, has taken the time to cut his six volumes on Lincoln, 'The Prairie Years' and 'The War Years,' down to one volume, which contains much, but obviously not all of the grandeur of the originals. It is, of course, a fine and incalculably valuable book and those who never got around to reading the full work should be deeply grateful for its publication and for all the labor and the pain that Mr. Sandburg must have put into its preparation." R. E. Sherwood

+ N Y Times p10 O 10 '54 1150w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 19 '54 450w

"A biography that as a whole is superior to the longer life. This one volume has a form which the six lacked. It is a tighter and tidier book. It retains the superb qualities of the original work without the faults of the latter." T. H. Williams

+ Sat R 37:16 N 13 '54 900w

SANDERS, CHARLES RICHARD. Strachey family, 1588-1932; their writings and literary associations. 337p il $6 Duke univ. press

929.2 Strachey family 53-8266

"This work is a history of the Stracheys of Sutton Court in Somerset, who have displayed a rich measure of talent in government and literature, from William Strachey of Shakespeare's day to the Hon. John Strachey, prominent in the Labor Party in present-day England. Dr. Sanders concentrates quite understandably on the most distinguished writers produced by the family, notably William Strachey, author of The True Repertory, St. Loe Strachey, the influential editor of the Spectator from 1898 to 1925, and Lytton Strachey. Most of the other members of the family often put pen to paper too, however, Dr. Sanders notes; this was and is a writing family." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Dr. Sanders has contrived an informing book, but it is a dull one, and all the little homely touches cannot make it otherwise." C. F. Mullett

+ Am Hist R 59:687 Ap '54 200w

New Statesman ■ Nation 46:828 D 26 '53 250w

Reviewed by Richard Hughes

Spec p156 F 5 '54 2150w

"Inevitably a little loose-jointed, the book presents a clear picture of the many-faceted life of a versatile, gifted, yet in a way typical English family of the upper class."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:12 Mr '54 240w

SANDERS, HERBERT H. Sunset ceramics book. (Sunset craft bk) 96p il pa $1.75 Lane pub. co.

738.3 Pottery 53-10326

"Dr. Sanders, professor of ceramic art at San Jose State College, has presented a compact introduction to ceramic processes. . . . Chapters include Ceramics ■ a Hobby, Tools and Materials, Preliminary Steps, The Pinch Method, Building with Coils, Building with Slabs, Ceramic Jewelry, Decorative Processes, Wheel Built Forms, Cast Forms, and Firing the Kiln." School Arts

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 25 '53 80w

"More than any other Sunset book, this one is illustrated with 'process-photographs' showing the hands in position and at work in every step of ceramic making."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 24 '54 150w

"Written in simple language which the novice can understand, this excellently illustrated book will be of great value to student, teacher, and hobbyist. . . Although its emphasis on design is largely through the well-chosen illustrations, this beautifully-designed book will be a wholesome influence and we are glad to recommend it to our readers." D. K. W.

+ School Arts 53:47 N '53 100w

SANDERS, JACQUIN. Freakshow. 276p $3.50 Little

54-6868

"Bat Fidler joins a carnival; falls in love with a Fish Girl (she has rudimentary arms), quarrels with her brutal husband, and serves a term in a Texas jail for manslaughter. Tough, realistic novel." Library J

"An odyssey which many may find distasteful in its parade of psychological, and physical misfits and in the sordid accoutrements to the plot, but which may attract the market of Nightmare Alley."

Kirkus 22:133 F 15 '54 110w

"Comparatively brief, this story—or scenario—nevertheless gives full value for the admission price." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:772 Ap 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Edme Seton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 27 '54 270w

"Jacquin Sanders, whose first novel this is, writes knowledgeably and powerfully of carnival life and sensitivity of carnival people. Mr. Sanders will make you sweat." Rex Lardner

+ N Y Times p4 My 23 '54 240w

"Mr. Sanders writes carelessly, and so robs his work of a good deal of the effect it might have had, but his people—superficially, at least—are true enough."

New Yorker 30:135 Je 5 '54 70w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 80w

SANDERS, MARGARET WEBB. Year of the Mintie May; il. by Robert Henneberger. 182p $2.50 Putnam

54-9860

Story of a family in a Pennsylvania oil town in the 1870's. The central character is Arny Shull who wants to earn money so he can become a partner in his brother's company. Ages eight to twelve.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 N 14 '54 80w

"An unusually good story. . . The story does not have the usual stereotyped ending but a much more refreshing one; and the reader puts the book down, reluctant to leave this gay, sturdy family whom Mrs. Sanders has brought so vividly to life. Both boys and girls will enjoy getting acquainted with Arny and his brothers and sisters." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:335 O '54 150w

Kirkus 22:537 Ag 15 '54 110w

"Here is a good picture of the life of a small town and an affectionate, well-knit family, with a good deal of action and information about oil drilling. The story fades out at the end, instead of coming to the expected climax, but this is understandable, since it is obviously about things that really happened." Eleanor Clymer

+ — N Y Times p36 N 28 '54 90w

SANDERSON, ROBERT THOMAS. Introduction to chemistry. 542p $5.50 Wiley

540 Chemistry

54-5518

"In this new text, chemistry has been made palatable to the beginning student by the use of simple language and by explaining difficult concepts, such as ionization potentials, at some length. The author has not resorted to the usual device of including considerable descriptive material on the applications of chemistry. The book reads so easily that bright young people, even those who are still in high school, will be able to get a good deal out of it without the benefit of an instructor. The author is Professor of Inorganic Chemistry at the University of Iowa." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:1066 Mr 15 '54 20w

"It would seem that this book is particularly well-suited to the non-chemical major, inasmuch as basic theory and principles are interestingly and lucidly treated and because undue stress is not placed on the mathematical aspects of the subject. Accompanied by a good problem manual it may be suitable for chemistry majors and engineers, although some will incline to the view that it is not sufficiently inclusive for this purpose." M. L. Branin

+ Chem Eng 61:334 S '54 6500w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:4 Ja '54

SANDERSON, WILLIAM ELWOOD. Horses are for warriors; il. by Pers Crowell. 183p $3.50 Caxton ptrs.

52-11881

"Before the coming of Lewis and Clark, the most important single event in the history of the Nez Perce Indians—the Nim-i-pu, as they called themselves—was the acquisition of their first horses. In this story of courage, skill, and cunning of two young Nez Perce warriors, Lame Wolf and his companion, Little Elk, the full impact of the advent of the new and strange animals on the tribal life is described." Publisher's note

"Story is sluggish but not without its value as solid historical background."

Kirkus 22:115 F 15 '54 120w

"Details of training the horses will appeal to horse story fans, and the exciting skirmish with the Shoshones will thrill those eager for adventure in grades 5-7. Pers Crowell's illustrations add to the book. Useful if this type of story is needed." A. B. Martin

+ Library J 79:992 My 15 '54 70w

"A sound knowledge of the history and customs of the Nez Perce Indians and a familiarity with and love of the Oregon country they inhabited give authority to this exciting story of a crippled warrior and his mastery of the tribe's first horses. . . There is enough action here to please the most avid Wild West fan." A. O'B. M.

+ Sat R 37:31 Jl 24 '54 120w

SANDLANDS, GILLIAN. 101 salads for the gourmet. 101p il $3.50 Harcourt

641.83 Salads

54-6392

Recipes for 101 salads which are designed to go with indicated entrées. Includes recipes for some of the entrées.

Booklist 51:34 S 15 '54

+ Kirkus 22:574 Ag 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 79:2453 D 15 '54 30w

"Having been brought up in the proper salad tradition—her grandfather was maitre d'hôtel at Fovot's in Paris—Miss Sandlands knows what she is talking about when she lays down the law on what should and should not be done with the classic ingredients for a good salad: greens, herbs, vegetables, oils, vinegars and seasonings." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p41 O 17 '54 90w

SANDMAN, HOWARD E. Who's afraid of thunder? the story of the weather; with drawings by Peter White. (World we live in ser) 61p $2 Sterling

551.55 Thunder storms—Juvenile literature. Meteorology—Juvenile literature 53-11594

This is the story of how Peter Sheldon, nine years old, learns not to be afraid of thunder. On a visit to the airport, Peter finds out from the Weatherman all about clouds, rain, lightning and thunder.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 12 '53 20w

Kirkus 21:486 Ag 1 '53 70w

SANDMAN, H. E.—Continued

"Checked for accuracy by the United States Weather Bureau, this makes a worth-while addition to the shelves of any public or school library. . . Recommended." E. T. Dobbins
 + Library J 78:1436 S 1 '53 40w
 Springf'd Republican p6C O 11 '53 20w

SANDOZ, MARI. Buffalo hunters; the story of the hide men. (American procession ser) 372p il $4.50 Hastings house

978 Bison, American. Frontier and pioneer life—West 54-9884

"In 1867 the total number of buffaloes in the trans-Missouri region was estimated, conservatively, at fifteen million. By the end of the 1880's this figure had shrunk to less than a thousand. The destruction of the great herds is the theme of this book. Buffalo hides were in demand in the U.S. and in Europe, construction workers on the transcontinental railroads required meat, and the Indian tribes depended on the buffalo herds as a source of food and clothing. These factors, together with the wanton slaughter of the herds by sportsmen, nearly caused the buffalo to become extinct." Library J

Booklist 50:442, 51:10 J1 15 '54; S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:7 O '54 20w

Reviewed by V. P. Haas

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 29 '54 550w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 26 '54 420w

"There's superb writing here, but too much text."

+ — Kirkus 22:376 Je 15 '54 170w

"Miss Sandoz knows the West, and whether she is presenting the beauty of the land, the excitement of the hunt, or the tension of an Indian raid, she does it—not sensationally—but with authority and vigor. This second book in the American Procession Series is recommended for all libraries." James Heslin
 + Library J 79:1398 Ag '54 160w

"Miss Sandoz is at her best with the animals when they stampede from prairie fire, freeze in hordes far north or plunge thirst-maddened into water. Because of the nature of facts, this book lacks the crescent unity of the author's narrative of the great Cheyenne flight, but she has brought into focus the materials, written down with power and clarity, of a mighty movement. Lack of an index in any historical work of this validity is an indictment against the publisher." J. F. Dobie
 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 5 '54 950w

"The fate of the Plains Indian was inextricably bound up with the fate of the buffalo; they fell together. This is the story Miss Sandoz has to tell, and she tells it beautifully, forcefully, epically. . . She knows the Great Plains country and loves it—not as a tourist but as a native, well aware of its drawbacks and dangers. A procession of interesting frontier figures, red and white, passes through the narrative, briefly but sharply characterized." W. R. Burnett
 + N Y Times p3 Ag 22 '54 800w

"No one else, wielding quill or typewriter, commands such evocative prose about the Plains as does Miss Sandoz. . . There are fascinating nuggets here for every seeker after Western Americana." W. H. Hutchinson
 + San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 29 '54 380w

"The whole fascinating story is told by Mari Sandoz in 'The Buffalo Hunters,' a brilliant, dioramic narrative, as vast in its scope as the far-flung Great Plains. . . Graphic and exciting as it is, however, her book cannot be considered a definitive history of the American buffalo. . . Miss Sandoz is not, of course, trying to supply the need of professional historians, but her book has certain weaknesses, that one like myself cannot help regretting, notably those of lack of cohesiveness and the over-use of imaginative fill-in dialogues." C. C. Rister

+ — Sat R 37:11 Ag 21 '54 1250w

Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 350w

"This vigorous chronicle belongs on every American history shelf."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:207 O '54

SANGER, RICHARD HARLAKENDEN. Arabian peninsula. 295p il $5 Cornell univ. press 953 [915.3] Arabia 54-10945

"Deals with the new Arabia, awakened from a sleep of 12 centuries, and thrust into the middle of the 20th century, largely by oil and the personality of an almost legendary King Ibn Saud. Some historical background, and some description of great accomplishments of Arabian travel and exploration." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"To the general reader, Mr. Sanger's mass of detail may appear formidable. But it is his very competence in assembling facts which will make the author's work an important reference book for the serious student of the Middle East." H. B. Ellis

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 J1 8 '54 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 Ag '54

Foreign Affairs 33:167 O '54 70w

"Readable and interesting. Presents new material only in its description of American assistance to agriculture and American enterprise in development of Arabian oil. Will be useful in libraries needing an up-to-date survey of the changes taking place in the Arabian peninsula proper." J. C. Shipman
 + Library J 79:1314 J1 '54 130w

"The author of this book is an expert on Near Eastern, South Asian and Arabian Peninsula Affairs attached to our Department of State. He writes with the authority of long experience, for he has traveled widely and has known personally many of the leaders who have been responsible for the remaking of Arabia. . . Mr. Sanger writes not only authoritatively but lucidly, informatively and most entertainingly." S. C. Chew
 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 J1 4 '54 1050w

"Mr. Sanger's report could be a first-rate guidebook for adventurous tourists. It searches into every cranny of an exotic world." Hal Lehrman

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 15 '54 750w

"In this book Mr. Sanger appears to have been working against odds, as his public position seems to have inhibited him from expressing his private opinions. Had his personality been allowed to show he might well have produced a latter-day 'Personal Narrative'. Nor could he allow himself to criticize Arab ruling circles or to write about the depths of misery of famished people in the shadow of fabulous wealth. But on balance these obvious drawbacks are outweighed by the merits of his book. . . Mr. Sanger has dug out some delightful pieces of early Americana relating to the Arabian peninsula." Emil Lengyel
 + Sat R 37:13 J1 24 '54 800w

"In treating of the new Arabia Mr. Sanger presents the American penetration, and the achievements of western technique, against a haphazard background of history, politics and gossip. The resulting picture wants perspective and proportion."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p744 N 19 '54 360w

Reviewed by E. A. Speiser

Yale R n s 44:143 autumn '54 130w

SANSOM, WILLIAM. Bed of roses. 255p $3.50 Harcourt 54-6386

The action is set against a background of Gibraltar and Spain. An English girl, Louise Abbott, trying to get away from a prolonged affair with an English film actor, goes to Spain to forget him. But he follows her, and the results are not pleasant for Louise or others, until she decides to make up with Guy.

"William Sansom, one of the most gifted of contemporary English novelists, has written a fine, dramatic, sometimes funny story which has to do with love. . . The Spanish background is a vividly felt presence in the novel, and the descriptions of bullfighting are superb."

+ Atlantic 193:84 My '54 130w

Booklist 50:359 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My ■ '54 270w

"A romance, which is compounded of caprice, and malice, and handled with the civilized expertise of his earlier The Face of Innocence."

Kirkus 22:162 Mr 1 '54 200w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 20 '54 330w

"The descriptive passages apart, Mr. Sansom doesn't seem to have tried very hard this time; the characterisation is perfunctory; and one is left in the end whistling with dismay at the discrepancy between Mr. Sansom's talent and what on this occasion he has done with it."

Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:137 Ja 30 '54 240w

Reviewed by Gouverneur Paulding

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 23 '54 400w

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

N Y Times p4 My 2 '54 420w

"An ugly, useless, and quite mechanical tale."

+ New Yorker 30:119 My 1 '54 60w

Reviewed by Stevie Smith

+ Spec p108 Ja 22 '54 190w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 130w

"If Mr. Sansom intended to teach the lesson that there is an unpleasant side to all of us which plays no small part in the mixed motives of human attraction, he has got his emphasis wrong, and his story reads as the triumph of egoism and exhibitionism over all instinctive as well as conventional standards of decency. Perhaps he intends it as a warning, but if so it is little needed, since it is only in a novel that one would have the patience to put up with so unpleasant a character as Guy for so long a time."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p69 Ja 29 '54 450w

SANSOM, WILLIAM. Something terrible, something lovely. 231p $3.50 Harcourt

54-9721

A collection of short stories. "In the title story, two school children experience all the 'terrible lovely' excitement of a teasing tattle-tale scrawled on a wall. A boy is taunted to undertake an uneasy climb up a high ladder and impaled there. A man's Little Fears are traced back to his childhood but never put to rest. A strangler finds a temporary sanctuary with a victim, but not from himself. Sister Margherita's final discipline is an impassive death as she is walled up in The Little Room." (Kirkus)

Booklist 51:110 N 1 '54

"Several of the stories in Something Terrible, Something Lovely are vivid and tense. All of them reveal Mr. Sansom's descriptive energy. . . Yet Mr. Sansom occasionally appears to be encumbered by his own urge to describe. Some of his sentences are strained and dense; some expository statements come at moments of suspense—nearly always an effective trick, but the effect is often annoyance—or simply awkward in places." Edwin Kennebeck

+ Commonweal 61:197 N 19 '54 650w

"A collection of short stories has a highly distilled sense of menace, if none of the wanton malice of A Bed of Roses, exercises its slow fascination of imminent disaster whether from natural causes or phantom vagaries."

Kirkus 22:687 O 1 '54 180w

"Sometimes Mr. Sansom is less successful; a few of these stories seem clever, but brittle, though they are always possessed of professional finish. Indeed, one has the feeling that Mr. Sansom relies sometimes on sheer technique to carry him forward from haphazard beginnings. But the cardinal weakness of these technically fine stories is a matter that goes beyond the craft of writing. Instead, it is a matter of feeling, of the writer's sympathy or enmity for the human beings with whom he deals. Mr. Sansom all too often seems merely indifferent to these raw materials of his art; interested, of course, but clinical." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 17 '54 420w

"Mr. Sansom is a writer above and outside the ordinary; he has wit, intelligence, a flair for unhackneyed and telling twists of language, and a striking aptitude for evoking landscape and atmosphere. He is inventive and he is daring. All this leads to the expectation, from a writer of such gifts, that one further virtue will emerge. . . The particular virtue which often seems so close, in reading Mr. Sansom, and yet so far, is the ability, or care, to make his people live, as his landscapes do—or, perhaps, to let them live, for it may be his unrelenting manipulating that strangles the breath out of them. The expectation and the apprehension alike hang on this." Alice Morris

+ N Y Times p5 O 10 '54 500w

New Yorker 30:183 O 9 '54 50w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:56 D 4 '54 250w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 150w

SANTOVENIA Y ECHAIDE, EMETERIO SANTIAGO. Lincoln in Martí; a Cuban view of Abraham Lincoln; tr. by Donald F. Fogelquist; with an introd. by Manuel Pedro González. 75p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham, Martí, José

53-13458

José Martí was the leader of the fight for Cuban independence. In this essay his life and work are compared to the life and work of Abraham Lincoln, and the author discusses the lifelong influence of Lincoln on the Cuban liberator. No index.

Booklist 50:258 Mr 1 '54

"The writings of Martí and Santovenia contain a number of factual errors ■■ to Lincoln. But these are unimportant in comparison with their intuitively accurate appreciation and understanding of Lincoln." R. G. Lindstrom

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 F 11 '54 650w

SAROS, THEODORE A. Christmas lighting and decorating; outdoors and indoors. 155p il $1.95 Van Nostrand

394.26 Christmas decorations 54-11408

How-to instructions and suggestions including use of electric lighting; figures and cut-outs for outdoor display; paper, metal and natural plant ornaments for outdoor and indoor decorating.

Booklist 51:76 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:32 N '54 20w

"Lighting and decorating the home for the Christmas season has been covered often in newspapers and magazines, but this is the first time to our knowledge that such a wealth of suggestions has been available in one volume." Anne Douglas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 21 '54 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p40 D '54

Kirkus 22:472 Jl 15 '54 50w

"Recommended." Julia Sabine

+ Library J 79:2213 N 15 '54 120w

"One of the brightest little books to appear this Christmas." John Haverstick

+ Sat R 37:31 D 4 '54 50w

SARTON, MAY. Land of silence, and other poems. 99p $2.50 Rinehart

811

53-7721

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by Howard Nemerov
Atlantic 194:67 S '54 220w

"On May Sarton's book of poems I must file a dissenting report. . . The sort of poetry that brushes past the fact to assert a pregenerated emotion is precisely 'self-expression.' It is, I must believe, distinct from and inferior to the sort of poetry that generates its emotion in its own movement." John Ciardi

— Nation 178:184 F 27 '54 240w

"The collection is too long, and in part rather conventionally 'literary,' but at least a dozen poems exhibit her mature power of recognizing the heart of the matter and of expressing it in memorable terms." Louise Bogan

+ — New Yorker 30:115 F 27 '54 60w

"She is mistress of the neatly turned concluding line, which may be described as both her strength and her weakness. Her skill and perception sometimes just save her from banality; and one observes that her fluency can become a fault when adjectives overflow. Is it perhaps her intellectualism (or ours!) that makes one over-conscious at times of her conscious art?" G. P. Meyer

+ — Sat R 37:19 Ja 16 '54 180w

"The best of May Sarton's poems begin with illuminating perceptions or feelings, but her thin, clear notes are difficult to sustain, and even more difficult to sustain with gathering richness. The initial lines, in many instances intensely felt and musically right, are relatively weak in their subsequent workings out. The endings have a tendency to become facile summaries or assertions, in some places couched in the form of images, in others, in the form of more unconvincing little turns. Apparently feeling a lack in herself, a failure of final power, the poet has striven to bring to bear upon her versification all the resources she can master in the way of technique, self-discipline, tonal consistency, and intellectual responsibility."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:55 Mr '54 250w

SATURDAY EVENING POST (periodical).

Post treasury; selected from the complete files by Roger Butterfield and the editors of the Post. 554p il $7.50 Simon & Schuster

810.8 American literature—Collections

54-8651

"The book starts with an exhibition of the Post's cover pages from 1899 to 1951: 66 designs in their native tints or colors. Its reading matter—35 stories, 25 articles, and 11 poems—is introduced with a salute to the publication's ancestral genius—three brief and engaging items from the pen of a printer named Franklin, editor of the Pennsylvania Gazette, written in 1730 and 1731. Then comes a gem of the Post's literary crown, 'The Black Cat,' by Edgar Allan Poe. A Civil war item, dated April 22, 1865, gave the official bulletins on the assassination of President Lincoln and the attack on Secretary of State Seward. The selections that form most of the book, arranged in chronological order, survey the magazine that leaped from obscurity into national attention and circulation when George Horace Lorimer became its editor in 1899." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 51:148 D 1 '54

Reviewed by Charles Collins

Chicago Sunday Tribune p1 N 14 '54
550w

Kirkus 22:619 S 1 '54 160w

"The Treasury" is more than an anthology of literary contributions that go back more than half a century in time. It is a generous, richly loaded slice of Americana as documented in the pages of a family publication. Equally interesting with the excellent thirty-five short stories, the twenty-five articles, the eleven poems are the colored reproductions of seventy

'Post' covers and the section devoted to facsimiles of advertisements that go back to the turn of the century." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 21 '54
600w

"Those who are inclined to look down their noses at The Saturday Evening Post because it is popular ought to take a look at this anthology. True, the book represents what is probably the upper one-fourth of the Post's contents: but any weekly miscellany which can maintain for more than half a century such a standard of readable excellence for its upper one-fourth deserves the thanks of the nation." F. L. Mott

+ N Y Times p5 O 31 '54 800w

Reviewed by D. A. Pitt

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 28 '54
400w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:23 D 4 '54 40w

SAUDEE, JACQUES DE BIVORT DE LA. See Bivort de la Saudée, J. de

SAUER, JULIA LINA. Mike's house; il. by Don Freeman. 31p $2.50 Viking

54-8562

Picture-story book about Robert, a small boy who likes the story hour at the Public Library, but even more he likes one particular book. The story describes Robert's adventures on a snowy morning when he got lost. Ages four to six.

Booklist 50:303 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:162 Ap '54 20w

"A rollicking tale by an author who seems to understand just how important some things can be to a small boy. It's a lovely book." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 25 '54
130w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13 '54
40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"A real and spontaneous little story that will be loved especially by the adventurous preschool child who, like its young hero, makes his way in all kinds of weather to the library Picture Book Hour." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:92 Ap '54 100w

"A catchy story for a warm laugh, fetchingly illustrated by Don Freeman."

+ Kirkus 22:111 F 15 '54 80w

"Delightful picture story." V. A. Russell

+ Library J 79:781 Ap 15 '54 70w

"Any public library which has, as yet, no picture book hour for pre-readers will have to start one after this delightful picture book becomes well known." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 14
'54 230w

"The humor and understanding of the text are perfectly complemented by Don Freeman's vigorous illustrations." Eugenia Garson

+ N Y Times p28 My 9 '54 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 16
'54 100w

Sat R 37:26 Ap 17 '54 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:140 My '54

SAUERBRUCH, FERDINAND. Master surgeon; tr. by Fernand G. Renier and Anne Cliff [Eng title: Surgeon's life]. 277p $3.50 Crowell

B or 92 Surgeons—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-9772

"The autobiography of a distinguished German surgeon whose achievements in and out of medicine will entertain the general reader as well as members of his profession. Humble beginnings and lack of capital were small handicaps to a young man with an irrepressible vitality and a knack of making friends; although he often scandalized his more orthodox colleagues, he had a way of making medical history that made critics eat their words, and attracted patients ranging from the penniless to a Rothschild, and from nobodies to kings, generals, and even Hitler." Booklist

Booklist 51:2; 130 S 1 '54; N 15 '54

"Dr. Sauerbruch, a German, makes a fine addition to what he calls 'narrative medicine' in his autobiography for he has some excellent tales to spin and some exciting contributions to record."

+ Kirkus 22:563 Ag 15 '54 170w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 N 7 '54 90w

"'Master Surgeon', already a best seller on the Continent, is a fascinating document," F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p35 O 17 '54 450w

"The English version of Dr. Sauerbruch's memoirs is an unusually good translation and is therefore agreeable to read; further, the subject is interesting medically, humanly and historically."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 1 '54 500w

SAUNDERS, ARETAS ANDREWS. Lives of wild birds; drawings by Dominick D'Ostilio. 256p $3.50 Doubleday

598.2 Birds

54-5362

Handbook explaining the ways to study wild birds. It outlines what the bird watcher should look for, and gives information on identification by color, markings, size, shape, habits, etc. Bibliography. List of species. Index.

Booklist 50:273 Mr 15 '54

"This book was written primarily for confirmed bird watchers who would like to broaden their hobby by making it useful as well as enjoyable. However, it goes much farther than that and could make bird watchers of readers who never suspected they were vulnerable to that particular virus." John Bayless

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 14 '53 250w

Kirkus 21:780 D 1 '53 110w

Reviewed by E. M. Cole

Library J 79:203 F 1 '54 140w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 7 '54 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 11 '54 60w

Reviewed by John Pfeiffer

+ Sat R 37:25 Je 26 '54 140w

SAVAGE, GEORGE. Art and antique restorers' handbook; a dictionary of materials and processes used in the restoration and preservation of all kinds of works of art. 140p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

708.04 Art objects—Conservation and restoration 54-3143

"Alphabetically arranged handbook. Records problems met with in both preservation and restoration and the various methods by which these problems have been resolved." Chem & Eng N

Booklist 51:78 O 15 '54

Chem & Eng N 32:2991 Jl 26 '54 20w

"A satisfactory and handy reference work in the field. Recommended for the general library." Paul von Khrum

+ Library J 79:2214 N 15 '54 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:76 S '54

SAVAGE, LEONARD JIMMIE. Foundations of statistics. 294p $6 Wiley

311 Statistics

54-8687

"An important book for specialists in statistics and probability and for advanced college students preparing for these fields. It deals with basic theory and particularly it presents a theory which the author states is based on a 'personalistic view' of probability.

In the course of presenting his own theory, Mr. Savage illuminates critically other prevalent theories. Most of the discussion is technical and requires some prior initiation in probability, logic, etc." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:2220 N 15 '54 40w

"Essentially, the book is addressed to specialists and to advanced students who are preparing to become specialists. To all such readers, it will undoubtedly prove interesting, to many of them stimulating, and to some indetermination fraction, convincing."

N Y New Tech Bks 39:60 Jl '54

SAVETH, EDWARD NORMAN, ed. Understanding the American past; American history and its interpretation [introd. by Allan Nevins]. 613p $6 Little

973 U.S.—History. Historiography 53-7320

"The editor's introductory essay on 'Historical Understanding in Democratic America' is a sixty-page summary of the history of American history, designed to explain to the lay reader how contemporary standards of historical craftsmanship have evolved. Then follow thirty selections, not from the old masters, but from writers of our own period, most of whom, indeed, are still actively at work and have a future as well as a past. . . All the selections have an unmistakable air of contemporaneity about them. It is the historical scholarship of today, and not of years gone by, that the editor means to feature. To make this crystal clear he prefaces each selection with a few paragraphs calling attention to other recent writers on the same subject, and other recent interpretations." Sat R

Booklist 51:37 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:33 N '54 20w

"The selections are many; the reading is rich."

+ Kirkus 22:377 Je 15 '54 220w

"A useful introduction to American history and historiography." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 79:1830 O 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 D 5 '54 20w

Reviewed by H. F. Graff

+ N Y Times p6 O 3 '54 450w

"Graduate students working for their Ph.Ds will certainly read and commit to memory the introductory essay on historiography; a good many of them and some others, also, will read some of the accompanying selections. Even if the general reader passes this book up, as he is very likely to do, some of what it has to teach may yet percolate down to him, maybe through one of those dreadful 'captive classroom audiences' if he is young enough to be of student age, or through the admonitions of preachers, publicists, and politicians if he is not." J. D. Hicks

+ Sat R 37:14 S 25 '54 1000w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 190w

SAWYER, RUTH (MRS A. C. DURAND). Cottage for Betsy; pictures by Vera Bock. 120p $2.50 Harper

54-8988

"Tells of a young queen and her prince consort who, pressed by state duties, almost lose each other until a prime minister devises a plan that saves their love." Sat R

Chicago Sunday Tribune p28 N 14 '54 130w

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 30w

"Meeting a down-to-earth situation with a fairy-tale kind of solution, this skillful storyteller solves the problem of an over-worked young queen and her neglected prince consort who are sad because they cannot be themselves." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:35 O '54 160w

SAWYER, RUTH—Continued

"There's an attempt at homey charm, against an unmistakably English setting, and the fey drawings by Vera Bock complete the make-believe. A 'let's pretend we're king and queen on holiday' story."

Kirkus 22:381 J1 1 '54 170w

"We appreciate Mrs. Sawyer's skillful mingling of morals about regal and village happiness, but for us, the humor does not 'come off.' We are too close to the real life of a real Elizabeth; we know too much about the kinds of fun she likes, and how she had her babies without the help of a 'fairy-tale' cottage."

L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p30 N 14 '54 320w

"The old theme of royalty in disguise is illuminated by Ruth Sawyer's art as a story teller. Her sense of fun sparkles throughout this unusual tale, and the lyrics woven into the story are gay and lilting." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times pt2 p30 N 14 '54 180w

"A pretty fantasy, this, spun by the experienced hand of a gifted and well-known storyteller. . . Vera Bock's black-and-white drawings are as gay and light-hearted as the fairy-tale itself." E. S. R.

+ Sat R 37:74 N 13 '54 80w

SCALAPINO, ROBERT ANTHONY. Democracy and the party movement in prewar Japan; the failure of the first attempt. 471p $6.50 Univ. of Calif. press

329.952 Political parties—Japan. Japan—Politics and government 53-10608

This study of "a failure" has been attempted in the hope that "to understand the nature, causes, and results of that failure is to progress toward an understanding of the whole nature of modern Japan, and perhaps to shed some light on the problems of all late-developing societies." (Pref) Glossary of Japanese transliterations. Bibliography includes Japanese and English works. Index.

"Much history and not a little political philosophy are crowded into this book. It is, above all, an excellent synthesis of the political party movement in Japan before World War II." Justin Williams

+ Am Hist R 59:719 Ap '54 360w

"With the end of the Second World War a new generation of scholars brought fresh interests and approaches to the field of Far Eastern studies. Professor Scalapino of the University of California at Berkeley is one of them, and his new book offers impressive testimony to the high achievements of which the best among them are capable." R. E. Ward

+ Ann Am Acad 291:208 Ja '54 400w
Foreign Affairs 32:345 Ja '54 40w

"Mr. Scalapino's book is an important one. It is based on a very wide range of works by Japanese scholars, and it carries the study of modern Japanese politics further than any previous book available in English. That is not to say that it is definitive, of course—as the author would no doubt be the first to agree. More detailed studies, especially of the so-called 'liberal 1920s', will be needed before the full picture can be seen. But Mr. Scalapino has provided a judicious and scholarly survey in the context of which these more detailed studies can be set. In the process he has advanced some hypotheses which deserve, as they should also provoke, the most serious discussion."

W. G. Beasley

+ Pacific Affairs 26:369 D '53 1150w

"In this reviewer's opinion, Dr. Scalapino's treatment of the nature of early party organization and tactics is the core of his volume. It might well be read and reread by the specialist who wants to relate political forms to basic culture; or by the general reader who desires a guide in an outline of Japanese national character, to the confusing and often contradictory unfolding of modern Japanese political history. . . For the specialist, Professor Scalapino has carefully and thoroughly documented his pages and has added a useful glossary of Japanese transliterations, with ideographs, as well as a bibliography of Western and Japanese works, also with ideographs."

A. W. Burks

+ Pol Sci Q 69:285 Je '54 900w

U S Quarterly Bk R 9:404 D '53 270w

SCARFE, LAURENCE. Venice: the lion and the peacock; with drawings by the author. 285p $5 Roy pubs.

945 [914.5] Venice—Description 53-9782

"This is not for the average tourist, rather for one with time to linger and wander away from the orthodox sights. There are bits of history, there are successive recalls of life in past centuries, costume, architecture, often recaptured through descriptions of paintings. There's the city today, and through it the city of yesterday. There is a good deal about churches, but just a special bit about the contents of each. There is a great deal about art and artists, interspersed, never a study of a gallery. Definitely a book that demands a companion volume, complete with maps and diagrams." (Kirkus) Index.

"One of the most fascinating sections of the book describes in detail the careful methods used in the restoration of the mosaics of St. Mark's. We feel that we have been admitted behind the scenes and have learned something of a subject hitherto only very vaguely understood." F. A. Sweet

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ja 24 '54 200w

"A 'plus' travel book for the visitor who has wearied of the conventional travel guides and would capture instead the quality, the flavor of a beloved place."

+ Kirkus 22:21 Ja 1 '54 180w

"A delightful book." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:633 Ap 1 '54 80w

"From adventure to tourism. Laurence Scarfe's Venice is illustrated profusely with stiff, awkward drawings of his own that have no breath of Venetian air in them. The text has paragraphs of Stokesese, 'vignettes', and some embarrassing 'reflections'. Venice, it seems, went to Mr. Scarfe's head, to the detriment of his critical faculties." Andrew Porter

— New Statesman ■ Nation 44:690 D ■ '52 80w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p7 F 7 '54 300w

"Mr. Scarfe is a trained judge of architecture and decoration and his observations on some of the principal buildings are always interesting and often illuminating. His clear description of the work involved in restoring the mosaics in Saint Mark's, for instance, is of particular value, and he pays a well-deserved tribute to the band of artists and craftsmen who devote their lives to the maintenance of the Golden Basilica. . . It is a pity that, possessing such qualifications, Mr. Scarfe should be so indulgent to some of the vulgarities designed to exploit the tourist while giving him the impression that he is getting full value for his money."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 2 '53 850w

SCHACHNER, NATHAN. Founding fathers. 630p $6 Putnam

973.4 U.S.—History—Constitutional period, 1789-1809 54-5497

"Detailed account of the first years of the United States under the Constitution, with emphasis on decisions that affected later developments. Covers the Washington and Adams administrations—their internal and foreign problems, the personalities of the leaders, the influence of public opinion and the press. The Jefferson-Hamilton controversy is inevitably in the foreground, with the author (who has written biographies of both) sparing neither when he feels criticism is called for." Library J

"It has been almost thirty years since the publication of Claude G. Bowers' Jefferson and Hamilton, the last comprehensive survey of the Federalist period. Since then much valuable work has been done on the period, and the contributions of many of its leading figures have been reassessed. The need for a fresh survey was clear and it is this need which Mr. Schachner has sought to meet. He has been only partially successful, for The Founding Fathers is essentially a political narrative, focused on individuals, bare of fresh interpretations, and with an undue stress on the dramatic. It is withal a lively and readable book, one that will attract the general reader and provide take undergraduate with an up-to-date text on the critical years of the American Republic." Louis Morton

+ — Am Hist R 60:124 O '54 700w

"Beginning with the inauguration of Washington in April 1789 and ending with the inauguration of Jefferson in 1801, Mr. Schachner's latest book offers the best modern survey of the politics and diplomacy of the Federalist era." C. P. Nettels

+ Ann Am Acad 295:155 S '54 450w

Booklist 50:295 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:157 Ap '54 20w

"This is all a familiar story often told. Schachner's version is notable only for its fullness and for emphasis on the dramatic." Avery Craven

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 F 28 '54 480w

Reviewed by W. W. Cunningham

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ap 15 '54 650w

"An important book, informative, and for the greater part, extraordinarily good reading." + Kirkus 21:816 D 15 '53 360w

"Useful for public, college and some school libraries. Lively and dramatic enough in parts to interest the general reader as well as the student." Dorothy Sinclair

+ Library J 79:449 Mr 1 '54 140w

"The history of these years, superbly retold by Mr. Schachner, who combines meticulous scholarship with the art of lively narrative, presents some amazing parallels with the present era." Keith Hutchinson

+ Nation 178:364 Ap 24 '54 850w

"Makes good reading, and as a tract for the times serves as a useful Federalist counterbalance to the Jeffersonianism of Mr. Bowers. It may be the astigmatism of the present that has narrowed the vision of one reader, but Mr. Schachner, by overlooking the boldness and self-confidence of both the leaders and the people of the 1790s, fails to make clear some of the amazing contrasts with the 1950s." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p12 Mr 21 '54 600w

"As an up-to-date textbook for an important period of our history, The Founding Fathers may be recommended with the reservations noted. And one more—the matter of style. The author has tried to avoid the tone of a textbook by employing a dramatic, often melodramatic diction. Events related here were exciting enough without this artificial heightening of them, which eventually bores the reader and throws doubt on the reliability of the narrative." L. H. Butterfield

+ — N Y Times p22 My 2 '54 950w

Reviewed by J. H. Powell

Sat R 37:22 Mr 13 '54 1100w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 550w

SCHACHNER, NATHAN. Space lawyer. 222p $2.75 Gnome press

Science fiction.

53-12603

"Better-than-average science fiction."

+ Horn Bk 30:359 O '54 80w

"Despite some crudeness in characterization, the light heart and high spirits of all this jiggery-pokery rank it with Ken Crossen's 'Once Upon a Star' as the year's most amusing sheer space opera; one hopes that Mr. Schachner may take time off from his well reputed historical biographies to give us more of Kerry Dale, in more adult and unhackneyed situations." H. H. Holmes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 F 21 '54 180w

"A part of the solution to every problem comes when the hero turns up spouting some tricky point of interplanetary law. Some of these are unexpected and fairly amusing; but the heroine's father, with his 'dingdratted' and 'snipper-whopper,' still exhales an inescapable aroma of the Saturday Evening Post in the Twenties." Basil Davenport

N Y Times p24 F 14 '54 170w

SCHAEFER, JACK WARNER. The canyon. 132p $2 Houghton; pa 35c Ballantine

53-7076

This legendary story of Cheyenne Indians tells how Little Bear, different from his fellows in body and spirit, lives alone in a hidden canyon. Later he brings a wife there and they have a child, but when the child dies, Little Bear comes to realize that they must return to live with other men.

Booklist 50:169 D 15 '53

Kirkus 21:642 S 15 '53 180w

Reviewed by H. L. Davis

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p26 D 6 '53 750w

"Somewhere between conception and execution, between the possession of a fine style and its mastery, Mr. Schaefer has slipped. Reading his novel one is haunted by the feeling that the author is capable of doing better, that this could have been pulled off and could have been splendid." Oliver La Farge

+ — N Y Times p38 N 8 '53 360w

SCHALIT, MOISHE AARON. Travelled roads; memoirs of a doctor who lived in the land of Israel; with foreword by Julius Stone. 365p il $3.75 Abelard-Schuman

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-10229

"With the publication of 'Travelled Roads,' M. A. Schalit celebrates his eightieth birthday... Four generations of Jews form the background of this memoir. It tells of the author's childhood in pogrom-ridden Russia of the Eighteen Seventies, boyhood among the first pioneers of Turkish Palestine, adventures as a medical student in the Geneva University and trials as a young doctor in an Arab town. Finally, at the end of the century, it tells of his settling in Australia, where he now lives." N Y Times

"Recommended for its historical accuracy of a colorful, bygone age." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:1830 O 1 '54 150w

"This inchoate story lacks design and dramatic emphasis, but it has a devotion to truth that holds the reader to the end. When a man looks into his own heart, searching to know, he touches something universal that is the source of literature." Anzia Yezierska

+ — N Y Times p26 N 21 '54 240w

SCHALLENBERGER, MOSES. Opening of the California trail. See Foote, H. S.

SCHARFF, ROBERT. Improve your home with built-ins. 241p il $4.95 McGraw

684.1 Built in furniture

53-9892

"The purpose of this book is to show the average home handyman how he can improve his home with built-ins." (Pref) Partial contents: Basic construction facts; Remodeling problems and their solution; Living-area improvements; Kitchen-laundry area improvements; Bedroom improvements; Bathroom improvements; Make the most of your attic; Make the most of your basement. Copiously illustrated. Explanatory figures. Index.

Booklist 51:7 S 1 '54

SCHARFF, ROBERT—Continued

"Recommended for any library with a collection of books for home-owners." G. H. Flinn
+ Library J 79:2214 N 15 '54 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:72 S '54

SCHARTUM-HANSEN, INGVID. Ingvid's diary. 142p il $2.50 Lothrop

362.7 Children as authors—Books by children. Children's international summer village, Glendale, Ohio 53-6752

A diary kept by an eleven-year-old girl from Oslo, Norway, who was one of a group of six Norwegians who attended the Children's International Summer Village near Cincinnati. The entries cover from June 1, to July 2, 1950. Children from Norway, Sweden, Germany, France, Austria, England, Denmark, Mexico, and the United States were selected to live together for one month, and Ingvid's diary describes the experiment as it looked to her. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 50:406 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 23 '54
150w

Kirkus 22:266 Ap 15 '54 150w

"Her impressions of television, movies, bubble gum, department stores, American food, etc., are delightfully acute and will surely amuse older children and adults. Recommended for public and school libraries." Gertrude Herman
+ Library J 79:1238 Je 15 '54 90w

"This is called Lothrop's 'Book Find of the Year.' We feel that it will have more interest for adults than for children. For this Ingvid's charm seems to us a bit subtle, and most children under twelve would find her story rather dull. An adult reads between the lines, and waits hopefully for a few real revelations, the infrequent but so delightful twists of English via Norwegian, the comments on children of other nations. But an adult feels that somehow these children all could have been given a more inspiring and rewarding idea of America."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 16 '54 160w

"Translated literally from the Norwegian by her grandfather, this diary has the spontaneous quality of a child's observations made for her own pleasure. What impresses an adult immediately is the ease with which these children settled in together." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p22 Ap 18 '54 270w

"The book is profusely illustrated by photographs of the children in groups and singly, at play, at school, swimming, and resting. Probably this will not be a popular book with American children, but is a very fine contribution to international understanding." F.L.S.
+ Sat R 37:61 My 15 '54 290w

SCHEELE, WILLIAM EARL. Prehistoric animals; il. by [the author]. 125p $4.95 World pub.

560 Paleontology—Juvenile literature 54-5351

In this book for age twelve and older the curator of the Cleveland Museum of natural history describes and pictures the procession of prehistoric animals from invertebrates to dinosaurs. Brief bibliography.

Booklist 51:154 D 1 '54

"Handsome, stimulating, and highly readable book. . . A real treasure for the serious young scientist." V. I.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 14 '54
200w

"One very interesting effect this book may have is to set our young people fossil hunting." R. E. Donlon
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54
180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

"Highly recommended. Interest will decide age level—normally 12 up." L. T. Bulman
+ Library J 79:2257 N 15 '54 80w

"The stunning black and white portraits of these fantastic beasts are done with imagination and a sense of drama. Opposite, their skeletons also are shown, and often many details of skulls, wings, heads when alive, legs and tails, etc. All this will hold fascinated the reader, young, or old, who once opens the big nine-by-twelve-inch pages. Undoubtedly, it's the best book in its field yet offered." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p7 N 14 '54 210w

Reviewed by R. K. Plumb
N Y Times pt2 p22 N 14 '54 30w

SCHEFFLER, JOHANN (ANGELUS SILESIUS, pseud). Cherubic wanderer, by Angelus Silesius; selections tr. by Willard R. Trask; introd. by Curt von Faber du Faur. 60p $2 Pantheon bks.

331 Religious poetry 53-9949

Translations of selections from the work of a seventeenth century Silesian mystic poet, who was born a Protestant, but was converted to Catholicism and became a priest.

Booklist 50:163 D 15 '53

"These sentiments—indeed the whole body of writings here presented—smack more of Oriental pantheism than of Christian mysticism, but the total course of his life and thought makes it evident that the Silesian Angel had no heretical intent and was only trying to express vividly his sense of the soul's utter dependence upon God. A few of his hymns have had wide use in Protestant churches. Charles Wesley made an adaptation of one of them." W. E. G. Christian Century 71:48 Ja 13 '54 350w

"Mr. Trask is to be congratulated for introducing American readers to this original and finely tempered intelligence." Francis Sweeney
+ N Y Times p16 Ja 3 '54 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 7 '54
50w

SCHEFLAN, LEOPOLD, and JACOBS, MORRIS BORIS. Handbook of solvents. 728p $10 Van Nostrand

661 Solvents 53-8766

"According to the publishers this handbook is intended to cover various theoretical and practical attributes of solvents, solvent recovery and the physical properties of over 2700 liquid organic compounds. The first eight chapters, amounting to seventy-eight pages, deal with the topics of statistics, safe practices, solvent action and power, vapor pressure, dilution ratios, inflammability, and solvent recovery. The remaining six hundred and fifty pages consist of tabular data on commercial solvents and liquids which may become important solvents in the future." (Am Chem Soc J) Bibliography. List of synonyms.

"The book should have utility for those desiring rapid reference to the formulas and common physical properties of a wide variety of organic liquids." G. Broughton

Am Chem Soc J 76:634 Ja 20 '54 400w
Library J 79:916 My 15 '54 10w

"The book should find a place at once as one of the standard reference books in industrial chemistry."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 38:75 S '53

"The data in the tables are arranged in a simple, logical manner, and an index of synonyms with cross references is included to facilitate the finding of compounds. Considering also the comprehensiveness of the work, its usefulness seems assured. It is disconcerting, however, that the authors, while carefully listing the sources from which the data on physical properties were obtained, have not made it possible to tell which data come from which sources."

+ U S Quarterly Bk 10:132 Mr '54
200w

SCHENCK, HILBERT VAN NYDECK, and KENDALL, HENRY WAY. Underwater photography. 110p il $3 Cornell maritime

778.7 Photography, Submarine 53-9688

"A guide to shallow and deep underwater photography for the beginner or the expert. To lay the groundwork for a discussion of applied theory, the authors begin with the basic principles of optics and photometry. They next discuss the materials needed, provide data on problems of underwater exposure, and explain how to construct a waterproof enclosure for the camera. Jerry Greenberg, writing the concluding chapter, offers some hints on underwater photography from his own successful experience." Booklist

Booklist 51:78 O 15 '54

"If you're looking for an interesting photo specialty, here's a new book that goes beneath the usual surface to come up with the facts." Irving Desfor

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 24 '54 100w

SCHENK, GRETCHEN (KNIEF). County and regional library development. 263p $5.25 A.L.A.

027.42 Libraries, County. Libraries, Regional 53-7488

"A handbook of procedures for the organization and management of large public library units other than municipal systems, based on a study of the varied patterns of county and regional service now in use in the U.S. In addition to being an authoritative source of information on the hows and whys of operating large service units, this will provide facts and figures needed by librarians planning campaigns for the development or expansion of such units. Beginning with a discussion of the modern concepts of public library service, the well-organized text proceeds to a consideration of governmental patterns affecting library service, campaigning, fitting the library into the community, organizing the library system and field agencies, bookmobiles, special services, personnel, books and other materials, techniques and routines, and public relations." Booklist

Booklist 50:251 Mr 1 '54

"As a blueprint for a new service or as a check list against an old one, Mrs. Schenk has given us a text-book to guide the professionals in making the transition from their single-unit experience to the larger-unit concept, and, at the same time, has clearly pointed out the many places where the lay sympathizers of the plan and the people in government positions can apply their support. To this reviewer, Mrs. Schenk has done an excellent job of presenting the action and interaction of forces as a conceptual framework for library planning." Irving Verschoor

+ Library J 79:843 My 1 '54 600w

Wis Lib Bul 50:38 Ja '54

SCHERF, MARGARET. Glass on the stairs. 189p $2.75 Doubleday

Detective story. 54-6818

Booklist 50:453 J1 15 '54

Kirkus 22:137 F 15 '54 50w

"This is Miss Scherf's first story in three years about decorator Henry Bryce and his wife Emily. It's one of her best." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p25 My 16 '54 40w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 6 '54 50w

"Gay and goofy." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:40 My 22 '54 20w

SCHERMAN, KATHARINE (MRS ALEX ROSIN). Slave who freed Haiti; the story of Toussaint Louverture; il. by Adolf Dehn. (World landmark bks) 182p $1.50 Random house

B or 92 Toussaint Louverture, Pierre Dominique—Juvenile literature 54-7006

The life story of the educated slave who led the rebellion against the French in Haiti and paved the way for freedom. There is a school edition published by E. M. Hale and company, priced at $1.68. Index.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p32 N 14 '54 30w

"Because the influence of this magnificent fight for freedom was so far-reaching, the story belongs to young people not only of the United States but of democratic and liberty-loving countries everywhere." Millicent Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:492 Ag 1 '54 190w

"The Slave Who Freed Haiti,' by Katharine Scherman, an editor and writer, is a story of cruelty and heroism. With its rapid action and strong characterization, it will appeal to many young people." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times pt2 p20 N 14 '54 60w

SCHIAPARELLI, ELSA. Shocking life. 254p il $4 Dutton

B or 92 Fashion 54-10918

The famous fashion artist, Schiaparelli, describes her own life from her childhood in Rome, to the present. Copiously illustrated.

Booklist 51:130 N 15 '54

Reviewed by M. B. Snyder

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 7 '54 340w

"Her account gets off to a rather slow start, but soon the plot zooms into high and the stars begin to shoot." Kathleen Cannell

Christian Science Monitor p7 O 21 '54 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

"Schiaparelli's life story is not 'Shocking' (that is the name of her most famous perfume), but it is exotic; told unevenly, amateurish, it is also vivid, fresh, with the ring of honesty."

+ Kirkus 22:611 S 1 '54 270w

"Public libraries and branches in residential upper-income communities may find some demand for this, but it is not worth heavy duplication." M. G. Cook

+ Library J 79:2211 N 15 '54 210w

Reviewed by Arthur Marshall

New Statesman & Nation 48:548 O 30 '54 280w

"For those readers who enjoy reading about newsworthy personalities, there are glimpses of many such figures. . . For the most part, it is the author's own personality which emerges and the reader will enjoy the book if this unpredictable, restless, talented and essentially unhappy woman strikes a sympathetic chord." Agnes Rogers

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 17 '54 600w

"Accept Madam Schiaparelli's irritating ego and exaggerations, chalk them up to the Latin flair for drama, and 'Shocking Life' provides a turbulent entertainment, a serious glimpse of the workroom side of a French high fashion atelier." Leo Lerman

+ N Y Times p4 O 17 '54 750w

"It is clear from the places and names mentioned in Mme. Schiaparelli's autobiography, and from her reputation in the world of fashion, that she has had a fascinating career, but she tells her story so disjointedly that one cannot help wishing she had employed somebody to translate her experiences and her personality onto the printed page."

New Yorker 30:174 O 23 '54 40w

"It will not be surprising if Schiap turns out another book—in which case perhaps she'll see to it that the seriousness of its content is matched by its title and appearance. Not that

SCHIAPARELLI, ELSA—Continued
 'Shocking Life' is any weighty tome. Serious fun, perhaps. And pretty shocking in spots."
 Elizabeth Hawes

Sat R 37:25 O 23 '54 500w
 Times [London] Lit Sup p707 N 5 '54 270w

SCHIFFER, WALTER. Legal community of mankind; a critical analysis of the modern concept of world organization. 367p $5.50 Columbia univ. press

341 International relations. League of nations. United nations (organization) 54-9256

"An extensive historical and critical examination of the concepts which came to find embodiment in the principles underlying the League of Nations and the United Nations. The late author (he died in 1949) was of the view that a something-for-nothing expectation was an important feature of this set of concepts." (Foreign Affairs) Bibliography. Index.

Foreign Affairs 33:158 O '54 30w

"This posthumous work by an exiled German Jurist is an erudite and valuable contribution to the history of ideas in the fields of international law and world government." F. L. Schuman

+ Nation 179:340 O 16 '54 40w

SCHLEIN, MIRIAM. Elephant herd; il. by Symeon Shimin. [38p] $2 Scott, W.R.

Elephants—Legends and stories 53-7804

"In this picture storybook about two small elephants who decided to go off and be a herd all by themselves, Miss Schlein has given a good deal of information about elephant life in the jungles of Africa." Horn Bk

Booklist 50:364 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 22 '54 60w

"The short lines of text are inviting and easy to read and have the rhythmic quality that distinguished the author's When Will the World Be Mine? and Go with the Sun." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:100 Ap '54 80w

Kirkus 22:230 Ap 1 '54 60w

"Recommended." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 79:1236 Je 15 '54 60w

"This is a lovely picture story for ages four to seven, with a worthwhile moral for small children, as to why not to run away." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 16 '54 140w

Reviewed by Miriam James

N Y Times p16 Ag 1 '54 170w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:207 N 27 '54 50w

Reviewed by Augusta Baker

Sat R 37:30 Jl 24 '54 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:216 O '54

SCHLEIN, MIRIAM. Heavy is a hippopotamus; pictures by Leonard Kessler. [30p] $1.75 Scott, W.R.

54-9913

Explains the idea of weight for ages six to eight, in simple text and pictures.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p46 N 14 '54 110w

"A fine concept builder."

+ Kirkus 22:481 Ag 1 '54 60w

"Bold drawings in orange and black by Leonard Kessler are amusing and illuminating." Gertrude Herman

+ Library J 79:1661 S 15 '54 70w

"To some adults, such a simple book looks silly; to children of about five to eight, it will prove mind-stretching and fun as well." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 21 '54 110w

"With the quirky kind of humor that fixes a point indelibly in the mind, the author points out quite reasonably that in one sense weight is relative. . . In this she is ably assisted by illustrator Leonard Kessler, who can make something as prosaic as a weighing machine almost as funny and attractive as a very heavy hippopotamus." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p36 O 31 '54 160w

Sat R 37:84 N 13 '54 70w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 90w

SCHLEIN, MIRIAM. How do you travel? pictures by Paul Galdone. [24p] $1.50 Abingdon 54-3055

Picture book with brief rhythmic text showing methods of locomotion. For ages three to six.

Booklist 51:22 S 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 80w

Kirkus 22:361 Je 15 '54 90w

"Some of the words like 'hack' used for the sake of the rhyme will need explaining and some of the pages appear cluttered, but to have such a variety in a pre-school book is refreshing." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 79:1661 S 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 21 '54 140w

"There is so much variety, indeed, that the whole lacks a certain unity and the young child will need a fuller explanation of some of these forms of travel (and just what he will make of that anachronism, Lady Smithington in a horse-drawn hack, is hard to say). But those very explanations may stimulate his curiosity." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p36 O 31 '54 120w

SCHLEIN, MIRIAM. Sun looks down; pictures by Abner Graboff. [37p] $2.50 Abelard-Schuman 54-10209

In a series of pictures and questions and answers the book attempts to show children how watchful their parents are. The sheep have their shepherd; the fishing boat its fisherman; and the little boy and girl have their parents.

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 11 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:579 S 1 '54 60w

"We don't really 'like' it, and we think there is a mixture of treatments which prevents its being an artistic whole. But it is far more stimulating than the many realistic and 'pretty' books we forget after one look." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 21 '54 160w

"Cast in a question-and-answer pattern, written in lively rhythms, this will surely give children a warm sense of security. Abner Graboff, a newcomer among children's book illustrators, has given it a handsome setting, using strong, pure colors and vigorous modern forms." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p36 O 31 '54 90w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 14 '54 120w

SCHLEIN, MIRIAM. When will the world be mine? the story of a snowshoe rabbit; lithographs by Jean Charlot. [31p] $2.25 Scott, W.R.

53-7810

"A poetic book about a baby snowshoe rabbit who is eager to go out into the world and make it his own. As the seasons change, he grows, and listens to his mother's counsel, and then when snow comes, he is joyfully ready to take his place in life." New Yorker

Booklist 50:263 Mr 1 '54

"Small children, like little rabbits, wonder about the world and will love sharing this rabbit's discoveries, both in the appealing story and the imaginative lithographs in their soft sepia and green and white." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ja 10 '54 150w

"Graceful and poetic, the story and the fine full page pictures are sheer delight." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 12 '53 50w

"The pictures, soft green and red and white, are exactly right and give the same feeling of quiet beauty as does the text." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 29:363 O '53 80w

Kirkus 21:737 N 15 '53 70w

"An unusual picture-story book that will hold the rapt interest of the youngest child from the unique title to the last sentence." Averil Randall

+ Library J 78:2105 D 1 '53 60w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 17 '54 140w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkad

New Yorker 29:188 N 28 '53 40w

Wis Lib Bul 50:76 Mr '54

SCHLESINGER, EDWARD RALPH. Health services for the child; foreword by Herman E. Hilleboe. 403p $7.50 McGraw

618.9 Public health—U.S. Children—Care and hygiene 53-7121

"For the first time we have a volume which interprets the principles and technics used in community health services for mothers and children. Dr. Schlesinger describes the basic considerations for these services. This includes a discussion of the purpose of the community child health program, the relationship of the practicing physician thereto, and the community health council's role. There is a concise review of trends in child morbidity and mortality and an historical review of the growth and development of child health services in this country." (Am J Pub Health) Index.

"Those concerned with the administration not only of child health programs but of any type of community health and welfare service will find the chapter on administrative relationships rewarding, and for students it will be orienting. . . The book is a must for students and workers in child health programs." G. M. Wheatley

+ Am J Pub Health 44:401 Mr '54 360w

"The volume contains nothing not well known to the experienced public health worker, but it is a useful reference; it constitutes a summary and coordination, and through its bibliographies can lead the student as far as he wishes to go. The book should be useful to students of social organization, and to those concerned with social problems and their resolution."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:119 Mr '54 200w

SCHLESINGER, RUDOLF. Central European democracy and its background; economic and political group organization. (International library of sociology and social reconstruction.) 402p $5 Grove

330.94 Central Europe [53-13380]

"In his latest book, which might more appropriately be entitled 'Central-European Marxism and trade unionism,' Professor Schlesinger analyzes the causes of the spectacular rise of socialist parties and organized labor before 1919 and the even more spectacular downfall after 1919 which culminated in the breakup of the German and Austrian republics. He approaches these complex developments as a sociologist and a political scientist with an orthodox Marxist point of view." (Am Hist R) Index.

"The work offers considerable data about the internal operations of the various socialist parties. In fact, it is rather too detailed and a reader may put the book aside with the feeling that he cannot see the woods for the trees. Certain inaccuracies in spelling and dating, i.e., Stürck instead of Stürghk or Windhorst instead of Windthorst, make the reader a bit dubious as to the accuracy of other information. On the whole, however, this book must be considered a pioneering attempt at comparative socio-political analysis and should be welcomed as such, particularly by students of the central European scene." F. G. Eyck

+ — Am Hist R 59:925 Jl '54 650w

Am Pol Sci R 48:579 Je '54 50w

"The title is misleading: it is not a study of democratic institutions in Central Europe, but an interpretation of the role of the labor movement in the trend of events that culminated in the rise of fascistic regimes in Germany and Austria. The treatment of the trade union and socialist movements is thorough and competent. . . The author is quite frank about the subjectivity of his interpretation, though in the course of the treatise his opinions seem to become more and more dogmatic. Unfortunately, much of the potential effect of the book is lost because of the tortuous and often quite obscure style." Rudolf Heberle

+ — Am Soc R 19:642 O '54 150w

"A full appreciation of his book presupposes knowledge of the complex political, economic, social, and national picture of Central Europe as it developed during the last hundred years. As a specialized study, sometimes narrowly conceived, it is to be highly appreciated for its research value in the little known area and even less known problem." Josef Korbel

+ Ann Am Acad 294:231 Jl '54 600w

Foreign Affairs 33:165 O '54 80w

"With this book Dr. Schlesinger has made an important contribution to our knowledge of the history of central Europe."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p575 S 11 '53 1100w

SCHLOAT, G. WARREN. Your wonderful teeth. [46p] il $2.25 Scribner

617.6 Teeth—Juvenile literature 54-5926

Photographic book with caption text explaining the function, development and care of teeth. For ages 5 to 10.

Booklist 50:364 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 10w

+ Kirkus 22:266 Ap 15 '54 80w

"Recommended for grades 1-5." Grace Shakin

+ Library J 79:1326 Jl '54 60w

Wis Lib Bul 50:216 O '54

SCHMID, CALVIN FISHER. Handbook of graphic presentation. 316p il maps $6 Ronald 311.2 Statistics—Graphic methods 54-7652

"A manual for those concerned with presentation and interpretation of statistical data by means of charts and graphs. Advantages and disadvantages of various types of charts are explained and the salient relationships by which they may be used to help locate and define problems or discover otherwise hidden facts. In addition to the discussion on charts there are included directions for preparing statistical maps, use of sketches or cartoons in pictorial charts, projection techniques and a chapter on reproduction of charts—hctograph, stencil, blueprinting, vandyke negative, diazo prints, photocopying, xerography, offset and multilith, with a summary of comparative costs." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:5 S 1 '54

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker

Library J 79:1518 S 1 '54 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:56 Jl '54

Special Libraries 45:428 D '54 10w

SCHNEIDER, ELISABETH. Coleridge, opium and Kubla Khan. 377p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

821 Coleridge, Samuel Taylor—Kubla Khan. Opium—Physiological effect 53-13359

The thesis is that an opium dream did not inspire Coleridge's poem Kubla Khan. The author, professor of English at Temple University, has gone to modern medicine to prove her point, and says that Coleridge owes more to Milton and the contemporary style of writing than to opium. Index.

SCHNEIDER, ELISABETH—Continued

Reviewed by John Randolph
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ap 25 '54
90w

"The author shows herself more than once embarrassed by the cumbrousness of her own machinery, and certainly, though her style is pleasantly free of jargon, her scholarship lacks the sustaining excitement and enthusiasm in the chase that makes The Road to Xanadu so readable. One feels that the material here presented in a volume running, with appendices and notes, to over 350 pages, would have been more digestible in the compass of a monograph."

New Statesman & Nation 47:710 My 29 '54 250w

"There has been an irritating amount of fuss about Kubla Khan; the least justification of Miss Schneider's dryly fussy book is that it may possibly close off the topic. The poem itself, she shows, is by no means as mysterious as the strummers of critical dulcimers have imagined." Hugh Kenner

Poetry 84:179 Je '54 1000w

"There is reason to believe, if this schoolroom dissection goes on, that eventually it will be decided that Coleridge himself never existed, that his poetry was really written by an oriental slave-owner, and that Kubla Khan was his father-in-law." Laurence Ferling

— San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 14 '54
270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p455 Jl 16 '54
900w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:191 Je '54 250w

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN, and SCHNEIDER, MRS NINA. Let's look under the city; il. by Bill Ballantine. rev ed 70p $2 Scott, W.R.
620 Engineering—Juvenile literature 54-6791

"First published in 1950, this book has been completely revised and reillustrated, and reduced in size. Grades 3-5." Booklist

Booklist 51:91 O 15 '54

Commonweal 61:200 N 19 '54 30w

"A welcome re-issue of a book that will appeal to the read-aloud level."

+ Kirkus 22:485 Ag 1 '54 90w

"In simple words and pictures the story of public utilities is told so clearly that even third-grade children can understand it in this revised edition by authors known for their accuracy." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 79:2498 D 15 '54 80w

"A completely re-written edition. . . Younger children will find the answers to their questions here and will get a sense of the co-operation needed to develop a city." F. L. S.

+ Sat 37:84 N 13 '54 40w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 30w

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN, and SCHNEIDER, MRS NINA. More power to you. 128p il $2.50 Scott, W.R.

621 Power (mechanics)—Juvenile literature
53-7809

"[The authors] explain with pictures and words so simply, so clearly how windmills work, how water power grinds corn, and so on, right up to atomic energy." Library J

Booklist 50:209 Ja 15 '54

Horn Bk 30:34 F '54 80w

"For a once-over-lightly on wind, water, steam, gasoline and diesel, electricity, jets, rockets, atoms, the book is well-organized, entertainingly written, and almost achieves the impossible. But impossible it remains. . . Despite its shortcomings, it is a book that will meet many needs. And one has a sense of authority in so far as it goes."

+ — Kirkus 21:740 N 15 '53 150w

"The book is such a clear, clean, nice looking book that even if I were not interested in power I would be tempted to read it. Good index. For all ages." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 78:2109 D 1 '53 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 21 '54
30w

Sat 36:78 N 14 '53 20w

SCHNITTKIND, HENRY THOMAS (HENRY THOMAS, pseud), and SCHNITTKIND, DANA ARNOLD (LEE THOMAS, pseud). Living adventures in philosophy. (Hanover house bk) 320p $2.95 Garden City bks.

921 Philosophers. Philosophy—History
54-5760

An introduction to philosophy which is composed of the individual "adventures" of thirty-one of the greatest known philosophers from Empedocles to John Dewey. Index.

"The Thomases do not write a history of philosophy, but their book would be good collateral reading with any such history. That, however, is probably not its main purpose or its most important use. It will be especially good for people who think they cannot read philosophy or would not be interested in it."

W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:1008 Ag 25 '54
140w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

N Y Times p53 O 17 '54 420w

SCHNUCKER, CALVIN. How to plan the rural church program. 158p $2.50 Westminster press
254.2 Country church 54-5281

"This book on the rural church is written for students anticipating rural church service and for rural church leaders. It points out 'an action program which, when followed, will help to meet the religious needs of rural people through a tailor-made program.' To attain this end, Dr. Schnucker sets the fourteen chapters into three divisions: 1. searching for facts, 2. building the program, and 3. extending the program." (Christian Century) Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 50:334 My 1 '54

"Dr. Schnucker, whose unique work as a rural pastor brought him to the attention of the rural church world, has a way of stirring people to action. In this forthright and vigorous presentation he has provided a good tonic for the growing rural church movement." Mark Rich

+ Christian Century 71:527 Ap 28 '54 500w

"Possibly the most distinctive contribution of the book lies in the practical assistance offered along lines of both denominational and interdenominational co-operative parish activity. Any rural church could benefit from the highly practical suggestions both for making the utterly essential self-study and the means for financing the church as portrayed. Obviously, a wealth of personal experience has been drawn upon for this material." Victor Obenaus

+ J Religion 30:310 O '54 170w

"Every Protestant minister serving a rural field should have this book and turn to it for guidance early and often."

+ Kirkus 22:107 F 1 '54 160w

"This book was written primarily for ministers and students who plan to enter service of the church, but it will be of help to laymen who are involved in planning the church program and to leaders in other fields of interest who recognize the value of working with the church."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:126 My '54

SCHOENBERG, ARNOLD. See Schönberg, A.

SCHOLES, WILLIAM ARTHUR. Seventh continent; saga of Australasian exploration in Antarctica, 1895-1950. 266p il maps $4.50 British bk. centre

999 [919.9] Antarctic regions 53-3790

"Record of the intrepid scientists and adventures who, by sea, land and air searched the mysteries of this unique, ice-clad world of alabaster and blue." Maps, photographs. Appendixes, index." Bookmark

Bookmark 14:33 N '54 30w

"Well-written Antarctic history. This studious work acclaims the 'little men,' the forgotten, unsung heroes of the Antarctic, the men who missed the headlines but whose daring and determination often made possible the success of many big expeditions." Albert Norman

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 9 '54 500w

SCHOLZ, JACKSON VOLNEY. End zone. 191p $2.75 Morrow

54-7950

Football story for ages twelve to sixteen. Jay arrives at a little Vermont college determined to study engineering. The students gang up on him, and soon Jay is playing pretty good football.

Kirkus 22:442 J1 15 '54 90w

"A mediocre football story which does not live up to the few good incidents with which it begins. . . . Story is implausible where it is supposed to be funny and lacks suspense in the football action as well as in the plot. Not recommended." Lillian Morrison

— Library J 79:2257 N 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by I. T. Marsh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 12 '54 70w

N Y Times p38 N 21 '54 90w

"There are the usual tough schedule, cocky know-it-all varsity man, hardpressed but honest coach, and last-minute wonder plays. Added, this time, is a revolving dummy-tackling machine and a sensational mechanical place-kicking show. Sports-minded boys of twelve and up find this good reading." L. T. B.

+ Sat R 37:92 N 13 '54 100w

SCHONBERG, ARNOLD. Structural functions of harmony [ed. by Humphrey Searle]. 200p $4.50 Norton

781.3 Harmony 54-11433

"This book is Schoenberg's last completed theoretical work, and represents his final thoughts on the subject of classical and romantic harmony. The earlier chapters recapitulate in condensed form the principles laid down in Schoenberg's Theory of Harmony [Book Review Digest 1948] and later chapters break entirely new ground, for they analyze the system of key relationships within the structure of entire movements and affirm the principle of 'monotonicity,' showing how all modulations within a movement are merely deviations from, and not negations of, its main tonality." Publisher's note

"This volume is not for beginners, but rather for advanced students capable of independent work and teachers of theory." C. K. Miller

Library J 79:1592 S 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Walter Piston

Music Lib Assn Notes 11:558 S '54 700w

Springf'd Republican p9C J1 11 '54 50w

"Schoenberg's approach is nothing if not Teutonic. . . . This book lays itself open to certain criticisms. In the first place it would appear to be directed too much to the eye rather than the ear. Schoenberg is concerned with technicalities rather than aesthetics, but the gap between the two can be dangerously wide. . . . A graver objection is the underlying assumption that structure depends on harmony alone—harmony in the strict sense of the sequence of chords and modulations."

Times [London] Lit Sup p571 S 10 '54 460w

SCHOONOVER, LAWRENCE. Spider king. 403p $3.95 Macmillan (N Y)

Louis XI, king of France—Fiction 54-693

"A novel of 15th century France, with Louis XI Dauphin and King as the central character." Library J

Booklist 50:213; 279 F 1 '54; Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:186 My '54 30w

"Lacking Scott's great dramatic flair in the telling of a tale, Schoonover becomes a bit tedious at times with his overload of minutely researched historical fact and incident. But the element of numerous romantic engagements rippling thru the narrative at all times provides a bright leavening without adding the offending note of lushness so often characteristic of novels of this sort." Henry Cavendish

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 21 '54 500w

"This wont be a big seller; it is overlong and overdetailed and the central theme bogs down in minutiae. But for those who like to round out their panelled European History, here is substantial fare."

+ Kirkus 22:40 Ja 15 '54 250w

"Author comes of age in this his fifth novel, giving us not only history and science in detail, but excellent characterization and fine prose as well. . . . Recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 79:551 Mr 15 '54 110w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 4 '54 120w

"It is an exceedingly pleasant surprise to come on Lawrence Schoonover's new novel. This book has all the color, all the piled-up swift happenings, all the intrigue and the suspense that the aficionados of cloak and dagger regard as their minimum demands. It is, at the same time, built upon a solid understanding of its subject and the time in which he lived. Even though many of the episodes and some of the characters are invented, Mr. Schoonover does not offer a substitute for either history or biography. The novel is both history and biography." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 21 '54 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 28 '54 180w

"In humanizing Louis, Mr. Schoonover takes a few understandable liberties with the facts, which are mainly sins of omission and do not particularly detract from the authenticity of the historical climate. What does get a bit on the reader's nerves is the author's omniscience, which produces some marvellous feats of hindsight and a sometimes anachronistic tone. . . . On the credit side: 'The Spider King' is carefully detailed. Mr. Schoonover has sliced off an impressive chunk of Western civilization and garnished it most palatably." Martin Levin

+ Sat R 37:27 My 29 '54 290w

Springf'd Republican p7C Mr 28 '54 200w

SCHOOR, GENE, and GILFOND, HENRY. Jack Dempsey story. 186p il $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Dempsey, Jack—Juvenile literature 54-6775

Life story of the former world's heavyweight boxing champion. For older boys.

Booklist 50:404 Je 15 '54

Kirkus 22:203 Mr 15 '54 60w

"Will be enjoyed by boys from 12-16." Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 79:1328 J1 '54 30w

Reviewed by Nathan Aleskovsky

N Y Times p38 N 21 '54 100w

SCHOOR, GENE, and GILFOND, HENRY. Ted Williams story. 188p $2.75 Messner
 B or 92 Williams, Theodore Samuel—
 Juvenile literature 54-10594
 A sports-career story about Ted Williams, batter for the Boston Red Sox.

Booklist 51:113 N 1 '54

"Whether you like Ted or not, your opinion of him is certain to improve when you learn some of the fine things he has done, especially for youngsters, with a careful avoidance of publicity. Williams' little known combat experiences in Korea, where he was a jet pilot, are included." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p50 N 14 '54 40w

"By now you're used to Gene Schoor's style, that heaps mountains of praise on his sports heroes at every opportunity. This is more of the same."

Kirkus 22:398 J1 1 '54 60w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
 Library J 79:2458 D 15 '54 20w

Reviewed by I. T. Marsh
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 12 '54 30w

Reviewed by Nathan Aleskovsky
 N Y Times p38 N 21 '54 30w

SCHORER, MARK. Wars of love. 174p $3 McGraw

53-7878

"The story of three boys and a girl, summer friends at an upstate New York resort. Mr. Schorer shows them as children and makes us see the elaborate structure of feelings which constitutes their unity. He then separates the narrator from the other three until they grow up; they all come together once more in New York for 'Winter in the City,' when they work out to a final, tragic conclusion the relations which had grown in summer." Sat R

Booklist 50:297 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
 Cath World 179:230 Je '54 280w

"Despite the credibility of characters and events, there is a marked absence of warmth in the novel. Somehow, Schorer has failed to imbue his characters with any genuine humanity; the obsessive nature of the narrator precludes the introduction of those aspects of character which might have made for a greater humanity." August Derleth

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 21 '54 330w

"To call The Wars of Love a skillful novel is to risk damning it with faint praise. . . Its chief excellence lies in its composition. For that reason alone Mr. Schorer's story is an intriguing one." P. F. Quinn

+ Commonweal 60:181 My 21 '54 800w

Kirkus 22:75 F 1 '54 200w

"Well done and worthy of inclusion in adult collections." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:552 Mr 15 '54 90w

"It is a tour de force, carried off by careful attention to style and psychology." Patricia Hodgart

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 2 '54 170w

Reviewed by Tom Fitzsimmons

New Repub 30:21 My 10 '54 550w

"Mr. Schorer is well-known in America as a leading academic critic of the novel, and The Wars of Love is nothing if not a scholarly work. Mr. Schorer has plainly put himself to school with James, Conrad, F. M. Ford and Proust; he writes wonderfully well, and what might be called the surface texture of his novel is a constant delight. . . One is not convinced that the vampire-woman who holds the three men together has grown naturally out of the girl who was their leader. What began as a beautifully perceptive study of children ends in a case-history with, one feels, some essential details missing." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:417 Mr 27 '54 240w

"It is a highly skillful novel, and an absorbing one, too. The device of permitting the reader to know the ultimate catastrophe in the very opening pages and then so successfully challenging his interest in the 'how' that he never misses the suspense of 'what'; the device of the limited point of view, in which everything is filtered through the consciousness of 'I,' the first-person narrator, here given a second, ironic function . . . these are deftly consummated. And yet they remain devices." Hiram Haydn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 21 '54 550w

"In a dark and disturbing short novel, Mark Schorer again demonstrates his great skill as an observer and recorder of human frailty and failure. 'The Wars of Love' is a beautiful, appalling story depicting with nightmarish intensity the deterioration of three men and the woman who tries to dominate their lives." William Peden

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 21 '54 700w

"This is a highly emotional novel, to describe it too simply. It is the kind of thing, moreover, that could have got wildly out of hand. With Mr. Schorer it does not; his instinct is to understate never to overwrite; even his more lyrical bits, when he is describing the private summer world of adolescence, are firmly controlled. If the novel does not answer the initial question completely—'Love! What does IT mean?'—it reflects more phases of the strange warfare that is love than most novelists have so much as attempted to show." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 19 '54 800w

"An intricate and intelligent work, intelligent not simply in the ideas and feelings it contains, but most evidently in the controlled structure with which he has given that substance form. His novel has, too, some of the dryness which is likely to characterize such novels." Arthur Mizener

+ Sat R 37:18 Mr 20 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 100w

"Though Mr. Schorer fails to give any of his characters coherence, he has created the situations between them skilfully enough; though their motives remain vague, their actions and background—the art-dealing world of New York—are described with a competence that, for all the melodrama of its ending, makes 'The Wars of Love' very readable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p133 F 26 '54 250w

SCHREIBER, FLORA RHETA, and PERSICHETTI, VINCENT. William Schuman, 139p il $3.50 Schirmer

B or 92 Schuman, William Howard

A brief biography and a consideration of the musical works of the composer who is president of the Juilliard School of Music. List of works. Brief bibliographies. Index.

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:2456 D 15 '54 120w

"The fact that the volume is issued by the publisher of Schuman's music might lead the skeptical to dismiss it as special pleading or propaganda. I can say on the basis of my own personal associations with William Schuman and his music that this is no propaganda, but a highly intelligent and well organized evaluation of the man and his music. . . In terms of the goal which this book sets for itself—that of a clean and comprehensive interim evaluation of William Schuman as man and musician—I think Miss Schreiber and Mr. Persichetti have done a job that badly needed doing, and have done it in first-rate fashion throughout." David Hall

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:560 S '54 450w

"The biographical section of this book suggests that Mr. Schuman is an extroverted, driving, peppy sort of man, and the section devoted to his music—which is a remarkably good one—suggests that his work shares these qualities."

New Yorker 30:194 N '54 170w

SCHRODINGER, ERWIN. Nature and the Greeks. 97p $2 Cambridge
182 Philosophy, Greek. Science—Philosophy [54-2592]

"Based on the Shearman Lectures which the author delivered at University College, London, in 1948. Its main purpose is to show the relevance to the present state of science of Greek thought concerning some of the ultimate problems of philosophy. In particular Professor Schrödinger points to the advantage, in considering the present dichotomy between religion and science, of examining carefully the thought of those for whom this dichotomy did not exist." (Manchester Guardian) Bibliography. No index.

"Most interesting little book. . . It is refreshing to read an account by one to whom the thought of these long past times is evidently very much alive and who treats it in his own original way. While Professor Schrödinger clearly makes out his case for the importance of his subject, not everyone will agree with him in his estimate of its relevance, as compared with that of the seventeenth century, to the problem of science and religion." Herbert Dingle

+ Manchester Guardian p6 Ap 23 '54 360w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:28 Mr '54

"The clarity and the subject-matter of this work would make it equally suitable for senior boys at school and for university students who take a general interest in the background of western civilization, as the lectures are arranged within a definite framework of ideas and in a style which, though not always quite grammatical, is simple and clear."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p252 Ap 16 '54 700w

SCHUBERT, PAUL BERT. Pipe and tube bending; a description of the methods and machines used in the shop and field for bending ferrous and non-ferrous pipe and tubing. 183p il $5 Industrial press

671.83 Pipe 53-12419

"The extensive use of long runs of metal tubing in the engineering and industrial fields, has resulted in the development of a wide variety of pipe bending techniques and equipment. This volume is intended to acquaint designers and mechanics with the types of equipment now available, and to aid them in the selection of bending methods best suited to meet their needs. Practical rather than theoretical aspects of the subject are stressed, and the descriptions of operating characteristics and methods of application of each type of bending apparatus, are accompanied by numerous photographs and diagrams." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem Eng 60:318 N '53 20w

"The book is of interest to plumbers, heating men and other technicians who are concerned with the bending of pipes and tubes." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 78:2039 N 15 '53 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 38:92 N '53

SCHULZ, MRS PEGGIE. Amaryllis, and how to grow them [ed. by Helen Van Pelt Wilson]. 128p il col il $2.95 Barrows

635.93 Amaryllis 54-5376

Study of all aspects of growing amaryllis as a house plant. Includes soil formulas; handling bulbs to insure flowers year after year; discussions of species and hybrids; amaryllis in the greenhouse; diseases and pests; and shows. Index.

Booklist 50:314 Ap 15 '54

"The author treats each phase of amaryllis care with thoroughness, giving tried and tested suggestions for growing the flower to perfection. . . The book is a fine companion piece to the author's earlier one dealing with gloxinias." A. K.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 4 '54 120w

Kirkus 22:185 Mr 1 '54 80w

SCHUMPETER, JOSEPH ALOIS. History of economic analysis; ed. from manuscript by Elizabeth Boody Schumpeter. 1260p $17.50 Oxford

330.1 Economics—History 52-9434

"Former Austrian, for last twenty years economics professor at Harvard, author was one of the outstanding thinkers in his field. After his death (1950) his late widow assembled from his unfinished manuscript this tremendous work. . . After an introduction on scope and method and a second introductory part in which pertinent ideas from ancient Greece to Mercantilism are discussed, bulk of work deals with Classical (1790-1870), Neo-Classical (1870-1914), and Modern periods." Library J

Reviewed by F. L. Nussbaum

Am Hist R 60:62 O '54 800w

"History of Economic Analysis, published posthumously, will undoubtedly rank as the work which most fully reveals Joseph A. Schumpeter's scholarship and intellectual powers. . . The book is unique with respect to both the range and sophistication of its analysis of the development of economics as a science." Leo Fishman

+ Ann Am Acad 295:164 S '54 470w

Reviewed by J. C. Riemersma

Canadian Forum 34:186 N '54 1600w

Reviewed by Melchior Palý

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 16 '54 160w

"If any man appeared to be capable of making such a contribution to society, Professor Schumpeter was such a one. Not alone a historian and a mathematician, he was a philosopher with vast erudition. At the point where he was to outline his conclusions, his passing prevented the completion of a task on which he had labored for nine years. Nevertheless, his penetrating analysis exposes old fallacies and his incisive comment gives the competent reader a sense of the direction in which economic thought is moving today." George Ericson

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 9 '54 500w

Foreign Affairs 32:670 Jl '54 60w

"Editor had sometimes to insert paragraphs which author had not completed and to indicate gaps left unfilled. But in spite of these minor omissions this is a lasting monument to an outstanding intellect, providing a wealth of material. So packed that it is not always easy to read, it will not be read for pleasure, but with pleasure. Highly recommended for all collections that cater to scholars in the social sciences." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:774 Ap 15 '54 210w

"Great histories of economics are few, for not only would the treatises of economics fill a library by themselves but the range of ideas which they cover would strain any but an encyclopedic mind. Schumpeter's is a great history, combining a wealth of research that would do credit to ten men with a breadth of understanding that only very few can achieve." R. L. Heilbroner

+ Nation 178:336 Ap 17 '54 1350w

"For all of its 1250 pages, the volume is too short. For another thing, Schumpeter assumes an extent of knowledge in his readers which no non-economists, and few economists possess. In many ways, therefore, this work is for the specialist in the history of economic ideas. Yet, I do not hesitate to recommend it to the general reader who may expect to derive many benefits from it." Lewis Wood

+ New Repub 132:21 Ag 2 '54 750w

"In its scope, in its grasp of related disciplines, in its display of erudition and in its charm of style, this book is one of the truly outstanding works in the social sciences. It will be a bible for students of economics and a book of reference for informed laymen and men of affairs. But in this review I turn to some points at issue. . . I envy those who are still to read this great book—and I say this though Schumpeter considerably underestimated my heroes, Ricardo and Keynes, and though his conception of the economist's task is different from mine." S. E. Harris

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 18 '54 1250w

SCHUMPETER, J. A.—Continued

"For the specialist in economic theory, the volume will be a serviceable reference book, for here Schumpeter utilized fully his exceptional gifts as a master economist, linguist and bibliophile. And what might otherwise have become a dull account is enlivened by Schumpeter's love of controversy. He was an encyclopedist with a persistent point of view... Schumpeter's ebullience occasionally led him to pass judgments on matters beyond the competence of an economist. The world of science in general, as well as Yale University in particular, will be surprised to learn from his account that Yale produced only 'two stars of the first magnitude' in the field of science, Irving Fisher and Willard Gibbs (p871). These are minor defects of a provocative work in the characteristic Schumpeterian manner." Joseph Dorfman

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:603 D '54 800w

+ Sat ■ 37:33 My 22 '54 180w

"This volume will be rewarding reading not only for economists, but also for all those interested in intellectual history or in the progress of the social sciences. Those who make the effort will find here deep and original insights which call for a reexamination of many traditional views." J. P. Miller

+ Yale R n s 44:123 autumn 1400w

SCHURZ, WILLIAM LYTLE. This new world; the civilization of Latin America; il. by Carl Folke Sahlin. 429p $6 Dutton

980 [918] Latin America—Civilization 54-5043

A study of the civilizations of the twenty nations of Latin America. Chapters deal with the geographical setting, and the various peoples: Indian, Spaniard, Negro, the foreigner; the church; the woman; the city; and the Brazilian. Index.

Booklist 50:269; 398 Mr 15 '54; Je 15 '54

Reviewed by R. M. Hallett

Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 24 '54 750w

Foreign Affairs 33:170 O '54 60w

"Not a 'popular' history but definitely readable and of interest to laymen."

+ Kirkus 22:225 Mr 15 '54 200w

"His well-documented account is based on a comprehensive knowledge of pertinent material, including recent monographs. All Latin American collections will wish to have it." J. A. Borome

+ Library J 79:980 My 15 '54 140w

"Here is the most exciting and sensible book on the Latin Americans that has appeared in many a year. It has meat to satisfy the schoolmaster, color to please the painter, and good writing to comfort the critic." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 30 '54 800w

"Among the many books which have been written about Latin America, this one is unique in many respects. It is not travel literature or journalism or history, yet it partakes of all three. It is a work of interpretation, distinguished by good judgment and good humor." German Arciniegas

+ N Y Times p7 My 23 '54 600w

"When a wise and well-written book appears on an important topic a reviewer is reduced to expressing the oft-defrauded hope that it will have as many readers as its unusual merits deserve. Such is the case with William Lytle Schurz's 'This New World.'... If there is a weakness in this admirable book it is that Mr. Schurz follows the example of Latin Americans in turning with nostalgic interest to the colonial period, rather to the neglect of the contemporary. Yet this criticism is no sooner made than one recalls his skill in modern situations." W. R. Crawford

+ Sat R 37:22 Je 26 '54 450w

Reviewed by W. H. Mohr

Social Educ 18:328 N '54 400w

SCHWARTZ, BERNARD. French administrative law and the common-law world; introd. by Arthur T. Vanderbilt. 367p $7.50 N.Y. univ. press; for sale by Oceana

354.44 Administrative law—France 54-5276

"The author has undertaken the worthwhile task of refuting the 'superficial views of Professor Dicey and his school' on French administrative law, which have misled so many Anglo-American lawyers. On the basis of personal observation and a study of French literature and decisions, Dr. Schwartz discusses the method which the French have elaborated for judicial review of administrative action: namely, through the specialized jurisdiction of the highly efficient Conseil d'Etat." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Professor Bernard Schwartz spent fifteen months in Paris recently, acquainting himself with the French system of administrative law. The fruit of his research is this authoritative and up-to-date introduction to the subject, addressed to American lawyers and others nurtured in the common law tradition." F. S. Burin

+ Columbia Law R 54:1011 Je '54 2150w

"The book purports to compare French law with Anglo-American law. Your English reviewer is constrained to point out that the comparison, as far as it relates to England, is perfunctory. Professor Schwartz has discharged with thoroughness and accuracy his primary task of introducing to the American reader the essentials of the leading French textbooks on administrative law: one hopes that his book will inspire some much-needed detailed studies of the French system in action." Harry Street

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:616 D '54 1100w

"All this, to be sure is not as new to American students as might appear to a novice reading the book. Recognition might have been given, for example, to Goodnow's Comparative Administrative Law and to more recent writings by American experts. In particular, the very brief chapter on French administration should at least have been supplemented by references to such studies. With these reservations, the book will be welcomed as a thought-provoking contribution to current debate on administrative procedure."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:219 Je '54 280w

SCHWARTZ, HERMAN S. Art of relaxation; il. by Thomas Carron. 212p $3 Crowell

613.7 Relaxation 54-5612

A manual on ways to achieve relaxation of body and mind without professional aid. Partial contents: Preparatory to physical relaxation; How to relax the eyes; Relax while sitting, standing, and walking; Achieving and maintaining physical fitness; Mental relaxation through quietude; How to sleep; Make peace with yourself; Relax on the job; Relax at play; Aids for advancing years. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:57 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:33 N '54 10w

Kirkus 22:323 My 15 '54 120w

"For the countless men and women trying to combat today's high-tension living, there is invaluable advice to be found in 'The Art of Relaxation.'"

+ Springf'd Republican p5C Jl 4 '54 70w

SCHWARTZ, JACK. How to get more business by telephone. 246p il $4.85 Business bourse

658.85 Telephone selling

"General standards of successful telephone salesmanship are combined with concrete advice on phone selling methods in the insurance, department store, financial, real estate, and wholesale fields. The author believes that telephone selling requires a higher type of salesmanship than is required for most personal selling; that it is a profession with special needs, advantages, and rewards and that it should be remunerated with careful attention to the results desired." Management R

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker
Library J 79:988 My 15 '54 140w
Management R 42:746 D '53 70w

SCHWARTZ, JULIUS. Through the magnifying glass; little things that make a big difference; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. (Whittlesey house publication) 142p $2.50 McGraw

535.8 Science—Juvenile literature. Lenses—Juvenile literature 54-6226

"Mr. Schwartz describes all kinds of lenses, tells where to get them and their probable cost, and how to mount them for most satisfactory use. He then suggests what to look at with the magnifying lens... In every instance a great many facts about the object under observation are given." Sat R

Booklist 50:384 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 J1 18 '54 40w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '54 100w

Horn Bk 30:256 Ag '54 70w

Kirkus 22:288 My 1 '54 100w

"Recommended for all libraries." Anne Jackson

+ Library J 79:1064 Je 1 '54 80w

"It has a wide age range, and would be fun for parents to use with quite young children. Mr. Schwartz has taught science at several New York schools, and has taught teachers. He has a happy way of making you want to know more about the wide range of investigations his lens leads you to start upon."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 16 '54 100w

Reviewed by A. D. Beck

+ N Y Times p36 Je 6 '54 100w

"A very good book on magnifying glasses... Boys, as well as girls with scientific interests, will enjoy this book and find it very useful. The hobbyist will welcome it." F. L. S.
+ Sat R 37:53 My 15 '54 180w

SCHWARZKOPF, CHET. Fur, fin, and feathers; il. by Dimitri N. Alexandroff. 149p $2.75 Crowell

591.5 Animals, Legends and stories of 52-13135

Collection of nature stories of wild creatures the author has watched in California's redwood country. Included among his "heroes" are a cutthroat trout, a great horned owl, a raccoon cub, whistling swans, beavers, etc. For junior high-school readers.

Booklist 50:425 J1 1 '54

Kirkus 22:200 Mr 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:707 Ap 15 '54 30w

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN (periodical). Scientific American reader. 626p il $6 Simon & Schuster

508 Science 53-11330

A collection of articles taken from the pages of the Scientific American of the last five years. Materials are arranged under the headings: Evolution in space; Structure of the earth; Structure of matter; Atomic energy; Origin of life; Genetics; The virus; Stress; Animal behavior; Origin of man; The brain and the machine; Sensation and perception.

Booklist 50:217 F 1 '54

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 3 '54 200w

Kirkus 21:653 S 15 '53 180w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:149 Ja 15 '54 70w

"This book is heartily recommended to those who would like to get a fresh perspective on the important problems and recent progress of fundamental science. The story is a fascinating one in its own right and also as a corrective for the wrong emphasis in general thinking which tends to identify scientific research more and more with a vast activity in developing horrible weapons carried on by shady individuals who any day now will be revealed as spies and traitors." E. U. Condon
+ Nation 178:114 F '54 750w

"The Scientific American Reader contains both good writing by scientists and good (and accurate) writing by 'popularizers.' Reading this book is a pleasant way of bringing yourself up to date about interesting and sometimes dramatic developments in many fields." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 129:19 D 14 '53 450w

"While a few of the articles were written by trained science writers, such outstanding men in this field as George W. Gray, John E. Pfeiffer and Leon Svirsky, most of the authors are themselves research scientists, and they show surprisingly high ability to write clearly and interestingly... Any one who will read them with the attention they deserve will be rewarded with a clearer insight into many of the problems facing science, and a knowledge of how the scientists are going about solving them." James Stokley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 17 '54 900w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:46 My '54

"While devotees of this magazine will look in vain for some of their favorite articles and will miss the sumptuous illustration that is one of its striking features, they will probably agree that an excellent selection has been made." Henry Guerlac

+ N Y Times p11 D 27 '53 1050w

"An excellent book, well organized and well written, but, it need hardly be said, not a 'reader' in the usual anthology, or chaise-longue, sense. Charts and diagrams."

+ New Yorker 29:91 Ja '54 160w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:256 Je '54 280w

SCOTT, BARBARA ANN, and KIRBY, MICHAEL. Skating for beginners. 106p il $3.75 Knopf

796.91 Skating 53-7638

"Two former champions of the figure skating world combined their knowledge and experience to produce this handbook for young aspirants on the ice. Detailed instructions for the fundamental 'edges' and moves for beginners to master are accompanied by many sketches and photographs to show correct positions. A glossary of terms and a short history of figure skating are included." Library J

Booklist 50:173 D 15 '53

"Any young skater or would-be skater who has seen Barbara Ann Scott in her marvelous Hollywood Ice Revue will want this handsome and informative book, written with her former partner who now manages his own school of skating in River Forest." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ja 24 '54 160w

"The photographs—of learners of many ages and of the authors themselves, both champions—are particularly helpful when revealing weaknesses in form. It is unfortunate for real beginners who need diagrams that these appear only in later chapters." V. H.

Horn Bk 30:37 F '54 80w

"Recommended where there is interest in this sport." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 79:74 Ja 1 '54 80w

"There are over a hundred dramatic photographs and explanatory diagrams. It makes an elegant gift for all young skaters who can read!" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 7 '54 100w

Reviewed by Arthur Daley

+ N Y Times p24 F 21 '54 110w

SCOTT, B. A.—Continued

"This is a well-documented book, neatly and clearly presented, containing many simple and excellent pictures and diagrams, a practical chart, interesting photos, a short survey of the history of skating, an index of terms, a list of clubs, etc." C. H. B.

+ Sat R 37:43 F 6 '54 110w

SCOTT, CECIL WINFIELD, and HILL, CLYDE MILTON. Public education under criticism. 414p $6.35 Prentice-Hall

370.973 Education—U.S. 54-5871

A collection of articles first published in both general and education journals, embodying criticism of modern education. Materials are arranged topically under such headings as: Progressive education; The fundamentals; Religion; Teacher education and teachers; Evaluation of critics and criticisms; How to handle criticisms.

"A very useful collection." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1893 O 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by F. L. Redefer

Nation 179:513 D 11 '54 290w

"Some of the criticisms, this anthology shows, are valid; others are way off the beam. The editors do an excellent job in putting both sides on the table." Benjamin Fine

+ Sat R 37:29 S 11 '54 320w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 80:136 O 30 '54 320w

SCOTT, GEORGE RYLEY, ed. See Swan's Anglo-American dictionarySCOTT, GLENN. Sound of voices dying. 252p $3 Dutton

54-5042

Story of a young man's first year in a southern college.

Kirkus 22:163 Mr 1 '54 160w

"While 21-year-old Mr. Scott's material is unexceptional, he has been able to write in such a manner that he holds the reader's interest to the end of this first novel. Recommended." J. D. Marshall

Library J 79:861 My 1 '54 110w

"'A Sound of Voices Dying' is an interesting novel. Much of its limitation is deliberate, sufficient to Mr. Scott's modest design. Occasional superficiality and glibness is balanced by abundant energy and persuasive sincerity. It is undeniable that Glenn Scott has considerable talent." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p13 S 12 '54 450w

"An awkward but sincere first novel. . . To write a novel, even an inferior one, requires stamina. Mr. Scott has that; now he must work yet harder to achieve depth and distinction." Charles Lee

N Y Times p18 Ag 15 '54 360w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 150w

SCOTT, JAMES MAURICE. Man who made wine; with il. by B. Biro. 124p $2 Dutton

54-10315

"Michel Rachelet has spent many years supervising the vineyards at the château in the Médoc district of France. On the night of his retirement, he reviews his life as he downs glass after glass of wine." New Yorker

Booklist 51:63 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:35 N '54 30w

"The life cycle of wine is expertly told from the first pruning and the sudden flowering, through the various sprayings with copper sulphate and newly slaked lime, to the picking off by hand of every infected or imperfect leaf, and the elaborate vendange, the harvesting of the ripe fruit." Anne Fremantle

+ N Y Times p33 S 26 '54 360w

New Yorker 30:152 S 11 '54 70w

"Exactly the kind of yarn in which sentiment belongs. Mr. Scott writes it with gentle warmth and tenderness, and it will evoke smiles of sympathy from many readers." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 13 '54 750w

Reviewed by Robert Minton

Sat R 37:42 O 30 '54 200w

"To the general reader the technical terms, the vinous allusions and the references to past vintages of fame may seem somewhat esoteric; the appeal of this study, fictitious in form but factual enough in content, will be to the confirmed oenophile."

Times [London] Lit Sup p657 O 16 '53 220w

SCOTT, JOHN DICK. End of an old song. 268p $3.50 Knopf

53-9482

"Patrick, half English, half Scot, recalls his youth in the 30's in Scotland. He relives the anguish of first love, tries to reconcile himself to the ruthless success drive of his best friend, Alastair, and [to] Catherine, whom they both loved, and whom Alastair married. Looming over these three, affecting and shaping their destinies, is the old Jacobite house, Kingis-byres, owned by Capt. Keith, Alastair's eccentric benefactor, and later sold to Catherine's social climbing parents." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 50:279 Mr 15 '54

"J. D. Scott's 'The End of an Old Song' is as good an example as we've seen of the old dictum of give an educated Englishman anything to write about and he'll turn out something not only deft but alluring." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 14 '54 370w

Kirkus 21:797 D 15 '53 230w

"Recommended for the perceptive only." Karl Brown

Library J 79:205 F 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by Patricia Hodgart

Manchester Guardian p1 Mr 30 '54 80w

"Of the English novelists who have emerged since the war Mr. Scott strikes me as being in the best sense the most sheerly professional, and in nothing is this more clearly seen than in his treatment of the contemporary scene. He is essentially of the present, and he knows what is going on in the present. The theme and action of The End of an Old Song gain in significance because they are held all the time in an implicit relationship with the contemporary world, and because this is so they illuminate the larger context of which they are a part. In Mr. Scott we have an authentic instance of the novelist as historian of his times." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:417 Mr 27 '54 550w

"The title of Mr. Scott's novel aptly suggests its theme. Here we see a world in dissolution much as we do in Chekhov's play, 'The Cherry Orchard.' . . Clearly the implications of this story are large. Unfortunately the narrative itself has been dwarfed in the telling to incidents of minute interest. This Götterdämmerung for marionettes is described from the point of view of a young observer, Patrick, whose own emotions are so weak as to be positively juvenile. Inevitably the treatment is bound to seem superficial." James Gray

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 14 '54 450w

"There are riches here, for Mr. Scott's third is one of those rare novels in which life blows across the pages, careless of time and space and convention, making its own moods and weather. Persuasive as a parable and yet alive with topical asides, it is innocent yet wise, lit with laughter and sometimes darkened by despair. And over it all, like the bloom on a grape, is the prevailing color of Scotland, of the heather and the shadows in the wynds of Edinburgh and the high, rolling country around ruined Kingsbyres, 'the open, yet secretive, dark purple of the Covenanting moorland.'" Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p5 F 14 '54 320w

"Here is a novel of charm, intelligence, and wit, in which, regrettably, the real natures and desires of the three main characters are left in a fog."

+ — New Yorker 29:113 F 13 '54 120w

"Scott tells his story in an engaging literate style, and with perceptiveness and sly humor which favorably call to mind the novels of L. P. Hartley, another highly gifted Britisher." Richard M'Laughlin

+ Springf'd Republican p5C F 14 '54 190w

Time 63:110 F 22 '54 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p229 Ap 9 '54 230w

SCOTT, JUDITH UNGER. Cues for careers; il. by Ruth K. Macrae. 251p $2.75 Macrae Smith co.

371.425 Vocational guidance. Woman—Occupations 54-6241

"The author examines requirements, routines, drawbacks, and compensations of possible careers for girls in 20 different fields. She points out vocational relationships between these fields and emphasizes always the ideal of matching personal talents and interests to the job." Booklist

Booklist 50:423 J1 1 '54

"Fairly complete coverage here, with a lot of problems tackled in heartening woman to woman talk."

+ Kirkus 22:157 Mr 1 '54 110w

"Excellent introduction to vocational study, useful in any high school's guidance program, especially in freshman year. For all libraries serving young people." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 79:1066 Je 1 '54 90w

SCOTT, NATALIE ANDERSON. Little stockade. 254p $3.50 Dutton

53-10341

"[This novel] by the author of 'The Story of Mrs. Murphy' [Book Review Digest 1947] is an intimate look at prostitution. As opposed to the 'big stockade,' which is the vice operation run by an overlord, the 'little stockade' is the much more precarious proposition of selling sex without permission of 'the boss.'" Springf'd Republican

Kirkus 21:715 N 1 '53 180w

"Natalie Anderson Scott who wrote 'The Story of Mrs. Murphy,' has an authentic talent for making the sordid credible, and her novel is a startling glimpse of the oldest profession from a new angle."

+ Nation 178:204 Mr 6 '54 60w

"Miss Scott does a commendable job of realizing the untidy settings against which her action takes place and it is to her credit that she does not exploit the obviously prurient possibilities of her subject. The trouble with 'The Little Stockade' is not that it is tawdry; it is tedious, a waxworks instead of a world." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p28 Ja 10 '54 350w

"Because it's a faithful tape recording of whatever happens and because the author probes seriously for human motives in this part of the underworld, 'The Little Stockade' has its own merits as an antiseptic slumming expedition." James Kelly

Sat R 37:20 Ja 30 '54 370w

"The book is a sober attempt to explain a social phenomenon, is not sensational, and is not in bad taste, considering the generous margins permitted in contemporary fiction. It does not explain all of organized vice, however, but only what appears to be a small part of it, and is neither pleasant nor especially interesting reading." R. F. H.

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 24 '54 200w

SCOTT, PETER MARKHAM, and FISHER, JAMES. Thousand geese. 240p il maps $4 Houghton

574.9491 Natural history—Iceland. Geese 54-1099

"This is the engrossing and entertaining story of the 1951 Severn Wild Fowl Trust Expedition to central Iceland in search of the breeding grounds of the pink-footed goose. The English members of the expedition were Peter Scott, bird artist; James Fisher, ornithologist, and Phillipa Talbot-Ponsonby; Icelandic members, Finnur Gudmundsson, ornithologist, and several farmer-guides who tended the horses required for this trek into the interior." N Y Times

Booklist 50:352 My 15 '54

Reviewed by John Bayless

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 9 '54 160w

"James Fisher began bird-watching at the age of two, on his father's knee, and ever since has been 'obsessed pretty strongly, usually furiously, with birds.' Today he is a celebrated ornithologist, traveler, and writer. Peter Scott, his friend since boyhood, has pursued the winged world with a brush, is England's leading bird artist, and also travels and writes. Their pooled zest and authority have produced this gay and excellent account." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 8 '54 300w

"The authors' adventures are graphically told, and in addition to the study of the geese an interesting account is given of other birds that inhabit and the flowers that grace this fertile mid-Iceland oasis. . . The many maps, photographs, and sketches are excellent." A. W. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p2 Ja 5 '54 180w

"Both Scott and Fisher write in a clear, simple and unpretentious manner, with a minimum of scientific data introduced into the main text. For the ornithologist there are appendices, tables and bibliography, as well as excellent indexes." Thomas Foster

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 18 '54 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 8 '54 450w

"For those interested in bird life and nature lore, this should be a popular book."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:204 O '54

SCOTT, ROBERT LEE. Between the elephant's eyes! il. by Frank Hubbard. 243p $3.75 Dodd

799.2 Hunting—Africa. Elephants 54-10560

Colonel Scott, a West Point graduate, who has flown some three million miles in fighter planes, always dreamed of a big game hunting trip to Africa. This is his account of the realization of his dream.

Booklist 51:170 D 15 '54

"An excellent book on big game hunting." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 28 '54 300w

"Thousands of hunters who find (though they never made a safari) delight in reading tales of African hunting will find much to interest them in this book by a man who realized his dream. . . Without bearing down on the drama and suspense, he has offered a very clear and informative tale of a modern safari. It is a book that should interest those who only dream of such a trip, as well as those who are making definite plans." R. R. Camp

+ N Y Times p16 N 14 '54 220w

Time 64:126 O 11 '54 150w

SCOTT, MRS SALLY. Bobby and his band; pictures by Beth Krush. [42p] $2 Harcourt

53-7871

Bobby was the middle child in his family and sometimes he felt out of things. But he was cheerful and happy, so he refused to be "down" when his older brother began to take clarinet lessons. Bobby established his own band and made a lot of other people happy, too. Ages four to eight.

SCOTT, SALLY—Continued

Booklist 50:303 Ap 1 '54

"A lively and thoroughly childlike story. . . Just right for first readers, about whom and for whom this author has a special gift in writing." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:96 Ap '54 90w

Kirkus 22:109 F 15 '54 60w

"This account of a typical childhood activity makes a pleasing story for second- and third-graders to read themselves and for reading aloud to younger children." Elenora Alexander

+ Library J 79:634 Ap 1 '54 70w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 20w

Wis Lib Bul 50:182 Jl '54

SCOTT, MRS SALLY. Chica; il. by Joe Krush. 114p $2.25 Harcourt

Horses—Legends and stories 54-8576

Young Billy wanted a horse, a good horse, in fact a dream horse, but what he got was Chica, little, thin, and scary. But father had done the best he could and Billy determined to do his best to make Chica a good horse, and eventually Chica repaid them in full.

Booklist 51:157 D 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 N 14 '54 150w

Commonweal 61:206 N 19 '54 20w

"Billy's persistent and finally successful efforts to make a friend of Chica are described with freshness and humor and a real understanding of both boys and horses. The line sketches also are full of fun. For older children than this author's previous books." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:332 O '54 70w

Kirkus 22:582 S 1 '54 110w

"In her first book for children of the middle years Sally Scott tells a simple, vivid story packed with the problems and incidents of one boy's life in the West that expresses the feelings of all boys everywhere." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p34 S 26 '54 130w

"Sally Scott with her usual good humor, knowledge of boys and horses, coupled with the ability to write a good story, has caught the attention of boys and girls eight to twelve years of age." L. W. R.

+ Sat R 37:80 N 13 '54 180w

Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54 60w

SCOTT, WALTER DILL, ed. See American peoples encyclopedia

SEABORG, GLENN THEODORE, and KATZ, JOSEPH JACOB, eds. Actinide elements; also included: Index for The transuranium elements, division IV, v. 14B. 870p $11.75 McGraw

541.23 Radioactivity 53-10622

"Survey of the fundamental chemical and nuclear properties of the actinide elements, designed to provide the chemist, engineer, physicist, and biologist with an up-to-date account of the subject." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The book will be of immense value as a reference source not only to those working with these elements but also to chemists and students in general who wish to learn more of this interesting new series. This volume is the most authoritative single source of information about the actinide elements." A. C. Wahl

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:5262 O 20 '54 750w

Reviewed by F. C. Nachod

Chem Eng 61:431 Je '54 200w

"Unlike some of the volumes in this valuable series, the present one incorporates the results of much research carried out since the close of World War II. . . However, several chapters, as their titles show, are devoted to laboratory manipulations and assay techniques. No explanation was found for the inclusion in this volume of the subject index to volume 14B of the series. Unfortunately this out-of-place index precedes the volume index proper, hence libraries cannot readily remove it for insertion in the volume to which it pertains."

N Y New Tech Bks 39:19 Mr '54

SEARLE, HUMPHREY. Music of Liszt [with biographical survey and catalogue of works]. 207p $5 De Graff

780.92 Liszt, Franz

[54-12060]

"The author, a Liszt expert, gives him his due. He points out the ways in which Liszt was a pioneer composer, explains how he helped spread a knowledge of the classics by making piano arrangements, and freely admits that he descended to bombast and tawdriness at times. Includes a fine catalog of the works, numbered anew. This will make for confusion when it comes to identifying compositions, unfortunately. Includes musical illustrations, but not overly technical in approach." Library J

"A balanced, long overdue treatment of a subject uncongenial to most 20th century musicians." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:1894 O 15 '54 80w

"Mr. Searle, who is one of the greatest living authorities on Liszt, has confined his book to a general descriptive outline of the composer's development. In this he seems to have been prompted by a belief that the best way to recommend this puzzling artist is to find some excuse for almost everything he wrote. Since Mr. Searle is not only a gifted composer but an excellent musician, it seems a pity that he has so often allowed the advocate in him to oust the critic." E. S. West

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:238 Ag 28 '54 750w

"On Liszt's influence he writes, persuasively, that in the later works he was not the nineteenth-century romantic but the pioneer who, in his harmony especially, was one of the major prophets of twentieth-century developments. Mr. Searle is himself a composer of progressive outlook and he thus speaks with authority. His book was needed and he has made it a good one."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p530 Ag 20 '54 800w

SEARS, PAUL MCCUTCHEON. Tree frog; il. by Barbara Latham. 45p $2 Holiday

597.8 Frogs—Juvenile literature 54-13296

"The sixth book in a series of life-cycle stories follows the pattern of the series in describing clearly, simply, and accurately the development and life of the common tree frog, with the actual mating described in picture and text. Illustrations are both scientifically correct and artistic. Ends with suggestions on how to have a tree frog for a pet. Ages 7-9." Booklist

Booklist 51:157 D 1 '54

Kirkus 22:636 S 15 '54 80w

"Recommended for all natural history collections." Lois Anderson

+ Library J 79:2498 D 15 '54 100w

"In large type, for younger children, with many charming pictures beautifully printed in two colors, this is one of the few 'thin' short books well worth its price." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p28 N 14 '54 20w

SECONDARI, JOHN H. Temptation for a king. 278p $3.50 Lippincott

54-5603

An exiled king (in a modern Europe) is invited to return to his country and take up again the business in life he has been trained to do—to be a king. His doubts and forebodings are resolved thru the agency of an American journalist and the king decides to do that which is best for his country.

Booklist 50:269; 298 Mr 15 '54; Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:219 Je '54 40w

Reviewed by Seymour Korman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 25 '54 240w

Kirkus 22:132 F 15 '54 200w

"Recommended," E. S. Brown

+ Library J 79:772 Ap 15 '54 90w

"More than once the plot loses itself in loops too intricate to follow. Yet the reader, though, momentarily baffled, is not inconvenienced. He can coast along the epigrammatic force of the dialogue or take in some lovely local color: the pink and white pastels of Sorrento, the blue-jewelled calm of Capri, the stark thrust of Vesuvius, the peerless arc of the Neapolitan bay. Before he knows it, he will have found his track again. All too quickly he has finished the novel. What he will retain is the pleasant aftertaste of good reading: the feeling of having been instructed and entertained." Frederic Morton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 25 '54 650w

"Both as a sympathetic portrait of a deposed ruler and as a satire of journalists and politicians grappling for global influence 'Temptation for a King' is worth reading." James Kelly

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 25 '54 400w

"A genial and yet oddly intense account of a nice young man who happens to be an ex-king and is anxious to escape from the boredom and inertia of five years of exile in Sorrento. It has a light-hearted and impatient spirit that is very appealing."

+ New Yorker 30:141 My 8 '54 50w

"A fateful 72 hours forms the span of this delightful satirical novel. A moving, suspenseful, love-story, it is also a pungent commentary on human behavior." Isabelle Stradley

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 18 '54 60w

"With all its flaws it is still a readable and casually entertaining book. . . . Publication has been timed well for the hammock trade. 'Coins in the Fountain,' Mr. Secondari's first and more tightly written novel, was snapped up by the movies. 'Temptation for a King,' ■ less good book, could make an even better movie." Al Hine

+ — Sat R 37:14 Ap 24 '54 500w

Wis Lib Bul 50:212 O '54

SEEGER, MRS RUTH PORTER (CRAWFORD). Let's build a railroad. [32p] il $2.50 Aladdin

Singing games

M54-868

"Here's something new in the way of ■ picture book, song book, play book, for small boys up to seven or eight, and a boon for nursery schools and kindergartens. The simple text in big type and short sentences is all action: Let's build a railroad." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 11 '54 60w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor My 13 '54 30w

Reviewed by Beatrice Landeck

Horn Bk 30:457 D '54 80w

"Recommended," L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:1063 Je 1 '54 40w

"Mr. Funk's pictures are strong and clear, his workmen bold and real. The dark green key plate is successfully used, and the blatant red and yellow may appeal to the small boys. We wish, as so often nowadays, that the price were less, for if the book succeeds it may lead to others bringing music and story together. It is unfortunate that the music, reproduced from manuscript, is so small." L. S. Bechtel

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 30 '54 150w

"The author has skillfully combined with her brief text some of the folksongs with musical accompaniment. She has created with simple, strong sentences the atmosphere of the work rhythm. This is a gay picture book in greens and red and yellows, showing men and landscapes, tunnels and bridges. The text and pictures are very much of a whole and will fascinate children of all ages." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 11 '54 190w

SEELEY, CLINTON. Storm fear. 214p $3.50 Holt

54-11864

"Fear is the keynote of this chilling first novel about a twelve-year-old boy and three fugitive bank robbers. Set on a lonely upstate New York dairy farm, it is told by the boy, David, a sort of twentieth-century David Balfour." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The melodramatic elements of his first novel and the thought-speech which seem unrealistic for a twelve-year-old deplete the force of a story which has suspense and touches of realism."

Kirkus 22:595 S 1 '54 180w

"Mildly recommended to large fiction collections." H. L. Leet

+ Library J 79:2330 D 1 '54 80w

"There is no apparent moral viewpoint; the sordid figures are neither glamorized nor deprecated. The age of the narrator is never lost sight of. If sometimes he seems precociously able to take care of himself, his value judgments of people are often suspect. 'Storm Fear' is skillfully and subtly done. Its characters are believable, even the Popeye-like Benjie, its action swift, its plot well constructed." Taliaferro Boatwright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 14 '54 400w

"In a year marked by a near-famine of good American first novels of crime and suspense, Storm Fear is a pleasant discovery—not precisely a mystery novel (though with strong elements of mystery), but a tale of terror presented with economy, insight and a surprising amount of technical skill." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p43 N 14 '54 120w

"Its quality is not altogether unlike that of the recent and remarkable specimen called 'The Bad Seed,' by William March, and it is heartily recommended to admirers of that work."

New Yorker 30:243 D 4 '54 100w

SEELEY, MRS MABEL (HODNEFIELD). Whistling shadow. 219p $2.75 Doubleday

54-5365

Mystery story.

Bookmark 13:186 My '54

"The restlessness and urgency of terror keep this chill and taut."

+ Kirkus 21:804 D 15 '53 120w

"Mrs. Seeley's first novel, 'The Listening House' (1938), has been and still is the measure of all the others. In this new tale she is as adroit as ever in evoking and expressing terror, fed fat on intuitions. She does admirably here, too, in establishing the pathetic-sinister quality of the girl and this is all a good deal to have done. But when she explodes her climax it proves a very damp squib not least because it contains one of the most absurdly calculated chases in history." James Sandoe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 Mr 7 '54 180w

"If her newest novel falls short of her first, at least it is a markedly worthy successor—and her best suspense story in fourteen years. Though published as a straight novel, without the Crime Club imprint, it's a pure whodunit—which is perhaps its one serious flaw." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p27 Mr 7 '54 320w

"Final menace may seem overdone, but the book in general has some of the original Seeley

SEELEY, M. H.—Continued

touch on domestic terror and subtly chilling atmosphere, both thinner and more mature than her early masterpieces." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 21 '54
60w

"Smooth job, as always, with some stretchers; cops won't like it." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 37:28 Je 12 '54 20w

SEGAL, ALBERT. Johannesburg Friday. 320p
$3.75 McGraw

53-12881

An account of the lives and reminiscences of four members of a Jewish family during one Friday—the day before the Day of Atonement and, as only she remembers, the twenty-fifth anniversary of Sophie's marriage to Max Leventhal. The place is Johannesburg, South Africa, and racial problems enter at times into the consciousness of various members of the family, but family and personal problems predominate.

Booklist 50:452 Jl 15 '54

Kirkus 22:244 Ap 1 '54 200w

"Despite its competence and insights 'Johannesburg Friday' is, except for the last fourth, a rather dull novel. The author has assembled the necessary ingredients and mixed them not unskillfully. All that is lacking is spirit."

+ — Nation 179:237 S 18 '54 200w

"The author, a native Johannesburger writing his first novel, offers no solutions. It is his purpose to stage the inner drama of a simple family's life and he has succeeded. The South African setting only deepens the eternal note of sadness over the human condition." A. F. Wolfe

N Y Times p19 Jl 25 '54 360w

"Written in a fussy, ruminating style tediously devoid of dialogue, its characters never quicken with the life one feels lurks somewhere within them, and its insights into the human condition often emerge as platitudes. Yet it nevertheless becomes real and moving at times, perhaps because his very lack of 'literary' imagination causes the author to adhere precisely to a kind of life which he apparently knows in his very bones." Jerome Stone

+ — Sat R 37:21 Je 26 '54 280w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54
80w

SEIFERT, ELIZABETH (MRS JOHN GASPAROTTI). Doctor at the crossroads. 275p $3
Dodd

54-5763

The only doctor in a midwestern community, who has become a well-beloved fixture, has to meet the problem of an offer of a larger practice in a St Louis specialist's office. Unkind gossip adds to the problem before Dr Beier makes his decision.

Booklist 50:359 My 15 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 7 '54
50w

"A deeply human story that will have particular appeal to women readers."
+ Wis Lib Bul 50:73 Mr '54

SEIFERT, SHIRLEY. Farewell, my general. 315p $3.50 Lippincott

Stuart, James Ewell Brown—Fiction 54-6109

A novel based on the life of J. E. B. Stuart, especially the period from his courtship of Flora Cooke until the time of his death during the defense of Richmond.

Booklist 50:452 Jl 15 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 180:151 N '54 200w

"It is an attractive and lively story, full of details of life at a cavalry post in the still wild west, and of a sharp realization of a way of life built around horses." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 27 '54
150w

"The appeal will be mainly for older girls ready for historical romance more substantial than Elswyth Thane's novels. Some boys may be interested in the Indian fighting and Civil War strategy which the author includes in careful detail."

Horn Bk 30:360 O '54 160w

"A satisfying and human re-creation."
+ Kirkus 22:272 Ap 15 '54 180w

SELBY, JOHN. Man who never changed. 436p
$3.50 Rinehart

54-9348

A novel about musical America in which the central character is a young orchestra leader whose great ambition is to become conductor of the New York symphony orchestra before he is thirty-five.

Booklist 51:110 N 1 '54

Reviewed by Norman Ross

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 28 '54
420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

"John Selby's most mature and most absorbing novel."

+ Kirkus 22:594 S 1 '54 260w

"A penetrating, careful study of an individual, rather than a personification of Ambition, told thoughtfully and objectively, if with a lack of something—heart? passion?—that keeps it from being truly outstanding... Recommended generally for public library collections." R. T. Bresler

+ Library J 79:2211 N 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by Herbert K pferberg

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 7 '54
400w

Reviewed by James Kelly

N Y Times p52 D 5 '54 320w

"Any character study of overweening ambition is unpleasant sui generis. And any novel about a musician is notoriously dangerous to undertake and difficult to carry off. John Selby in 'The Man Who Never Changed' has had the courage to tackle this forbidding assignment, contriving out of both potential pitfalls a startling and almost entirely believable character in Denis Sandzen, the young American conductor of such genius that he has no exact parallel in reality. This degree of genius is the only element in the whole novel which is not drawn from reality to such photographic extent that the book in large part is more reportage than fiction." Marcia Davenport

+ Sat R 37:19 O 30 '54 700w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 44:318 winter '55 100w

SELLEW, CATHARINE F. (MRS JOHN HINCHMAN). Adventures with the heroes; with il. by Steele Savage. 145p $2.75 Little

293 Mythology, Norse—Juvenile literature
54-5125

A retelling of the stories from the Volsung saga, for grades four to seven. Index shows which of the characters appear in the Wagnerian operas.

Booklist 50:303 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 22 '54
60w

"Stories are well told with a simplicity and good type spacing that make them attractive to 8-year-olds and older ages. . . . Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 79:389 F 15 '54 70w

"Families who listen to these operas, on radio or on records, will find such a book fine to read aloud. There are stunning pictures, most unfortunately overlaid with a variety of harsh colors. Here are tales that fit the fairy tale age, but full of the epic drama, excitement and tragedy that introduces the child to a timeless adult world."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p25 My 16
'54 220w

"Simple as these myths are, they are retold with dignity and understanding. They will familiarize quite young children with the Val-kyrie, the ring of fire, and Andvari's hoard—allusions which everyone enjoys recognizing." Irene Smith

+ N Y Times p24 My 23 '54 150w

Wis Lib Bul 50:218 O '54

SENNETT, MACK. King of comedy; as told to Cameron Shipp. 284p $4.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Moving picture industry 54-10768

The originator of the Mack Sennett comedies, in the early days of the motion picture industry, here tells his life story.

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 12 '54 320w

"Mr. Sennett, as an autobiographer, is highly informal, more interested in what happened than in a neat presentation of it." Rod Nordell

Christian Science Monitor p5 D 23 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:657 S 15 '54 180w

"Fantastically readable book about early movie days. Recommended for paid circulation as well as for cinema and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:2207 N 15 '54 100w

"In spite of the spurious language . . . the too patly remembered conversations, and all the other fakeries that have become standard in the 'as told to' books, this story of Mack Sennett's has so much to tell and has such a core of honesty, that I found myself undergoing a kind of enchantment." Gilbert Seides

+ — New Repub 131:20 D 20 '54 950w

Reviewed by Arthur Mayer

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 28 '54 1100w

"It is a Big Mack Sennett who coughs over the word culture. He disdains educated, literately articulate persons. This attitude may mar the tone of a memoir, but it never hurt one of those Keystone productions a bit. . . Mack Sennett tells his story not at all easily, and not funnily, really. But every man has one confused book in him. Now consider that students of 'cinema' have claimed Keystone Comedies were the only real film art done in America in their period; consider confusion as one of the contrivances of Sennett's works; then it may be excusable in his autobiography. It may even be appropriate." Walker Evans

N Y Times p3 N 21 '54 850w

"A ghostwritten autobiography with all the defects of its genre; it is unbearably glib, suspiciously pat, and altogether unconvincing. Despite all this, Mr. Sennett's story has some things to recommend it."

+ — New Yorker 30:152 D 18 '54 120w

"Engagingly frank and unassuming autobiography." Arthur Knight

+ Sat R 37:20 D 18 '54 750w

SERBEIN, OSCAR N. Paying for medical care in the United States. 543p $7 Columbia univ. press

614.2 Medical economics 53-12029

"A detailed statistical analysis of the methods of meeting medical expenses. Incorporates data on all principal prepayment programs and their operation. This major research effort is amply supported by documentation, charts, tables, detailed bibliography and analytical index. The author, professor of statistics at Columbia, offers a complete, timely picture of medical costs which will serve as a useful reference volume and statistical source book for some time to come." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"This is an exorbitantly expensive, highly mechanical compilation of much, but not all of the significant, already available data on payments for medical care. . . It is to be hoped that this book will not discourage the preparation of a needed report pulling together all available material on the methods of paying for medical care, relating them logically to the health of people and of the economy." J. N. Muller

Am J Pub Health 44:1204 S '54 600w

"Recommended." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 79:384 F 15 '54 70w

Management R 43:484 J1 '54 80w

"This book should prove to be a valuable reference work in its field. It is not at all a crusading book, a provocative book, or a critical book. It proposes no far-reaching solution to controversial problems. Nevertheless to workers in medical schools, insurance companies, hospitals, health organizations, sociologists, economists, and indeed any individual wanting 'authoritative information about the best ways to cover expenses when illness strikes,' it will serve as a useful source book." J. H. Means

+ N Y Times p21 F 14 '54 480w

"The volume should be examined carefully and critically by anyone who wishes to purchase insurance against illness. Although lack of funds prevented the gathering of new data, conditions described pertain only to the year 1951, and there is no guarantee that all the material used is entirely accurate, the volume is nevertheless the most comprehensive analysis of its kind."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:254 Je '54 240w

SETH, RONALD. Operation getaway. 191p $2.75 Day

A British secret agent is parachuted behind the Iron Curtain to rescue the young son of a scientist. Adventure story for ages ten to fifteen.

"Easy-to-read, cloak-and-dagger stuff."

+ Bookmark 14:14 O '54 20w

+ Kirkus 22:439 J1 15 '54 210w

"Mr. Seth's terse, straightforward narrative method is effective. A former secret agent for Britain, he reveals many fascinating sidelights on the techniques of espionage. Except for a minor incident or two, the story rings true." Howard Boston

+ N Y Times p12 S 5 '54 120w

SETON, ANYA. Katherine. 588p $3.95 Houghton

Katharine, duchess of Lancaster—Fiction.

John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster—Fiction.

53-9260

Historical romance about the life of Katherine Swynford, sister-in-law of Geoffrey Chaucer, and mistress and later wife of John of Gaunt.

Booklist 51:42 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:9 O '54 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 180:232 D '54 250w

"Altho it is occasionally slowed by fruity rhetoric and romantic lard, this jumbo historical adds up to a spirited and perceptive story of Plantagenet times." V. P. Hass

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 3 '54 360w

"A moving tale, and Miss Seton's most distinguished book—her first with an historical background outside America."

+ Kirkus 22:541 Ag 15 '54 240w

"Miss Seton combines the historian's respect for chronology and milieu with a novelist's flair for concrete description, drama and dialogue. . . For this latest foray into the past she pored like a seminar student over the works of Coultion, Hulzinga, Jusserand, and Eileen Power. She read biographies of Chaucer, Wyclif, Gaunt, and the English kings of the fourteenth century. . . But unlike most history students she transmuted all she gleaned in the crucible of her imagination and reconstructed it as a living pageant, a scenario that maintains its tension and fascination for nearly six hundred pages." Geoffrey Brunn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 3 '54 700w

SETON, ANYA—Continued

"Miss Seton spent four years writing this book—and thanks to her vivid eye, she recreates fourteenth century England with broad strokes. But despite the atmosphere of creative fact this 'historical' novel is primarily concerned with sex. . . Katherine's point of view is skillfully maintained throughout the book." Nardi Campion

+ — N Y Times p28 O 3 '54 450w
New Yorker 30:170 O 23 '54 90w

"It is a story that demands no intellectual or emotional effort from the reader. . . But Miss Seton presents her facts accurately. Her research extends as far as visiting what remains of any of John of Gaunt's 30 castles and her zest for her subject communicates itself to the reader." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 O 24 '54 550w

"Justly or unjustly, Miss Seton has hitherto been regarded as an author whose works had more popular appeal than literary merit. Nothing could be less true of 'Katherine.' For my money, this intricate and amazing story, with its keen analyses of human character, and with its stirring background of an England disturbed by the Black Death and the consequent social turmoil led by Wat Tyler and John Ball, is one of the best pieces of historical fiction, not merely of 1954, but of the past half dozen years." T. C. Chubb

+ Sat R 37:17 O 9 '54 600w

"An unusually good historical novel." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C O 10 '54 240w
Time 64:132 O 11 '54 190w

SETON, ERNEST THOMPSON. America; selections from the writings of the artist-naturalist; ed. with an introd. by Farida A. Wiley; with contributions by Julia M. Seton; and drawings by [the author]. (Am. naturalist ser) 413p $5 Devin-Adair

818 Natural history—U.S. 53-13530

This volume includes excerpts from Lives of Game Animals and others of Seton's natural-history books; his campfire Indian legends; such favorite stories as "Lobo" and "Krag," and several rare pieces never before published in his books.

Booklist 50:234 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:131 Mr '54 40w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 24 '54 360w

"Dip into this book anywhere and you will want to turn back to the living, if neglected, sources. And everywhere you will find integrity, searching, persistence, imagination, humor." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 4 '54 290w

"Although Seton is no stylist and one wishes at times that his writing were less slipshod, it is always readable, and the suspense and adventure in his animal stories make them enthralling to amateur naturalists of all ages, though the greatest appeal is to young people. For all public and school libraries." M. N. Barton

+ — Library J 79:142 Ja 15 '54 160w

"Miss Wiley has selected and edited well, with sound taste and scholarship. In under 400 pages, taken from Seton's enormous output, she has caught him at his most authentically magical and has preserved a remarkably large part of what is best worth preserving." Alan Devoe

+ Sat R 37:20 Mr 6 '54 550w

"Seton's stories stress the rugged aspects of nature rather than its softer side, scientific study and survival in the wilds rather than its beauties. In vigorous style expresses respect for animal life and reveals vast knowledge of woodlore. 'Ernest Thompson Seton's America' is a fitting memorial to a man of varied talents." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 600w

SETON-WATSON, HUGH. From Lenin to Malenkov; the history of world communism [Eng title: Pattern of communist revolution]. 377p $6 Praeger

335.4 Communism—History 53-9522

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by M. T. Florinsky
Am Hist R 59:351 Ja '54 500w

"Professor Seton-Watson describes and analyzes Communism throughout the world except in the United States. His book is packed with useful information and a fresh point of view. His best chapters deal with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. He is weaker on China and on southern Europe." A. T. Bouscaren

+ — Ann Am Acad 291:195 Ja '54 500w

"This book is a 'must' for all students of international affairs or of communism. It is the best published study of the overt development and operations of world communism. The author has used materials from Communist sources and non-Communist sources, from the Soviet sphere and the free world. His bibliography alone is a valuable contribution to the literature of the field." G. W. Thumm

+ Current Hist 26:60 Ja '54 750w

"A valuable general survey, displaying comprehension and insight."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:332 Ja '54 30w

"Apart from the wealth of factual information this study contains, it can be highly recommended for its scholarly appraisal of the Communist potential, its realistic recommendations for a positive anti-Communist policy and for its often unorthodox, but thought-provoking comments on controversial issues (such as the problem of China-Japan trade). Seton-Watson's book constitutes a lasting contribution and should be read with profit by the scholar, the policymaker and the general reader alike." P. F. Langer

+ Pol Sci Q 69:133 Mr '54 700w

"In spite of its shortcomings—of some of which the author seems to be aware—this work may prove useful for introduction to this important field as well as a work of reference for the more advanced student." A. D. Low

+ — Social Studies 45:114 Mr '54 850w

SETTON, KENNETH MEYER, and WINKLER, HENRY RALPH, eds. Great problems in European civilization; contributors: Crane Brinton [and others]. 649p $7.65 Prentice-Hall
901 History—Sources. World politics 54-7755

"Readings pro and con, on major developments in Europe's history, from 'Freedom and Tyranny in the Ancient World' to 'The Aftermath of World War II.' In all, there are 16 major divisions in this work, centered on such important and controversial topics ■ Protestantism and Catholicism, Industrialization, Imperialism, and Fascism and Communism. Each division includes a descriptive, historical essay by an outstanding authority in the field and is then followed by extensive readings on the subjects. These readings are drawn from the works of men ranging from Thucydides to Acheson." Current Hist

"If one cannot arrange to explore carefully such subjects as the nature of Athenian democracy, papal origins, the emergence of appeasement, or communism as an international movement, he may profitably use this book. There he will find excerpts, with explanations, from documents and histories to illuminate these and other historical problems." Garland Downum

+ Christian Century 71:926 Ag 4 '54 700w

"An excellent source book of readings. . . A particularly interesting selection of readings occurs in the portion devoted to Fascism and Communism, where Toynbee and Burnham present diametrically opposed programs for the democracies to use in combatting these twin evils. The publishers are to be congratulated for the exceptionally well-planned and easy-to-read format."

+ Current Hist 27:64 Jl '54 150w

SEUBERT, ALOYSIUS H. Index to the New Testament; and The topical analysis to the New Testament. 122,142p $10 Universal Publications, Box 201, San Diego 10, Calif.

225.2 Bible. N.T.—Indexes

"A letter from the compiler states that The Index to the New Testament is the result of ten years of study and work, and that it is an expansion of an earlier work of the same title which he distributed, largely in the San Francisco area. The purpose of the Index (which is the first section of the book) as stated in the Introduction, is 'to give to the layman a device by which he can quickly find those religious topics which arise during discussions; those topics which he knows are in the Bible but lacking an Index he cannot find.' This Index is an alphabetical listing of phrases, names, and general subjects. . . The second part of the book, The Topical Analysis to the New Testament, can, according to the compiler, 'be used as a guide to spiritual reading; as a study guide for those who wish to read the New Testament intelligently; or as a series of lesson plans for teachers and parents.' . . The compiler advertises the book as 'a truly Catholic gift,' but says it can be used with any Bible or New Testament. The Catholic viewpoint is evident throughout in the use of terms, and the books mentioned in the brief bibliography are all Catholic in point of view. The Index has the Catholic Imprimatur." Subscription Bks Bul

"Because the reading and interpretation of the Bible are personal endeavors, this book may appeal to some individuals for their own use. However, because of its briefness, the irregularities of its indexing, and the subjective quality of its interpretation it does not have reference value for libraries. For these reasons, The Index to the New Testament is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 25:25 Ap '54 1250w

SEUSS, DR. pseud. See Geisel, T. S.

SEVER, JOSEPHINE ABBOTT. Johnny goes to the hospital. 32p il $1.50; pa $1 Houghton 53-7234

Picture story book about a little boy named Johnny who had to go to the hospital to have his appendix out. Published for the Children's Hospital, Boston, thru the Medical Information and Education Service. For ages 5 to 8.

Booklist 50:126 N 15 '53

"Both story and accurately drawn pictures in gay colors portray realistically the friendly, happy, get well atmosphere of the hospital." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 8 '53 30w

"Can be recommended as authoritative and useful." Mary Strang

+ Library J 79:71 Ja 1 '54 50w

N Y Times pt2, p42 N 15 '53 100w

SEYBOLT, ALAN UPSON, and BURKE, JOSEPH ELDRID. Procedures in experimental metallurgy. 340p il $7 Wiley

669 Metallurgy 53-10614

"A reference book and laboratory manual of tested procedures useful in metallurgical research and other work of metallurgical laboratories. The typical chapter contains a short outline of basic information but consists chiefly of specific descriptions of laboratory apparatus and procedures. Special attention is given both to applications and to limitations of specific methods. The physics or chemistry graduate who is just beginning work in a metallurgical laboratory would do well to read the whole book. Scientists already established in metallurgical research or other work of metallurgical laboratories will find the chapters on specialized techniques, for instance, powder metallurgy, of particular value. Selected bibliographies are included. The authors are associated with the General Electric Company." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 31:5309 D 21 '53 30w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:778 Ap 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:11 Ja '54

SELMOUR, JOHN. Around India [Eng title: Round about India]. 255p $4.95 Day

954 [915.4] India—Social life and customs 54-10458

"A couple of years ago [the author] arrived in the South of India from Ceylon as one of the crew of a local brigantine trader, and in the months that followed moved by train, boat, cart and car around southern India and up through what used to be called the Central Provinces to the Punjab. He of course saw many places of interest, but he writes less of them than of the people (almost all Indian) whom he met and stayed with. Always bearing mind that the author was 'completely won over' and is now a confirmed Indophile, a great deal about India, and especially about the diverse peoples who lived there, can be learnt from this book." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 51:128 N 15 '54

"Less inclusive and organized than Jean Lyon's Just Half a World Away, this has a pleasant and rewarding air of appreciation and camaraderie."

+ Kirkus 22:463 Jl 15 '54 170w

"He makes a good guide, unentangled by emotional prejudices or nostalgia." Dorothy Woodman

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:75 Ja 16 '54 480w

Reviewed by Margaret Parton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 31 '54 500w

"Mr. Seymour is a keen, open-minded and well-disposed observer. He is not afraid of trying new ways and customs and has a refreshing objectivity about his own mores that more people would do well to cultivate. His experiences lead him sometimes to questionable effusions. . . Still the net effect of the book is to build goodwill and understanding between India and the West." M. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p10 O 17 '54 600w

"Mr. Seymour's wit and open-mindedness make up for what he lacks in scholarship and in the ability to organize a book."

+ New Yorker 30:136 O 30 '54 180w

"The one thing about the book which strikes the reader most favorably is the very humble approach of Mr. Seymour to his subject, reminiscent in a way of George Orwell's 'Down and Out' pieces. Not that Seymour is as good a writer; as a matter of fact, he is rather uneven. But he is an interesting and engaging personality, right in the center of his book." J. F. Muehl

+ Sat 37:16 S 25 '54 450w

"Never ponderous or dramatic, always vivacious and amiable, he is at his best bubbling happily away among his peasants, pilgrims and engineers." H. M. Champness

+ Spec p51 Ja 8 '54 800w

"As the author of a racy travelogue, packed with information and scintillating description, Mr. Seymour is a failure, but his style, as leisurely as the pace at which he travels, has a certain charm."

Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Mr 26 '54 200w

SEZNEC, JEAN J. Survival of the pagan gods; the mythological tradition and its place in renaissance humanism and art; tr. from the French by Barbara F. Sessions. (Bollingen ser) 376p il $6.50 Pantheon bks.

292 Humanism. Mythology, Classical. Paganism. Art, Renaissance 52-10520

"This work was originally published in French in 1940 as a study of the Warburg Institute in London. The author tells of the adventures of the Greek gods from the decline of paganism in the fourth century B.C., through the Middle Ages, to the beginning of the Renaissance, and of their brief reflowering from the middle of the fifteenth to the end of the seventeenth century. . . His theme is that the Renaissance was not a resurrection or a rebirth, but a synthesis of ideas and forms that had never died." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

SEZNEC, J. J.—Continued

"Inspiring essay in the history of myths and ideas." Joseph Bram
+ Library J 79:61 Ja 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by Robert Richman
New Repub 129:21 D 21 '53 20w

"M. Seznec, who seems to be an art historian at heart, has produced his book as a scholarly demonstration of the view—often identified in this country with Erwin Panofsky—that there was far more continuity between the Middle Ages and the Renaissance than has been generally recognized. However, most readers will be primarily interested in this volume as simply a big handsome book full of beautiful illustrations."

+ New Yorker 29:111 F 6 '54 180w

"A sympathetic and brilliant book by a distinguished French scholar. . . Well known to scholars in its French version, this book is a remarkable contribution to the history of ideas and taste. The author conducts us through a wonderful labyrinth of learning and the accomplished translation does honor to the clarity and grace of the original." R. W. Lee

+ Sat R 73:15 Ja 2 '54 1050w

"A great amount of scholarly research is evident in Dr. Seznec's study. The fine quality of the book's 92 illustrations, most of them reproductions of unfamiliar paintings and old prints, aids in sustaining the reputation of Pantheon Books for mechanical excellence."

R. S. Brooks

+ Springf'd Republican p10C D 20 '53 200w

SHAFER, ROBERT. Conquered place. 313p $3.50 Putnam

54-7865

A novel of the future. All the country east of the Mississippi has been conquered. An army officer slips into a city near St Louis to plan a bombing of the city and to rescue a scientist held in slavery. The story is of his terrible struggle to accomplish his mission.

Kirkus 22:160 Mr 1 '54 210w

"The novel is difficult stylistically; characters' thoughts are embedded in narrative paragraphs, making very slow reading. Because of heaviness, better scan before multiple purchase." Karl Brown

Library J 79:772 Ap 15 '54 140w

"Though 'The Conquered Place' makes a valiant effort at picturing the grimness of Russian occupation, it achieves nothing like an Orwellian impact. There is invention here, but the grinding of gears is no substitute for the pulsing of blood." C. V. Kellim

N Y Times p15 Ag 8 '54 250w

"The details could have come from Czechoslovakia or Poland; it is their application to American conditions and the author's infinite care in supplying and dovetailing together completely plausible items that makes the total shocking. It's 'It Can't Happen Here' stuff of course, but Mr. Shafer has also succeeded in making it a tale of the degradation and dignity of the human spirit, and it deserves good marks." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 37:15 Ag 7 '54 130w

"Mr. Shafer eschews hysteria and dramatics for a far more convincing grimness. His matter-of-fact tone and attention to detail has an impact of reality that is frightening. No doubt that is his intent." J. C. C.

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 170w

SHAKESPEARE, WILLIAM. Standard book of Shakespeare quotations; compiled and arranged by Burton E. Stevenson. 766p $7.50 Funk

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Quotations 53-6985

"Contains 600 pages of quotations, and an index and concordance of 163 pages with two columns to the page. . . The quotations are grouped alphabetically by subject, and under each subject alphabetically by play or poem, with the result that cognate quotations have been brought together. . . Every quotation has been numbered, except those that are nearly identical and these have been grouped under the same number. . . —Foreword. . . The publishers characterize The Standard Book as 'the largest and most inclusive collection of its kind and, we believe, the best.' Neither the advertising material nor The Standard Book contains any reference to The Home Book of Shakespeare Quotations arranged and edited by Burton Stevenson (New York: Scribner's, 1937, $12.50); Books in Print 1953 lists The Home Book." Subscription Bks Bul

"This is a conclusive reference tool in this field. It is recommended to all reference collections lacking a useful title covering the subject. Unusually well done. Index." George Freedley

+ Library J 78:2040 N 15 '53 20w

"An ideal reference book for those with a 'not quite' memory." C. A. S.

+ Spec p127 J1 23 '54 120w

"The library which already owns The Home Book of Shakespeare Quotations will find The Standard Book of Shakespeare Quotations unnecessary, except perhaps as a supplementary work for circulation. Because of its excellent physical qualities and editorial accuracy, and despite its less extensive scope, The Standard Book of Shakespeare Quotations is recommended for home use and for libraries which do not have access to a standard concordance to Shakespeare's complete works or to The Home Book of Shakespeare Quotations."

Subscription Bks Bul 25:31 Ap '54 850w

SHALLCROSS, JOHN E. Complete picnic book; containing over 200 picnic games and contests; il. by Hamilton Greene. 123p $3 Barnes, A.S.

796 Games. Picnics

54-5407

The author has been picnic director in Cleveland for fifteen years. Out of his experiences he has suggested 200 picnic games for people of all ages from children to "older people." Partial contents: Planning the picnic; Games for children; Games for older children; Games for women; Games for couples; Games for men; Games for older people; Indoor games; When do we eat—and what? Index.

Booklist 50:337 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:218 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 25 '54 40w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:862 My 1 '54 30w

SHANNON, ALEXANDER HARVEY. Racial integrity of the American Negro. 262p $3.25 Public affairs press

301.451 Negroes. Miscegenation. U.S.—Race question 53-11043

"This little book is dedicated to the ideal of racial purity. More specifically, it deals with Negro-White intermixture in the United States, which it portrays as unmitigated evil. All race contact is viewed as harmful to either side. 'Economically, socially, morally, religiously, each race suffers at the hands of the other.' Among various solutions, Mr. Shannon considers the colonization of Africa by American Negroes as highly desirable." (Library J) Index.

"The book should be of interest to those who are anxious to know and understand the beliefs of the so-called racialist school of thought. Needless to say, the arguments of the book would find little acceptance on the part of the anthropologist or any other trained social scientist." Joseph Bram

Library J 79:61 Ja 1 '54 140w

"This book is a crude and unconvincing effort to make palatable the theory that forced emigration or rigid segregation offer an answer to the problem of Negro-white relations in the United States. The only thing that separates this tract from the foul mouthings of the racist press which advocates the same thing is the effort of the author to present his views as being in the best interests of the Negro people. . . . This is a bad book in every sense and it ought to be called to the attention of social studies people as an example of out-moded thinking on racial issues." Jack Abramowitz

— Social Educ 18:236 My '54 500w

SHANNON, ROBERT TERRY. Little Wolf, the rain dancer; pictures by Charles Payzant. 46p $2.75 Whitman, A.

54-9940

Illustrated story about a little Zuni boy chosen to be Fire-god at the annual Rain Dance. When the rains do not come the lad performs a private dance, because he fears it is his fault that the rains do not come, and is rewarded.

Booklist 51:140 N 15 '54

"Good."

+ Kirkus 22:482 Ag 1 '54 70w

"[The author is a feature writer in the motion picture field and lives in Hollywood. Charles Payzant attended the All-Indian Pow-wow at Flagstaff, Arizona, in 1953 to learn about the costumes and symbols which he uses in his lithographs." E. L. Davis

Library J 79:699 Ap 15 '54 60w

"Good social studies material. Recommended." Grace Shakin

+ Library J 79:2498 D 15 '54 80w

"Charles Payzant's pictures, especially those in full color, are exciting and children will love these wild, weird costumes, from which the Katchina dolls are made." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p26 N 14 '54 70w

"Satisfying story. . . . A skilful placement of text and pictures gives a unity to text and illustrations that will charm the young child who is beginning to read independently." Norma Rathbun

+ Sat R 37:70 N 13 '54 100w

SHANNON, TERRY. See Shannon, R. T.

SHAPIRO, ASCHER HERMAN. Dynamics and thermodynamics of compressible fluid flow. 2v il ea $16; semi set $30 Ronald

532.5 Compressibility. Hydromechanics

(53-8869)

"[The author's] purpose in writing this book is to make available to students, engineers, and applied physicists a work on compressible fluid motion which would be suitable as an introductory text in the subject as well as a reference work for some of its more advanced phases." (Pref) The author is Professor of Mechanical Engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Chem & Eng N 31:4820 N 16 '53 10w

Library J 78:2224 D 15 '53 140w

SHAPIRO, HARVEY. The eye. 44p $2 Swallow, A.

811

53-13556

"A collection of lyrics by a young symbolist poet much concerned with Freudian imagery and 'the dark wood' of memory." Sat R

"The poems do not seem to me for the most part either very finished or successful; what is interesting, though, about these evidently literate (and literary) productions is that the things I most dislike in them clearly result from purpose, not accident. The carelessness, the metrical eccentricity, the lines which won't stand up, the flatness at the finish, frequently running into irrelevance or into the stock figure of the poet standing there with his mouth open ('I sing to myself in this stone weather')—these things all strike me as more like courtly disdain than incompetence, though I don't dislike them the less on that account." Howard Nemerov

Atlantic 194:66 S '54 250w

Reviewed by John Ciardi

Nation 178:184 F 27 '54 150w

"His idiom is modern, concise; and he analyzes and dissects his emotions with a curious impersonality, so that occasionally the intensity of feeling is drained somewhat of warmth. The imagery is occasionally obscure, but one feels a poetic integrity throughout his work, and many of the poems, in particular the group of four in 'Battle Report,' impress the reader with the real distinction of their content and expression." S. H. H.

+ Sat R 37:21 Je 5 '54 140w

SHAPLEN, ROBERT. Free love and heavenly sinners. 273p il $3.95 Knopf

B or 92 Beecher, Henry Ward. Tilton, Theodore

A revision and extension of articles which first appeared in the New Yorker. The book retells the story of the trial of Henry Ward Beecher, for adultery with Mrs Theodore Tilton.

Booklist 51:131 N 15 '54

"In reporting this ungodly mess, Author Shaplen has stuck closely to fact as found in the voluminous records of the case. It is an excellent reporting job and readers will no doubt be just as divided on Beecher's guilt today as when the affair shook the country 84 years ago." Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 28 '54 320w

Kirkus 22:564 Ag 15 '54 300w

"Recommended for collections of American biography and history, famous trials—and for the annals of clerical error and hypocrisy." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:1501 S 1 '54 130w

"Almost all of the book is a compilation of the facts from contemporary sources, the principal one being the actual court transcript. The complicated emotional involvements of all concerned are handled with utmost skill, and while the style is rather plain, the subject is vivid and violent enough to supply all the necessary excitement." Robert Parris

+ New Repub 131:21 N 1 '54 1450w

Reviewed by E. H. Smith

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 17 '54 850w

"In reviving what the author calls the 'passion drama' of the period he has brought a celebrated case into contemporary focus and has done it tellingly, assembling the record with stark precision and linking it closely to the moral and religious attitudes of the day." Ishbel Ross

+ N Y Times p3 O 17 '54 1100w

"The story itself, which Mr. Shaplen organizes beautifully and tells with great narrative skill, will interest many; a juicy scandal inevitably makes lively reading. But the real quality of the book lies in its quiet recreation of the period." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 11 '54 650w

"Mr. Shaplen's fine book is a careful, meticulous account of the whole unsavory mess; he has worked almost exclusively from original sources and has done a remarkably fine job of assembling the facts and the evidence. Although his attitude is completely objective, to my mind his book proves that Beecher was, as the New York Sun said, 'an adulterer, a perjurer, and a fraud.'" Herbert Asbury

+ Sat R 37:15 N 13 '54 900w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 14 '54 300w

Time 64:122 N 8 '54 600w

SHAPLEY, HARLOW, ed. Climatic change: evidence, causes, and effects. 318p 11 maps $6; text ed $4.75 Harvard univ. press

551.59 Climatology 53-9041

"The 22 papers comprising this volume were presented at a conference sponsored by the American Academy of Arts and Sciences dealing with the evidences and causes of climatic change. Each paper is the work of a prominent scientist each of whom discusses the problem from the point of view of his specialty, be it astronomy, geology, meteorology, paleontology or geophysics. . . Bibliographies are included." Library J

Booklist 50:234 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:184 My '54 20w

"This volume [is] destined to be a valued reference book for some time to come." H. B. Nichols

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 F 25 '54 650w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 79:206 F 1 '54 110w

"Interesting and informative book." George Gamow

+ Nation 178:506 Je 12 '54 400w

"As in most symposia, the writing in this one is uneven. Some of it is heavy going for the layman, though richly rewarding if you work hard at it." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 132:21 J1 19 '54 1250w

"Under the genial editorship of Harlow Shapley, the twenty-two chapters of the book are presented just as they came from their twenty-two different authors. They represent all of the diverse specialties that can be brought to bear on climate and weather. They also demonstrate nearly the full range of felicity and opacity that is to be found in scientific prose. . . The gain in content, however, offsets the defects of form. Neither the unity nor the diversity of science could have been so sharply drawn by a single author. Nor could a single author have told us so much about climatic change and its role in the history of our planet." Gerard Piel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 21 '54 450w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:38 My '54

"Its twenty-two papers present a well-rounded survey of existing knowledge concerning the climates of the geologic past and an accurate delineation of the problems posed by that knowledge. Incidentally, it is a demonstration of the unique value of such planned conferences of specialists from various fields of study."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:265 Je '54 280w

SHARP, MARGERY (MRS GEOFFREY CASTLE). Gipsy in the parlour. 247p $3.50 Little

54-5098

Novel of life in rural Devon in the Victorian age. It is the story of the happy, lusty lives of the three Sylvester brothers and their large overpowering wives on their Devon farm, and the difficulties and changes involved with the coming of the wife-to-be of the fourth brother.

Booklist 50:342 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:186 My '54 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:312 J1 '54 300w

"Much of the humor in contemporary fiction is cold or bitter, or based upon the writer's sense of superiority toward what he describes. Margery Sharp's zanies are as silly as any, but her heart is wide enough to find a place for them all." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 18 '54 240w

"The finale is a let-down, but the approach has its moments of grandeur. While not top drawer Margery Sharp, it will undoubtedly prove popular."

+ Kirkus 22:159 Mr 1 '54 240w

"There is humor, mystery, good narrative—all in moderation—in this tale of the Devon country with a London episode added for variety and to give us an unforgettable character. Recalling Cluny Brown and The Nutmeg Tree, all libraries will buy this story for the many Margery Sharp readers." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:772 Ap 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 D 8 '53 200w

Reviewed by Dan Wickenden

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 18 '54 440w

"Although this is all done in period costume and dialect, it has a conflict lively enough to keep from sounding like a picturesque legend. Fanny's black and white ruthlessness, her sharp wits, save the saga from too much clotted Devonshire cream. In the Sylvesters' homemaking and their unsentimental regard for each other, there is a good deal of the kind of poetry they would be embarrassed to find in their own bookshelves." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 18 '54 390w

— New Yorker 30:135 Ap 17 '54 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 2 '54 500w

"John Marquand once said of 'Britannia Mews,' that Miss Sharp's work was entertaining, but that 'entertainment is a word now customarily used by critics when they do not like a book.' This book is just that: entertaining. Light, amusing reading and, lest that other connotation still hold, I do like it." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R 37:15 Ap 17 '54 550w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p9C J1 11 '54 200w

"From the first sentence The Gipsy in the Parlour goes straight into the story. . . From this instant a reader is kept constantly in a state of expectation. . . Miss Sharp's writing shows no trace of her own labour, so that she seems to find no difficulty in putting into words precisely what she wishes to say. What she has to tell is nothing very profound; it is simply a first-rate narrative. For hers is the most fundamental of the literary arts, the art of the confident and experienced story-teller; and her self-confidence is catching."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p829 D 25 '53 350w

SHARP, SAMUEL L. Poland: white eagle on a red field. 338p $5 Harvard univ. press

943.8 Poland—History 53-6034

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"It is a hard-hitting book demanding hard-hitting scrutiny." W. S. Sworakowski

+ Ann Am Acad 293:203 My '54 600w

"Mr. Sharp is a stern, almost merciless critic of the mistakes the Polish prewar government made in its foreign as well as domestic politics. But he does not minimize the disturbing effects which outside developments—particularly in London, Berlin, and Moscow—had on Warsaw's own decisions. . . In his account of the Polish underground, the Warsaw uprising, and the final victory of the Kremlin-supported Communist government—through faked elections and brute force—the author quotes extensively from Polish rightwing sources. But though there is no doubt about his anti-Soviet attitude, his lack of enthusiasm for the Polish leaders in London and Warsaw will be resented in some circles." E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 29 '54 350w

"A concise and informative study. . . The author's conscious avoidance of sentiment and his cool and somewhat subacid power-political approach to this emotionally charged issue will undoubtedly arouse criticism, but the serious reader will find much to ponder."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:342 Ja '54 40w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 15 '54 250w

"In an essay in diplomatic history, expounding a power theory of international relations, there would be little to criticize save theoretical considerations, and a contribution could have been made to our understanding of developments in Eastern Europe. Such, unfortunately, is not here the case. This work suffers from an overriding philosophy of realism and the confusion of present power systems with permanent political arrangements. Finally, Mr. Sharp's cavalier treatment of facts and data, his preformed analysis, and his rejection of the Polish heritage lead to the unhappy conclusion that his motives in the writing of this book were more polemic and political than scholarly." J. B. Hoptner

— Pol Sci Q 69:471 S '54 1150w

"The author performs a useful service in attempting a realistic appraisal of the Polish problem, but since he is less impressed by the reality of the Polish spirit than by the reality of Soviet power, he expresses judgments that many will question."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:24 Mr '54 200w

SHAW, JANE (JANE GILLESPIE, pseud). The weir. 180p $2.75 Coward-McCann 54-6534

When Dorothy Pugh came to Riders Ash as governess to fourteen-year-old Ursula she sensed immediately the feelings of tension and unease, particularly as they existed between the girl and her father. But Dorothy Pugh, tho able to help Ursula in some ways, was not able to prevent the final tragedy or alleviate the suffering that followed.

Booklist 50:381 Je 1 '54

"The Weir' is set in what one would judge to be Edwardian times, but it is thoroughly modern in its thinking. Present-day psychiatric understanding of children and of child training is completely evident. In a sense this is an irritating quality, since it gives the governess a prescience which one feels she could not have had. One is irritated too—but this is perhaps the author's intent—by Miss Pugh's hands-off policy with the pupil who needs her so desperately. Nevertheless Jane Gillespie has a superb sense of character, and she writes with rare quality, so that the reader is vividly absorbed in the gloomy events of her little novel." Anne Brooks

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Mr 7 '54 550w

"This is a velvet-smooth chiller, the like of which is seldom seen in this day of extremes." John Nerber

N Y Times p24 Mr 7 '54 360w

"The tragedy, both physical and mental, which ends this book is foreshadowed, but mostly through Dorothy's vague apprehensions and the sibylline utterances of a young neighbor—not through the play of one character on another or their impact on the reader. This is perhaps the greatest flaw in the novel of psychological suspense which might have been made truly horrifying. . . The novel may not have the full effect that its author intended, but even its diminished strength is considerable." L. G. O.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 11 '54 360w

"We need seldom complain of a novel's brevity these days, but it would be generous to do so of this one. Jane Austen, with leisurely invention, might have spun it into something which, though lengthy, would have been rewarding; and one often feels that Miss Gillespie could have, too. But as it is, needed elaboration is sacrificed to an unwise economy." Jerome Stone

+ Sat R 37:19 Ap 3 '54 270w

"The Weir is, in feeling, thought, and phrase, the work of a poet. Though paying homage to at least two exemplars, it is the expression of an individual talent. In her situation Miss Gillespie curtsies to Henry James, in her dialogue to Miss Compton Burnett: both receive original treatment." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p408 O 9 '53 100w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 60w

"Are there," ask the publishers, 'echoes of Henry James, of Miss Compton-Burnett?' The question can be answered affirmatively; the drama of childhood and adolescence, innocence and experience, is recognizably Jamesian, the dialogue and the manner more distinctly Burnett-like. Miss Gillespie is sufficiently talented to raise these echoes without merely irritating her readers. She writes easily and with considerable power. If she is not yet quite the novelist to absorb such influences and make something truly original of them, she has time in a second or third novel to do so."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p625 O 2 '53 260w

SHEA, RICHARD FRANKLIN, ed. Principles of transistor circuits; co-authors: Woo Fong Chow [and others]. 535p il $11 Wiley

621.38 Transistors 53-10944

"This book is devoted to the transistor as a circuit element. The first two chapters are introductory and short, the remainder of the book is devoted to the transistor in low-frequency circuits, high-frequency circuits and in large signal operations where the nonlinear characteristics of the transistor become useful. The book is addressed both to advanced engineering students and graduate engineers. With the needs of the latter group in mind, the authors have taken pains to present and analyze the equivalent circuits and to point out comparisons with vacuum tube circuits. Literature references are included. The authors are associated with the Electronic Laboratory of the General Electric Company." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 78:2039 N 15 '53 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:88 N '53

"Not only is the work a well-organized textbook on transistor applications, but it is also a valuable designer's reference book."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:133 Mr '54 180w

SHECKLEY, ROBERT. Untouched by human hands. 169p $2.50; pa 35c Ballantine

54-7987

A collection of science fiction stories.

Kirkus 22:215 Mr 15 '54 70w

"Easily one of the most attractive books of imaginative short stories in recent memory." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 18 '54 110w

"His work is habit-forming—and we look forward to more of his peculiar anodynes." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p21 My 9 '54 140w

"Of the collections of stories by a single author the only one really ranking with the best of other years is 'Untouched by Human Hands.'" Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 37:14 Ag 7 '54 60w

"The author is easily one of the best of the new crop of science fiction creators." R. F. H. + Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 60w

SHEEAN, VINCENT. Lily. 233p $3 Random house

54-5369

"Lily Soames, a Texas girl who enjoys enormous fortunes from two husbands—one dead, one divorced—is staying in Cannes when she meets a good-looking Spaniard, who sweeps her off her feet. After their final separation, which is partly her own fault, she decides in despair to take refuge in a convent in her native state, but another fate is waiting for her." New Yorker

Booklist 50:298 Ap 1 '54

"Lily' is not Vincent Sheean's best book. That it has a certain sophistication and shimmer is obvious. The right clothes for the right occasion, the routine of Riviera social life, the glimpses of a village square—even the brief mention of a chapel decorated by 'the world's greatest artist' have an air of authenticity.

SHEEAN, VINCENT—Continued

But somehow Ricardo himself never comes alive—except in his passionate devotion to his cause—nor does Lily, who remains only a character in a romantic tale of intrigue." Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 14 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:40 Ja 15 '54 160w

"Mr. Sheean in his search for hidden forces operating in human lives builds up, item by item, a high tower of seeming trifles which will fall of its own weight, crushing Lily and her lover under something which one must interpret as their predestined fate. But his unflinching skill as a writer, his delicate observation of personal moods and habits, the wonderfully well delineated background of the Cannes of the luxury hotel and the sordid waterfront are not enough to make this study of Lily Soames seem an entirely authentic exploration." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 14 '54 550w

Reviewed by John Neff

N Y Times p5 Mr 14 '54 460w

New Yorker 30:126 Mr 20 '54 80w

"Up to now, Mr. Sheean has been least successful in his novels; this one is his best simply because it says most precisely what the author means." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 1 '54 230w

Wis Lib Bul 50:74 Mr '54

SHEEAN, VINCENT. Thomas Jefferson; father of democracy; il. by Warren Chappell. (Landmark bks) 184p $1.50 Random house; to schools and school libs only $1.68 Hale, E.M.

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas—Juvenile literature 53-6260

"Sharply drawn episodes bring Jefferson to life, and the story of his vast accomplishments, much of whose drama lies in an intellectual field difficult to make interesting to youngsters, is told so clearly that eleven- to fourteen-year-old readers are unlikely ever to forget them." New Yorker

Booklist 50:226 F 1 '54

"Mature interpretation of 'Thomas Jefferson.' It in no way, however, supersedes Clara Ingram Judson's superb biography—the best to date for teen-agers." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p59 N 15 '53 30w

"Rich in ideas, interpreting a great genius far ahead of his time, it is highly recommendable." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:107 Ap '54 90w

"Superb analysis of the man and the personalities and issues with which he dealt." + Kirkus 21:537 Ag 15 '53 110w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr

Library J 78:1857 O 15 '53 120w

"Rather austere in tone, this is an admirably clear presentation of the role Jefferson played in the establishment of the nation and in the formative days of the Republic." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p28 F 14 '54 40w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 29:198 N 28 '53 70w

Wis Lib Bul 50:79 Mr '54

SHEED, FRANCIS JOSEPH, comp. Born Catholics. 279p $3.50 Sheed

922.2 Catholic church 54-11144

"This book is composed of 19 short essays, one each by Pamela Carswell, Erik von Kuehnelt-Leddihn, Caryll Houselander, Frederick Wilhelmsen, Riley Hughes, Bernard Wall, Cecily Hastings, Clare Nicholl, Antonia White, R. R. Stokes, Jean Charlot, Hugh Stott Taylor, Mary Reed Newland, Noël Sullivan, Maisie Ward, Harman Grisewood, Jane Wyatt, J. G. Shaw and Hilaire Belloc, telling of their religious and spiritual history within the Catholic church as 'born Catholics.'" Library J

"Not one of the essays is dull or a pose. There is blood on the pages, and tears, and sometimes the sweat that comes off on the hands when one reads the Terrible Sonnets of Manley Hopkins. . . . In a word, the book is entertaining, perplexing, continually revealing in its unfolding of the modern Catholic mind." Francis Sweeney

+ Commonweal 61:342 D 24 '54 650w

"A book which Catholics will find inspiring and which non-Catholics would find enlightening if they could be induced to read it."

+ Kirkus 22:704 O 1 '54 250w

"These people have lived their faith rather differently from one another and a number have written of their lives in a most charming manner, but all have something significant to say from experience, about their religious and spiritual lives. Except for Belloc, these essays were written at the editor's suggestion. Informed Catholics will seek out this title recommended for theological, university and larger public libraries." R. P. Bartolini

+ Library J 79:1587 S 15 '54 160w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 140w

SHEEHAN, DONALD HENRY, ed. This is America, my country. 2v il $9.90; art craft ed $11.90; Congressional ed $20 Wise

973 U.S.—History. U.S.—History—Sources 52-900

For descriptive note see Annual for 1952.

"Though This Is America, My Country does not fill the documentary reference use of either Commager's Documents of American History or Macdonald's Documentary Source Book of American History, or the pictorial reference use of the Pageant of America or Album of American History, it does succeed in its purpose of providing for young people and the average adult reader an inspiring story of the American heritage by its combination of contemporary accounts and informative introductory essays and pictures. It is recommended for the small library not having a large collection on United States history, and for the large library wishing to broaden its collection of American history and provide circulating material for general reading. It is also recommended for home use where it will get the leisurely reading for which it is most suited."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:11 Ja '54 1000w

SHEEHY, MRS EMMA DICKSON. Fives and sixes go to school. 372p il $5; text ed $3.75 Holt

372.24 Education, Elementary 54-6619

"Out of her years of teaching very small children, an educator suggests a system of progressive education for pupils in kindergarten and the first grade. Addressing herself primarily to teachers, she presents specific situations to illustrate progressive education in action during the beginning school years." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 50:372 Je 1 '54

"It is rare to find within the covers of one book so much careful attention to the concrete detail of planning equipment and carrying out a program. . . . None of this material, moreover, is presented in an over-simplified, 'how-to' fashion. There is always encouragement offered to the teacher to proceed in her own way, using the resources that are available to her. . . . A discussion of parent-teacher relations, in Part III, and attractive photographs from numerous schools and localities add to the usefulness of the book." Claudia Lewis

+ Sat R 37:30 S 11 '54 650w

SHEEN, FULTON JOHN, bp. Life is worth living; second series; il. by Dik Browne. 237p $3.50 McGraw

248 Christian life

A second book of TV talks by Monsignor Sheen, twenty-six in number.

Booklist 51:163 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:33 N '54 10w

"We can only be grateful to Bishop Fulton J. Sheen for making possible the publication of the second series of 'Life Is Worth Living.' This book of popular meditations represents the last half year of telecasts which the bishop has given and which have secured such a tremendous response from all over the country. It is easy to understand his popularity from a reading of this thoughtful book."

Clarence Seidenspinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 28 '54 290w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 21 '54 20w

"Will be welcomed by all of his old fans—and undoubtedly some new ones as well." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p40 N 21 '54 50w

SHEEN, FULTON JOHN, bp. Way to happiness. 192p $2 Garden City bks.

248 Christian life 54-7278

Brief articles on applying "spiritual principles to the basic problems of individual and social life today." Articles are arranged under such headings as: happiness, work, love, children, youth, inner peace, man.

Booklist 50:335 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:184 My '54 20w

"It is human hearts and the minds behind them to which the Bishop appeals. With his facile pen, a host of similes and a fine understanding of the Christian philosophy of man, he outlines ideas and offers suggestions that should be helpful to all but the more than mildly agnostic." J. J. Keating

+ Cath World 179:238 Je '54 220w

Reviewed by Clarence Seidenspinner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 31 '54 320w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 11 '54 100w

SHELDON, WILLIAM HERBERT, and others.

Atlas of men; a guide for somatotyping the adult male at all ages. (Human constitution ser) 357p il $10 Harper

573 Somatology. Man 53-5450

"Guide to the morphological classification of men according to the components of modern somatotyping methods, analyzing 'the pathway along which the living organism is destined to travel under average conditions of nutrition and in the absence of grossly disturbing pathology.' Supplements analyses of the author's previous volumes in the 'Human Constitution Series.' . . For medical, psychiatric and psychological collections, anthropological and physical education departments." Library J

"Excellent arranged guide. . . Recommended." Lee Ash

+ Library J 79:1515 S 1 '54 110w

"No book for popular reading but a technical working guide for those interested in the human body and its functioning—physical educators, actuaries, nutritionists, physicians, geneticists. At the same time it is probably one of the most significant examinations of the height-weight factor of human physique that has been done in this country." Jack Howard

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 1 '54 650w

SHELLEY, MARY WOLLSTONECRAFT (GODWIN) (MRS PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY). My best Mary; the selected letters; ed. and with an introd. by Muriel Spark and Derek Stanford. 240p $3.50 Roy publs.

B or 92 53-9781

A collection of the letters of Mary Shelley, whose famous husband called her "My best Mary." The letters begin with one to Shelley, written in 1814, and span the years to 1848, long after Shelley's death. Bibliography. No index.

"Mary was not a skilled writer of letters; certainly they have no charm. They do reveal both Mary and Shelley and that is their value. . . For small libraries—and for all who would give the last word to students." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:548 Mr 15 '54 130w

"Her letters, of which this volume contains a well-chosen and lightly annotated selection, show that there was little of the blue-stocking in her. They are unliterary, spontaneous, and self-revealing. And if the later ones show a growing respect for the proprieties, both the interests of her son and her sense of loneliness and shipwreck sufficiently explain it." H. I. A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 10 '53 160w

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis

New Statesman & Nation 45:649 My 30 '53 120w

New Yorker 30:132 Ap 3 '54 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 9 '54 140w

"For their purpose the editors have been wisely discriminating, and although many of the letters are scrappy, their totality forms an intimate portrayal of Mary." E. A. Bloom

+ Sat R 37:17 Je 12 '54 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p248 Ap 17 '53 160w

Wis Lib Bul 50:178 Jl '54

SHEPARD, WILLIAM FINLEY. Price control and the reign of terror, France, 1793-1795. (Calif. Univ. Publications in history) 139p $3; pa $2 Univ. of Calif. press

944.04 France—History—Revolution. Prices

"The title of this study understates its scope, for decontrol as well as control is treated. From the economic viewpoint, the study also covers both the Reign of Terror and the Thermidorian Reaction. If, Dr. Shepard points out, the Revolutionaries of 1793 were to make the Revolution succeed in the face of food shortages, soaring prices, threatened invasion, and depreciation of the currency, they had to resort to stern measures, which meant government regulation or economic dictatorship. Something had to be done to quiet the masses. The Laws of the General Maximum of September 29, 1793 subjected to price control a number of articles of prime necessity, including butter, salted fish, wine, firewood, sugar, shoes, and tobacco. This measure stood in direct contrast to the earlier policy of laissez faire under the National Assembly." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Following closely the ideas of Albert Mathiez on the French economic policies of 1793-95, the present work is too derivative to offer any independent confirmation of his views. Nor does it replace or amend the work of Seymour Harris on The Assignats. . . Perhaps the author has been allowed, or obliged, to publish prematurely, owing to institutional or professional pressures; in any case, what the work mainly shows is that its author has personally learned a great deal about the French Revolution." R. R. Palmer

+ Am Hist R 59:429 Ja '54 160w

"All in all, I was disappointed in the monograph and believe that, if economic historians and economic planners are to benefit from studying the French revolutionary price-control experiment, this slim volume does not provide a satisfactory account of that experiment." W. C. Scoville

+ J Pol Econ 62:352 Ag '54 600w

"Short, well-documented study. . . The chapters on the Thermidorian period serve as a useful corrective to the view that things changed with dramatic suddenness following the execution of Robespierre, St. Just, and other Terrorists."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:24 Mr '54 200w

SHEPHEARD, PETER. Modern gardens; masterworks of international garden architecture. 144p il $9.50 Praeger

712.6 Gardens 53-10486

After a brief introduction the book is composed of photographs of modern gardens and garden details in Europe, South America, and the United States. In almost all cases the small garden is featured.

SHEPHEARD, PETER—Continued

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1317 J1 '54 20w

"Mr. Shephard, with knowledge and sensitivity, shows how quite a new conception, with new motifs, has gradually been making the small garden, all over the world, as rich and pleasurable in its own way as were the grandiose conceptions of the past. . . This book is well produced and beautifully illustrated."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p20 Ja 1 '54 300w

SHEPHERD, ROY E. History of the rose. 264p il $4.75 Macmillan (N Y)

635.93 Roses

54-8662

An account of the origin, evolution, and distribution of the genus Rosa. It is based on a study of the literature of the subject, and on the author's personal experience. Bibliography. General index. Index of rose names.

Booklist 50:337 My 1 '54

"For the expert, this is a book that, because of its authenticity and thoroughness, will be valuable as a reference work. For the amateur, it offers enlightenment of some of the mysteries of rose nomenclature, and a better understanding of their culture." Art Kozelka

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 2 '54 160w

"A book to be treasured by all who love roses." W. E. Brewster

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 29 '54 430w

Kirkus 21:691 O 1 '53 160w

"The book will be of value to professional botanists and rose specialists. Since the actual cultivation of roses is not discussed the book will have little appeal for amateur gardeners. . . Too specialized for the average public library, but recommended for all botanical collections." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:62 Ja 1 '54 140w

"Essentially it is an orderly record of the records gathered from all over the world and brought up to the present day. As such it should prove invaluable to those who seek to round out their rose knowledge without devoting their lives to that accomplishment."

R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 15 '54 110w

SHEPHERD ROY E. Roses; il. by Rebecca and Douglas Merrilees. (Rinehart's garden lib) 96p $1.50 Rinehart

635.93 Roses

54-5329

A brief book on the growing of roses. Partial contents: Soils and nutrient requirements; Where and how to plant; Classes and varieties; Diseases and pests; Pruning; Winter protection. Allied hobbies.

Booklist 50:281 Mr 15 '54

Kirkus 21:781 D 1 '53 20w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 79:207 F 1 '54 30w

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 15 '54 20w

SHEPLEY, JAMES ROBINSON, and BLAIR, CLAY. Hydrogen bomb: the men, the menace, the mechanism. 244p $3 McKay

623.451 Hydrogen bomb

54-4446

"The scientific and political odyssey of the H-bomb is the main theme of this book by two Washington correspondents of Time and Life. The story is also the triumph of Edward Teller, the scientist the authors regard as most responsible for the success of the American H-bomb. . . Authors James R. Shepley and Clay Blair Jr. have drawn on the most current documentation, particularly in the Oppenheimer security risk case, though they appear to have relied as well on partisan sources. They avoid scientific complexities and security trespasses." N Y Times

Booklist 51:100 N 1 '54

"The book's jacket says: 'Now the public can pass judgment on the men who made the decisions, their sincerity and their fitness for handling the most dangerous secrets of all time.' Unfortunately the authors influence the reader's decision. Their presentation is dramatic rather than strictly objective; their bias is obvious even though their discipline as good reporters compels them to give all the facts obtainable. Edward Teller is the hero and Robert Oppenheimer is the menace." T. L. Rettger

Chem & Eng N 32:4124 O 11 '54 600w

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 17 '54 450w

"Though simplified, the details of construction are presented with enough scientific background and detail to interest the informed laymen."

+ Kirkus 22:657 S 15 '54 270w

Reviewed by Eugene Rabinowitch

New Repub 131:16 D 27 '54 3450w

"The book is competently done and is, within certain limits, a first-rate reportorial job. . . There will be some disagreement in detail about the story of the great H-bomb controversy as Mr. Shepley and Mr. Blair tell it. It is hard to see how any one could disagree that they have demonstrated the proposition that our Federal government was not and on the evidence is not up to making decisions where technical and political considerations must be weighed together. And that is a frightening proposition." N. S. Finney

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 3 '54 1200w

"The book is clearly written and interesting. . . Messrs. Shepley and Blair have written a story of mental struggles and strategic problems that is both provocative and worth the reading—even with some reservations." Peter Kihss

+ N Y Times p7 O 3 '54 750w

"The book is a statement of the Time-Life thesis of the 'Oppenheimer Plot' and Teller's heroism. There is nothing much new in it; it is not a complete study of the H-bomb, nor are we likely to get such a study in our generation. It is a readable exposition of one side of the argument. 'If it is accepted by the public as a true account of America's struggle to achieve a thermonuclear weapon,' Gordon Dean notes, 'it will be nothing short of a tragedy.'" Jack Howard

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 10 '54 750w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:14 O 30 '54 1400w

"These are dangerous days. Public opinion must be informed. 'The Hydrogen Bomb' may possibly perform a valuable service by awakening a desire for a deeper understanding of the complicated problems of morals, statecraft, and technology posed by the availability of thermonuclear weapons. It would be tragic if its vigor and air of certitude led to its acceptance as the whole or even the essential truth of the period of American atomic weapons research that it covers." J. H. Wolfenden

Yale R n s 44:296 winter '55 410w

SHERIDAN, FRANCIS CYNRIC. Galveston Island; or, A few months off the coast of Texas; the journal of [the author] 1839-1840; ed. by Willis W. Pratt. 172p il $3.50 Univ. of Tex. press

976.4 Texas—Description and travel. Texas—History—Republic, 1836-1846 53-11770

The author of this diary was a young Irishman in the British diplomatic service, sent to Texas to find out how matters stood there and to give an opinion on whether Great Britain should recognize the Republic. This is his private journal containing personal reactions and observations and a record of his own movements and activities.

Reviewed by R. N. Richardson
Am Hist R 60:217 O '54 160w

"The editor has made some interesting explanatory notes, and his introduction is enlightening. Out of all the Texas journals this one should take its place at the top of the list." T. D. Clark
+ Sat R 37:44 My 1 '54 320w

SHERIDAN, JUANITA. Waikiki widow. 190p
$2.75 Doubleday

Detective story.

53-11653

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 14 '54
100w

Kirkus 21:703 O 15 '53 60w

"Miss Sheridan gives us a sort of loop-the-loop treatment, soundly dizzying." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 D 13 '53 150w

"I am so personally fond of Juanita Sheridan's heroines, Lily Wu and Janice Cameron, that it grieves me to report that their latest case, The Waikiki Widow seems—to me, at least—well below their recent high standard." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p15 D 27 '53 80w

"The cast of this pleasant story seems a bit overcrowded, but the Sheridan touch on Hawaiian background is as satisfying as ever." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ja 17 '54
80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:71 Ja 23 '54 20w

SHERIF, MUZAFER, and SHERIF, CAROLYN (WOOD). Groups in harmony and tension; an integration of studies on intergroup relations. 316p il $3.50 Harper

301.15 Groups (sociology) 53-8116

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Those interested in the study of small groups will find much in the book of interest from a theoretical and methodological point of view on an important current problem." G. A. Theodorson

+ Am J Soc 59:497 Mr '54 700w

"The book is well written and easy to read. The Sherifs have drawn from many sources and especially from the sociological literature for illustrations and ideas. They are especially strong on illustrations and two chapters of the work are devoted to a detailed description of in-and out-group behavior in a boys camp. This work should be useful as an introduction to the social psychology of group behavior and as a source of ideas to be tested by future research." A. R. Lindesmith

+ Am Soc R 19:229 Ap '54 500w

"Although it cannot be said that the Sherifs have contributed any new basic concept in this volume, and despite some obscurities of expression, they have performed a very useful service in integrating approaches and in pointing out the road for further research."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:466 D '53 200w

SHERIF, MUZAFER, and WILSON, MILBOURNE OTTO, eds. Group relations at the crossroads. 379p $4 Harper

301.15 Groups (sociology) 53-11321

"This volume presents thirteen lectures on problems of human relations within and between groups, lectures first given in April 1952 at the Second University of Oklahoma Conference in Social Psychology." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"The caliber of the contributors is such as to make this volume an important reference work, regardless of its other merits and defects. . . The work as a whole fails to contribute either to the delimitation of a research field of 'group relations' or to an interdisciplinary integration. The merit of the book, then, lies in the several excellent individual articles it contains." R. H. Turner

+ — Am Soc R 19:357 Je '54 900w

"This is an important and richly loaded book that will amply repay close study by both specialists and generalists in the study of human affairs." J. B. Casagrande

+ Ann Am Acad 293:185 My '54 440w

SHERLOCK, PHILIP MANDERSON. Anansi, the spider man; Jamaican folk tales; il. by Marcia Brown. 112p $2.50 Crowell

398.2 Folklore, West Indian 54-5619

Retelling of some of the folk tales of the Caribbean in which Anansi, the Spider Man, is the central point. "Anansi was a man and he was a spider. When things went well he was a man, but when he was in great danger he became a spider." For ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 51:157 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:12 O '54 20w

"A distinguished addition to folklore publications for young readers." M. B. K.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 14 '54
160w

"Afro-Caribbean folk tales retold with a charm that comes from an unpretentious style. . . There's a good feeling of the area here."

+ Kirkus 22:338 Je 1 '54 90w

"It was necessary to adapt the dialect in these stories, just as it was in the Br'er Rabbit tales, but the omission of such colloquialisms as 'mouth chat' instead of gossip has taken away some of the regional flavor. Children will enjoy the stories because of their sly native humor, a quality which Marcia Brown has interpreted in her illustrations." Augusta Baker

+ — N Y Times pt2 p30 N 14 '54 140w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:217 N 27 '54 30w

"The line drawings are wholly worthy of the text. Marcia Brown has reached a new high level in her work as an illustrator. The profound understanding of the tales her drawings show is matched by their simplicity, elegance, and imaginative verve. Miss Brown and Mr. Sherlock deserve our thanks and congratulations for a difficult achievement and a distinguished book." M. C.

+ Sat R 37:81 N 13 '54 220w

SHIH CHING. Classic anthology defined by Confucius [tr. by Ezra Pound]. 223p $5 Harvard univ. press

895.11 Chinese poetry—Translations into English 54-5996

"305 new poems by Mr. Ezra Pound, and with none of the snags that make all our attempts to read the Cantos so problematical, so wearing. Of course, the poems are translations, but as always the Translator General of our time has made each one his own. A lively and informative introduction by Mr. Achilles Fang tells us what we need to know about the place of the poems as the primal classics of Chinese culture." Canadian Forum

Booklist 51:170 D 15 '54

"The place of the new book in [Pound's] total output can only be determined after long familiarity: at present some of the poems seem to me to contribute to the Anthology without coming out in the open as English verse, but a very large number are fully realized." William Blissett

+ Canadian Forum 34:166 O '54 600w

"Scholars and literateurs interested in Chinese poetry, admirers of Ezra Pound as an artist, will all be interested—but it is at best a choice and selective public."

+ Kirkus 22:427 Jl 1 '54 200w

"Pound remains the master technician, and whether these translations are or are not scholar-faithful, Pound has put a great book into living English measures." John Ciardi

+ Nation 179:236 S 18 '54 50w

SHIH CHING—Continued

"Since I am totally ignorant of Chinese, of the provenience of these poems, and of the Confucian definition asserted in Ezra Pound's title, I can react only in a blundering kind of way, hoping that I shall not make too many absurd mistakes. . . The 'Anthology Defined' is a book of endless charm, and a necessary text for writers of verse." Dudley Pitts
N Y Times p42 S 12 '54 550w

"An exciting introduction for readers of English to one of the great books of a great culture."

+ New Yorker 30:195 N 6 '54 130w

"The volume doesn't read like a one-man show; one of its great achievements is to sound sufficiently anonymous to mirror the variety of the originals. Pound's mastery of technique is by now so complete that he can withdraw the drama of his personal dealings with the originals almost completely from sight, employ with self-effacing ease an array of idioms ranging from the mediaeval . . . to the Browning monologue . . . or the jive cadenza . . . and so render with the fine impersonality of the Elizabethan song-books a far wider variety of themes than the song-books afford any precedent for." Hugh Kenner

+ Poetry 85:159 D '54 1500w

Time 64:114 S 13 '54 160w

SHIPPEN, KATHERINE BINNEY. I know a city; the story of New York's growth; il. by Robin King. 192p $2.75 Viking

974.71 New York (city)—Juvenile literature
54-8450

The history of the growth of New York city from a cluster of huts on the tip of Manhattan in the 1620s to the present city of eight million inhabitants. Shows the development of the houses, lights, water supply, fire department, police, markets, parks, schools, libraries, subways, bridges, and tunnels. Index. For ages ten to fourteen.

Booklist 50:327 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 170w

"In this well-informed account of New York City, Miss Shippen makes as fascinating as her earlier volumes of history the picture of the city's growth from the days of the earliest fort to the present." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:188 Je '54 120w

Kirkus 22:123 F 15 '54 130w

"A fascinating book for any library." Mary Strang

+ Library J 79:866 My 1 '54 40w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 16 '54 100w

"Superbly told. . . The brief histories of public utilities and safeguards, such as housing, city markets, public library and the police force, are informative, spiced with lively bits from contemporary sources and written with imagination. The book is for anyone, New Yorker or not, who has watched a fire engine racing to a fire or has seen the street lights go on at dusk, and it will be of special value in social studies projects." Iris Vinton

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 21 '54 180w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinhead

New Yorker 30:221 N 27 '54 30w

"This is not a chronological history of New York, but an excellent picture of the city's growth as it has met the needs of the men and women who live in it." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:66 My 15 '54 180w

SHIPPEN, KATHERINE BINNEY. Pool of knowledge; how the United nations share their skills [foreword by Benjamin Cohen]. 148p il $2.50 Harper

341.132 Technical assistance. United nations (organization) 54-6340

"Excellent material on the work of the United Nations' Technical Assistance Board and on some of the countries it has served." Bookmark

Booklist 50:365 My 15 '54

+ Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 20w

"It is a deeply thrilling book, stirring the imagination far more than a mystery novel." P. O. Marsh

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 110w

"An important little book in that it so clearly and briefly gives young people an idea of how far-reaching the work of the UN is." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:188 Je '54 140w

"Authoritatively written, by an author with a good record of historical and biographical non-fiction, this makes a fine addition to U. N. literature for young people."

+ Kirkus 22:121 F 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:721 Ap 15 '54 20w

"In the small space of each chapter much is packed of recent history, and of conditions generally in each country. Teen-agers will find this inspiring in several ways, not the least of which is the probable broadening of their visions of their own careers in many fields."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 16 '54 120w

"The bibliography includes mostly books for adults and the title of the book is unfortunate, but the book itself is extremely readable and fills a real need in a new field." L. S. Kenworthy

+ Social Educ 18:378 D '54 170w

Wis Lib Bul 50:184 Jl '54

SHIRAS, GEORGE, 1859-1942. Justice George Shiras, jr. of Pittsburgh, associate justice of the United States Supreme court 1892-1903; a chronicle of his family, life, and times; ed. and completed, 1953, by Winfield Shiras. 256p il $4.50 Univ. of Pittsburgh press

B or 92 Shiras, George, 1832-1924

"In this posthumously issued book, the picture is presented of a capable jurist who only once attracted much public attention, but who quietly performed his duties on the bench of the United States Supreme Court as he saw them. . . Mr. Justice Shiras was, as the author indicates, a typical product of his time, a conservative judge on one of the least progressive benches of the last century. Begun by his son and completed by another member of the Shiras family, this biography places the Justice not only against his family background but against his times as well." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. W. Levy

Am Hist R 59:729 Ap '54 260w

"George Shiras's biography of his father is neither arid nor academic largely because it examines the legal mind summarily and concentrates on matters more interesting to the general reader." J. F. Hopkins

+ Sat R 37:45 My 1 '54 360w

"The editor of this biography offers persuasive evidence here for his argument that Mr. Justice Shiras did not vacillate in his judgment concerning the constitutionality of the tax. Also advanced for consideration is the possibility that no member of the Court changed his views with regard to the basic invalidity of the income tax provision. For these points, alone, this book makes profitable reading, especially for lawyers."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:13 Mr '54 250w

SHIRER, WILLIAM LAWRENCE. Stranger come home. 369p $3.95 Little

54-6891

"The nightmarish horror let loose in William L. Shirer's compelling novel is something called O'Brienism and its perpetrator is a gross United States Senator named O'Brien, chairman of the Senate Committee on Security and Americanism. The hero of the story is Raymond Whitehead, a news commentator. The action occurs during the last half of 1949 and all of 1950, with scenes in Europe, New York, Washington and Connecticut." N Y Times

Booklist 50:421 J1 1 '54

Bookmark 13:237 J1 '54 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 My '54

"If a reader does not live in a political vacuum, he will read this book as a passionately-written, sincere polemical work. But as polemics, it seems to this reviewer gravely at fault. . . In the novel it is simple to make O'Brien vicious and wholly corrupt, the ex-Communists vindictive liars, the public power commissioner (who gets involved for no good reason) and the radio executive turncoats, and the heroes smug and virtuous. But when the reader cannot help but supply his own names from the newspapers, is Mr. Shirer being altogether fair? It seems to this writer that if Mr. Shirer wishes to write political essays it would be more honorable for him to name names." William Pfaff

— Commonweal 60:276 Je 18 '54 600w

"Let's hope that some who refuse to recognize what is happening, as reported in the daily press, will find it more convincing when recorded in human terms in a novel."

Kirkus 22:245 Ap 1 '54 190w

"An intensely interesting polemic novel. . . Author, subject and dramatic presentation merit wide reading." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1058 Je 1 '54 150w

Nation 178:548 Je 26 '54 240w

"'Stranger Come Home' is as current as today's headlines, and as threatening. Frankly, a pièce à thèse, it also tells a personal story which has significance, transparent honesty and a winning warmth." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 My 30 '54 550w

"As a novel 'Stranger Come Home' is highly absorbing—hair-raising at times. As a comment on the climate of our country today (while it is already a trifle dated) it is brilliantly apt." John Neff

+ N Y Times p12 My 30 '54 300w

"It is an interesting tale, although it is hard to believe that anyone as hard-pressed as Whitehead could remain as objective and as completely unangered as he seems to be. One has the feeling that the fairly happy last chapter was written first, and that the rest of the book simply flows toward it."

+ — New Yorker 30:101 My 29 '54 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 10 '54 500w

"William Shirer's new novel is cast in the form of a 'Berlin Diary' which deals with the contemporary scene in the United States. As fiction 'Stranger Come Home' has obvious shortcomings. As a documentary record of what 'can't happen here'—and what has been happening—it is a first-class job. I read it with increasing fascination because it has one great artistic virtue—narrative power. It has one eminent intellectual merit: a hard, clear, objective view of political events today." Maxwell Geismar

+ Sat R 37:10 My 29 '54 550w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p5C J1 4 '54 170w

"Cutting O'Brien down to size may be a worthy aim, but there must be a less tedious way of doing it. If there were a Fifth Amendment for literature, Author Shirer should have invoked it. By insisting on being heard, he has clearly incriminated himself as a dreary novelist."

— Time 63:79 My 31 '54 260w

Wis Lib Bul 50:181 J1 '54

SHORE, EVELYN (BERGLUND). Born on Snowshoes; ill. with photographs and with decorations by Courtney Allen. 209p $3 Houghton

B or 92 Frontier and pioneer life—Alaska. 54-5561

"The author, Alaska-born daughter of a trapper, when father became incapacitated, earned a meager living trapping and hunting with the assistance of her mother, two sisters and an old trapper. It would be hard to match the story of this girl's childhood and life to 21 years of age. Extended winter trips over miles of frozen territory, setting traps and lugging back their catch were hazardous enough, but there was also constant danger from moose, caribou, bears and wolves, all of which the girls took in their stride, with amazing nonchalance, courage and good humor." Library J

Booklist 50:357 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:184 My '54 50w

Reviewed by Kathryn Winslow

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 2 '54 220w

"A remarkable story." T. M. Longstreth
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 8 '54 250w

"Stirring in its authenticity."

+ Kirkus 22:97 F 1 '54 200w

"While boasting no literary polish, the style is simple, direct and fascinating. Excellent reading. Recommended for all public libraries." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:549 Mr 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by Joanna Spencer

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 18 '54 280w

"In the last few years, almost every woman who has lived a life slightly off the beaten track has rushed out a book about it—or so it sometimes seems. This book by Evelyn Berglund Shore, happily, is notches above the usual product. In the first place, the life that she, her two sisters and her mother led in the Yukon Territory was truly remarkable; and in the second place, Mrs. Shore writes of it in a simple, straight manner that is enchanting." L. D. Rich

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 11 '54 440w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 2 '54 330w

Wis Lib Bul 50:133 My '54

SHORES, LOUIS, ed. Challenges to Librarianship. 156p $2; pa $1 Fla. state univ, Tallahassee, Fla.

020 Libraries—U.S.

A54-9215

"The lectures were arranged primarily for library school students, but they are in no way geared to that level and are recommended as general professional reading. Titles and authors are: The Challenge of International Understanding, by Dan Lacy; The Challenge of Censorship, by Luther Evans; The Challenge of Microphotography, by Fremont Rider; Librarianship and the Sciences, by Charles Harvey Brown; The Challenge of Audio-Visual Media, by Edgar Dale; The Challenge of School Librarianship, by Frances Henne; The Challenge of Library Literature to Education for Librarianship, by Louis Round Wilson; An American Librarian's Heritage, by Wayne Shirley." Library J

"Dr. Shores sees the war of ideas as pushing 'librarians to the fore as men of destiny.' Within this heroic framework, the eight essays which follow, given as lectures at the Library School, Florida State University during 1952-1953, appear to be inadequate to save mankind, scholarship, or the profession. When judged on a more realistic plane, however, they are all that one should expect. They are highly competent, informative, and in some cases inspirational treatments of important aspects of librarianship." Ralph Munn

+ Library J 79:1037 Je 1 '54 500w

Reviewed by V. W. Clapp

Library Q 24:260 J1 '54 1300w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:278 Je '54 240w

SHOTWELL, JAMES THOMSON. Poems. 60p $2 Simon & Schuster

811

54-173

"Poems by a distinguished historian and teacher. . . In content they turn toward the future, for they are expressions of the author's great vision and carry his conviction that world peace can finally be attained." Library J

SHOTWELL, J. T.—Continued

"The sonnets are written with authority and grace, but the other poems are only adequate in style, and echo poetic phrases of the past." G. D. McDonald

+ — Library J 79:558 Mr 15 '54 40w

"Many years ago when Professor James T. Shotwell came to lecture at the college where I was an undergraduate some of the older if not wiser heads in our community expressed a few fears. They did not question his scholarship or the dynamic quality of his mind, but they had heard that he had little feeling and even that he was an atheist. If they could have read his volume of 'Poems' their doubts would have been removed for it offers an eloquent statement of triumphant belief." J. S. Bixler.

+ Sat R 37:27 S 18 '54 280w

SHUSTER, GEORGE NAUMAN. Religion behind the iron curtain. 281p $4 Macmillan (N Y)

274 Europe—Religion. Communism and religion 54-10354

Detailed, documented account written for the general reader, by a well known Catholic layman, president of Hunter College in New York. This book deals not only with the present status, and persecutions of Catholics in countries under Soviet Russia's domination, but also with the conditions of Protestant churches and of the Jews.

Reviewed by N. S. Timasheff

Ann Am Acad 296:196 N '54 400w

"On the whole the author tells little that is really new; but he sifts and arranges details that in many people's minds are scattered and confused. To reduce this huge mass of material to order was not an easy task; and it is not surprising that sometimes we come upon ■■ obscure sentence, ■■ in the note on the bottom of page 148." Joseph McSorley

+ — Cath World 179:315 JI '54 250w

"The book is written with great sincerity and sympathy for the victims of 'operation anti-religion' and is notable for the author's art of selecting, out of innumerable facts, just those which are typical and essential for the understanding of the rather complicated developments." N. S. Timasheff

+ Commonweal 60:324 JI 2 '54 650w

"Dr. Shuster is a Catholic, and, although he gives some consideration to the Protestant and Eastern Orthodox situation, for the most part 'religion' to him means the Roman Catholic religion. The cases of Cardinal Mindszenty in Hungary and of Stepinac in Yugoslavia are given a treatment all out of proportion to their importance, as has been the case in the American press generally. In the case of Czechoslovakia, his informants have apparently been Slovak Catholics, judging by his whitewash of Hlinka and Tiso. But the general picture of oppression of religious institutions in the communist countries is true to the facts and it is well for Americans to have this description of conditions."

Kirkus 22:191 Mr 15 '54 170w

"Author places great emphasis on Catholic Church but is fair towards other religions. While not a scholarly work, a well written, popular presentation of a topic—unfortunately very timely. Useful for all larger public libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:769 Ap 15 '54 140w

Nation 179:177 Ag 28 '54 340w

"This book, despite its calmness of tone and its grace of style, makes grim reading. To the devout it will bring the additional pang of realizing that the most terrible persecution that Christian believers have suffered since the time of the Caesars finds the Christian world as a whole so apathetic." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 JI 11 '54 900w

Reviewed by P. B. Anderson

N Y Times p14 Je 13 '54 750w

SHUTE, NEVIL, pseud. See Norway, N. S.

SIBERTS, BRUCE. Nothing but prairie and sky; life on the Dakota range in the early days; recorded by Walker D. Wyman from the original notes of Bruce Siberts. 217p il $3.75 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Ranch life. Frontier and pioneer life—South Dakota 54-5930

"In the roughhewn speech of the cow hand Bruce Siberts tells what it meant to be a young cattle and horse rancher in South Dakota from 1890 to 1906 before the homesteaders moved in and made the Bad Lands respectable. He could put up with the Indians, cattle rustlers, and ladies of uncertain virtue who infested the frontier, he could not tolerate the blizzards winters and scorching summers that finally forced him to settle in Oklahoma in 1906." Booklist

"'Siberts' facts are meager and sometimes inaccurate. When he tells about discussing a range problem with 'old Clay Robinson,' he is inflating his own importance about a conference that could not have occurred, for Clay and Robinson were two men. Such an error, however, fails to vitiate the charm of a self-revealing interpretation of a man and his times, told with candor, zest, and rare humor." Jay Monahan

+ — Am Hist R 60:219 O '54 260w

Booklist 50:319 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Mari Sandoz

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 6 '54 550w

"Bruce Siberts was lucky in finding Walker D. Wyman to edit his reminiscences, for Mr. Wyman knows the language and background of the Dakota range, is skillful in selecting and economical in writing." J. F. Dobie

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 11 '54 450w

"The book is the genuine article, and, as Siberts would say, extra good."

+ New Yorker 30:102 Je 19 '54 240w

"This is a fine book about a larger life and a freer time. It makes a reviewer wonder how to communicate its charm. In the end, he writes something like the foregoing and hopes for understanding readers." W. H. Hutchison

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 20 '54 350w

SIGGIA, SIDNEY. Quantitative organic analysis via functional groups. 2d ed 227p $5 Wiley

547 Chemistry, Organic. Chemistry, Analytic—Quantitative 54-5287

"As the title indicates, this is a book on the analysis of organic compounds by functional groups rather than elements. It is organized in chapters devoted to specific groups such as hydroxyl groups, alkoxyl groups, amino groups, and vinyl ethers. It is intended primarily for graduate chemists, hence practical laboratory procedures are fully described. The first edition was published in 1949 [Book Review Digest 1949]. Much important material has been added in this edition." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:990 My 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:20 Mr '54

SILESIIUS, ANGELUS, pseud. See Scheffler, J.

SIMENON, GEORGES. Inspector Maigret and the strangled stripper; tr. from the French by Cornelia Schaeffer. 188p $2.75 Doubleday 54-9143

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:321 My 15 '54 60w

"Simenon's sketching is as sure here as ever it was and his impassivity as unshakeable." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 1 '54 160w

"Simenon keeps the killer entirely offstage until the denouement. You're unlikely to find any other source of disappointment in this atmospheric study of Montmartre, with its well-characterized victims, its adroitly handled subplot of a young policeman tragically in love, and its minutely observed picture of a dive as memorable as any since Simenon's 'Liberty Bar.' Cornelia Schaeffer's translation is (thank Heaven!) into American rather than British." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p10 J1 11 '54 100w

"Perhaps because of the deliberately sordid realism of the case, this story seems unusually drab and chilling; so, probably is Parisian police work." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:41 J1 24 '54 20w

SIMENON, GEORGES. On land and sea, by Victor Kosta, pseud. (Hanover House bk) 255p $3.50 Garden City bks.

Two short detective novels.

"Here are two absorbing, grim, compulsive little tales." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune E R p8 Ap 11 '54 250w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p23 Mr 21 '54 250w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 11 '54 100w

"The flawless quality of these two little gems of suspense is enhanced by the impeccable services of their translators." Martin Levin

+ Sat R 37:34 Ap 17 '54 400w

"The separate stories are excellent examples of Simenon's inimitable style of plot weaving and special brand of suspense." B. F. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54 140w

SIMENON, GEORGES. Strangers in the house; tr. from the French by Geoffrey Sainsbury. 186p $2.95 Doubleday

54-7315

Detective story.

"A tremendously moving story of a man who found himself." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 29 '54 200w

"French trials are always hard for American readers to follow, and Geoffrey Sainsbury's weak and tasteless translation doesn't help; but the book is a fascinating borderland marker between Simenon's whodunits and his psychological novels." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p17 J1 18 '54 200w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 22 '54 40w

"Sharp characterization, strong local color lend this one vitality." Sergeant Cuff.

+ Sat R 37:37 Ag 7 '54 10w

SIMENON, GEORGES. Tidal wave. 383p $3.95 Doubleday

54-5717

Three psychological mystery stories in American settings. Contents: Belle; The bottom of the bottle; The brothers Rico.

"These stories are not top-drawer Simenon. Even so, they generate a good deal of psychological suspense; and they dramatize, with force and with compassion, Simenon's fundamental theme—'It is a difficult thing to be a man.'" C. J. Rolo

+ — Atlantic 193:83 My '54 380w

Booklist 50:322 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 28 '54 360w

Kirkus 22:16 Ja 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by D. S. Davis

New Repub 130:18 Mr 8 '54 1450w

"The name places are familiar, the men move among people who are natively recognizable but one must regretfully report that the spell he casts in his French books, made up of mood, atmosphere and dramatic tension, is lacking." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 28 '54 1000w

"That the result is the least successful Simenon book that I have read is due partly to the author and in large part to his translators. Simenon himself is somewhat ill at ease in these American novels: they are far from his best psychological fiction, loosely and hastily constructed, with rather obvious and shallow 'ironic' twists; his settings lack that extraordinary evocation of milieu with which he has introduced us to countless French and Belgian provincial towns; and he slips into occasional inaccuracies, such as his idea that San Quentin is a Federal prison. All of these three short novels might have come off as acceptable minor Simenon, however, if they had been competently translated." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 14 '54 440w

"Once more he reveals his superb powers of observation, profound knowledge of psychology, his ability to draw the reader swiftly into complex and menacing situations." L. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 2 '54 450w

"Under one cover M. Simenon has offered three brief works of fiction, each as carefully constructed as a short story, with its directness, simplicity, and unity of impression. At the same time, the projected thought, the sharpness and economy of detail, the deep psychological and moral interest, create the illusion of as many lengthy novels. This demands great skill and uncommon talent." Otis Fellows

+ Sat R 37:16 Mr 6 '54 550w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 440w

SIMON, NORMA. Wet world; pictures by Jane Miller. [23p] $2 Lippincott

54-8104

Simple little picture-story book about a little girl, who, clad in boots, raincoat and rain-hat, goes out into a wet world of puddles, and swishing cars, and then returns to a world of warm house, warm supper, warm love and kisses, and warm bed.

"Although Jane Miller's pictures have a glamorous and individual style, they, nevertheless, form an integral part of this sweetly introspective book for the very little ones."

R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 11 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:381 J1 1 '54 40w

"This is a charming book for young children." Anne Reeve

+ Library J 79:2493 D 15 '54 60w

"Any child young enough to appreciate the text and illustrations would never be allowed to spend the day alone outdoors as this little girl seemingly has done. The price of the 24-page book with a minimum of text makes it definitely a luxury item. For these reasons it is not recommended." H. E. Walker

— Library J 79:2493 D 15 '54 80w

"For very small girls comes a charming, green and black picture book. Its twenty-five pages will seem slight in content, but their gentle realism is just right for three- and four-year-olds." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p5 N 14 '54 80w

"The pleasures of a rainy day are less obvious than those of fine weather, but to the impressionable child they are real and important. In an unusual little book, Norma Simon takes her cue from children's own conversations to describe certain of those pleasures. . . The very simplicity of the text is moving, and so are Jane Miller's pictures. These, done in muted greens with sharp accents of black, combine sensitivity with style." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p44 O 24 '54 90w

SIMPSON, ALYSE. Red dust of Kenya [Eng title: Red dust of Africa]. 282p $3.50 Crowell
B or 92 Kenya Colony and Protectorate—
Social life and customs 54-5531

Autobiography of a Swiss bride who followed her British husband to a sunbaked farm in central Africa. For a time she wondered what she was doing there, so far from her home in cool rural Switzerland, but after the baby came she became more reconciled to Africa. When a former Swiss suitor arrived, determined to take her home, she decided to stay on in the land she had come to like.

Booklist 50:236 F 15 '54

"Related with simplicity and charm."

+ Bookmark 13:131 Mr '54 20w

Reviewed by Roi Ottley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 31 '54
250w

"Alyse Simpson found an exciting climax for an unusual and sometimes beautiful story about quite ordinary people. This is Kenya that rings true." J. A. May

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 18 '54
1050w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 30:466 D '54 100w

"A very fresh and very feminine love story."

+ Kirkus 21:752 N 15 '53 170w

"The story is too personal and fails to be important. Nevertheless, it's a readable book and one that many women would enjoy." R. B. Robertson

+ Library J 78:2211 D 15 '53 90w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 24
'54 650w

"It is true that, unlike Isak Dinesen, she never learned 'to speak like rain,' but her book is fascinating for a different reason—its frank account of what an untamed land did to a docile Swiss miss." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p25 F 7 '54 600w

"A quiet, almost inaudible chant about life on a squalid, sun-blistered farm in Central Africa."

New Yorker 30:118 Mr 6 '54 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 14 '54
260w

"The colours are mixed with a good deal of witty observation and some descriptive skill, but the theme is never deeply explored."

Times [London] Lit Sup p439 Jl 4 '52
400w

SIMPSON, EVAN JOHN (EVAN JOHN, pseud). The darkness. 247p $3.50 Putnam 54-5483

This novel, told in a series of personal and official letters and documents, depicts life in Jerusalem and other parts of the Roman empire, in the months following the Crucifixion.

Booklist 50:452 Jl 15 '54

Bookmark 14:9 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 15 '54
180w

Kirkus 22:246 Ap 1 '54 160w

"Recommended for its detailed analysis, though the book as a whole lacks continuity."

R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 79:860 My 1 '54 90w

"The tissue of evil and falsehood woven out of prejudice and fear—through which, ironically, the light of truth is refracted—makes of 'The Darkness' a subtle and an imaginatively fresh approach to the historic events upon which the beliefs of Christians are based."

F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Je 13
'54 550w

"Unfortunately, as is often the case in ordinary novels of suspense, the end of the book leaves the reader slightly dismayed. Various matters, such as the true nature of Pontius Pilate, are left dangling in the air. The postscript is definitely of no help. However, despite its anti-climax, 'The Darkness' is a superior story, told in an unusual manner, reverent in spirit but refreshingly free from the gaudy tinsel of many contemporary biblical novels."

J. W. Chase

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 18 '54 650w

"'The Darkness' is an admirable and interesting piece of work, genuinely illuminative of the Christian story. Originality is evident not only in its treatment, but in its bold choice of a time, that brief obscure period after the great event itself, yet before the drama of the Acts of the Apostles had begun." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 37:20 Je 26 '54 1000w

"Since Evan John's novel is no lush and glossy technicolor 'religious' story, it will find few readers among the many who revel in the sentimentalities of certain universal favorites, but for many others it will represent a moving recreation of the mood and thought of the Jerusalem of Pontius Pilate, written in prose of exquisite reticence to offer an engrossing mirror of that age." L. S. Munn

+ Springfield Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 320w

SIMPSON, JAMES CHARLES EDWARD. Condensed pyridazine and pyrazine rings. (Chemistry of heterocyclic compounds, a series of monographs) 394p il $12.50 Interscience

547.8 Pyridazine

52-6641

"The volume on condensed pyridazine and pyrazine rings deals with just three groups of heterocyclic compounds (cinnolines, phthalazines and quinoxalines) for each of which there is either a substantial chemical literature or on which there has been considerable research since 1940 because of possible applications as antimalarial agents. The author, therefore, has had a relatively compact and substantial body of information to deal with and he has had the additional advantage of being one of the principal contributors to the development of the chemistry of cinnolines." Chem Eng

"This beautifully printed and easily readable book represents a great amount of painstaking literature study and analysis, and it is a valuable addition to the monograph series on heterocyclic systems. One is impressed by the compactness and meticulous care with which the material has been organized." R. E. Lutz

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:318 Ja 5 '54 400w

"The book is unusually well written, and it should serve admirably as a stimulus to further research for one cannot read the book without having scores of problems suggest themselves." A. H. Blatt

+ Chem Eng 61:394 F '54 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:5 Ja '54

SIMPSON, WILLIAM R., and SIMPSON, FLORENCE K. Hockshop; with [the collaboration of] Charles Samuels. 311p il $3.75 Random house

B or 92 Pawnbroking

54-7807

The story of a New York city hockshop which has been in the hands of the author's family for five generations. The founder of the shop, William Simpson, came from England, and opened his first shop in lower New York in 1822.

Booklist 51:146 D 1 '54

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 21 '54
400w

"With diamonds, pearls and rubies for his ABC's and people for his multiplication table, W. Simpson has a valuable article on his hands, one for which no one will have to go in hock."

+ Kirkus 22:565 Ag 15 '54 220w

"A useful book of its kind for the Occupations shelf." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:2101 N 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by Gerald Carson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 14 '54
850w

"This is a highly informative book about a fascinating, if generally frowned-upon, calling, even when Mr. Samuels' prose gets a little dizzy." John McNulty

+ N Y Times p3 O 17 '54 900w

"Some parts of the book are in dubious taste, but on the whole it's fine."

+ — New Yorker 30:167 O 16 '54 110w

"This is a book stuffed to bursting with anecdotes and sidelights on the pawnbroking trade and you'll have to read it yourself to get these. You can be sure that under Mr. Samuels' expert guidance and with the knowledge both Simpsons were able to furnish, the book has plenty. And just in case you are ever tempted to buy a pawn-ticket and take a chance, better look at the advice on pages 112 and 113. You'll think twice after what the authors tell you." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 1 '54 550w

Reviewed by Allen Churchill

Sat R 37:60 N 13 '54 270w

+ Time 64:95 O 25 '54 200w

SINCLAIR, ROBERT B. It couldn't be murder. 213p $2.75 Mill

54-9210

Detective story.

"Empty characters in tedious snarl." Drexel Drake

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 29 '54 30w

"Practised entertainment in a story of triple murder runaround in an involved advertising agency setup. . . Smooth."

+ Kirkus 22:372 Je 15 '54 90w

"There's no involved psychopathology to Robert B. Sinclair's It Couldn't Be Murder—just a welcome revival of the old practice of murder for pleasure (the reader's that is)." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p10 S 5 '54 50w

"Overpeopled at start, but well-told yarn straightens out nicely. Plus Mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:37 S 18 '54 20w

SINGER, KURT DEUTSCH. Laughton story; an intimate story of Charles Laughton. 308p $3.95 Winston

B or 92 Laughton, Charles 54-7730

Biography and appreciative review of the career and art of this English-American movie actor.

Bookmark 14:60 D '54 30w

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 17 '54 350w

"Kurt Singer traces Mr. Laughton's professional career in considerable detail. But he does not seem to know him very well in person. In describing psychological influences on the star, he does not present a persuasive human likeness. The book sometimes leaves the impression that the author is stringing together material from newspapers and magazines without having fully digested it and lent it shape. An excessive use of superlatives contributes to a recurring feeling of anti-climax." Rod Nordell

— + Christian Science Monitor p7 O 21 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:609 S 1 '54 200w

"Highly recommended for paid circulation, biography and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:2462 D 15 '54 30w

SINGER, KURT DEUTSCH. Men in the Trojan horse. 258p $3.50 Beacon press

355.34 Treason. Spies 53-10322

An account of present day espionage including the stories of many individual spies and traitors who have made headlines since World War II.

Bookmark 13:107 F '54 40w

Reviewed by Willard Edwards

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 3 '54 300w

Foreign Affairs 32:506 Ap '54 20w

Kirkus 21:687 O 1 '53 150w

Reviewed by Peter Blake

N Y Times p28 Mr 7 '54 260w

"Mr. Singer is not a polished writer, and at times he is not a very careful one, but his book makes a very good short course in international intrigue."

+ — New Yorker 29:90 Ja 9 '54 200w

"Mr. Singer is a man of fierce integrity and of refreshing good sense. He is best when he throws away his notes and speaks his mind." Merle Miller

+ Sat R 37:12 Ja 30 '54 550w

SITTERSON, JOSEPH CARLYLE. Sugar country; the cane sugar industry in the South, 1753-1950. 414p il $6 Univ. of Ky. press

338.17 Sugar. South—Industries and resources. South—Social life and customs

"Although the importance of cotton, tobacco, and even rice in the economy of the ante bellum South is well known, there are few who realize that cane sugar was the basis of economic life in south Louisiana and in a restricted area of Texas. Here, the sugar economy sustained a distinctive regional culture. The Civil War dealt the sugar industry a severe blow, but it survived and has remained the principal means of livelihood in south Louisiana. Moreover, in the twentieth century a thriving sugar industry has been established in the Everglades region of south Florida. Sugar was also produced intermittently during the nineteenth century in Florida and Georgia and to a lesser extent in South Carolina, Alabama, and Mississippi. Each of these areas has received treatment and all important developments there are discussed." (Pref) Critical essay on sources. Index.

"Without ignoring the politics, the technology, or the financial vicissitudes of the sugar industry, Professor Sitterson has reserved his fondest research and most inspired writing for his treatment of antebellum planter society. From personal diaries and family correspondence, periodicals and business accounts, he gleans intimate details of the era symbolized by stately mansions along the Mississippi and the bayous. . . The author is alert to new techniques in agriculture and industry. But vital links in the process of modernization that brought central sugar factories to Louisiana in the 1880's and 1890's, and helped create a class of medium-size independent cane farmers, are unfortunately missing from the narrative."

B. C. Swerling

+ — Am Econ R 44:159 Mr '54 800w

"Because of its balance, thoroughness, and readability, Sitterson's book will probably remain the standard reference for many years. In keeping with its value, the University of Kentucky Press has produced a well edited and attractively illustrated book." L. E. Atherton

+ Am Hist R 59:741 Ap '54 240w

"With two full centuries to master, Professor Sitterson is nevertheless content with nothing short of original investigation of the basic source materials. This has meant years of patient work among the diaries, journals, account books, correspondence and private papers of sugar planters, factors, refiners, shippers and business men. The result is one of the most thorough and satisfactory histories we have of any of the great agricultural industries." C. V. Woodward

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 28 '53 800w

"One of the many excellent qualities of Sugar Country is comprehensiveness. . . The whole study is based on a wide variety of source materials, includes many statistics, is characterized by accuracy and sound judgment, and is beautifully illustrated."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:409 D '53 240w

SITWELL, EDITH. Gardeners and astronomers. 60p $2.75 Vanguard

821

53-10804

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Bookmark 13:107 F '54 10w

"Not many poets write about the spiritual world as deliberately as Dr. Sitwell does, nor with such learning. At least she is a poet who is serious and has a purpose whatever side you may take in the division over her status." James Reaney

Canadian Forum 34:44 My '54 420w

"Sometimes the long, long lines of Edith Sitwell's poems have drive and energy and the ear delights and at other times they puff with rhetoric. . . For my taste, there is too much generalized 'world's wounds' and 'palaces of commerce' and 'heart of Man,' and far too little of the grit and ecstatic fact of daily life." Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 17 '54 70w

"In short passages one becomes aware of Dr. Sitwell's power. But in large doses, her continuous over-emphasis, her 'superbe,' her symbolism in capital letters—derived from literature rather than life—her clotted rhythms, all conspire to an over-dressed monotony and a certain hollowness. In the shade of Dr. Sitwell's enormous will to grandeur her true shoots of poetry have been starved of the light they need if they are to grow." L. F. Duchene

— + Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 2 '54 380w

Reviewed by G. S. Fraser
New Statesman & Nation 47:104 Ja 23 '54 500w

"Anyone who has heard Miss Sitwell read knows how effective her poems are delivered aloud. In cold print, however, they often sound as though they had been composed aloud; they remind one of improvised arias for a baroque opera. . . Miss Sitwell is so skillful and so dazzling that she almost persuades us that spiritual intensity follows upon verbal intensity, which may or may not be true." Louise Brogan

New Yorker 30:113 F 27 '54 260w

"Her much cultivated mind and her precious sensibility produce poetry in which sensuous perception is linked with capitalized abstractions. This is as curious (and as curiously beautiful) a book of poetry as Miss Sitwell has ever written." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 21 '54 60w

Reviewed by Anthony Hartley
Spec p47 Ja '54 1150w

SITWELL, SIR OSBERT, 5th bart. Four continents; being more discursions on travel, art and life; drawings by Daniel Maloney. 281p $4 Harper

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-6291

"A book of discursions on 'Travel, Art and Life' which ranges, geographically, from Manhattan to the Moon, Amalfi to Angkor Wat, Niagara Falls to the Great Wall of China. The topics discussed are diverse enough to include phrenologists and soothsayers, the possible effects of Hitler's return, and the musical taste of elephants." Atlantic

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:86 Ag '54 70w

Booklist 51:40 S 15 '54

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 22 '54 350w

"Although Sir Osbert writes in his strong mandarin style he has avoided the great labyrinthine sentences which were appropriate to his autobiography. But the tone of that edifice returns for a few pages in which we find Sir George, at Montegufoni, evading an enchantress with matrimonial designs on him. 'I will have to make a bolt for it,' he tells his son. The whole incident is in the very best vein of the autobiography." Michael Swan

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 20 '54 320w

Reviewed by Richard Mayne

New Statesman & Nation 48:300 S 11 '54 1150w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 15 '54 550w

"This is not the most necessary book Sir Osbert has written, but as usual it is gracefully turned, and to pick at it would be as mistaken as sticking a pin in a luna moth. . . He has made a religion of pleasure, and it is a brave thing to do these days. It is accompanied by a real and painstaking art of evocation. His sybaritism is armor not only against the burdens of the less fortunate but against envy, covetousness and sloth. His fruitcake style, excellently suited to far-darting reminiscence, reminds more earnest citizens that health and balance also require enjoyment." Gerald Sykes

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 15 '54 850w

New Yorker 30:156 S 11 '54 30w

"What we have here is the familiar essay long drawn out; and such a book reads so easily one is liable to forget that only in the hands of a long-practised craftsman can such meandering be indeed really ordered—have shape, style, and distinction." W. T. Scott

+ Sat R 37:15 S 4 '54 850w

"Since art cannot reflect the chaos of reality by being itself chaotic, but must seek to express it within a pattern, this book is saved from being merely sprawling and formless by Sir Osbert's brilliant style. As his long sentences convey the meaning surely, steadily and grammatically through numerous subordinate clauses to the rounded conclusion, their perfect balance imposes a discipline on the material and holds together all the fragments that compose the book." Priscilla Jenkins

+ Spec p208 Ag 13 '54 600w

Wis Lib Bul 50:208 O '54

SITWELL, SACHEVERELL. Fine bird books, 1700-1900, by [the author] Handasyde Buchanan and James Fisher. 120p il col pl $50; ltd ed $85 Van Nostrand

016.5982 Birds—Bibliography. Birds—Pictorial works. Bibliography—Rare books
A54-479

"The compilers of the extensive bibliography in 'Fine Bird Books' explain that their outlook in making their choice has been aesthetic rather than scientific, and certainly the 38 plates (16 in colour) round which the book is written show by their beauty and elegance how wise their choice has been. Pictures by Audubon, Levaillant of Paris, D. G. Elliot in America, culminating in John Gould's great works in the middle of the nineteenth century, are evidence enough. The main part of the text is an essay about the artists and the birds themselves by Sacheverell Sitwell, whose wide knowledge of the old breeds of game cocks is as 'extensive and peculiar' as was Mr Weller's of London." Manchester Guardian

"Magnificent is the word for 'Fine Bird Books.'" A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 11 '54 300w

"This splendid book is one for the bibliophile rather than the scientific ornithologist, but many will be proud to possess it, giving as it does fine examples of pictures from books that will otherwise be quite beyond their reach." A. W. Boyd

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 15 '54 240w

"A triumph of a book, surpassing everything of its kind published in the past sixty years and more, and, one dares predict, unlikely to be surpassed in the coming sixty."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p108 F 12 '54 1000w

SIZER, THEODORE, ed. See Trumbull, J. Autobiography of Colonel John Trumbull

SKELTON, PETER. Charm of hours. 248p $4
Morrow

54-7099

In novel form, these are reminiscences of a young English boy, son of a wealthy family living in a Dutch seaside resort just before the German invasion in 1940.

Reviewed by George Favre

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 27
'54 320w

Kirkus 22:212 Mr 15 '54 90w

"The whole picture of adolescence is painted with great feeling and sympathy but never too highly colored. This novel—if it be that—will not interest the reader who wants plot and/or escape; but it will interest the reader of essays and character study and, above all, the reader of beautiful English." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:983 My 15 '54 80w

"Readers of Proust will find much of interest in this first novel by Peter Skelton. There is the same feeling for nuance, tone, and color, the same long and convoluted sentences speckled with fragile descriptions, the same self-analysis and self-recall. Proust, however, is one artist who cannot be followed too closely without calling up unfortunate comparisons and Skelton follows him closely indeed."

+ Nation 179:17 J1 3 '54 270p

"The Charm of Hours' is a singularly harmonious book. Mr. Skelton writes with apparent ease and yet with distinctive subtlety of the uneasy and transfigured world of adolescence." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Je 13
'54 550w

"The writing throughout is immediate, colorful, close-up and brilliant, possessing the essential quality of a Persian miniature which presents its subject in intricate detail but without any show of perspective and with only a hint of depth. The intimate realities of remembered sensation—the feel of wind, the texture of sheets, the smell of sea, the atmosphere of old and well-known rooms—are the important things." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p23 Je 13 '54 450w

"Mr. Skelton gives the impression of being at present too derivative a writer, yet one with latent capabilities."

Times [London] Lit Sup p421 J1 2 '54
150w

SLAUGHTER, FRANK GILL. Song of Ruth; a love story from the Old Testament. 317p $3.75
Doubleday

54-6247

A novelized version of the Biblical story of Ruth.

Booklist 50:401 Je 15 '54

"The outstanding characteristic of the Book of Ruth is a sweet, idyllic quality. In Slaughter's novelized version—the second we have had recently—this largely disappears, and the story takes on the characteristics of historical melodrama, more suggestive of Esther than of Ruth, and still more of the highly plotted intrigue drama of the 17th and 18th centuries and, at times, of the contemporary Technicolor film spectacles which are their direct descendants." Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 11 '54
350w

"Those who like fully developed novels based on biblical characters—and evidently many do—will have reason to like this one. Since the biblical story itself has all the qualities of a romance, it lends itself well to fictional elaboration."

+ Christian Century 71:738 Je 16 '54 50w

"Ancient rites, highly charged history, strong personalities lend drama to the story—which in the handling here has the virtues of popular emphasis and accessibility; the writing is far from the inspiration of the original source and is at best mediocre."

Kirkus 22:129 F 15 '54 220w

"The author's narrative gift is more of the blood-and-thunder variety than of the blood and flesh. But devotees of his revised versions of the Bible will still delight in this new addition—and be indifferent to the fact that his busy-bee inventiveness hums less with life than with machinery. It is perhaps worth noting that this book is based (in part, at least) on a motion-picture of the same name, which has been long in preparation in the Hollywood mills." Charles Lee

N Y Times p24 Ap 11 '54 320w

+ Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54
60w

SLAUGHTER, FRANK GILL. Storm Haven.
232p $3.50 Doubleday

53-9997

Historical novel of the Florida cattle drive during the Civil war. The hero is a doctor, a young man from Texas, who becomes involved with the beautiful Valerie, and stays to rescue her from a villainous husband.

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 178:315 Ja '54 160w

"It's sure-fire light entertainment!" Henry Cavendish

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 O 4 '53
320w

Kirkus 21:499 Ag 1 '53 160w

"This tale will evoke no raptures from the Pulitzer Prize committee. But it will satisfy Dr. Slaughter's many fans." Richard Match

N Y Times p31 O 4 '53 390w

SLAVSON, SAMUEL RICHARD. Re-educating the delinquent; through group and community participation. 251p $3.75 Harper

364.7 Juvenile delinquency 54-8992

"Based on his extensive work at the Hawthorne-Cedar Knolls School, this book by Dr. Slavson points out the beneficial effects on delinquent adolescents of group work, group therapy, art, literature and music therapy, and the honest and sympathetic approach of interested staff workers. It shows how the four pillars of democracy—freedom, status, participation, and responsibility—have been successfully employed in re-education. Although the book is concerned mainly with institutionalized delinquents, it does point the way toward more effective treatment of maladjusted youth generally." Library J

"Casework amplifies much of this, and lends its human interest, but the market is strictly professional."

Kirkus 22:469 J1 15 '54 150w

"A worthwhile work on a timely subject, which requires as much attention as everyone can possibly give it." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1587 S 15 '54 150w

SLESSOR, SIR JOHN COTESWORTH. Strategy for the West. 180p $3 Morrow

355 Strategy. International relations

54-8438

"The author, who during the Second World War was Commander-in-Chief of the R.A.F. Coastal Command in Britain, is, naturally, air-minded. This book presents a strategic program for driving Communism back within its borders (he doesn't say where these are) and keeping it there by what Sir John calls the 'great deterrent'—air power armed with atomic weapons." New Yorker

Booklist 50:445 J1 15 '54

Foreign Affairs 33:155 O '54 110w

"A scholarly rather than a military or tactical study, this may achieve attention as a capable overall assessment of a current world dilemma."

+ Kirkus 22:282 Ap 15 '54 110w

"This is a small but courageous book that manages through rational means to allay our fears and expand our hopes and aspirations. For all libraries." Leon Crain

+ Library J 79:1224 Je 15 '54 110w

Reviewed by M. S. Watson

Nation 179:34 J1 10 '54 1450w

SLESSOR, J. C.—Continued

Reviewed by G. A. Craig

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 J1 25
'54 650w

"Perhaps, in these days, only an Englishman could have written this lively little book. It has those qualities one has come to associate with the best features of the British character—calmness in danger, sturdiness in crisis and the kind of hard common sense that derives from the ability to look a nasty situation unflinchingly in the face. In 'Strategy for the West' the Marshal of the Royal Air Force, a sharp student of war and international politics, presents a cool estimate of the existing cold war and suggests ways and means of fighting it without fear and without hysteria." S. K. Padover

+ N Y Times p3 Je 27 '54 700w

"Sir John is a positive writer, and supremely, perhaps dismayingly, confident man."

+ New Yorker 30:90 Je 26 '54 160w

Reviewed by R. S. Israel

San Francisco Chronicle p17 J1 18 '54
500w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers

Sat R 37:13 Ag 28 '54 950w

Springf'd Republican p9C J1 11 '54
330wTimes [London] Lit Sup p407 Je 25
'54 750w

"'Strategy for the West' is written by a military man of great distinction, and on this account alone it deserves respectful notice. But it is also remarkably clear and forceful in the presentation of its view of the problem of the West. And in its general assumptions it parallels what is coming to be a more and more widely accepted thesis with regard to the essentials of military policy today." Dexter Perkins

+ Yale R n s 44:159 autumn '54 550w

SLOANE, WILLIAM MILLIGAN, comp. Space, space, space; stories about the time when men will be adventuring to the stars. 288p $2.50 Watts, F.

Short stories—Collections 53-9924

Ten science fiction stories.

Bookmark 13:16 O '53 10w

"A fine collection of science-fiction tales."

Mark Reinsberg

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p46 N 15 '53
90w

Kirkus 21:436 J1 15 '53 80w

"Recommended for seventh grade up." L. T. Bulman

+ Library J 79:213 F 1 '54 80w

"Mr. Sloane's well-earned reputation as editor and writer had led one to expect better things of his first anthology." H. H. H.

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 14
'54 120w

SLOANE, WILLIAM MILLIGAN, ed. Stories for tomorrow; an anthology of modern science fiction. 628p $3.95 Funk

Short stories—Collections 53-10794

Anthology of modern science fiction by such writers as Ray Bradbury, C. D. Simak, William Sloane, Murray Leinster, A. C. Clarke.

Bookmark 14:9 O '54

"For the middle rather than the high or low brow."

Kirkus 22:321 My 15 '54 80w

"Mr. Sloane has avoided such standard ingredients of science fiction as adventure, humor, satire and scientific or technological complexity and concentrated on the readily appealing 'human interest' story of the future. Setting higher literary standards than most anthologists, he has produced what should prove a highly persuasive introductory volume." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 O 3 '54
110w

"Speaking personally, I'd hate to have any newcomer to science-fantasy assume it's all as sobersided as are most of these stories. William Sloane has written some extraordinarily brilliant science fiction (remember his pioneering classic, 'To Walk the Night'); here, his perceptive, persuasive notes do a far better selling job than most of the stories they introduce." J. F. McComas

N Y Times p45 O 17 '54 150w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 37:14 N 27 '54 110w

Springf'd Republican p6C S 12 '54
360w

SLOBODKIN, LOUIS. Mr Petersand's cats and kittens [pictures by the author]. 63p $2.25 Macmillan (N Y)

Cats—Legends and stories 54-12839

Every winter Mr Petersand of Firefly Island took care of all the cats and kittens abandoned by the summer visitors when they returned to the city. But once something quite tragic happened and then Mr Petersand thought it time the summer visitors were taught a lesson.

Booklist 51:117 N 1 '54

"Makes a droll and tender—even instructive—little story for small cat lovers." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p46 N 14 '54
90w

Horn Bk 30:429 D '54 80w

Kirkus 22:481 Ag 1 '54 80w

"Mr. Slobodkin's amusing illustrations and humorous style give a light touch to this story for younger readers—and older cat lovers." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:70 N 13 '54 100w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 60w

SLONIM, MARC L'VOVICH, ed. Modern Italian short stories. 429p $5 Simon & Schuster

Short stories—Collections 54-6670

"The 34 stories which make up this anthology cover the last 50 years of Italian literature. Contributors include Pirandello, Svevo, Papini, Silone, Moravia, Guareschi, Pratolini, and Berto to name the more familiar. Ten of the authors are appearing in America for the first time, and 30 of the tales are having their first English publication." Library J

"Since a number of Italian novelists who are not well known here are among Italy's most gifted short-story writers, the inclusion of their work in this collection should be of real value . . . In general, the translations are done well, and the introductory pages to the various periods from the last half of the nineteenth century to the period from Futurism to Fascism and down to the contemporaries are useful." Serge Hughes

+ Commonweal 60:420 J1 30 '54 500w

"An excellent collection of short stories. . . A volume for study, as well as appreciation, to which the editor's bibliographical material as well as critical guidance will contribute."

+ Kirkus 22:249 Ap 1 '54 180w

"Though many of the stories are concerned with the baser realities, nearly every contribution has freshness and vitality. The volume should be of permanent value to public and college libraries. Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1226 Je 15 '54 140w

"In contrast to the icy peaks and black moods of Lagerkvist's tales Marc Slonim's collection of Italian stories is warm with blood and life. Seldom has a single volume captured so successfully the rapidly flowing currents of Italian literature. The book is not simply a collection; it is an introduction to an important area of world fiction." Stanley Cooperman

+ Nation 179:94 J1 31 '54 260w

"Harvesting the rich fields of modern Italian short fiction, Marc Slonim presents a collection of thirty-four stories from Verga to Vittorini that is little less than superb. The tales, most of them of high literary quality and human significance, throb with the unmatched variety and vitality that is Italy." Francis Steegmuller

+ N Y Times p5 Je 20 '54 750w

"This collection is most promising-looking but turns out to be dispirited, dispiriting, and mysteriously monotonous, in spite of the wide variety of its subjects and moods. There is an unsuccessful air about all the work, as though each story had originally been written as part of a novel that never came to much."

— New Yorker 30:73 J1 10 '54 90w

"I congratulate Simon & Schuster, the publishers, no less than Marc Slonim, the editor of 'Modern Italian Short Stories,' and I wish the book well, as lovers of Italy and good literature must do, for it is a fine collection indeed." T. G. Bergin

+ Sat R 37:20 Je 19 '54 750w

Time 64:82 J1 26 '54 250w

SLUSSER, ROBERT, ed. Soviet economic policy in postwar Germany; a collection of papers by former Soviet officials, by Vasili Yershov [and others]. (Studies on the U.S.S.R.) 184p maps pa $2.25 Res. program on the U.S.S.R.

330.947 Germany—Economic conditions 53-2962

"Articles written by former Soviet officials and describing Soviet economic administration and exploitation of the Russian Zone of Germany form the bulk of this short work. The papers deal with four general topics: The First Phase of the Occupation; The Administrative Organization of Soviet Control, 1945-1948; Soviet Agricultural Policy in Eastern Germany, 1945-1949; The Saxony Uranium Mining Operation ('VISMUT'). . . There is also a valuable bibliography of sixty-one items on the subject, and a chronology of events important to Soviet economic policy in Germany." U S Quarterly Bk R

Am Pol Sci R 48:590 Je '54 30w

"In our present need for thorough knowledge of the Soviet system, we can obtain valuable aid from the many talented Soviet citizens who have fled to the West. Some of them were officials with direct operating experience in the myriad institutions of a totalitarian state. Their accounts, if sometimes tinged with understandable bitterness, are nevertheless far more informative than the scanty, doubtful, or purely formal materials released by agencies of the system itself." Holland Hunter

+ Ann Am Acad 291:193 Ja '54 550w

Foreign Affairs 32:677 J1 '54 30w

"The descriptions hold great interest for what they reveal about the working of Soviet bureaucracy and management; for example, the importance of personal relationships, and the intervention of the highest authorities in relatively trivial details of management."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:25 Mr '54 240w

SMALL, MARVIN. How to attain financial security and self-confidence [il. by Constance Joan Naar and William Drout]. 298p $2.95 Simon & Schuster

650.69 [174.4] Success 53-13177

Beginning with a key formula "find a need and fill it" the author gives case histories of the rise and success of some products and services which brought fortunes to their American inventors. Includes three chapters on how to finance, market and patent a new invention.

Booklist 50:179 Ja 1 '54

"For the perennial reader group grasping for the wavering straw of success by a short-cut approach." Paul Wasserman

Library J 79:211 F 1 '54 80w

Springf'd Republican p10D Ja 17 '54 50w

SMALL, SIDNEY HERSCHEL. Dangerous duty; il. by Rus Anderson. 218p $3 Oxford

54-5709

The adventures of a ship's boy, Johnny Craig, who played a part in Commodore Matthew Perry's 1853 expedition to open trade with Japan. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 50:457 J1 15 '54

"Parts of the story are rather contrived but it is worthwhile as a picture of conditions in the days when Japan was almost unknown to the Western world; and of this first American insight into the country." J. D. L.

+ — Horn Bk 30:252 Ag '54 90w

Kirkus 22:289 My 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:706 Ap 15 '54 40w

"A combination of history and Oriental adventure that should appeal greatly to boys of eleven or twelve and older. The author, new to this field, has had many stories of Hong Kong in 'The Saturday Evening Post.' He is a Californian who knows well the sea and the Orient. The rather few pictures interpret well the realism of the text." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 16 '54 200w

SMITH, ALSON JESSE. Immortality: the scientific evidence. 248p $3 Prentice-Hall

133.07 Psychical research. Immortality 54-5681

"Believing that survival of human personality beyond the grave will never be generally accepted until science accepts it, Mr. Smith presents the scientist's case for immortality. Basing his thesis largely on the results of the extensive work done by the Society for Psychical Research, and the Parapsychology Laboratories at Duke University and elsewhere, the author arrives at the conclusion that the soul theory is confirmed, that the soul can and does survive death, and that immortality is a fact." Library J

Booklist 50:290 Ap 1 '54

Kirkus 21:794 D 15 '53 130w

"A highly readable account of the experiments made in psychical research, along with some clear thinking on their significance, and on the author's reasons for belief in immortality. Deserves a wide audience." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 79:385 F 15 '54 140w

SMITH, ALSON JESSE. Syndicate City; the Chicago crime cartel and what to do about it; pref. by Virgil Peterson. 290p il $4.50 Regnery

364.9773 Crime and criminals—Chicago 54-6343

"As the author points out, the Chicago Syndicate is only the Midwest branch of a nationwide crime cartel. He traces the growth of this cartel, from its beginnings with oldtime ward bosses to its current status, where it has holdings, Mr. Smith says, in such honest and lucrative businesses as hotels and steel. . . Smith sums up by listing the 10-point program set up by various civic groups in Chicago, a program that would revamp the municipal government and clean up the city at the same time." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

"The story of the modern Mafia as told in 'Syndicate City' is frightening and fascinating. The book, especially in chapters such as that on the assassination of McSwiggin, is most readable. As a history of Chicago crime it can't match the work of Peterson, who, incidentally, wrote the preface to 'Syndicate City,' but when Smith [or, the Rev. Mr. Smith, he's a Methodist minister] lets go with colorful language and detail on the inside story of a gang killing, or his own participation in 'The Biggest Floating Crap Game in the World,' he's good." Lloyd Wendt

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 14 '54 420w

Christian Century 71:495 Ap 21 '54 200w

"Here is a book about Chicago and what made it that way such as has never been written before. It is studied, factual and remarkably interesting even to one who lived in it from the days of 'Mike McDonald's Democrats' until the last gun had been fired in the prohibition wars." R. J. Casey

SMITH, A. J.—Continued

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 11 '54 450w

Reviewed by Herman Kogan

Sat R 37:18 Ap 24 '54 850w

"Easy to read without being sensational. It is no dull sociological message, but rather a witty, hard-hitting, let's-name-names treatment of a national problem." R. M. F.

+ Springfield Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 250w

SMITH, BRADFORD. Dangerous freedom. 308p $3.95 Lippincott

973 Association and associations. U.S.—Civilization 54-9415

A social history of the United States, tracing the growth of America's "dangerous freedom"—the right of assembly. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:125 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:33 N '54 30w

"This is a thoughtful book and a useful one." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 17 '54 300w

"A needed statement of our time, we can only hope this will receive the notice it should."

+ Kirkus 22:469 J1 15 '54 300w

"Highly recommended for all types of libraries." E. M. Obler

+ Library J 79:2326 D 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 179:495 D 4 '54 60w

"Mr. Smith is undoubtedly on solid ground in his praise of voluntary association as an essential aspect of democracy. Like other advocates of a principle or an ideal, however, he tends to overextend his claim." C. A. Madison

+ New Repub 131:19 N 1 '54 650w

"Mr. Smith writes brilliantly and charmingly of all kinds of voluntary associations. . . [The book] is a heart-warming recital and it is especially delightful in its handling of the simpler voluntary associations, many of which are now no more than radiant memories held only by the elder generation." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 17 '54 650w

New Yorker 30:193 N 6 '54 150w

"This is a vigorous and clarifying book—a book for our confused and divided age. It should renew our courage to keep on doing things in the best of all ways—in freedom and together." H. A. Overstreet

+ Sat R 37:35 N 6 '54 1000w

SMITH, DENIS MACK. See Mack Smith, D.

SMITH, MRS DOROTHY EVELYN (JONES). He went for a walk. 256p $3 Dutton

54-8851

The hero is an eight-year-old English boy, Joseph, whose father had been killed in the war, and whose mother had joined the ATS and gone overseas. Joseph had been left in charge of Mrs Atkins, in the Yorkshire cottage where the boy and his mother had been so happy. Mrs Atkins did not like the moors so she took Joseph to London, and there one night a bomb wiped out the whole block of flats where they had lived. But Joseph had gone for a walk, and after many adventures arrived at the Yorkshire cottage.

Booklist 51:16 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:9 O '54 30w

"Pathos and the generosity it evokes in people are pleasant and wholesome dominant emotions in a novel. Mrs. Smith's quality of evoking them appears to excellent advantage in 'He Went for a Walk,' in which characterizations are more convincing than in some of her earlier books." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 8 '54 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

"A story that has considerable charm in the telling."

+ Kirkus 22:318 My 15 '54 240w

"The story is so well told that it justifies itself, and it may be purchased for the summer reader, by any library." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1311 J1 '54 90w

"This is a straight-forward and pleasantly romantic tale told by a capable story teller, who makes Joseph a believable and appealing little boy."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 J1 25 '54 240w

"The appealing character of the boy and the delightful touches of humor and charm that Mrs. Smith always brings to her writing seem only to point up the artificiality of her latest book." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p19 J1 25 '54 250w

"Mrs. Smith's considerable talent for character delineation and for describing with graphic fidelity and sensitive charm the sights and sounds of the English countryside through which Joseph makes his way are very nearly swamped by the soap-opera situations and the long-armed coincidences of this saga of Innocence at Large. . . He Went for a Walk might be described as belonging to the soft-boiled school of writing. Mild, wholesome, easily-digested, guaranteed not to offend the tenderest sensibilities. Feminine readers will find it pleasant summer fare." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 37:35 J1 24 '54 230w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 8 '54 90w

SMITH, MRS DOROTHY (HALL), ed. Tall book of Christmas; pictures by Gertrude Elliott Espenscheid. 92p $1 Harper

394.2 Christmas poetry. Christmas stories 54-9002

A collection of Christmas stories, poems, and carols, for the four to eight year ages.

"Might well solve many a problem of gift-giving." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 194:94 D '54 30w

Booklist 51:140 N 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 12 '54 100w

Kirkus 22:706 O 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 19 '54 150w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p54 D 5 '54 60w

"Christmas is a wonderful time for children and this charming book will make it even more charming."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 14 '54 30w

SMITH, MRS EUNICE (YOUNG). Jennifer dances; il. by [the author]. 250p $2.75 Bobbs

54-9497

Another story about young Jennifer Hill, this time spending the winter of 1909 in Chicago with her Aunt Lobelia.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p24 N 14 '54 60w

"Recommended for large collections. Grades 5-6." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:2255 N 15 '54 70w

"The fifth book once more proves that a 'series' does not have to deteriorate in quality and that this author-artist can keep Jennifer the same lovable, real person. . . City life, ballet lessons, the puzzle of snobbiness in the big public school, the mystery of the walled garden and Aunt Loby's love affair, keep Jennifer excited and busy as ever. . . The ballet part of the story is cleverly done; the style is excellent; the cross-section of city children is realistic; and Jennifer should lift the hearts of all her young admirers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p30 N
14 '54 200w

SMITH, FRANCES C. First book of conservation; pictures by Rene Martin. 68p $1.75
Watts, F.

333.72 Conservation of resources—Juvenile literature 54-5987

"How rivers, lakes, forests, wildlife, the green growing plants, the good earth itself, all depend on nature's intricate interrelationships; how man has sometimes damaged nature's way of life; and what he is now doing to conserve and renew his natural resources." (Publisher's note) For ages nine to thirteen.

Booklist 50:425 J1 1 '54

Horn Bk 30:256 Ag '54 120w

Kirkus 22:200 Mr 15 '54 80w

"Fine 'First Book' which fills a real need for attractive information on this important subject for young readers." Anne Jackson
+ Library J 79:1326 J1 '54 90w

"It is a book for teachers and club leaders to read aloud; it should be in every school library, both elementary and junior high."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 16
'54 80w

Wis Lib Bul 50:218 O '54

SMITH, FRANK ELLIS. Yazoo river; il. by Janet E. Turner. (Rivers of America ser) 362p $4 Rinehart

976.24 Yazoo river and valley, Mississippi—
History 53-9242

The Yazoo river rises in Tennessee and joins the Mississippi at Vicksburg. This forty-seventh volume in the Rivers of America series describes the life in the delta formed by these rivers. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:378 Je 1 '54

"The author is something of a rarity, a politician who can write. The 36 year old Mississippi congressman had a role in the ending of Bilboism; he represents a new south. His style is nonlyric, nonemotional, almost matter of fact—a novelty in certain circles of regional writing." H. T. Kane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 16 '54
450w

Reviewed by Francis Russell

Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 8 '54
370w

Kirkus 22:146 F 15 '54 200w

"The Yazoo' is a fine contribution to a distinctive series. And if the voters of the Yazoo country will buy and read the book, Congressman Smith will go unopposed from now on out." Hodding Carter

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 16 '54
800w

"The writing, though straightforward (as befits Mr. Smith's experience as a journalist in Greenwood, Miss.) is sometimes careless. There are unaccountable minor errors such as locating LeFleur's Bluff . . . on the Natchez Trace, and identifying the Bluff with Doak's Stand, some twenty miles away. . . The most serious fault of the book, in this reader's opinion, is the omission of a full and organized essay on the Delta planters. Their extravagant history would have greatly lightened the tone of the latter half of the book." Hubert Creekmore

+ — N Y Times p19 My 9 '54 900w

"The writing of a book by a member of Congress is unusual. For a Congressman to produce a volume which is learned, comprehensive, and written in a style that both the scholar and the general reader can enjoy is something to marvel at. But Frank E. Smith, Congressman from Mississippi, has written such a book in 'The Yazoo.' His achievement is the more remarkable in view of his stature as one of the most able and diligent young Representatives." B. I. Wiley

+ Sat R 37:20 S 4 '54 850w

Wis Lib Bul 50:135 My '54

SMITH, FREDERICK GEORGE WALTON, and CHAPIN, HENRY. The sun, the sea, and tomorrow; potential sources of food, energy and minerals from the sea. 210p il $3.50
Scribner

551.46 Ocean. Food supply. Sun 54-10374

"Ever since the famous voyage of HMS 'Challenger' in 1872 began the science of oceanography, economists have viewed the seas as potential supermarkets for the increasing global populations and the consequent diminishing land resources of food and minerals. This accurate survey of oceans covering an area of 90 billion acres tells us a myriad unusual items about marine agriculture and biology: types and habitats of edible fishes and sea plants, commercial fishing and its electronic devices, ocean minerals and their medicinal values, and so on." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:126 N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:524 Ag 1 '54 180w

"Recommended." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:1888 O 15 '54 140w

"The book is sagaciously designed and delightfully written." Russell Lord

+ N Y Times p7 N 28 '54 450w

"The book is noteworthy for its breadth of view. No reader can fail to learn from such an assessment. I do not happen to agree with the authors' frequent implication that 'committee-of-the-whole' research, mostly technological, is the exclusive answer to the fuller utilization of our marine resources. . . But that's another argument, and these authors are worth reading because of their broad perspective." Daniel Merriman

+ — Sat R 37:15 N 27 '54 700w

Reviewed by P. B. Sears

Yale R n s 44:310 winter '55 410w

SMITH, GODFREY. Flaw in the crystal. 242p
$3.50 Putnam

54-7866

This novel is a first person narrative of life in the ultra-secret diplomatic service of Great Britain, set against a picture of post-war London.

"Skilfully told in a tense, restrained narrative."

+ Bookmark 13:237 J1 '54 30w

"An entertainment, which moves quietly but with a sophisticated assurance through an expensive world and flirts with the unexpected."

+ Kirkus 22:135 F 15 '54 200w

"A remarkable study of character besides being good fiction." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:772 Ap 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by Patricia Hodgart

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 2 '54 90w

"The Flaw in the Crystal' is carried out on two levels. On one, as a tale of suspense, it is a curious failure. It arouses deep, dramatic expectations and never fulfills them. It draws the reader along at a pitch of impatience and never rewards him. But on the other level, as a portrait of England's bright young men and women, the book has more to offer. Mr. Smith is an intelligent writer with a good eye for detail and a talent for combining wit and meaning. His series of sketches conveys a real feeling for a milieu—a segment of society that is charming, slightly spoiled yet determined, and ultimately courageous. It is an encouraging picture, painted with conviction, and a welcome variation on the theme of bitter post-war youth." Ferdinand Moltke-Hansen

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 9 '54
500w

SMITH, GODFREY—Continued

"An unusually impressive first book as either a suspense story or a straight novel." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p14 My 23 '54 160w

Reviewed by Kingsley Amis
Spec p336 Mr 19 '54 320w

Time 63:114 Je 14 '54 130w

"The first fifty or so of Mr. Smith's pages, dealing with the life of a young post-war Civil servant in the Security Office, hold out the greatest promise. The writing is graceful, the characterization vivid, and wit and intelligence combine nicely to raise every kind of expectation. Then, almost as if a kind of novelist's value had blown, the tempo drops, the sparkle dies, and the crisp early assurance gives way to a gauche attempt at sophistication."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p165 Mr 12 '54 330w

SMITH, HARRY ALLEN. Rebel yell; drawings by Leo Hershfield. 124p $2 Doubleday

817

54-6779

"Being a carpetbagger's attempt to establish the truth concerning the screech of the Confederate soldier plus lesser matters appertaining to the peculiar habits of the South." Subtitle

"The Rebel Yell is likely to leave all but rabid Smith fans pretty unimpressed. It may be that jokes about the South are second only to those about mothers-in-law and, at this point, just about as tiresome. Giving Mr. Smith the benefit of every doubt, it is not the writing but the subject matter which leaves us cold." Robert Kass

— Cath World 180:238 D '54 230w

"Highly recommended to the ALA 'distinctive books' people who seemingly find nothing funny to suggest." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1510 S 1 '54 80w

"It is better than funny; it is a fast scalpel job and his best book since that delightful 'Smith's London Journal.'" James Street

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Ag 8 '54 550w

"Incidentally, 'The Rebel Yell' is not only totally inconclusive in its ultimate findings (like nearly all readable books) but is affectionately illustrated by Leo Hershfield. As usual—to Smith aficionados—it will seem teasingly scant, even for the modest price of two dollars." Ben Crisler

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 15 '54 480w

SMITH, HARRY ALLEN. The world, the flesh, and H. Allen Smith; ed. with an introd. by Bergen Evans. (Hanover house bk) 301p $2.95 Garden City bks.

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-8923

An anthology made up of selections from the author's earlier works: Smith's London Journal; and Low Man on a Totem Pole. Also contains anecdotes of the author's boyhood.

Booklist 51:9 S 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 25 '54 140w

"As his editor notes [Smith] is very like one of his own favorite characters—the philosopher who, on a steel pillar in the 14th St., I.R.T. subway, scribbled 'Nuts to people!' and then faded into the crowd. That's probably as good a reason as any why so many thousands of people find H. Allen Smith so peculiarly to their taste, and why this collection ought to do beautifully." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 12 '54 450w

"A highly welcome collection." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 25 '54 240w

SMITH, MRS HELEN (HUGUENOR) LYMAN.

Adult education activities in public libraries; a report of the ALA survey of adult education activities in public libraries and State library extension agencies of the United States; prepared for the American library association by means of a grant from the Fund for adult education. 96p pa $4.50 A.L.A.

021.2 Education of adults. Library surveys. Libraries—U.S. 54-2830

"The aim of the Survey was to obtain specific and detailed facts that would provide a reliable picture of what public libraries of the country were doing in the field of adult education. Such a picture would serve as a useful basis for future planning, for the strengthening of existing services, for the organization of new services, for allocation of funds to such services, and for better understanding of responsibilities of the staff for such services... In addition facts were obtained about personnel engaged in rendering adult education services and opinions of the librarians concerning the education and training of staff for carrying out adult education responsibilities." Pref

Booklist 50:443 Jl 15 '54

"Such a comprehensive and detailed report should be studied in its entirety by all librarians who are working in the young adult and adult field. It should serve as a yardstick for measuring library services and as a guide post for the improvement of present programs and the development of others adapted to the size, composition, and needs of a community." H. T. Steinbarger

+ Library J 79:1474 S 1 '54 600w

SMITH, HUBERT SHIRLEY. World's great bridges; with 24 line drawings by Rowland J. Mainstone. 180p il $3.50 Harper

624 Bridges

54-8993

An informal account of the building of bridges from the time of ancient Rome, Persia, and the Far East, to the great suspension bridges of the present. The author is a director of a big British firm of bridge engineers. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:7 S 1 '54

"For all general collections." J. E. Brown
+ Library J 79:1510 S 1 '54 100w

"Because he knows his subject and has a single-minded enthusiasm for every aspect of bridges and their building, the book pretty well avoids technicalities. Mr. Smith has kept it short and kept it simple; it is a book for the layman who likes a bit of solid information with his reading." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 2 '54 550w

Wis Lib Bul 50:205 O '54

SMITH, JANET ADAM (MRS MICHAEL ROBERTS), comp. Faber book of children's verse. 412p $3 Transatlantic

808.81 Children's poetry—Collections

"The selection has been made from so wide a variety of sources, old and new, that, although many familiar poems are included there are also many that I have never seen in any anthology in America. Miss Smith's introduction indicates the imagination, the love of poetry, and the long experience of sharing it with children, that have gone into the book." Horn Bk

"No poetry lover—adult or child—should miss it." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:446 D '54 90w

"A delightful addition to a home library or one for junior high school." L. R. Markey
+ Library J 79:2502 D 15 '54 70w

"Suggestions for another edition; dates might be appended to the poems instead of at the end. The liberally represented Anon, though seldom precisely datable, might be given a probable century. The notes might be increased. But what is most wanted is a second volume, to appease clamourers for omitted favourites.

Meanwhile, this many-coloured nosegay is a fine rich bloom. Picking it must have been fun." Rose Macaulay

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:678 N 28 '53 1100w

"Seldom has an anthology given this poetry-lover such pleasure. Here is the same use of so much considered 'adult' which we found most successful when teaching ten to twelve-year-olds; also reflected is the belief we have always held that one changes one's standards in poetry and discovers new delights by re-reading much first met in early childhood. A 'child' who enters upon the required reading of American high schools equipped with the background Miss Smith offers in this wide range from English lyric poetry . . . will indeed be ready to continue the pursuit of poetry with pleasure." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p3 N 14 '54 350w

"Admirable anthology." Iain Hamilton
+ Spec p672 D 4 '53 200w

"We cannot have all kinds and instances, nor wish all tastes alike. There is here a generous variety of period, mood and subject. Extracts from some longer poems have been admitted, and described as such at the end of the volume, in accordance with the present horror of annotating a page of text."

Times [London] Lit Sup p10 N 27 '53 2100w

SMITH, LILLIAN EUGENIA. The journey. 256p $3.50 World pub.

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 53-6643

A spiritual autobiography of a Southern writer in which she traces her journey thru life searching for self-understanding and contentment. No index.

"The Journey is a book which testifies to the dignity of man with eloquence and awe, but also with a deep sense of life's complexity: a deep sense that anxiety and conflict are an inescapable part of the human condition." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:80 My '54 360w

Booklist 50:249; 270 Mr 1 '54; Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:184 My '54 20w

"Miss Smith went also on a physical journey into the byways of her home country. In her talks with strangers she found some positive answers, some secrets to the riddle of human life, which make 'The Journey' one of the important books of the season." Olive Caruthers

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 18 '54 300w

"Not a book for everyone, but an enriching experience for many."

+ Kirkus 22:143 F 15 '54 170w

"For those readers who enjoy good writing, the brilliant simile and thoughtful exploration of our world." Margaret Cooley

+ Library J 79:769 Ap 15 '54 140w

"Sentimentality occasionally dulls the fine edge of Miss Smith's judgment as when she insists that ultimate wisdom resides in rural folk as such, as against city dwellers. And surely she is over-optimistic when she assigns so brief a span to the dictators who plague us! Again, one has the feeling that she has been prodigal with words, almost too eloquent. Notwithstanding, here is sincerity, compassion for one's human kind, and a more than usually successful attempt to 'plug in to time and space.'" Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ap 18 '54 500w

"Here is a book that lives and breathes, a fearless encounter with reality, a mind-stretching experience." A. P. Davies

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 18 '54 1100w

"An inspirational book for the literate, 'The Journey' shares with many other inspirational books an irritating fuzziness—not, in this case, of expression, for the author is a graceful and disciplined writer, but of mind.

One gets the feeling that Miss Smith isn't quite sure what she is driving at."

+ New Yorker 30:123 My 1 '54 160w

"A series of beautifully and simply written chapter-essays." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 22 '54 800w

"It is consoling to find a modern and scientific mind refusing to be blunted, refusing to be driven to terror. It is refreshing and helpful to have insisted that ours is an age to be remembered not as the age of anxiety or the atomic age, but as the age of wholeness, as 'the age when the walls began to fall,' when 'tenderness and reason and awareness began to bring us together.' In the night we sometimes think is falling, it is good that thinking persons like Lillian Smith can give us reasons to hope and can give them to us by pointing to our daily experiences and pointing to them intelligently and appealingly." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R 37:11 My 15 '54 750w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p12D J1 18 '54 500w

SMITH, MARION FUNK. Teaching the slow learning child; by [the author] in collaboration with Arthur J. Burks. 175p $2.75 Harper

371.922 Teachers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Children, Abnormal and backward 53-11862

"Out of her years of experience in teaching retarded children, a dedicated educator recommends an academic program for pupils whose I.Q.'s range from 50 to 89, grounded on her conviction that the slow learner can be rehabilitated. Her case histories argue that retarded children do not need segregation or special training in handicrafts so much as they need slower teaching geared to their slower learning. Her classroom episodes show how her affectionate, outgoing nature helped integrate her pupils into regular school life. By accenting the human side of the problem and its far-reaching social implications, she has made her study interesting to the general reader as well as the parent of teacher of the retarded child." Booklist

Booklist 50:271 Mr 15 '54

Kirkus 21:727 N 1 '53 150w

Reviewed by E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:455 Mr 1 '54 160w

"It is well written and well documented with Mrs. Smith's own experiences in teaching the slow learner. It also reveals the devotion—it almost amounts to a call—that a person must have to remain with such a job when the co-operation from parents and others is not always encouraging." R. M. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:203 O '54

SMITH, MORTIMER BREWSTER. Diminished mind; a study of planned mediocrity in our public schools. 150p $2.75 Regnery

370.973 Education—U.S. Learning and scholarship 54-11285

In his prologue the author says: "I have attempted to write a book which aims to present evidence in support of the thesis that learning, in the traditional sense of disciplined knowledge, is rapidly declining in our public schools, not through fortuitous circumstances but by deliberate, and almost invariably well-intentioned, design of those responsible for setting the direction of public education." Index.

Booklist 51:98 N 1 '54

Reviewed by H. J. Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 31 '54 450w

Kirkus 22:649 S 15 '54 250w

Reviewed by Louis Barron

Library J 79:1893 O 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by F. L. Redefor

Nation 179:513 D 11 '54 360w

SMITH, M. B.—Continued

"He believes that, with a few saving exceptions, our public high schools are committed not to education as it used to be understood but to a silly and dangerous kind of nurse-maiding of the retarded, the mediocre, the uneducable. . . . So far, I am with Mr. Smith. My doubts set in when I find that instead of examining the ordinary evidence, which is depressing enough, he spends a disproportionate amount of his time whaling such spectacularly dead dogs as the more fantastic manifestations of the Core Curriculum. My doubts are augmented by his thesis that the lunatic trend is the result of a deliberate conspiracy in governmental and educational circles to sabotage the whole system of public education. For what purpose?" Dudley Fitts

N Y Times p24 O 24 '54 400w

"It is too bad that a potentially fine critique—and there are passages of good analysis in the book—dies a-borning because of excessive bias and journalistic sensationalism."

W. W. Brickman

— + School & Society 80:138 O 30 '54 150w

Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '54 200w

SMITH, OSCAR EDMUND. Yankee diplomacy; U.S. intervention in Argentina. (Southern Methodist Univ. Arnold foundation studies, new ser) 196p $3; pa $2 S.M.U. press

327.73 Argentina—Foreign relations—U.S.
U.S.—Foreign relations—Argentina A53-9989

"A criticism of United States policy toward Argentina under the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations, as a case of misconceived and self-defeating intervention." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by H. V. Harrison

Am Pol Sci R 47:911 S '53 300w

"This book is an interesting case study of the confusion and inconsistency that characterized the Latin American policy of the United States in the 1940's. . . . The author has relied almost entirely upon printed works published in the United States. The range of these is wide, but he has missed some obviously important items, such as the late Laurence Duggan's The Americas: The Search for Hemisphere Security (1949). There are a good many errors in detail, including not only typographical errors but also erroneous citations. There is no index or bibliography." A. P. Whitaker

Ann Am Acad 289:180 S '53 400w

Current Hist 25:321 N '53 100w

Foreign Affairs 32:158 O '53 20w

"The chief value of Yankee Diplomacy lies in the marshaling of its story between the covers of one conveniently accessible book. Latin-Americanists will recognize this as a valuable service, and it is performed well."

G. I. Blanksten

+ J Pol Econ 62:363 Ag '54 500w

"This little book is an excellent example of how a determined scholar can piece together a careful selection of historical material and—although none of it is 'new'—produce a work whose impact is fresh, strong and exceedingly valuable." Milton Bracker

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 2 '53 430w

SMITH, RED, pseud. See Smith, W. W.

SMITH, SHELLEY, pseud. See Bodington, N.

SMITH, SYDNEY. Letters; ed. by Nowell C. Smith. 2v 524:418p il $17 Oxford

B or 92

53-4189

"Clergyman, libertarian, and a founder of the Edinburgh Review, Sydney Smith was born in 1771 at Woodford, in Essex, and died in London in 1845. . . . He was invariably passed over when the richer ecclesiastical preferments were handed out, he was often loud and he could be deafening, and he was certainly the most notable Smith of his day. But he was also something more. He was a man of good will and a man of good works, and, above all, a man of good humor. . . . [This book] runs to two thick volumes, it consists of over a thousand substantial letters (half of which have only recently come to light), and it constitutes a thousand proofs that he was probably the most consistently amusing Englishman that ever lived." New Yorker

Reviewed by John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 46:825 D 26 '53 2200w

Reviewed by Berton Roueché

+ New Yorker 29:85 Ja 9 '54 1050w

"Despite their merits, it is eighty years since Sydney Smith's letters have been in print. This new edition adds almost 300 never before published to the 750 included with the memoir produced by Sydney's daughter Lady Holland in 1855, carefully corrects all dates, and supplies numerous useful explanatory and biographical footnotes. Since Sydney Smith knew everybody of importance, these two volumes thereby constitute an illuminating picture of British social history from 1794-1844. But, more than that, they are a self-portrait of a man whom it is impossible to know without coming to admire and love." Edgar Johnson

+ Sat R 37:30 My 1 '54 900w

"Twenty years ago Mr. Hesketh Pearson announced in his biography of Sydney Smith that Mr. Nowell C. Smith was completing a collection of the canon's letters, and here at last in monumental print is the result of those prolonged devoted labours. Someone is sure to question whether the effort was worth while. . . . So it must be said at once that the character which emerges from these letters is wholly admirable, possessing besides the qualities of cleverness and wit, which we suspect in England, the qualities we all admire: Kindness, humility, industry, courage and tolerance—and how seldom it is that champions of toleration as public policy are tolerant men in private life!" Maurice Cranston

+ Spec p50 Ja 8 '54 550w

"If Mr. Nowell Smith falls a little short of the Chapman standard as an editor, it is far more in inconsistency than in positive inaccuracy. . . . Yet the merits of Mr. Nowell Smith's work immeasurably outweigh its defects. By collecting these letters, by correcting the text of so many of them and establishing the dates of so many others with a high degree of probability, he has placed students of the early nineteenth century very deeply in his debt."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p800 D 11 '53 2750w

"All devotees of Sydney, all literary specialists and historians of Regency and early Victorian England will for years to come be in Mr. Nowell Smith's debt for this handsome and scholarly edition of the letters. He has done his job with meticulous thoroughness." C. H. Driver

+ Yale R n s 44:139 autumn '54 1300w

SMITH, WALTER WELLESLEY. Views of sport [by] Red Smith [pseud] il. by Marc Simont. 293p $3.95 Knopf

796 Sports

53-6862

A collection of the author's articles on sports written for the Herald Tribune. The sports covered include: baseball; football; horse racing; boxing; track; and others.

Booklist 50:353 My 15 '54

Kirkus 22:176 Mr 1 '54 120w

"Delightful for leisure reading. . . . Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:862 My 1 '54 20w

"It is just wonderful. . . . You don't have to be a sports fan (your present reviewer, for instance, could hardly qualify) to know that Red Smith is a fine person to have around in these dismal, timorous times." R. E. Sherwood

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 25 '54 1000w

"'Views of Sport' is the second book of Smith columns. The first one 'Out of the Red,' was a daisy, and this one is even better. One section alone, of pieces about gambling fever as it affects a Brooklyn sports fan called Butch, and his friends, would make it worth the price of admission. . . . The text is illustrated by drawings that are funny, as well as neat. The man who did them, Marc Simont, knows more about Eddie Arcaro and Casey Stengel than any honest Frenchman should." John Lardner

+ N Y Times p10 My 2 '54 430w

SMITH, WILLIAM GARDNER. South street. 312p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

54-5687

"Philadelphia's South Street provides the scene. . . . The various pathways of the figures who make up the Negro community emerge, the Blues Singer Lil, whose anger led her to live off men and finally murder when her true loyalties were roused; the Bowers brothers who had pledged to avenge their father's death by actively hating whites; Michael the desperate one, Philip the dreamer, Claude the famous one whose people plague him as much as the more threatening whites when he marries Kristin a white girl and a musician. The love of Claude and Kristin faces pressures impossible to withstand, still loving one another, they part, Claude to work for his people, Kristin to play her violin." Kirkus

"Tenderness and violence commingle in a novel with some measure of force in its characters and its relentless portrayal of individuals caught up in group conflicts."

+ Kirkus 22:592 S 1 '54 180w

"A novel that should enhance the reputation of the author of Day of the Conquerors for the motion-picture-like fluidity of its incidents, if not for its preaching. Recommended for all fiction collections." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:1826 O 1 '54 80w

"Fashioning his novel with a rich use of dramatic device, Smith demonstrates that 'problems' give added dimension to fiction only when the characters show the courage, weakness, and contradictions of life itself."

Nation 179:411 N 6 '54 210w

"There are the usual and justifiable details of the white man's brutality, both physical and spiritual, toward the black man; the customary reminders that Negroes suffer not simply because they are Negroes but because they are human as well. The whole thing is earnest, accurate and wooden." Gilbert Millstein

+ — N Y Times p34 O 31 '54 280w

SMITHER, ETHEL LISLE. Stories of Jesus; il. by Kurt Wiese. 80p $1.50 Abingdon

232.9 Bible stories. Jesus Christ—Juvenile literature 54-8460

Eleven stories of the life of Christ, written for ages seven to eleven.

"Kurt Wiese's illustrations in four colors are uneven in value, and tend to be too static and conventional for my taste. But the book meets a real need for home reading as well as Sunday School."

Kirkus 22:59 F 1 '54 150w

"The polished prose is especially appropriate for reading aloud, and there is enough conversation to hold the interest of groups. Recommended for public libraries needing additional books for the religious section." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 79:787 Ap 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Chad Walsh

N Y Times p26 Ap 4 '54 20w

SMITHERS, PETER HENRY BERRY OT-WAY. Life of Joseph Addison. 491p il $6.15 Oxford

B or 92 Addison, Joseph [A54-1869]

"Mr. Smithers, who is a Member of Parliament with literary interests, Addison was, has written the first full-length biography of his subject. It is, he says, the product of fourteen years of research and of 'deep admiration.' Our century does not seem much interested in Addison's plays and poems, which strike us about the way his play 'Cato' struck Macaulay—as cold, turgid, and quite unbearable—and Mr. Smithers has wisely not attempted to rehabilitate them." New Yorker

"The concentration on Addison's public life which his character and habits force on his biographer involves a staggering amount of minute research into eighteenth-century history; the scope and thoroughness of this research are everywhere evident in Mr. Smithers' work, and make it a valuable contribution to the detailed history of the period."

F. E. L. Priestley

+ Canadian Forum 34:43 My '54 500w

"It is a surprise to find that until Mr. Smithers' scholarly book there has been no full life of Addison. He is one of those writers whose circumspection annuls their own story; he had no life, but merely a career, a character subdued by his great abilities." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:504 Ap 17 '54 1650w

New Yorker 30:149 Ap 10 '54 170w

SMOLLAR, LEO, and MORGAN, NEIL. Know your doctor. 173p $3 Little 616 Medicine—Practice

53-9331

Informal, anecdotal discussion of some common illnesses and the attitude of doctors and patients toward them. Reaches the conclusion that many of them involve emotional factors and should not be treated too seriously from a physical point of view—the body is healthier than it seems, the mind needs attention.

Booklist 50:198 Ja 15 '54

"Most of this is not new, to the public at large, but Dr. Smollar has a healthy approach to health and his home consultation room is frank and friendly."

Kirkus 21:572 Ag 15 '53 110w

"In this reader's opinion this book will be of immense value to every adult reader. It is sound, sane advice for our neurotic era. Recommended for libraries of all types and book collections of all sizes." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 78:1683 O 1 '53 200w

"This is an interesting and valuable book, not only for patients but for doctors, since, as the author aptly puts it: 'The mind and the body are together in the human being and those who treat the human being cannot ignore it.'"

F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 17 '54 400w

"In these days of high-pressure medical malarkey 'Know Your Doctor' is a reassuring book to read and to own. The only unanswered question the reader might have after reading it is: How? How can one know the calibre of one's doctor in the face of 'the pretense of mutual respect among doctors which confronts the public like a granite wall'? Perhaps they should all write books."

Martin Levin

+ Sat ■ 37:37 Ja 9 '54 320w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 24 '54 130w

Wis Lib Bul 50:66 Mr '54

SMUTS, ROBERT W. European impressions of the American worker. 62p $1.50 Kings Crown press

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—U.S.

53-12346

"The study summarizes the key changes that have taken place in the position of the American workers since 1890. The first chapter looks at the American worker through the eyes of European visitors between 1885 and 1910. The second chapter is based on the reports of British Productivity Teams which have studied American industry in the last few years." Ann Am Acad

"The volume is largely descriptive, but there is a need for both clearer definition of terminology and delimitation of subject matter. One is never told who is included in the category, American worker. . . The author does provide a thought-provoking perspective on American industry and labor, and carefully evaluates the comments of the observers in the light of their own bias." M. K. Chandler

SMUTS, R. W.—Continued

+ — Am Soc R 19:369 Je '54 230w

"Mr. Smuts has done an excellent job in selecting and particularly in compressing his materials. His conclusions are thought-provoking and should interest all who may be concerned with labor and trade union developments." Louis Stark

+ Ann Am Acad 293:181 My '54 390w

SNEED, MAYCE CANNON, and others, eds.
Comprehensive inorganic chemistry. 11v v 1-2 ea $5 Van Nostrand

546 Chemistry, Inorganic. Chemistry, Physical and theoretical (53-8775)

"Discusses principles of atomic and molecular structure, theoretical and applied nuclear chemistry, and the actinide series." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Chem & Eng N 31:4240 O 12 '53 10w

"Inclusive, the volume under consideration is. Thorough, it is not. However, the contributing authors are not to be criticized for this, since inclusiveness rather than thoroughness is the avowed aim of the editors as expressed in the preface. In the preface, it is further stated that the purpose of each of the volumes 'is to serve as a ready reference to those engaged in chemical manufacture and development and to those in advanced studies in chemistry in institutions of higher learning.' In the opinion of the reviewer, this purpose is not served by Volume I." D. F. Peppard

Chem & Eng N 32:3546 S 6 '54 600w

"Industrial research laboratories certainly will regard this set as essential for background material in inorganic chemistry. Because the volumes are sold singly, and are not expensive, specialists in certain fields will desire the volumes in their field. It is hoped that the volumes will appear at a sufficiently rapid rate so that the entire set will be available within a few years. The authors and editors are to be congratulated on the auspicious start of this series." K. A. Kobe

+ Chem Eng 61:375 O '54 850w

Reviewed by K. A. Kobe

Chem Eng 61:356 N '54 450w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:84 N '53

"Succeeding volumes, as suggested, will cover the remaining elements of the Periodic System. It is not possible, of course, to judge the entire series on the basis of the first volume, which is a serviceable and moderately detailed summary of information on the three topics with which it deals."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:124 Mr '54 200w

SNEIDER, VERN J. Teahouse of the August Moon [a play]. See Patrick, J.

SNOW, DOROTHEA J. Jeb and the flying jenny; il. by Joshua Tolford. 41p $2 Houghton

54-9049

In 1869 a young Swiss wood carver came to Nashville and carved the first animals to be used on a merry-go-round. This story is about Jeb Davis, a mountain boy, whose family regarded his whittling of animals as a useless pastime, until he went to Nashville and earned money with his carving. For ages six to nine.

Booklist 51:69 O 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 14 '54 150w

"An enjoyable piece of Americana, enlivened with many pictures by an artist who is particularly good at interpreting this kind of story. A gay book both boys and girls will like." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:332 O '54 140w

"This is fine read-aloud material."

+ Kirkus 22:583 S 1 '54 90w

"Recommended for purchase in larger libraries or where regional interest warrants." Anne Singleton

Library J 79:2255 N 15 '54 90w

"The charm of the book lies in Mrs. Snow's ability to remember her childhood neighbors in the Tennessee mountains with understanding and authority. The picturesque speech, the humor, the prejudice and the pride of these people are convincingly shown in a story full of warmth and gaiety. Joshua Tolford's bright pictures are wonderfully successful in making individuals of the characters." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p36 N 28 '54 180w

"The tale is told with a fine bounce, and the color pictures are full of zest." K. T. Kinhead

+ New Yorker 30:212 N 27 '54 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 14 '54 120w

SNOW, SEBASTIAN. My Amazon adventure. 224p $3.75 Crown

981 [918.1] Amazon river and valley. Peru —Description and travel 54-12224

An account of the author's experiences in searching for the source of the Amazon. In sixteen months he covered some 3,500 miles, traveling on foot, on mules, sometimes on the railways, and sometimes on rafts. The author is an Englishman, who was only twenty-one when his adventure began. Index.

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1597 S 15 '54 50w

"He is by no means unreadable, but strangely uninterested in anything beyond his main ambition. . . The setting of his adventure, indeed, might be almost any place which possesses an interminable river and a bleak range of mountains overlooking a rank jungle; the people he met almost any surly peasantry whose language he did not know. But in some way it is this very blankness against which he strives which gives his book a curiously epic quality." Francis Huxley

New Statesman & Nation 46:770 D 12 '53 180w

"A pleasant and obviously authentic tale."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 10 '54 120w

"No practiced writer, young Snow turns in a strictly amateur performance. But his story carries conviction and will keep most readers fascinated straight through." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 15 '54 600w

"Superficially this may seem to be one of the most immature books ever written about a mature journey. The journey was, from first to last, a most odd affair, and as each oddity appears he jots it down. He proceeded with the utmost cheerfulness against universal intransigence. . . He was perhaps a 'young visitor' to the Andes. But long before his last page we take his travel out of inverted commas. This is an endearing book, ramshackle enough, but held together by a gay and boyish strength."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p746 N 20 '53 450w

SNOW, THAD. From Missouri. 341p $4 Houghton

B or 92 Farmers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-10199

"Thad Snow tells the story of his life, from his Indiana days when he palled around with a friend, Jim Riley, now better known as James Whitcomb Riley, to the present when he has turned his farm over to his children and lives in two rooms in a smalltown hotel in Missouri. From here he continues at his favorite sport, which has made him well known in his region —writing letters on every sort of subject to 'The St. Louis Post-Dispatch.' Much of 'From Missouri' deals with Thad Snow's problems with his land and the people who worked it." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Readers of the St. Louis papers are familiar with Thad Snow's spirited interest in all that goes on in the world. This is his first book, written in his own undisciplined, conversational, but penetrating style. No need to say to the initiate that this combination autobiography-social study is therefore brimming over with Snow's humorous satire." Helen Cain

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 28 '54 480w

"Superior."

+ Kirkus 22:626 S 1 '54 190w

"In much of what he believes Thad Snow is 'from Missouri.' In putting that on paper he has written a vivid piece of Americana, as indigenous to the black soil that produce it as the mulberries that shade the land and drop their fruit on it." W. C. White

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 21 '54 500w

"Whether he is writing about sheep, cattle, hogs, bureaucrats or people, Mr. Snow is a man of uncommon common sense. The range of his reading over a lifetime has been extraordinary, and it shows in every paragraph of his book." V. P. Hass

+ N Y Times p14 N 14 '54 440w

SNYDER, RAYMOND ALBERT, and SCOTT, HARRY ALEXANDER. Professional preparation in health, physical education, and recreation. 421p $5.50 McGraw

371.73 Physical education and training 53-6051

A textbook on the basic principles on the professional preparation for health education, physical education, and recreation teaching. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"This book will be of great value to those concerned with teacher education in the three areas with which it deals. It is well written, well organized, and well indexed. . . The final chapter, entitled 'Career Aspects,' contains helpful information for students contemplating preparation for school health education, physical education or recreation, and for those who are in a position to counsel such students." C. C. Wilson

+ Am J Pub Health 44:539 Ap '54 360w

"An excellent text book." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:459 Mr 1 '54 60w

SOCIETY FOR THE STUDY OF DEVELOPMENT AND GROWTH. Dynamics of growth processes [by] L. M. Kozloff [and others] ed. by Edgar J. Boell. 304p il $7.50 Princeton univ. press

574.1 Growth 54-6070

"A book of 13 papers that were first presented at the Eleventh Symposium on Growth held at Williams College and sponsored by the Society for the Study of Development and Growth. Typical titles are: Virus reproduction and the replication of protoplasmic units, by L. M. Kozloff; Cell and tissue differentiation in relation to growth (animals), by K. R. Porter; Physical factors affecting growth in plants, by F. W. Went; and Quantitative aspects of population growth, by F. E. Smith." Library J

Chem & Eng N 32:1716 Ap 26 '54 10w

"The authors are outstanding scientists and they addressed themselves to other scientists. The book is an important one for college libraries and other research libraries serving specialists in biochemistry, cytology, etc." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1320 Jl '54 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:66 S '54

SOJO, TOBA. See Toba Sojo

SOMMER, FRANCOIS. Man and beast in Africa; with a foreword by Ernest Hemingway; tr. from the French by Edward Fitzgerald. 206p il $4 Citadel

799.2 Game and game birds. Hunting—Africa 54-2087

"The author, a French professional of long experience, discusses the significant characteristics of several of the continent's more rewarding districts (French Equatorial Africa, Kenya, Tanganyika), the nature and distribution of the chief game animals (lion, elephant, rhinoceros, buffalo, eland), and the decline of the safari from a rugged test of strength and fortitude to its present status (in some localities) as a brisk trophy mil." (New Yorker) Index.

"One of the best books on African hunting that this reviewer has read in many years. The illustrations are outstanding. Sommer's accounts of photographing elephants and rhinos at a range of only a few feet make thrilling reading. This is a book for all outdoor fans." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 1 '54 140w

"Highly recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:2458 D 15 '54 40w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 20 '54 70w

"Many fine photographs, most of them by the author, and a bluff introduction by Ernest Hemingway."

+ New Yorker 30:64 Jl 3 '54 140w

"In some parts of his book M. Sommer is quite realistic. He accepts in its nakedness man's instinct to kill and leaves it at that, with some authoritative chapters to help him on his way. There is a useful summary, with sketch-maps, of the distribution and characteristic of the principal game animals, and an enlightening chapter, embellished by much personal experience, on the arms one should carry against them and how one should use them."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p155 Mr 6 '53 700w

SONNEBORN, RALPH H., and others. Fiberglass reinforced plastics. 244p il $4.50 Reinhold

668.4 Glass fibers 54-8930

"Information on materials, molding techniques, finishing, properties, and design considerations." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng N 32:3668 S 13 '54 10w

"Designers, engineers and top-level technicians employed in a variety of manufacturing industries using plastics will be interested." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:2220 N 15 '54 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:76 S '54

SOOTIN, HARRY. Michael Faraday; from errand boy to master physicist. 180p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Faraday, Michael 54-6776

Biography of one of England's most famous chemists and physicists, Michael Faraday. It follows him thru his years as a London book-binder's apprentice, his work as laboratory assistant to Sir Humphrey Davy, and his forty years at the Royal Institution. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 50:346 My 1 '54

Reviewed by Millicent Taylor

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 60w

"Absorbing all the way, this is must reading for any youngster with a scientific bent."

+ Kirkus 22:122 F 15 '54 120w

"An appealing and inspiring story for young people, because it shows the value of determination and singleness of purpose in overcoming the lack of formal education. While technical and scientific information is kept at a minimum, the discovery of electro-magnetic induction, Faraday's greatest contribution, is dealt with at some length." Dorothy Schumacher

SOOTIN, HARRY—Continued

+ Library J 79:566 Mr 15 '54 90w

"Interesting biography. . . The author's careful research is much fictionalized; he aimed to put the rare character of Faraday down with all its appealing personal qualities, for the general reader as well as the young scientist. Sometimes his imagined scenes and talk are successful, notably in the description of the trip to Europe during the Napoleonic wars; and sometimes they are amateurish and too long drawn out. The final paragraphs are a noble summary."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 My 16 '54 360w

Wis Lib Bul 50:219 O '54

SOPER, DAVID WESLEY, ed. Highways to faith; autobiographies of Protestant Christians. 168p $2.75 Westminster press

920 Protestants in the U.S. Christian biography 54-5289

Contents: Through this glass darkly, by D. R. Boyce; Hypertension and spiritual recovery, by M. J. Newberry; The unbelieving believer, by George Rommel; In God we trust, by A member of Alcoholics Anonymous; Doing changes living, by Jameson Jones; The stones of resentment, by R. M. Fisher; The search for a self, by A. J. Fry; Futility, faith, and football, by R. E. Cochran; From duty to delight, by R. T. Howe; Bags, burdens, and red caps, by R. C. Young; Through business and through books, by J. R. Jackson; Emergencies, energy, and prayer bands, by Hermes Zimmerman; The making of a man of medicine, by Craig Dougan.

"These are real witnesses to the power of Christianity and illustrations of the way it can work under actual field conditions." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:466 Ap 14 '54 140w

Kirkus 22:107 F 1 '54 160w

"Recommended for the larger public libraries because some types of readers will find strength and help from such stories, and for theological school and religious libraries who attempt a complete coverage of the subject." E. H. Weeks

Library J 79:449 Mr 1 '54 100w

SORCE, ROSE L. La cucina; the complete Italian cookbook. 362p $3 Twayne

641.5 Cookery, Italian 53-13091

A compilation of 800 recipes for Italian food. Includes antipasto, wines, soups, salads, spaghetti, meats, poultry and game, fish and seafood, vegetables, rice, cheese and eggs, dressings and sauces, desserts, and breads. Chapter 16 contains suggested menus. Index.

"If you like Italian cooking, this is a book for you." R. F.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 F 7 '54 120w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 78:2218 D 15 '53 30w

"The author seems to know all there is to know about Italian food and her book will be a joy to those who know something about the subject—but others will find her directions too brief." Charlotte Turgeon

+ — N Y Times p36 D 6 '53 30w

Reviewed by Lawton Mackall

Sat 37:39 F 13 '54 20w

SOREL, CECILE. Autobiography; tr. by Philip John Stead. 285p $3.50 Roy pubs.

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-7909

Autobiography of this famous twentieth century French actress. She follows no chronological order; her book is a series of pictures of her life and her stage career.

Booklist 51:40 S 15 '54

"A full dress performance, but a lot of naked emotion just the same."

Kirkus 22:421 J1 1 '54 170w

"Excellent and exciting autobiography. . . Highly recommended for theatre and biography collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1596 S 15 '54 20w

"If you have an orderly mind and in a life story like to know the dates when things happened, in chronological sequence, you may suffer some annoyance from Cécile Sorel's autobiography. If you enjoy detective work you may have a good time searching out clues to the dates. . . Best take this remarkable autobiography as you find it. . . Keep a pinch or two of salt handy, and if you are lucky enough to have memories of Duse and Réjane and Bernhardt, let them help you tie Sorel into the great tradition." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 5 '54 1100w

"I have just laid down Cecile Sorel's autobiography. I am profoundly moved. It is a book I certainly will not forget easily and shall keep and reread often. A few passages may seem slightly melodramatic in Philip John Stead's translation, but one imagines they must only be very beautiful in the original French. Things to do with the emotions seem always better expressed in the Romance languages." Betsy von Furstenberg

+ Sat R 37:34 N 6 '54 550w

"A romantic rhapsody of author for subject." Time 64:84 Ag 30 '54 150w

SORENSEN, VIRGINIA (EGGERSTEN). House next door; Utah 1896; il. by Lili Cassel. (Strength of the Union) 223p $3 Scribner

54-11824

Story of the struggle of Utah Territory to achieve statehood, as told by a sixteen-year-old girl who goes to Salt Lake City in 1890. Gerry, born in Virginia, sees no difference in the young people from Mormon homes, than in those from Gentile people. The story is of Gerry's struggle to choose her friends, as well as the battle for statehood.

Booklist 51:178 D 15 '54

"While some of the boy-meets-girl aspects are a bit contrived to highlight both sides, the friendship between Gerry and Mille, of the Mormon family, is very well handled. Good reading."

+ — Kirkus 22:712 O 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p34 N 14 '54 110w

"There's more than historical data, there is romance for Gerry told in Miss Sorensen's inimitable manner."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 14 '54 50w

"Despite Gerry's too adult perceptions at times, and a plot overloaded with information, the story does give a refreshing account of a too-little written about period. Older girls will approve of the implied romance." E. A. G.

+ — Sat R 37:92 N 13 '54 170w

SORENSEN, MRS VIRGINIA (EGGERSTEN). Many heavens. 352p $3.75 Harcourt

54-5258

"Two themes are developed in Virginia Sorensen's latest novel: the story of Zina and her love for Dr. Niels Nielsen and a picture of the Mormons at the time polygamy is ended in their church in 1890. Zina is the Mormon girl who tells, in the first person, of her love for a doctor who is married to a cripple." N Y Times

Booklist 50:298 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:159 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 21 '54 220w

"This is her best book. . . It is a moving story, convincing in essence if not wholly in conclusions, and holding reading throughout."

+ Kirkus 21:798 D 15 '53 180w

"The dubiously happy ending mars an otherwise tender love story, filled with sympathetic character studies and fascinating descriptions of Mormon life and customs. Recommended for feminine readers." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 79:206 F 1 '54 100w

"In the nurse, Zina, and the doctor, Niels, Mrs. Sorensen has created as appealing a pair of lovers as recent American fiction has had to offer. . . It says much for Mrs. Sorensen's success that, though her narrator is Zina herself, the tone of the love story never becomes either smug or unbearably intense. The effect at which the author aims and has achieved with apparent ease is that of putting the reader into communication, under the circumstances of intimate confession, with a high-spirited woman of eminent good sense and practicality yet in whose nature spontaneous sentiment has found out a vein of poetry." James Gray

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p3 F 21 '54 470w

"Always a skillful story-teller, she has made a real tour de force of her material—right down to a happy ending that seems believable because of the simplicity and understatement of the narrative telling and because of the Mormon tenets that make it possible. Zina's story, along with those of others, both old and young, unfolds with warmth, humor and an earthy naturalness." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p22 F 21 '54 350w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 7 '54 410w

"Virginia Sorensen's full-bodied novel, 'Many Heavens,' is a real technical achievement. She has written a novel of character growing out of an initial, triangular situation that could easily be hammy, placed in a setting of deeply Mormon Mormons, without letting the setting run away with the story, without triteness, and without lag. Twenty four hours after finishing the book, when one has been removed enough from the familiar spell of a good tale to start analyzing the mechanics, it becomes surprising that during the reading one could have been so merely engrossed." Oliver LaFarge

+ Sat R 37:16 Mr 27 '54 390w

Springf'd Republican p9C Jl 11 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:74 Mr '54

SORENSEN, ROY. How to be a board or committee member; cartoons by George Lichty. (Leadership lib) 64p $1 Assn. press

301.1583 Association and associations. Social work 53-13235

A popular condensation of the author's Art of Board Membership (Book Review Digest 1950).

"Should be a boon to the vast voluntary health and welfare movement in this country of its greatest flowering. Even the old hands, whether board or committee member or paid executive, will draw the strength of approbation for their own wise practices, while the new member and unexperienced executive will find it an invaluable guide to their efforts to learn their jobs." P. S. Platt

+ Am J Pub Health 44:687 My '54 220w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

+ Springf'd Republican p10C D 20 '53 110w

SORIA, MARTIN SEBASTIAN, ed. Paintings of Zurbarán. See Zurbarán, F. de.

SOTHERN, EDWARD HUGH. Julia Marlowe's story; ed. by Fairfax Downey. 237p il $3.50 Rinehart

B or 92 Marlowe, Julia 53-10923

This is the biography of a famous Shakespearean actress of the early twentieth century. The story was told by her to her husband, E. H. Sothern who wrote it down. After he died in 1933 Miss Marlowe decreed that it should not be published until after her death, which came in 1950.

Booklist 50:157; 203 D 15 '53; Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:107 F '54 30w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 24 '54 260w

Reviewed by Margaret Williamson
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 28 '54 600w

"There's pride and delight in her 46 years behind the footlights and underneath the greasepaint there's a warm, understanding woman. A very personal note in the field of theatrical biography."

+ Kirkus 21:755 N 15 '53 180w

"This volume is highly recommended for paid and regular circulation as well as for theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:387 F 15 '54 60w

"Miss Marlowe speaks the book in the first person. Mr. Sothern had already written his own autobiography, 'The Melancholy Tale of Me,' one of the most entertaining of all such autobiographies, filled with whimsical humor. The same humor keeps cropping up in what purports to be Miss Marlowe's account of incidents in her career. No doubt they took place, no doubt she told Mr. Sothern about them, but no doubt she didn't tell them in just this whimsical way. The book is a life of Julia Marlowe but it is a revelation of the playful mind of Eddie Sothern. That makes the story entertaining, but a little odd, especially to the people who knew them both." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 24 '54 350w

"Through this book it is the voice of Julia Marlowe that speaks, and no other, though we get it by transcription, and double transcription at that. . . She refused to permit publication of Sothern's work in her lifetime. It now appears edited and furnished with an added chapter by Fairfax Downey who has done a considerate and conscientious job." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 24 '54 700w

Reviewed by Arthur Pollock

Sat ■ 37:20 Ja 23 '54 800w

Wis Lib Bul 50:70 Mr '54

SOUBIRAN, ANDRE. Healing oath; tr. by Oliver Coburn. 376p $3.95 Putnam

54-8710

A sequel to the author's The Doctors [Book Review Digest 1953]. In this volume Jean is again the narrator. He is nearing the end of his medical course and takes a temporary situation in a rural district of France, in order to help a colleague. His experiences there, and his later discovery that Marianne, whom he had deserted for a lighter love, is still faithful, bring him to a realization of the implications of the Hippocratic oath.

Booklist 51:16 S 1 '54

"The piling up of detail—case history after case history, with artistic selection giving way to heavy accumulation—frequently dulls the narration. The structure is top heavy; the story telling exhibits no feeling for form; the effect is one of incidents crammed together." Richard Sullivan

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 1 '54 340w

"Where The Doctors depended on the morbid side of medical training plus an undue stress on the sexual amenities of off-student hours, The Healing Oath has the warmth and tenderness, as well as the stark realism, of a country doctor's practice. Occasionally, shock techniques startle the reader into horrified awareness of the unbeautiful in back country peasant living; occasionally, one is treated to over-long diatribes on the disillusionments of medical practice, as well as the goals. But the whole emerges as a heartening study of man's growth in understanding, sympathy, awareness of the challenge on all fronts that medicine means."

SOUBIRAN, ANDRE—Continued

+ Kirkus 22:315 My 15 '54 190w

"As in The Doctors, Soubiran provides a superb atmosphere (with acute sensitivity towards nature and folk ways) and deft characterizations. . . . As in The Doctors sex, while present, is incidental. Highly recommended for any who like great books in medical tradition." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1226 Je 15 '54 210w

"Dr. Soubiran writes with an unsparing realism which, at the same time, holds sympathy and compassion." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 J1 25 '54 800w

"American readers who found Dr. André Soubiran's best seller of last year, The Doctors, an absorbing story of a medical student's life in Paris will welcome this further installment and find it fully as rewarding as the first." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p4 J1 25 '54 420w

New Yorker 30:86 Ag 21 '54 50w

"Although the theme of M. Soubiran's novel is not new, his story is fat with entertaining case histories and some wonderful characterizations of French peasants. . . . M. Soubiran, himself a doctor, is a thorough, methodical writer who does not hesitate to reassert some old fashioned moral values which are rather far removed from most contemporary French philosophy." D. R. McDaniel

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 8 '54 400w

"A work of considerable distinction and humanity. . . . Dr. Soubiran's artistry lies in the way in which he has combined a brutal realism with love. . . . The latter part of the book shows Jean, upon his return to Paris, drastically backsliding and reaching his own moral low ebb. This section, with his redemptive reunion with Marianne, would be seriously defective in treatment if 'The Healing Oath' stood alone. The girl would be no more than a 'patient Griselda.' It is the relationship of this material to Dr. Soubiran's complete work that sets the characters in perspective and makes a novel of power, distinction, and deep humanity in spite of any faults." Edmund Fuller

+ — Sat ■ 37:14 J1 31 '54 470w

"Soubiran's book is a veritable tapestry of characters, Balzac-like in their rounded completeness, but they are illuminated by compassion rather than cruelty and caricature. The French novelist possesses the capacity to weigh men and women as God's creatures, not as literary puppets, and in 'The Healing Oath' he reveals character, rather than fashions it. The result is not a treatise on the practice of medicine, but an emotionally satisfying and human novel." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 22 '54 430w

"In painting a picture of the country doctor's life, even in a remote area, M. Soubiran seems to include an undue number of serious and emergency cases, but his description of individual families and their attitude to their sick is often penetrating and effective. Nerac's own emotional conflict, which gives the plot cohesion, is treated with a telling blend of drama and reticence."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p701 N 5 '54 310w

"Recommended where The Doctors was well received."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:212 O '54

SOULE, GEORGE HENRY. Economics for living; il. by Bunji Tagawa. 161p $2.50 Abelard-Schuman

330 Economics 53-11088

Short, simplified explanation of the basic principles of economics, relating them to every day living. The author is professor of economics at Bennington college. Index.

Booklist 50:404 Je 15 '54

"Good introduction to the subject for junior high and up." F. K. Jones

+ Library J 79:1410 Ag '54 80w

"The author has crowded into 161 pages many explanations and clarifications well calculated to enable the ordinary citizen to understand and appreciate the opportunities for business success in the United States. Illustrations by Bunji Tagawa enliven the text and a three-page index aids for ready reference." G. B. Affleck

+ Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 8 '54 450w

Wis Lib Bul 50:184 J1 '54

SOUREK, OTAKAR. Antonín Dvořák; his life and works. 135p il $3.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Dvořák, Antonín 54-10399

"Written from the Czech point of view in a forthright nationalistic vein by the ranking Czech Dvořák scholar, this careful study devotes about 30 pages to biography, about 90 to description and criticism of the works, and the balance to a bibliography and excellent classified catalog of the works (with both Czech and English titles included where helpful)." Library J

"The style is a bit cramped as well as dry and occasionally awkward; probably translation. Occasional misprints." C. K. Miller

Library J 79:1231 Je 15 '54 80w

"The most valuable and penetrating sections are those devoted to the program music and the operas, which include analyses and comparisons of the plots of the symphonic poems and the operas. Here we sense the richness and splendor of the music of Dvořák, transmitted to us perhaps by means of the colorful Czech legends on which these works are in part based." Ralph Moritz

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:572 S '54 500w

"As a tribute to Dvorak, this book is handicapped by failing to address a specific audience. The serious musicologist will not find thorough musical analysis here. Nor will the general reader be helped toward deeper personal empathy with either the composer or the music by his conscientious but lifeless compilation of biographical facts, opera plots, and musical outlines. Dvorak's personality and the spirit of the times are only sketchily projected. To performing musicians, however, the short descriptions of Dvorak's many less familiar works may suggest rewarding exploration. In any case, the appended catalogue of Dvorak's compositions, listing also dates and artists of the first performances, is a valuable reference source." Hans Fantel

+ — Sat R 37:17 J1 3 '54 500w

SOUTHON, ARTHUR EUSTACE. On eagles' wings. 296p $3.50 McGraw

Moses—Fiction 53-12057

An "imaginative reconstruction" of the story of Moses, which pictures him as man and leader.

Booklist 50:401 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:159 Ap '54 30w

"The author [a British Methodist clergyman] has achieved an excellent combination of the history of Exodus and the psychological and scientific sophistication of the modern age. . . . In unpretentious style, he has naturalized in our society not only one of the oldest, but one of the best of stories." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Mr 21 '54 300w

"Very well written bit of historical fiction."

+ Kirkus 22:191 Mr 15 '54 100w

SOWERS, ROBERT. Lost art; a survey of one thousand years of stained glass; with an introd. by Sir Herbert Read. (Problems of contemporary art) 80p il $4 Wittenborn

748.5 Glass painting and staining 54-4418

"A short but instructive history of the art of making stained glass which receded during the Renaissance and now flourishes at the hands of Matisse, Rouault, and other modern masters. The author, who practices the craft, looks forward to the day when it will be reinstated as a part of architecture. The colored illustrations give an accurate idea of the translucency of the originals. For large and special art collections." Booklist

Booklist 51:101 N 1 '54

"Too much has been attempted in too constricted a space, but there are some interesting observations and speculations about the art, especially in connexion with its present and future development. If the author were less fascinated by these modern developments he might find that a considerable number of stained-glass windows, created in a more or less traditional style since the Gothic Revival, cannot be banished to the realm of lost art... Even if many of [the designers] in the past and some of them in the present have not that grasp of essentials which he expounds, no book which claims to be a survey of stained glass should reject their work so completely."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p604 S 24 '54 350w

SPALDING, KENNETH JAY. Philosophy of Shakespeare. 191p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Philosophy 53-7902

A study of Shakespeare's moral precepts and philosophical conceptions of life's meanings, based on numerous quotations from the plays.

"Mr. Spalding (fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford) is fully aware of this clouded glass through which the mind of the dramatist must be seen if it is to be seen at all, but he holds, quite rightly, that even so the large movements of his thought and the broad outlines of his philosophy can be discerned. With a multiplicity of quotations from the plays—and a few from the poems, in which our view of the poet's mind is not colored by the medium of drama—he skillfully develops what may fairly be called Shakespeare's own philosophy." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 70:1454 D 16 '53 950w

Reviewed by H. S. Thayer

J Philos 55:449 J1 22 '54 130w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 79:148 Ja 15 '54 10w

"One may agree that there seems implicit in Shakespeare some such moral apprehension as is inferred by Mr Spalding. But his exposition lends no authority to his propositions. There is no examination of the philosophic validity of the poetic vision and no inquiry into the rationale in accord with which a dramatist's own philosophy is to be discerned in his dramatic writings." H. B. Charlton

— Manchester Guardian p4 S 15 '53 190w

New Statesman & Nation 46:188 Ag 15 '53 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p428 J1 3 '53 110w

SPARK, MURIEL, ed. Brontë letters. See Brontë, C.

SPARK, MURIEL, and STANFORD, DEREK. Emily Brontë, her life and work [pt. 1, Biographical, by Muriel Spark; pt. 2, Critical, by Derek Stanford]. 271p il $4 British bk. centre

B or 92 Brontë, Emily Jane [54-8823]

"Mrs. Sparks has written the biographical portion [of the book] which, purporting to be an analytical examination, churns over the known details of Emily's aloofness, associations with the other talented members of her family, and the like... Mr. Stanford's [are the] critical chapters... Most of his concern is for the poetry, to which he applies the methodology of the American New Criticism." Sat R

"Miss Muriel Spark, who takes charge of the biography, and Mr. Derek Stanford, who attempts a critical appraisal of the poems and the novel, are at their happiest when criticising other critics and biographers. They do not get near the heart of their subject... A disappointing book, made worse by clumsy style, faulty syntax, and gross misprints."

— New Statesman & Nation 46:804 D 19 '53 120w

"Any new insight into the enigmatic genius of Emily Brontë would be welcome indeed. But the hoped-for vision will not be found in the collaboration of Muriel Spark and Derek Stanford. Their 'Emily Brontë' is remarkable only for its infelicities of expression and haste of construction." E. A. B.

Sat R 37:34 N 13 '54 270w

"The cooperative, though not entirely consonant, arrangement of the book was not a good inspiration. It leads to some reiteration, and halts the reader's attention. Yet both writers have something to give. Miss Spark's study of Emily's progression from the contented girl who clung to home, to the far flight of genius has the freshness of a new approach. Mr. Stanford, too, is as commendably free of the accretions of a century. He uses his own mind although he quotes the verdicts of many others."

Times [London] Lit Sup p739 N 20 '53 750w

SPEAIGHT, ROBERT. George Eliot. (English novelists) 128p $2 Roy pubs.

823 Eliot, George, pseud. of Mrs Mary Ann (Evans) Cross 53-13498

An attempt to re-evaluate the work of George Eliot from the viewpoint of contemporary criticism. Index.

"A brief survey, once over lightly; tepid fare for serious students."

Kirkus 22:21 Ja 1 '54 70w

"For anyone who still retains the old view of George Eliot as a forerunner of Meredith and Hardy, which is roughly that expressed in Lord David Cecil's Early Victorian Novelists, now twenty years old, Mr. Speaight's book will come ■■■ revelation; while it may well save the more indolent undergraduates in the Cambridge English School the trouble of reading the relevant chapters in The Great Tradition."

New Statesman & Nation 47:233 F 20 '54 200w

"It is not really a literary biography at all, but a somewhat muddled critical essay that employs the interior critical methods of F. R. Leavis, ■ critic whom Mr. Speaight pays frequent homage to, with unfortunate results—where Mr. Leavis invariably crackles and pops, Mr. Speaight has a tendency to sputter and phht." Whitney Balliett

— Sat R 37:33 Mr 20 '54 400w

"Mr. Speaight's introduction will help to win the attention of new readers to George Eliot, and will cause the converted now to nod the head in confirmation of passing felicities (as when he notes the 'liturgical lilt' of her peasants' speech), and now to shake the head in mild disagreement. Either way, it was a pleasant task and pleasantly done."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p122 F 19 '54 750w

SPEAIGHT, ROBERT. William Poel and the Elizabethan revival. 302p $4.75 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Poel, William. Shakespeare, William—Stage presentation [54-14212]

"Here is the biography of William Poel, 1852-1934, the theatrical director who rediscovered the Elizabethan stage. Shakespeare's plays, in shockingly mangled versions, were being exploited as mere vehicles or shows. Poel, going back to the Shakespearian texts, directed the plays as they were written and staged. He has great importance for the whole history of the English theatre, both for his contributions as a director and for his influential ideas on acting and the speaking of verse." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The English stage is deep in debt to William Poel, and the Society for Theatre Research did well to mark the centenary of his birth by inviting Mr Robert Speaight to write his biography. Mr Speaight has done his work admirably. The portrait is convincing, the evaluation just, the narrative lucid and entertaining." Patrick Monkhouse

SPEAIGHT, ROBERT—Continued

+ Manchester Guardian p2 Ag 17 '54 800w

"Mr. Speaight [does not evade] the contradiction between Poel's theory and practice nor does he skim over his defects. His book is well composed from a very large mass of material and it is interestingly written. But its very detail and its partisanship will make it less likely to appeal to the general reader than to the already initiated. For he assumes agreement rather than persuades it." T. C. Worsley

+ — New Statesman & Nation 48:268 S 4 '54 2400w

"Poel's life was worth writing and it has been well done by Robert Speaight who, working for the Society for Theatre Research, has stuck fairly closely to the position of William Poel in theatrical history. The human story might be told also for Poel was full of spirit in spite of being generally written down as a 'dear old man.' . . . He was one of the great liberators of our modern stage and the Society for Theatre Research could not have chosen a better subject for its first annual volume." Gerard Fay

+ Spec p235 Ag 20 '54 950w

"It is to Mr. Speaight's credit that his book does not enable us entirely to comprehend Poel's quality or to assess his achievement. Nothing is easier than to give a superficial and flattering impression of an eminent theatrical. . . . Nothing is harder than to attempt, as Mr. Speaight has done, a dispassionate appraisal of so controversial a personality. Certainly no better biography of Poel is likely to be written. If we are left in doubt about the significance of Poel's contribution to theatrical history, it is the fault of his paradoxical nature rather than of his biographer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p551 S 3 '54 1300w

SPEARS, SIR EDWARD LOUIS, 1st bart. Assignment to catastrophe; 2v; v 1, Prelude to Dunkirk, July 1939-May 1940. 332p il maps $5 Wyn

940.54 World war, 1939-1945—Diplomatic history. Great Britain—Foreign relations—France. France—Foreign relations—Great Britain (54-11363)

"This is the first instalment of General Spears's reminiscences of what happened before and during 'the catastrophe,' the defeat of the French armies and the capitulation to Hitler. It takes us up to May 25, 1940." Manchester Guardian

Current Hist 27:388 D '54 150w

"Clemenceau, Darlan, Daladier, Giraud, Reynaud, Petain—who 'epitomized the paralysis of the French people' all pass through this memoir, and Sir Edward, a man of many capabilities, proves to be an accomplished writer as well as statesman. An American audience may be more difficult to assure than in England where it has had an excellent press."

+ Kirkus 22:718 O 15 '54 200w

"This is a book which from the student's point of view is indispensable; it is also a joy to any reader who likes pointed and candid writing, the epigram, the anecdote, and narrative that never flags." R. T. Clark

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 18 '54 370w

"'Assignment to Catastrophe,' of which 'Prelude to Dunkirk' is the first volume, will be a significant contribution to the understanding of the compounded errors of the democracies at a critical time. It will also be, if this first portion is any criterion, one of the finest accounts of history in the making ever written by a participant—worthy to rank, in its more limited scope, with the work of Sir Winston Churchill himself." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 21 '54 500w

"It is not unbiased writing. Spears saw as an Englishman who worshipped France as his second country, but was motivated by one main resolve—ultimate victory for Britain. . . . The book is a memorial to the matchless courage of Sir Winston. More than that, it is an indictment of the criminal carelessness of free societies toward their most important affairs." S. L. A. Marshall

+ N Y Times p3 N 14 '54 1050w

New Yorker 30:150 D 18 '54 180w

"There can be no question that this sad and enthralling book is of great importance. Marred as it is here and there by a want of modesty so embarrassing to the reader that he is astonished at the unawareness of the author, it remains a moving and convincing testimony, at first hand, of the collapse of France in 1940." Bernard Fergusson

+ — Spec p743 Je 18 '54 900w

"It is not only for its description of events that the book will be valued. General Spears does not pretend to have written a history; indeed, he freely admits that he has been writing strictly personal memoirs; and the historian and the general reader alike will be grateful to him for striking and often highly felicitous descriptions of many actors in the drama which unfolded itself in the first nine months of the war."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p402 Je 25 '54 850w

SPEAS, MRS JAN COX. Bride of the Mac-Hugh. 315p $3.50 Bobbs

54-9492

"First novel by a native of North Carolina. . . . James VI was King of Scotland and England and his troubles with the Highland Clans that refused to give up their sovereignty without a fight, is well known. Here is the MacHugh's world in which he is supreme and the beauty, danger, thrill and torment of it is well represented." Library J

Booklist 51:42 S 15 '54

"A well done first novel." A. F. Otis

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 5 '54 360w

"Recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 79:1512 S 1 '54 70w

"Traced against the turbulence of the Scottish border in the early seventeenth century, it opens on a confusion of Campbells, MacHughs, Lamonds, MacLachlans and MacDonalds, but attains a considerable degree of clarity in its clan ramifications by the time the closing pages are reached. . . . It's a bit complicated along the narrative wayside, but it all comes clear at the close." Henry Cavenish

+ — N Y Times p11 S 5 '54 320w

SPECTORSKY, AUGUSTE C., ed. Book of the sea; being a collection of writings about the sea in all its aspects; with 64 pages of il. in halftone and gravure, and many line drawings. 488p $10 Appleton

910.45 Ocean. Seafaring life. Voyages and travels 54-11169

An anthology of writings about the wonder, the majesty and the mystery of the sea, from Thucydides to Humboldt and Alan Villiers and later writers. Illustrated with photographs and drawings. No index.

Booklist 51:173 D 15 '54

"Excellent in content and stunning in format."

+ Bookmark 14:60 D '54 30w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p1 N 21 '54 370w

Reviewed by G. H. Favre

Christian Science Monitor p15 D 2 '54 950w

"A book to be sampled in leisure moments and recommended for all university and college libraries and most public libraries." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:2327 D 1 '54 210w

"For some reason not entirely clear, the only selection from 'The Silent World,' that modern classic of undersea adventure with the Aqualung, concerns not the sea at all but a freshwater inland spring, the Fountain of Vaucluse, in France. Mr. Sectorsky has preceded each selection with a short introduction giving just enough about author and material to set the stage for the excerpt that follows. The illustrations, carefully chosen, widely varied and beautifully reproduced, have been selected wisely for interest rather than in an impossible attempt to illustrate directly so diverse a text."

E. W. Teale

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 5 '54 400w

"The Book of the Sea' has throughout a contagious delight that sets it apart from the ordinary anthology, too many of which are the result of uninspired industry with the paste pot and shears. This happy exception comes from genuine emotional excitement, fed by imaginatively broad reading that has led its editor to wish to share his own pleasure with others. It is not a work of reference in any sense, but rather a book for happy evenings that will inevitably inspire its readers to delve more deeply in Mr. Sectorsky's finely chosen sources. The publishers have helped matters along by providing a particularly generous and attractive format." W. M. Whitehill

+ N Y Times p3 D 5 '54 800w

"Mr. Sectorsky sets himself certain limits—no too-familiar material; shorter selections get first choice. This plan, together with the magnificent sections of photographs scattered through the big volume, produces exactly the result the editor is after, which is to collect in one place the cream of what the sea has inspired. If Mr. Sectorsky hasn't all the cream here, he has certainly skimmed off the richest of it." Macalister Jones

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 28 '54 480w

Sat R 37:16 N 27 '54 60w

Time 64:130 D 6 '54 100w

SPENCE, HARTZELL. Bride of the conqueror. 336p $3.95 Random house

54-9377

The narrator is a wealthy Spanish aristocrat, Doña Eloisa, who arrived in the New World in the 1500's to find that the man she was to have married was dead. Doña Eloisa at once became the desired prize of the men of all ranks, from Pizarro down. With the help of her confessor and the young man Valentin, Doña Eloisa managed to escape all pursuers until she could wed the man of her choice.

Booklist 51:111 N 1 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 26 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:456 J1 15 '54 170w

"Mr. Spence writes of exciting times in Peru and Panama four hundred years ago. It is seldom that a story four centuries old is told in the first person. It is still more seldom that the narrator is also the heroine—a beautiful, rich and high-strung young lady. This first-person telling by a Spanish beauty, who eventually had her turn at riding the general's mule, gives this morning freshness to the fast-moving story." Lewis Nordsyke

+ N Y Times p33 S 26 '54 450w

"A historical romance that is both diverting and lighthearted."

+ New Yorker 30:217 N 20 '54 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 12 '54 190w

Time 64:105 S 27 '54 70w

SPENCER, PHILIP HERBERT. Politics of belief in nineteenth-century France: Lacordaire, Michon, Veuillot. 284p $6 Grove

282.44 Catholic church in France. France—History—19th century. Lacordaire, Jean Baptiste Henri Domique de. Michon, Jean Hippolyte. Veuillot, Louis François

[54-24796]

"Account of the Church in France between 1830 and 1875. It is divided into three sections: 'Lacordaire's Hour,' 'Michon's Dilemma' and 'Veuillot's Triumph.' It opens with a very clear account of the opportunities which the situation in the 1830s seemed to offer to Lacordaire, Montalembert and their friends; considers the difficulties which Liberal Catholicism and the Ultramontane reaction encountered; and concludes with the triumph of the reactionary party marked by the Syllabus of 1864 and the Vatican Council." Times [London] Lit Sup

"It is a fascinating story and Mr. Spencer tells it well. He tells it, however, from a modern and somewhat skeptical point of view."

E. W. Geissman

Commonweal 61:68 O 22 '54 1650w

"Recommended for large public libraries and college and university collections." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1587 S 15 '54 210w

"Although Mr. Spencer's book will not take the place of the late Dr C. S. Phillips's history of the French Church in the nineteenth century, it is a useful and readable supplementary study." A. R. Vidler

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 2 '54 220w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Nation 179:340 O 16 '54 50w

"Mr. Spencer has written his narrative round three central figures: Lacordaire the preacher, Michon the rebel priest who sought to reconcile his faith with the results of science, and Veuillot the journalist. The first and last are admirably chosen for his purpose. Michon, however, is a marginal figure and Mr. Spencer might have done better to have chosen some other churchman as the pivot of his study." John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 47:606 My 8 '54 230w

"Mr. Philip Spencer has increased the difficulties of his subject by building his account around three figures, Lacordaire, Michon and Veuillot, a preacher, an anonymous novelist and a journalist. These three sections are interspersed with long passages of hasty narrative, and the result is that we have neither a history of the Church, nor a history of Liberal Catholicism; we do not even have essays on three interesting characters, since all of them, especially Michon, are only sketched. . . Mr. Spencer writes well, and when, for example, he considers the problems of social history, he writes very sensibly, but largely because of his method this book is inconclusive and in many ways confused." Douglas Johnson

Spec p334 Mr 19 '54 100w

"The pages on Michon are the most entertaining in the book, in spite of the fact that the writer has allowed him to become embroiled in the general theme instead of setting out his specimen by itself. . . What is not made clear in this study is that there was anything more to the Church in France during these years than the politico-religious aspect."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p230 Ap 9 '54 1650w

SPENCER, STEVEN MURRAY. Wonders of modern medicine; foreword by George F. Lull. 276p $4 McGraw

616 Medicine—Practice. Drugs 53-9893

A series of articles which first appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, here revised, expanded and brought up to date as necessary. Partial contents: The heart menders; The war on cancer; Medicines from the soil; The gamma-globulin story; Defense against blindness; New victories in diabetes; Imperfect miracles.

"This book presents the 'wonders' of modern medicine without falling into the pitfalls of melodrama. . . This book will not only be a meaningful reading experience to the lay public but will help many in the health professions obtain an overview of the growing edge of our work." W. G. Hollister

SPENCER, S. M.—Continued

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1206 S '54 220w

Booklist 50:198 Ja 15 '54

"The author, associate editor of the Saturday Evening Post and former president of the National Association of Science Writers, is well qualified to tell us about current medical progress. He knows how to turn a phrase and this aptitude plus accurate medical reporting, offers a combination that keeps the reader engrossed." Marion Carey

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 31 '54 250w

"Slanted to a popular level, this is not however a bandwagon for cure-alls and its accent on hopefulness seems sound. For a public that would be informed adequately rather than intensively."

Kirkus 21:572 Ag 15 '53 180w

"Dr. Spencer's style is straightforward and assured, with a minimum of medical terminology. Not a 'doctor book'; recommended as a popular history of modern medicine." Karl Brown

+ Library J 78:1934 N 1 '53 140w

"Professional critics—there are many who are still shocked by a layman's invasion of the sacred circle—should be confounded by the book's evidences of careful research, checking, and cross-checking. Non-professional readers will find in it an intelligent and reliable exposition of medical progress—if not the 'wonders' promised by the title—from about 1945 to the present." Beka Doherty

+ Sat R 36:13 Ja 9 '54 800w

SPENDER, STEPHEN. Creative element; a study of vision, despair and orthodoxy among some modern writers. 199p $3.25 British bk. centre

809 Creation (literary, artistic, etc). Literature, Modern [54-650]

"[The book] is not criticism; it is something between a travel book of ideas and a personal manifesto: because it is essentially formless it very directly reflects its author's gifts and limitations. In [it] Mr. Spender approaches some of the major writing of a hundred years, armed with this question: what beliefs have sustained the creative process during that time? It is a question which, in the course of the book, becomes the reverse. What attitudes in the writer will sustain the society in which he believes? If other gifts than Mr. Spender's are required for an answer, his being personal has this advantage—it carries with it his own urgent search for a solution." Spec

Booklist 51:102 N 1 '54

"There are some very good things in the book. . . But the literary and the moral and political interests of the book are not in my judgment successfully joined, and the literary part in particular is not good enough. Too much space is given over to saying the standard things about the standard writers." William Blissett

+ Canadian Forum 34:44 My '54 550w

Reviewed by John Randolph

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 7 '54 100w

"For all its insight and occasional acuteness, this is a sloppily written book. Quite apart from the numerous misprints and misquotations, there are far too many occasions where the thought is loose and the expression simply confused. . . His ideas are interesting and helpful, but that only makes it more desirable that they should be expressed with accuracy and precision." David Daiches

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 15 '54 550w

Reviewed by Jacob Korg

Nation 179:217 S 11 '54 20w

"Mr. Spender is not in any usual sense a good prose writer. He is often, it seems, needlessly involved, needlessly obscure; 'thinking aloud' is the expression that comes to one's mind as one reads him. Yet from the very manner of his prose something of real value emerges, something immensely attractive."

Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:765 D 12 '53 550w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer

N Y Times p4 Ag 29 '54 1050w

"These chapters are based upon lectures given a year or so ago at the University of Cincinnati. Spender is aware they may ask more questions than they answer. They have an intelligent independence one is bound to respect, and they are often excitingly refreshing." W. T. Scott

+ Sat R 37:38 N 20 '54 320w

Reviewed by Clifford Collins

Spec p48 Ja 8 '54 1200w

"The Creative Element is the work of a more mature man [than when he wrote his Destructive Element], but not of a more practised and professional critic; indeed, it is in its lack of academic caution, its abrupt collisions with the most broadly relevant contemporary themes, that its main interest lies. Mr. Spender is sometimes slapdash. . . Perhaps Mr. Spender has not in this book, which is essentially a criticism of ideas as they are realized in literature, rather than of either ideas or literature taken quite in isolation, moved as far away as he thinks from the conclusion of The Destructive Element—the conclusion that 'literature is a means of understanding the profoundest and most moral changes in the human mind.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p760 N 27 '53 2700w

SPERBER, MANES. Journey without end; tr. by Constantine Fitzgibbon. 317p $3.75 Doubleday

53-7987

The last of a trilogy of which the earlier novels were The Burned Bramble, and The Abyss (Book Review Digest 1951, 1952). In this book the principal actions are set in Yugoslavia and Poland, in the latter days of World war II.

"Rich in complex, well realized characters, and in violent, spectacular action, 'Journey Without End' is a large novel in scope as well as in magnanimity." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 23 '54 350w

"Perhaps there is one more novel to come—probably not even about Doyno Faber, for that would be wrong—in which the process will become complete. As it is, Journey Without End is a real, perhaps even a lasting, achievement." Michael Harrington

+ Commonweal 60:275 Je 18 '54 700w

"Moving writing and thinking."

+ Kirkus 22:243 Ap 1 '54 190w

"Mr. Sperber shows little respect for the two main tools of the story teller: suspense and thematic development. His passion lies in dialectics, in acerb and ironic commentary on the small foibles and grand follies of contemporary history, and in symbolic confrontations. He indulges himself with consistent, if confusing, brilliance. One has to pick one's way through a jungle of epigrams, arguments, diary entries, intellectual notations and philosophical twists before recognizing the general cast of the book. . . There are a number of vivid portraits, such as Skarbek, the warm-hearted but undisciplined Polish count, and Mara, the indomitable Dalmatian noblewoman. Yet they, like many other metaphysical and melodramatic digressions, dilute rather than compound the power of 'Journey Without End.'" Carol Field

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Je 13 '54 500w

"On the other hand, though there are no conclusions, it is likely that Sperber has done what he set out to do. When 'The Burned Bramble' appeared in 1951, it seemed fair to regard it as another novel about disillusionment with communism, but now it is clear that Sperber's theme is vastly larger than that. He has written about the anguish of Europe between 1931 and 1944, not for the sake of arousing our pity or our indignation but in the hope of making us think. We see now what he meant when he stated in this Book Review (June 3, 1951) that his aim was philosophical rather than political. The key words in the work as a whole are 'consciousness' and 'conscience.' Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p5 My 23 '54 600w

"The final volume is the most dramatic part of the trilogy. But it is also the most bewildering—and for those who look for answers, it is disappointing. . . . As readers of the earlier two books may remember, this author is not content to let the story tell itself; a man of considerable erudition and dialectic training, he crowds his narrative with intellectual debate. Thus the note of mere sorrow on which the book ends, however faithful to reality, comes as an anticlimax." Robert Pick

Sat R 37:11 My 29 '54 500w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54 270w

SPERRY, ARMSTRONG. John Paul Jones, fighting sailor; il. by [the author]. (Landmark bks) 180p $1.50 Random house; to schools and school libs only $1.68 Hale, E.M.
B or 92 Jones, John Paul—Juvenile literature 53-6261

A biography of America's first naval hero. Written for grades five to eight. Index.

Booklist 50:245 F 15 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p59 N 15 '53 40w

"There is neither padding nor rambling narrative to get in the way of important events, and the result is a clear and inspiring picture of a great naval hero." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:107 Ap '54 70w

Kirkus 21:537 Ag 15 '53 100w

"Not Sperry's best, but the sea battle sequences are excellent, and the biography moves realistically at a good pace." M. H. Edmonds
+ Library J 78:1860 O 15 '53 20w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p28 F 14 '54 60w

SPICER, BART. Taming of Carney Wilde. 222p $2.75 Dodd

54-5629

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune ■ R p9 Ap 18 '54 120w

"Much of this novel is a straight love story, with the wedding scheduled for the page-after-the-last—and, attractively though it's told, one worries a little about the 'taming' of one of America's few top-notch operatives. But there is still plenty of everything in the book to satisfy Spicer fans." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p23 Mr 21 '54 230w

"Good performance in Spicer's lighter vein. B plus." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 28 '54 70w

"Nice scenery, pleasant people; love interest slight impediment. Holds up nicely." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 20w

SPICER, DOROTHY GLADYS. Folk party fun; il. by June Kirkpatrick. 299p $3.95 Assn. press

793 Entertaining

54-9752

Unusual ideas for parties for mixed groups. The author is a folklore specialist. Includes programs, decorations and refreshments for 25 parties. Partial contents: Shrove Tuesday pancake party; Latin American fiesta; Beach supper, Hawaiian style; Italian fund-raising supper; Mexican swim party; Mother-son polka party; Father-daughter hobby horse parade;

Chinese moon festival; Dutch breakfast; Pre-Christmas Syrian party; Armenian festival of fortune; Czechoslovak spring luncheon; Swedish Lucia fest; Pennsylvania Dutch party; African game party; Bulgarian kitchen party; Big Chief Indian powwow. Indexes.

Booklist 50:375 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Sylvia Cassell

Chicago Sunday Tribune p34 N 14 '54 20w

"Recommended." M. H. Edmonds

+ Library J 79:1328 Jl '54 80w

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 80w

SPIELMAN, WILLIAM CARL. William McKinley, a stalwart Republican; a biographical study. 215p $4 Exposition

B or 92 McKinley, William 54-5557

"Except for Woodrow Wilson's two terms, this country was under Republican administration from 1897 to 1933. [This] is a biographical study of the first of the six Presidents who held office during those 28 years of GOP power." Springf'd Republican

"In this slender volume Professor Spielman has attempted to present an up-to-date biography of William McKinley incorporating material published since C. S. Olcott's two volumes appeared in 1916. This he has accomplished only fairly well. Unfortunately, he has neglected many important contributions, among them Thomas A. Bailey's investigation of the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, Julius W. Pratt's examination of the expansionists of 1898, and Alfred Weinberg's research on the concept of manifest destiny. More important, however, is that Mr. Spielman has failed to dig deeply, as a real biographer must, into the manuscript collection to learn the motives and feelings of McKinley and the men of his time." Everett Walters

Am Hist R 60:201 O '54 320w

"Like its subject, this biography, by a former professor of history at Carthage College, is restrained and conservative. . . . Objective and scholarly, if lacking in color and forcefulness, the book is more notable for documentation than for originality. Mr. Spielman remains the detached historian, offering only an occasional conclusion of his own." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 25 '54 400w

SPINKA, MATTHEW, ed. Advocates of reform, from Wyclif to Erasmus. (Library of Christian classics) 399p $5 Westminster press

270.5 Reformation—Sources 53-13092

"[This volume] contains, with introductions and occasional notes, Wyclif, On the Pastoral Office and On the Eucharist, conciliarist treatises by Henry of Langenstein, Gerson, Dietrich of Niem and their successor, John Major, Hus's On Simony and the Enchiridion of Erasmus. Only the last item is otherwise available in English, and of that, we are told, 'the previous so-called translations were found to be mere paraphrases.'" Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by R. H. Bainton

Am Hist R 59:981 Jl '54 250w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Mr ■ '54 30w

"The Advocates of Reform volume is of special value because it includes much well selected material which is not generally accessible and not as well known even to students of history as it ought to be, and because it deals with issues that are still alive." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 70:1501 D 23 '53 300w

Kirkus 21:618 O 1 '53 60w

Spec p746 D 18 '53 110w

"To say that the eight works listed above are contained in the volume is unfortunately an over-statement. Most of them are severely cut. Faced with a difficult problem, the editors have done their cutting sensibly; but books of selections are not uncommon, and it must be hoped that a 'Library of Christian Classics' will not move far in their direction. The reduction of Wyclif's De Eucharistia from 325 pages of Latin to eighteen of English scarcely leaves us with a classic work."

SPINKA, MATTHEW—Continued

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p765 N 27 '53
750w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:204 Je '54 220w

SPRIEGEL, WILLIAM R., ed. Writings of the Gilbreths. See Gilbreth, F. E. and L. E. M.

SPRY, MRS CONSTANCE. Anthology; with il. by Rex Whistler and Lesley Blanch. 112p $4.75 Studio

635.96 Floral decoration 54-5744

"A selection from the writer flower expert, with illustrations by Rex Whistler and Lesley Blanch—8 pages in color and 31 black and white plates. A bedside-reading kind of book for all who love flowers, their arrangement and the gardening side of it, too." San Francisco Chronicle

Bookmark 13:155 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1317 Jl '54 20w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 30 '54
30w

SQUIRE, CHARLES FRANCIS. Low temperature physics. (International series in pure and applied physics) 244p il $6.50 McGraw

536.56 Low temperature research 52-12365

"A graduate-level textbook developed at Rice Institute. In the first two chapters the principles and methods of gas liquefaction and currently used experimental methods in low temperature physics are covered very concisely. In the remainder of the book, low temperature phenomena are explained and analyzed in terms of quantum mechanics. There are frequent references both to classical experiments and to recent ones. Articles published as recently as 1952 are listed in footnotes." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"This is a very interesting and well-written book, and is recommended to those interested in learning more about the phenomena of very low temperatures—mostly below 4°K. . . The book is recommended to all who are interested in reading about a comparatively new field of physics that is not only stimulating but is challenging because more remains to be understood than we know about it today." F. G. Brickwedde

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:2030 Ap 5 '54 600w
N Y New Tech Bks 38:56 Jl '53

"Based on notes for a seminar conducted by the author, the present book gives an excellent introduction to current low-temperature research. . . Graduate students and experienced research workers will find the book very convenient for reference. The presentations of experimental work are particularly good. The theoretical derivations are adequate for reference purposes, but tend to be too condensed for easy reading."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:494 D '53 240w

STAFFORD, JEAN (MRS OLIVER JENSEN). New short novels. See Aswell, M. L. W., ed.

STALEY, EUGENE. Future of underdeveloped countries; political implications of economic development. (Council on foreign relations. Publication) 410p $5 Harper

338.9 Economic conditions 53-7745

"The first major thesis of this book is that the future of the underdeveloped countries in Asia, Africa, and parts of Europe and the Americas is a vital matter for the future of Western civilization, including, of course, the security and the way of life of the American people. . . The second major thesis is that economic development of underdeveloped countries, while a necessary condition, is not a sufficient condition to insure the growth in those countries of trends favorable to human well-being and to the better world we should like to see." (Intro) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:312 Ap 15 '54

"Mr. Staley, a series of meetings with a formidable study group of the Council on Foreign Relations behind him, analyzes and stakes out the development problem in all its pros, cons, and perspective. His work shows not only a comprehensive intelligence of his own, but the breadth brought to the subject by group discussions including many of the leading specialists in this field." S. R. Davis

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 15 '54
230w

"Mr. Staley's prescriptions for American policy are hardly novel but his illuminating diagnosis of the Communist stakes, aims and methods in these areas deserves the weightiest consideration in Washington." E. S. S.

Commonweal 59:654 Ap 2 '54 160w

Foreign Affairs 32:670 Jl '54 70w

Reviewed by Alvin Hansen

N Y Times p3 Ag 1 '54 1100w

"Dr. Staley is to be congratulated on this remarkably fine book. . . There are some shortcomings. . . First, there is too little emphasis on the inadequacy of our knowledge of what the peoples of the underdeveloped areas want. . . Secondly, Staley makes no more than scattered and offhand references to the whole United States Government Point Four program, as carried on by TCA and ECA, both now absorbed into the Foreign Operations Administration. . . Despite these shortcomings, which are certainly unimportant in the face of the remarkable job done as a whole, this book is of the first importance and value." S. P. Hayes

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:464 S '54 1050w

"Though the book is an outgrowth of deliberations of a study group on political implications of economic development organized by the Council on Foreign Relations, it presents rather the personal opinions of Mr. Staley. This gives it a charm and vitality unknown to symposiums and official reports of committees." W. S. Woytinsky

+ Sat R 37:32 My 22 '54 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p442 Jl '54
1250w

"Like a true social scientist, Dr. Staley has raised more questions than he has answered, but this is the first step towards understanding. His book is of great importance to everyone concerned with not merely the future of underdeveloped countries, but also the future of the United States of America." W. L. Thorp

+ Yale R n s 43:600 summer '54 1000w

STALLINGS, HAROLD LEON. Juvenile officer, with David Dressler. 247p $3 Crowell

364.3 Juvenile delinquency 54-8721

Reminiscences of a Los Angeles policeman who has worked for many years on the juvenile delinquency detail. Illustrative case histories are presented in semi-fictional, colorful style.

Booklist 51:33 S 15 '54

Kirkus 22:375 Je 15 '54 170w

"Oversensational in places and occasionally preachy, but otherwise a work for public libraries to acquire." Louis Barron

+ — Library J 79:1510 S '54 130w

"Some [of the stories] are happy-ending tales. Some, especially those of dope addiction, are not. All of them are told so well and with such understanding of the personal and social problems involved that they may cure some of the easy-answer persons who think 'a good whipping' or 'discipline' or 'no comic books' are sure and sufficient answers."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 S 12
'54 120w

STAMM, FREDERICK KELLER. One fine hour. 176p $2.50 Harper

232.9 Jesus Christ—Significance 53-10978

A Congregational minister, who is also a radio speaker, presents Jesus as a realist, not as a visionary. No index.

Bookmark 13:107 F '54 20w

"Dr. Stamm has been a Congregational minister all of his professional life and once served Chicago's First Congregational church. His own independent mind, supported by this background, enabled him to create this portraiture in prose unclouded by theological speculation." Clarence Seidenspinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 28 '54 120w

"A beautifully written, deeply religious exposition of the ground of the author's faith in Christ."

+ Kirkus 22:103 F 1 '54 120w

STANFORD, DON. Red car; decorations by George Tricoglou and Alan Hicks. 249p $2.75 Funk

54-9735

Story about a boy who takes over an old racing car, rebuilds it, and races it in a home-town event which persuades the opponents of racing that there is good in the sport after all.

Booklist 51:178 D 15 '54

"An interesting and original contribution to teen-age book shelves." R. C.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p46 N 14 '54 60w

Kirkus 22:441 J1 15 '54 160w

"This is one for all who like thrills in reading." L. T. B.

+ N Y Times pt2 p8 N 14 '54 150w

"Teen-age boys will enjoy the mechanical detail and the well-plotted, fast-paced story which, fortunately, does not glorify the lawlessness and recklessness the rodders so often symbolize." E. W. P.

+ Sat 37:94 N 13 '54 140w

STANLEY, LOUIS THOMAS. This is golf; with a pref. by Cyril Tolley. 192p il $5 Barnes, A.S.

796.352 Golf 54-12096

"Over 180 action photographs, with short descriptive text, of golfers in the 1953 Ryder Cup match, designed to provide a visual summary of the basic fundamentals of good golf technique and to demonstrate differences between British and American styles." Booklist

Booklist 51:35 S 15 '54

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 21 '54 50w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:2458 D 15 '54 30w

Reviewed by Frank Littler

Spec p660 My 28 '54 90w

STANNER, WILLIAM EDWARD HANLEY. South Seas in transition. 448p $6 Inst. of Pacific relations

995 Papua, Territory of. Fiji. Western Samoa

"A study, by an anthropologist, of postwar rehabilitation and reconstruction in three British Pacific dependencies: Papua and New Guinea, Fiji and Western Samoa." Foreign Affairs

"This adds another important volume to the growing list of definitive works on culture change and administration in the South Pacific area. Dr. Stanner, Australian anthropologist, is Reader in Comparative Social Institutions at the Research School of Pacific Studies in the still comparatively new Australian National University being built up at the capital city, Canberra. His book presents the result of field work as well as extensive library research on the Territory of Papua and New Guinea, controlled by Australia, the United Kingdom Crown Colony of Fiji, and the Trust Territory of Western Samoa, administered by New Zealand." F. M. Keesing

+ Am Anthropol 56:327 Ap '54 650w

Christian Century 70:1025 S 9 '53 60w

Foreign Affairs 32:167 O '53 20w

"While Stanner's book is specifically a case study of three South Seas regions, its value as an analysis is by no means limited to the Pacific area. Since many of the problems discussed occur in a bewildering variety of shapes, forms and emphases in most underdeveloped areas, the book should be studied by all who are concerned with the social and economic development of aboriginal and peasant societies anywhere in the world. It contains many of the clues, warnings and positive leads that are increasingly required if social planning for independent peoples is to acquire significance and be more than a graveyard for good intentions." Ernest Beaglehole

+ Pacific Affairs 26:378 D '53 1100w

"Three things must be said at the outset about this book: first, that it is far more than its explanatory subtitle implies; secondly, that it is likely to be for a long time one of the standard works on the parts of the Pacific with which it deals; thirdly, that it is written by an anthropologist who is at the same time an economist, a discerning analyst of politico-social institutions and, what is perhaps equally important, a humanist."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p745 N 20 '53 650w

STANWELL-FLETCHER, JOHN F. (STANWELL FLETCHER, pseud). Pattern of the tiger; with illustrations by the author. 296p $5 Little

954 [915.4] India—Description and travel. Pakistan—Description and travel 54-5142

"An American naturalist in 1951 returned to parts of Northwest India and Pakistan which he knew as a boy, to study the small mammals of the area. He visited, by train and jeep and on foot, Jim Corbett's Kumaon Hills, Gwalior, Kashmir, and the tribes along the Afghanistan border. Political tension in Kashmir, and in many parts of Pakistan, so attracted his attention that his scientific interests tend to take a secondary place in this report." Library J

Booklist 50:318 Ap 15 '54

"More interesting than Fletcher's political conclusions are stories of his movements along the northern border of India, as a naturalist, and similar expeditions in western Pakistan, including the remote and fascinating principalities in the far northwest, such as Swat. He found his knowledge of the native languages, gained in childhood, came back to him, so the reader benefits from literal answers, rather than those supplied by interpreters. The author's own illustrations add much to the book." Percy Wood

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 28 '54 160w

Kirkus 22:144 F 15 '54 130w

"Unfortunately, he has mixed his political and scientific observations to such an extent that they cannot easily be separated—the principal fault of an otherwise readable and entertaining account of personal experiences in the more inaccessible parts of India and Pakistan." J. W. Rogers

Library J 79:447 Mr 1 '54 170w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 J1 27 '54 280w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p9C J1 11 '54 400w

Wis Lib Bul 50:69 Mr '54

STARKIE, ENID. André Gide. (Studies in modern European literature and thought) 63p $2.50 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Gide, André Paul Guillaume

A54-3059

"Dr. Starkie, reader in French literature at Oxford University, knew Gide personally, and here discusses the structure and themes of his books, the questions that he raises, the answers to which he points, and the strange inner compulsion that drove him on to bring every answer into question again by every new variation on his central theme. She presents the complex problems which Gide's literary and moral conscience had to face with a clarity and apparent simplicity that only intimate acquaintance and critical sympathy can achieve." (Publisher's note) Bibliographical notes. No index.

STARKIE, ENID—Continued

"Here and elsewhere Dr Starkie has had to sacrifice argument to inclusiveness. But this short book makes one look forward to her full-length study." J. R.

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 2 '54 1200w

Reviewed by G. D. Painter

New Statesman & Nation 47:324 Mr 13 '54 500w

"One appreciates the difficulty of putting Gide into so few words. But the American reader wanting to know about Gide's life would do better to go to Justin O'Brien's 'Portrait of Andre Gide.' " A. J. Guerard

N Y Times p10 Ag 8 '54 120w

+ Spec p338 Mr 19 '54 270w

"In the main this book represents the successful accomplishment of a difficult assignment. Readers who do not know Gide will find here a clear, compact and comprehensive introduction; those who do will find their scattered impressions usefully gathered and juxtaposed. These sixty close-packed pages add up to a striking account of Gide's complex and wayward personality; Dr. Starkie's personality is discreetly and continuously present."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p346 My 28 '54 250w

STARKIE, WALTER FITZWILLIAM. In Sara's tents [il. from sketches by José Porta and photographs by San Sebastian and others]. 339p $6 Dutton

397 Gipsies

54-7840

"This is Mr. Starkie's fifth book about the gypsies in twenty-one years. Books about gypsies cannot be run through the literary meat-grinder like, say, murder mysteries; they require field work, journeys to far corners. Mr. Starkie has followed the gypsies' pateran in Hungary, Rumania, Italy, Sicily, North Africa and Spain. Here the text broadens to semi-encyclopedic proportions, but the geographical focus is largely on Provence, with considerable attention once more given to Spain." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 50:291 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:158 Ap '54 40w

"A treasure house of gypsy lore and anecdote, and it is particularly valuable in the intimate connection it draws everywhere between the gypsy character and its manifestation in song and dance. On such subjects as Andalusian 'deep song,' flamenco singing, and the dances of the gypsies of Triana, that sordid and fascinating suburb of Seville, Dr. Starkie is continuously interesting." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 D 31 '53 160w

"Discerning and devoted account of gypsy life today."

+ Kirkus 22:25 Ja 1 '54 200w

"Although this is of specialized interest, the book is recommended as an important contribution to the subject." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:633 Ap 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by Honor Tracy

New Statesman & Nation 46:684 N 28 '53 120w

"Mr. Starkie is himself a competent blend of scholar and reporter, humanist and humanitarian—a latter-day George Borrow. . . There are twenty-odd excellent photographs and some superb drawings of gypsy types by José Porta, of Barcelona." J. T. Winterich

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 28 '54 550w

"In the first half of the book—so ebullient for all its philosophy and the somber vein so reminiscent of Lorca and de Montherlant—you meet again Starkie's old friends at the horse-fairs, the caves of Seville, the taverns, bull-fights and routs. . . The nexus of the book is the annual pilgrimage to the shrine of Sara, legendary saint of the dark people, at Les Saintes Maries in Provence. . . This tumultuous mise-en-scène he interprets in details that explain the whole, taking in history, music, customs and also the Mithraic cult of the bull that from antiquity has pervaded their forlorn region of the Camargue." Idwal Jones

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 7 '54 650w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p694 O 30 '53 900w

STAROBIN, JOSEPH ROBERT. Eyewitness in Indo-China. 187p il $2.50; pa $1 Cameron and Kahn

959 Indo-China

54-3155

"Some of this book is a traveler's tale of the trip from Peking to Vietminh country and return. Space is given to brief historical accounts of both the Vietminh and the Cambodian and Laotian 'liberation movements.' But Mr. Starobin also recounts in some detail his observations of the revolutionaries' daily existence in the hill country, and treats of particular subjects like the Vietminh agrarian policy." Nation

"An almost completely one-sided story." H. P. Linton

Library J 79:1315 Jl '54 160w

"It is not fashionable these days to quote pro-Communist works. Indeed, the mere reading of them has its perils. And here is a book by a former foreign editor of the New Masses, written in a partisan vein, openly in favor of the Vietminh. Mr. Starobin spent about a month in Vietminh company in early 1953—the first American, he notes, to visit them in seven years—and writes as an eyewitness. . . The book 'Eyewitness in Indo-China' offers information that, properly weighed and carefully collated with data already available, will prove of significance for those who may desire to understand more fully the motive forces of the Vietminh." O. E. Clubb

Nation 179:137 Ag 14 '54 650w

"Mr. Starobin's book is one of the most interesting English-language books to come out of the Indochina war, if only for its peculiar viewpoint. . . There are, however, many interesting and accurate descriptions of everyday life and work in the government, army and armament plants of the Viet Minh regime that are little known and will provide the specialized reader with a certain basis for comparisons with the early days of the Communist Chinese in their Yenan stronghold. Since Starobin started and ended his trip into Indochina from Red China, he also provides the reader with brief glances of life in Peking. . . The book is an important addition to the small body of English-language documentation on Indochina, despite its intended propaganda aspect." B. B. Fall

Pacific Affairs 27:284 S '54 1200w

STARR, LOUIS MORRIS. Bohemian brigade; Civil War newsmen in action. 367p il $5 Knopf

071 U.S.—History—Civil war—Press correspondents. Newspapers—U.S. 54-7214

A study of the work of newspaper reporters during the Civil war, of what they did and how they did it, and the effect it had on the practice of journalism in the United States. Index.

Booklist 51:75 O 15 '54

"There is much new material in this narrative, and even what has been used before is freshly treated. With a 'nose for news' even when it is buried in old letters and newspapers, Starr reports in a vein which will entertain as well as inform his readers." R. P. Basler

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 17 '54 750w

"Seldom is a history book so packed with human warmth, without impairing its validity. Never has this reviewer read an account of newspaper history that has presented it so vitally, both from the standpoint of its internal development and of its influence upon the general public. And not since reading Stephen Crane's 'Red Badge of Courage' has this reviewer felt so intensely what the Civil War meant to the individuals who experienced that carnage." G. H. Favre

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 16 '54 1000w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 179:266 S 25 '54 70w

"Mr. Starr has written a very good book, and he has written it with humor, with zest and with considerable literary skill. It is no exaggeration to say that 'Bohemian Brigade' is essential to a full understanding of the Civil War." Bruce Catton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 12 '54 1000w

"Mr. Starr confesses that the sheer magnitude of his subject leaves room for further exploration, that he has given disproportionate emphasis to the Eastern theater of the war, and that he accords Greeley's Tribune an undue amount of attention. But he has written a delightfully thrilling book. The Civil War takes on fresh shadings and new overtones as we view it through the eyes of the men who brought its heartache and its drama to the people of the North." B. P. Thomas

+ N Y Times p37 S 12 '54 750w

"An original and arresting book. . . American reporting grew up the hard way during that war, and Starr's book, packed with human color, incident, and detail dredged up from many a now-forgotten source, gives it eloquent tribute." W. H. Hale

+ Sat R 37:17 N 13 '54 950w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 10 '54 500w

STEACIE, EDGAR WILLIAM RICHARD.

Atomic and free radical reactions. (American chemical society. Monograph ser) 2d ed 2v 485:487-901p il $28 Reinhold

541.39 Chemical reactions 54-11034

"The standard monograph on a fundamental area of basic chemistry. The first edition was published in 1946 and in one-volume format [Book Review Digest 1946]. This new edition is approximately twice as long and covers the published literature partly through 1953. Background theory, experimental methods of investigating atomic and free radical reactions, and the functions of them in various chemical systems are all compactly surveyed. Literature references are given for all data." Library J

"A necessary reference work for all chemistry collections used by graduate chemists who are teaching or conducting research." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:2220 N 15 '54 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:67 S '54

STEAD, PHILIP JOHN. Vidocq. 263p $3.50 Roy pubs.

B or 92 Vidocq, Eugène François 54-11166

"Biography of the 19th century swashbuckling Frenchman who founded the Sureté. . . Before he was 20, Vidocq had been sentenced to the galleys, but he had escaped. He tried to go straight, but was hounded by the underworld so he turned himself over to the police." Library J

"Mr. Stead's biography reads like a novel; it has pace, suspense, and full-bodied characterization. Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:2327 D 1 '54 130w

"His memoirs are wonderfully entertaining (but how far are they believed?), his portrayals of the Paris underworld (notably in Les Voleurs) offer a complement to Mayhew; and his novels have the reputation of being Zolaesque in scope if not in skill. No doubt one should read them. Mr. Stead encourages us."

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:240 Ag 29 '53 260w

"A superlative job of research and rehabilitation, clearing up definitively many of the clouds with which legend surrounds the man, and presenting a fine life-size portrait of a paradoxical and eccentric figure, against a clear and vivid backdrop of his turbulent times." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p39 O 31 '54 140w

"Mr. Stead makes a rousing tale of this extraordinary life, documenting it ably and correcting the lies that grew up about Vidocq's memory." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 S 30 '54 550w

Spec p255 S 4 '53 200w

"Mr. Stead's research has produced a vivid and factual account of Vidocq's life and deeds that goes far to vindicate him and displace the legend. Its value, however, is partially obscured by a tendency to romanticize, by some synthetic conversations, and by occasional lapses into indifferent writing. Even so, it is a fascinating book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup. p543 Ag 28 '53 1000w

STEARNS, RAYMOND PHINEAS. Strenuous Puritan: Hugh Peter, 1598-1660. 463p il $7.50 Univ. of Ill. press

B or 92 Peters, Hugh 53-9765

"A life of the paradoxical Puritan enthusiast who subscribed to the Divine Rights of Kings, yet was prominent among those who executed Charles I (he was hanged for this later), who reputedly scorned learning yet was one of the founders of Harvard College, who preached otherworldliness yet established the New England fisheries. Peter was born in Cornwall, England. He was ordained an Anglican priest, but soon became a Puritan. In 1628 he sought asylum in Holland, then, in 1635 he went to America. He returned to England in 1641, never to leave it again." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

"Hugh Peter touched the history of his time at so many points that his biography, told fully as it is by Prof. Stearns and with adequate treatment of his environment, becomes a considerable part of a history of Puritanism. . . The biography is a work of distinguished scholarship." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:1240 O 13 '54 280w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 13 '54 70w

Reviewed by R. S. Bosher

N Y Times p10 S 19 '54 360w

"Hugh Peter has had to wait a long time for a biographer and it is likely to be a long time again before this formidable yet excellent biography by Professor Stearns is superseded."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p420 J1 2 '54 950w

STEBBINS, ROBERT CYRIL. Amphibians and reptiles of western North America; il. by the author. 528p $8.50 McGraw

597.6 Reptiles, Amphibia 53-11489

"A regional guide which tells about the geographic distribution, habitat, appearance and habits of all species of amphibians and reptiles in western North America. The volume is illustrated with line drawings and emphasizes those characteristics needed for identification." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 28 '54 30w

"Although 'Amphibians and Reptiles of Western North America' is not aimed at the general reader it will be an absolute must for amateur and professional herpetologists, scout leaders and nature counselors, biology teachers and all others who wish to identify or learn the habits of Western amphibians and reptiles." A. C. Smith

STEBBINS, R. C.—Continued

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 7 '54 140w

STED, RICHARD. They all bleed red. 209p $2.50
Simon & Schuster

54-12831

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 14 '54 50w

"Not a choice cut—but filling."

Kirkus 22:504 Ag 1 '54 60w

"There's a good deal of awkwardness in both the plotting and the prose . . . but it's an often funny and unusually convincing hard-boiled novel." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p50 O 24 '54 40w

"Events move fast; one blonde is fairly funny; the rest of the comedy seems forced and might not amuse you enough to cover the transparency of the chief problem." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 7 '54 70w

"Slaphappy and wise-cracky; regulation toughie with variations." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:63 N 6 '54 20w

STEEGMULLER, FRANCIS, ed. See Flaubert, G. Selected letters

STEELE, WILLIAM O. Francis Marion, young swamp fox; il. by Dirk Gringhuis. (Childhood of famous Americans ser) 192p $1.75
Bobbs

B or 92 Marion, Francis—Juvenile literature 54-6065

The boyhood of Francis Marion described in story form for young readers.

"Rich with convincing episodes in the deep swamps where alligators, rattlesnakes, and drifting moss are familiar experiences." Mill-cent Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 40w

Reviewed by Sonja Wennerblad

Library J 79:1324 J1 '54 20w

STEELE, WILLIAM O. Story of Daniel Boone; il. by Warren Baumgartner. 175p $1.50
Grosset

B or 92 Boone, Daniel—Juvenile literature 53-8124

A biography of Daniel Boone for grades four and five. It begins with his boyhood in Pennsylvania and follows him thru all his battles and wanderings to the time when he left Kentucky for Missouri in 1799.

Kirkus 21:487 Ag 1 '53 80w

"The treatment is cursory, but Mr. Steele has done a satisfactory job. The comparatively simple life of the frontiersman lends itself to this type of telling. Reads smoothly and includes many exciting adventures. Recommended." Margaret McFate

+ Library J 78:2228 D 15 '53 60w

"This hasn't the three-dimensional quality of the author's best fiction but it has a hearty backwoods flavor and, of course, plenty of excitement." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times pt2, p30 N 15 '53 40w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 13 '53 50w

STEELE, WILLIAM O. Winter danger; il. by Paul Galdone. 183p $2.25 Harcourt

54-5157

A story of pioneer life in Tennessee in the 1780s. The hero is eleven-year-old Cajé, who is glad to give up wandering with his father to spend a winter in the family of his uncle.

Booklist 50:283 Mr 15 '54

"This third of the author's tales of Tennessee pioneer life in the 1780s is as exciting and authentic as the others. Young readers will love it." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 21 '54 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

+ Horn Bk 30:98 Ap '54 120w

Kirkus 22:62 F 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by Margaret McFate

Library J 79:791 Ap 15 '54 90w

"With its large type and many sympathetic pictures, the book must contain well under 30,000 words. Yet the place, the people, the boy, are etched in our minds to stay, as was the scene of 'The Buffalo Knife.' Mr. Steele's first book. Both are fine reading for boys from about nine to twelve." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 21 '54 220w

"Pioneer stories are legion, but this one is distinguished not only for its clear evocation of the sense of physical danger, of hunger and cold but also because Mr. Steele makes us feel deeply the emotions of a boy who is fiercely independent but wants to belong." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 11 '54 220w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:212 N 27 '54 80w

"This is an exciting adventure story of frontier life that boys will enjoy. It has in it also a picture of fine family living, of neighbors sharing with neighbors, of a father's underlying love for his son. Rough pioneer life is well depicted in the many fine black-and-white drawings by Paul Galdone."

+ Sat R 37:26 Ap 17 '54 270w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:143 My '54

STEEN, MARGUERITE. Bulls of Parral. 438p $3.95 Doubleday

54-9845

The Parral bulls were an excellent breed, destined for the bullrings of Spain. The story is of the daughter of the Parrals, loved by two matadors, who made her choice and married Paco. While Aracea was bearing Paco's son, Paco was gored and died.

Booklist 51:152 D 1 '54

"There's more to the story than the thrill of the ring and all its components. There's deep insight into the character and thinking of the Spanish, the conflict between old ways and new, the individuals of the story, most of whom are fully realized. Overlong, but, for the most part, holding reading for the aficionados."

+ Kirkus 22:593 S 1 '54 270w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 19 '54 550w

"The book could be reduced by half and say at least as much as it does now. Dealing with surfaces for the most part, its tragedy brings no catharsis, and the figure of Aracea, who has brought her house down about her, fails to excite compassion." Harry Sylvester

N Y Times p37 N 21 '54 480w

"There is a great deal of action in the book but almost no emotion, and the characters, themselves inert, move and speak only at Miss Steen's prodding."

New Yorker 30:170 O 23 '54 40w

"A refreshing revival of enthusiasm for bullfighting. It is an unabashed love affair between the author and an ancient art. . . . On the negative side I must say that although I found her characters completely true and believable, prototypes of people I have known in Spain, I did not find myself gripped by their problems. I don't know exactly why, either. Perhaps because Miss Steen bit off such a large chunk of space and time that the novel lacks focus." Barnaby Conrad

+ — Sat R 37:26 N 6 '54 650w

Reviewed by Kingsley Amis

Spec p644 N 19 '54 40w

STEFFEK, EDWIN FRANCIS. Wild flowers and how to grow them. 192p il col il $3.95 Crown

635.9 Floriculture. Wild flowers 54-6635

"A practical book on the cultivation of wild flowers, with information on where to find them, how to identify them positively, how to transplant them and raise them in the home garden." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 50:394 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:217 Je '54 10w

"Perhaps too much information for the neophyte, but valuable for experienced gardeners. The illustrations are disappointing."

+ — Kirkus 22:360 Je 1 '54 140w

"The scarcity of informative, practical books on the culture, propagation and conservation of attractive wild flowers makes Mr. Steffek's new volume particularly welcome." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 4 '54 70w

STEGNER, WALLACE EARLE. Beyond the hundredth meridian: John Wesley Powell and the second opening of the West; with an introd. by Bernard DeVoto. 438p il maps $6 Houghton

B or 92 Powell, John Wesley. West 53-9245

"The record of the first expedition to descend the Green and Colorado Rivers makes a dramatic introduction to the life of John Wesley Powell, but actually his contribution to the opening West, and his permanent part in putting our government into scientific studies of the nation are the major claims to a fame, unjustly obscured. Map makers today still use some of his findings. Geological studies he launched in what would be today considered almost an amateurish approach, laid the groundwork for a wholly scientific development. Ethnology and Indian policies, public land policy and the structure of government science stem back to his trail blazing efforts." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 51:61 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:7 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 12 '54 550w

"This is not a personal record but the story of an extraordinary career. An important facet of American growth is here given due consideration."

+ Kirkus 22:184 Mr 1 '54 230w

"It is strange and disappointing that so competent a novelist as Wallace Stegner should mar such a fine book by completely ignoring the character and personal life of his subject, John Wesley Powell. . . The book is valuable if somewhat impersonal history, and a little more attention to the human side of the man could have made it definitive. A good book, not needed in small libraries, but necessary in any collection of Americana." Shirley Barker

+ — Library J 79:1501 S 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 179:263 S 25 '54 500w

"The section called 'The Threshold' would make a short, lively and exciting book in itself—a hair-raising adventure story told with impeccable scholarship. . . The book is a comprehensive job, well annotated and supplemented with pictures and maps. It should become a basic volume for any one who wishes to understand the problems and potentialities of this continent 'out where the West begins.'" Edwin Corle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 19 '54 1150w

"Told in a clear, vigorous style illumined by flashing comparisons." Angie Debo

+ N Y Times p14 S 12 '54 450w

"An important book and, what is more, an exciting one."

+ New Yorker 30:141 S 25 '54 180w

"Because Mr. Stegner has made his book the double-barreled affair it is, it should have a fine chance to qualify either as biography or history when the 1954 Pulitzer awards are made next spring." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 12 '54 2500w

"It is a complex story, but no man is better fitted by understanding and artistry to tell it than Wallace Stegner." Mari Sandoz

+ Sat R 37:36 S 11 '54 1250w

STEIN, AARON MARC. Body in the basket, by George Bagby [pseud]. 187p $2.75 Doubleday

54-9990

Detective story.

Booklist 51:152 D 1 '54

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 10 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:459 J1 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 19 '54 90w

"Local color is vivid, detection effective, narration highly readable; only a much too obvious puzzle-answer keeps this from being one of the best of all Bagby's swift and entertaining novels." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p30 S 19 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 3 '54 100w

"Nice, but strung out." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:64 O 2 '54 30w

STEIN, JESS M., ed. Basic everyday encyclopedia. See Basic everyday encyclopedia.

STEINBECK, JOHN. Sweet Thursday. 273p $3.50 Viking

54-7983

Several of the characters from Cannery Row (Book Review Digest 1945) figure prominently in this novel. World war II has brought many changes, but Mack, Whitey, Hazel, and especially the marine biologist, Doc, are here. Three new characters are Fauna (whose real name was Flora) proprietor of the Bear Flag, and Joseph and Mary Rivas, who had taken over Lee Chong's store.

"This is comedy—bawdy, sentimental, and in places implausible, as when Suzy takes to living in an abandoned boiler; but read in the spirit with which it is written, it is good fun." Edward Weeks

Atlantic 194:82 Ag '54 360w

Booklist 50:309; 401 Ap 15 '54; Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:393 Ag '54 200w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 13 '54 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 My '54

"Cannery Row wasn't one of Mr. Steinbeck's better efforts, but he did manage to write his lyric to the vacant lot with a certain amount of charm. But there wasn't enough to carry over to Sweet Thursday." R. H. Boyle

— Commonweal 60:351 J1 9 '54 350w

"Perhaps Cannery Row was not top Steinbeck, but I loved it, and the characters live today as vividly as when I first met them in his pages, ten years ago. So it is sheer joy to meet them again."

+ Kirkus 22:240 Ap 1 '54 160w

STEINBECK, JOHN—Continued

"The many Steinbeck fans who were enthusiastic about Cannery Row will no doubt be eager to read this delightfully inconsequential book; circulation and pay duplicate collections will acquire several copies automatically. More critical readers, however, may adduce it as still further evidence that Steinbeck is no longer an author to be taken seriously." Louis Barron
— + Library J 79:1052 Je 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Anne Duchene

Manchester Guardian p4 O 26 '54 240w

Nation 179:37 J1 10 '54 360w

"This book, however thin and unconvincing its central situation is, does make an emphatic and clear-cut statement of Steinbeck's greatest single theme: the common bonds of humanity and love which make goodness and happiness possible." Hugh Holman

New Repub 130:18 Je 7 '54 1700w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson

New Statesman & Nation 48:590 N 6 '54 50w

"He knows these people well and he is thoroughly at home in the vein of low comedy in which he writes of them. But into this ancient and honorable tradition he injects a strain of romance that is perilously close to being cute. Only the up-bubbling notes of rowdy humor and the occasional broad satiric thrusts save the love story from turning into what might be described as corn." Milton Rugoff

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Je 13 '54 1200w

"A yarn so gaily inconsequential that it might serve as the working script for a musical comedy on the order, say, of 'Pal Joey.'" Carlos Baker

N Y Times p4 Je 13 '54 800w

Reviewed by Brendan Gill

— New Yorker 30:71 J1 10 '54 360w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 15 '54 650w

"It is true that 'Sweet Thursday' is written with enjoyable gusto, that Steinbeck frequently kicks over conventional traces delightfully. Still this indubitable best seller is not the novel one hoped it would be. Maybe Steinbeck, like a lot of good novelists of the past and the present, has to fall from good to bad and back again because he is made that way or because his later books, good and bad, have won praise and sales so easily that he has lost the power of self-criticism." H. C. Webster

Sat R 37:11 Je 12 '54 800w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54 400w

"Sweet Thursday is a turkey with visibly Saroyanesque stuffings. But where Saroyan might have clothed the book's characters and incidents with comic reality Steinbeck merely comic-strips them of all reality and even of very much interest."

— Time 63:120 Je 14 '54 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p753 N 26 '54 320w

STEINBERG, ISAAC NACHMAN. In the workshop of the revolution. 306p $4 Rinehart 947.083 Russia—History—Revolution, 1917-53-7722

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Although In the Workshop of the Revolution is by no means a major historical work and although it makes no fundamental addition to our knowledge of the first months and years of communist rule in Russia, it does possess some solid merits. Mr. Steinberg has an important and fascinating story to tell about himself and his Social Revolutionary colleagues in the coalition government, and he tells it well. . . . The gravest failing of the book is in the point of view of its Left Social Revolutionary author. Mr. Steinberg favors terrorism—of quite a different brand from the communist variety, to be sure—and revolution. Indeed he favors the October revolution as well as the disbanding of the popularly elected Constituent Assembly where his fellow Social Revolutionaries, but of the Right, had a majority. Yet he wants to stand as a champion of 'democracy' and all civilized values against communist 'tyranny.' No wonder that his pages on the Constituent Assembly are historically misleading and morally and intellectually lamentable." N. V. Riasanovsky

+ — Am Hist R 59:623 Ap '54 440w

"Dr. Steinberg writes with the greatest sensitivity, without bitterness, without reproach, with complete understanding. Every student of Russia and revolution will want this book and treasure it always." David Price

+ Canadian Forum 33:282 Mr '54 300w

Foreign Affairs 32:679 J1 '54 30w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 31 '54 210w

"I. N. Steinberg's 'In the Workshop of the Revolution' is a puzzling book. . . . The author sheds no new light on the leading figures or major events of the period which he discusses. Three main themes are discernible in his loosely-knit story: a weak and ineffectual apology for the part, minor as it was, played by the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries in the consolidation of the Bolshevik dictatorship; an indictment of the Bolshevik rule along the familiar lines of disgruntled fellow-travelers (although the succinct chapter, 'What is the Bolshevik Terror?', is extremely well done); and a surprisingly vigorous restatement of the tenets of Populism from which stemmed the Socialist-Revolutionary doctrine." M. T. Florinsky

Sat R 37:15 Mr 13 '54 650w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:25 Mr '54 220w

"True as the main lines of this indictment of Bolshevik policy may be, the book is a disappointment. The approach is too sentimental and the tone too polemical to produce serious history; and at thirty-five years' remove from the events, moral indignation is no longer an adequate substitute for a mature analysis of the unfortunate course the Revolution, after all, did take." M. E. Malia

Yale R n s 43:467 spring '54 200w

STEINBERG, SAUL. Passport [drawings]. [224p] $5 Harper

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 54-8994

"The cartoonist gives vent to his powers of satire in this collection of uncaptioned drawings from the New Yorker and other magazines. Most of the volume is taken up with travel impressions of the U.S., Europe, and the Middle East, where the artist set down the tawdriness, decadence, and vulgarity of what he saw. The rest of the drawings, ranging from wild calligraphy to inspired doodling, give the artist a chance to exhibit his astonishing technique." Booklist

Booklist 51:101 N 1 '54

"Recommended for cartoon collections and reference use." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:2333 D 1 '54 80w

"This is a fascinating collection, and excellent value for the money." N. S.

+ Manchester Guardian p11 D 3 '54 150w

Reviewed by Gerald Gottlieb

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 5 '54 80w

Reviewed by Allan Worth

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 28 '54 100w

"Drawings from a man I am coming to believe is one of the top black-and-white artists of our day, good enough to be bracketed with Dali and Picasso." Lee Rogow

+ Sat R 37:31 D 4 '54 220w

STEINBERG, SIGFRID HENRY, ed. See Casell's encyclopaedia of world literature.

STEINER, MRS CHARLOTTE, comp. and ill. Happy birthday book; an anthology of verses and stories. 45p $2.50 Garden city bks.

808.8 Birthdays 53-12216

Stories, pictures, and poems for every year from one thru six. Includes pictures and lists of flowers and birthstones for each month.

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 178:204 D '53 20w

Kirkus 21:629 S 15 '53 80w

"This is a gay, cosy, charming gift for little children." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p12 Ja 31 '54 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p30 D ■ '53 70w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 29 '53 20w

STEINER, GEORGE ALBERT. Government's role in economic life. 440p $6 McGraw

338,973 U.S.—Economic policy. Industry and state 52-11519

"A college text written by an economist but dealing as much with political, legal, and administrative aspects of government's role as with economic aspects. It provides an overall analysis of forces, goals, and means, and an extended analysis of public policy in the depression of the 1930's and the national-security crisis of the 1940's but does not summarize, as do most texts, particular lines of government policy relating to agriculture, labor, and business." (Am Pol Sci R) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"While this book is designed as a textbook, it cannot be considered as a substitute for Fainsod and Gordon, Mund, Dimock or other standard texts since it is concerned mostly with the philosophy and causes of regulation rather than the field of government-business relationships in general. However, it can be expected to be of immense value to all instructors in the field of government-business and to all economists who would like to know something about the American economy beyond what economists alone have said about it." W. S. Buckingham

+ Am Econ R 44:204 Mr '54 1100w

Am Pol Sci R 47:895 S '53 50w

"A refreshingly new approach to the problem of the extent to which the government should concern itself with economics. This work, by a University of Illinois economics professor, should be of equal use to college students and interested laymen. Much of what he has to say is new."

+ Current Hist 24:309 My '53 220w

STEINMAN, DAVID BARNARD. Famous bridges of the world; il. by Kurt Wiese. (Gateway bks) 99p $1.75 Random house

624 Bridges—Juvenile literature 53-6274

The history of bridges from the first primitive bridges to the great bridges of many types being built today. The author is a bridge engineer. For grades 5 to 8.

Booklist 50:209 Ja 15 '54

Eng N 152:56 Ap 1 '54 60w

"Excellent reading, very suitably illustrated."

+ Kirkus 21:536 Ag 15 '53 100w

Reviewed by Anne Izard

Library J 78:1548 S 15 '53 60w

+ N Y Times p28 F 7 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:80 Mr '54

STENDHAL, pseud. See Beyle, M. H.

STEPHENS, EVE (EVELYN ANTHONY pseud). Royal intrigue [Eng title: Curse not the king]. 279p $3.50 Crowell

Catherine II, empress of Russia—Fiction. Paul I, emperor of Russia—Fiction 54-8716

Historical novel dealing chiefly with the relationship between Catherine the Great of Russia and her son Paul.

Booklist 51:16 S 1 '54

Kirkus 22:366 Je 15 '54 210w

"This English author writes well of this dreadful period in Russian history. . . The reader gets an excellent idea of the cruelty, jealousy, and intrigue of their personal affairs through twenty years of Catherine's reign and the short period of Paul's reign. Recommended." Katherine Shorey

+ Library J 79:1399 Ag '54 110w

"The author's second novel is even better than her first one. . . The nymphomaniac Catherine is drawn pitilessly but honestly—and without titters. The twisted, probably epileptic, sincere, erratic Paul is well presented too, and the reader almost feels that he has actually visited that gaudy, barbaric court of the Russias." E. L. Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 8 '54 380w

STEPHENSON, HOWARD, and PRATZNER, WESLEY FISKE. Publicity for prestige and profit; foreword by Harold C. Case. 304p $4.50 McGraw

659.1 Publicity. Public relations 53-9885

"Treating industrial publicity as the most essential ingredient of a public relations program, this book describes the techniques of getting the company message heard through the press, magazines, books, meetings, television, radio, photographs, brochures, and community relations programs. It stresses the ethical responsibilities of the publicity representative and offers pointers which can help him win greater acceptance within his own organization." (Management R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:234 F 15 '54

Management R 43:70 Ja '54 60w

STEPHENSON, RICHARD. Introduction to nuclear engineering. 387p il $8 McGraw

539.72 Nuclear engineering 53-10623

"A textbook suitable for use by engineering college students who have completed the basic engineering courses and by engineering graduates who wish a general introduction to this special field preparatory to work in reactor design or some other branch of nuclear engineering. Except for the first two chapters, which are brief reviews of the fundamental theory and phenomena of nuclear physics and nuclear fission, it is devoted entirely to the special problems and techniques of the design and operation of nuclear reactors and their accessory systems. Such aspects as radiation shielding are covered both descriptively and analytically. Instrumentation and also special devices, such as scanning periscopes and slave manipulators, are well covered. Selected references to released Atomic Energy Commission reports and other pertinent literature are supplied as footnotes." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1235 Je 15 '54 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:45 My '54

STERBA, EDITHA, and STERBA, RICHARD. Beethoven and his nephew; a psychoanalytic study of their relationship; tr. by Willard R. Trask. 351p $5 Pantheon bks.

B or 92 Beethoven, Ludwig van. Beethoven, Karl van 54-11738

"The authors, professional psychoanalysts and amateur musicians, have re-examined in detail the complex relationship between Beethoven and his nephew Karl, and altogether contradicted accounts by earlier biographers of the great composer who either falsified or glossed over the aspects of the relationship which disturbed them or detracted from the ideal picture of Beethoven. Based largely on letters, documents, and other source material, the Sterbas' book reveals a side of Beethoven's nature that was hinted at, but never made explicit, in previous biographies." Library J

"Many readers may be shocked by the authors theory about the uncle-nephew relationship (maternal-filial rather than homosexual), but even those who cannot go along with their conclusions must admit that they have produced a well-written, fascinating and, in many ways, wholly believable case study which helps to explain many of the inconsistencies in Beethoven's character and in no way detracts from his unparalleled musical achievement." Louis Barron

STERBA, EDITHA—Continued

Library J 79:2327 D 1 '54 200w

"If there are times when the psychoanalytical approach leads to absurdities, they are minor absurdities. The book is one that should give its readers a better understanding of an apparently incomprehensible personality." Catherine Stern

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 28 '54 550w

"Too much of the book's argument springs from unproved assumptions and pounces upon unverified conclusions. Nonetheless, leaving aside some of the Freudian interpretations, it is an illuminating book that focuses on Beethoven with a cold lens and catches him in a fresh if unflattering light."

Time 64:134 D 6 '54 210w

STERLING, DOROTHY. Freedom train; the story of Harriet Tubman; il. by Ernest Crichlow. 191p $2.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Tubman, Mrs Harriet (Ross). Underground railroad 54-5181

A fictionalized biography of Harriet Tubman, born a slave on a Maryland plantation. Before the Civil war she was a conductor on the Underground Railroad and became known as the "Moses" of her people. Bibliography. For ages 12 to 16.

Booklist 50:283 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 F 14 '54 150w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 220w

Horn Bk 30:107 Ap '54 150w

Kirkus 21:762 D 1 '53 120w

"Her daring raids and adventures make a most exciting story, and the author has captured all of the excitement, courage, and gallantry in her life. . . Recommended." Augusta Baker

+ Library J 79:389 F 15 '54 70w

"A remarkable story which the author has attempted to make palatable for a wide audience by the excessive use of that hybrid form, the fictionalized biography."

+ Nation 178:137 F 13 '54 70w

"It is the sort of fictionalized biography whose documentation is clear on many pages, and therefore is a good step toward adult biography for junior high readers. The line illustrations are striking, being imaginative, powerful and real." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 21 '54 60w

"Harriet's courage and her selflessness were matched by a sturdy common sense and a wry humor, qualities which Dorothy Sterling emphasizes in this well-rounded portrait of a remarkable woman." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 24 '54 120w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:221 N 27 '54 50w

"Mrs. Sterling has given us an excellent picture of a period in American history which was full of drama and excitement. . . It is exciting fare for readers of ten and over." Augusta Baker

+ Sat R 37:27 Ap 17 '54 130w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p6C F 28 '54 130w

Wis Lib Bul 50:145 My '54

STERLING, DOROTHY. Insects and the homes they build [with photographs by Myron Ehrenberg]. 125p $2.50 Doubleday

595.7 Insects 54-5899

Photographs and informal text describe the various types of homes built by insects commonly seen in gardens and woods or even city parks. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 51:22 S 1 '54

"The book is an eye opener for readers of any age." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 14 '54 80w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54 150w

"The story of their life cycle and domesticity, and particularly of their individual styles of carpentry and masonry, makes a book of ageless interest. The photographs, with interior scenes and cross-sections of homes, add greatly to the book's scientific value." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:339 O '54 120w

Kirkus 22:485 Ag 1 '54 130w

"Anyone from 10 years up should enjoy this book; from the exciting introduction to the last chapter on instinct, the information is vividly presented and well organized. There is warmth and humor in the text as well as technical material." Anne Jackson

+ Library J 79:1668 S 15 '54 80w

"The text is clear and factual, with a pattern for your probable walks and explorations around the year. It will interest any age from younger listeners to adults." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 2 p28 N 14 '54 80w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:218 N 27 '54 60w

"This fascinating text is enhanced greatly with nearly 100 photo-reproductions by Myron Ehrenberg. It will well repay repeated readings." G. B. Affleck

+ Springf'd Republican p6C S 12 '54 250w

STERLING, STEWART, pseud. See Winchell, P.

STERLING guide to summer jobs; based on a survey made in early 1954 by the editors of Sterling publishing company, inc. under the supervision of Marianne S. Andersen [drawings by Doug Andersen]. 128p $2.50 Sterling

371.425 Occupations 54-9361

Advice for undergraduate students as to the best ways of obtaining summer employment. The facts were obtained from an early 1954 survey of colleges, universities, trade and industrial leaders, church councils and placement agencies. Checklist and index.

Booklist 50:362 My 15 '54

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:722 Ap 15 '54 20w

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS G. L. HOLDSWORTH). All in good time. 154p $2.50 Sheed

B or 92 Catholic church—Converts 54-6146

Seven years ago this English author became a Catholic. This is her reverent account of the slow progress of her conversion and entry into the church.

"Cradle Catholics . . . will generally enjoy this account of a late childhood in the Church, told by a mature and cultivated craftsman." R. M. Ames

+ Cath World 179:317 Jl '54 200w

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 9 '54 110w

"If there is such a thing as stream-of-consciousness writing, then G. B. Stern, intentionally or not, produces it. And from such a consciousness as hers, such an alive, zestful and curious mind, it is fine reading. Possibly it is unfortunate that this is classified as a conversion story, for many have a vague but real prejudice against such. The basic theme is there, and well done, but this short book's main value and delight is in its crowded miscellany of observation, meditation and narration." Catherine Spurr

+ Commonweal 60:303 Je 25 '54 400w

Kirkus 22:195 Mr 15 '54 70w

"Her record of this pilgrim's progress is told with reverence, with intellectual excitement at her widening acquaintance with Catholic literature, and with matter-of-fact amusement and chagrin at herself. Like all faith, her acceptance of the Church, 'body and soul,' is essentially mystic. Even to one who does not share that mysticism, 'All in Good Time' is likely to prove unusually interesting and rewarding." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 30 '54 450w

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS G. L. HOLDSWORTH). Johnny forsaken. 236p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

54-8537

"Johnny Trevoze, a middle-aged resident of Felsea, a smallish town on the south coast of England, has a habit of mistaking his dependence on others for indispensability to others. He is often shown the truth of his own nature, but he always manages to recover his illusion about himself until a determined Austrian lady, Eugenia Czelovar, enters his life and takes him over." New Yorker

Booklist 50:342 My 1 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:232 Je '54 200w

"'Johnny Forsaken' is one of Miss Stern's lighter novels. Its ease and freedom manifest what admirers call her delightful spontaneity. The words, 'loosely organized,' will be spoken only by those not quite under the spell." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 14 '54 300w

"Odd novel not necessary in small public libraries." F. A. Boyle

Library J 79:627 Ap 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 F 16 '54 60w

"'Johnny Forsaken' is pleasant enough reading, but not entirely satisfactory. The trouble may be that the apparently haphazard, free-association technique, which G. B. Stern has employed so entertainingly in four or five volumes of informal autobiography, doesn't work so well when applied to a novel. Minor episodes with no real bearing on the central theme appear and disappear erratically; minor characters, too casually sketched, drift distractingly in and out; transitions are often abrupt and confusing; and we have read about half the story before we understand clearly when it is taking place." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 14 '54 550w

"Tells a story of great charm without interfering at all with its author's talent for rollicking digression." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 14 '54 450w

"This rather dim story is seen by Miss Stern from an oblique angle that makes Johnny and his friends more impersonal than they should be, and not as interesting as they might be." New Yorker 30:132 Mr 13 '54 90w

"An odd piece of work, sometimes touching, sometimes amusing, sometimes simply bewildering."

Times [London] Lit Sup p117 F 19 '54 100w

STERN, H. PETER. Struggle for Poland. 79p $2 Public affairs press

943.8 Poland 53-10838

A monograph on Poland's history and international relations from Hitler's invasion in 1939 to the Soviet style elections of 1947.

Am Pol Sci R 48:591 Je '54 40w

"The author presents us with an excellent sketch of the principal events concerning the Polish question during World War II with special reference to the Soviet-Polish conflict set in the context of East-West relationships." W. S. Vucinich

+ Ann Am Acad 292:204 Mr '54 500w

Booklist 50:75 O 15 '53

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 29 '54 140w

"This book can be highly recommended to all students and teachers of history. The chronology of events appearing in the appendix should prove very helpful." R. H. Bauer

+ Social Studies 45:116 Mr '54 300w

STERN, KARL. Third revolution; a study of psychiatry and religion. 306p $4 Harcourt

616.89 Psychology, Religious. Psychology, Pathological 54-11326

"Dr. Stern, a leading Roman Catholic psychiatrist, discusses the three 19th- and 20th-century revolutions that promised solutions to man's problems: the social and economic (dialectical materialism); the biological and racial (Nazism); and the scientific or Comtean in which revelation and faith are to be supplanted by psychology and sociology." Library J

Booklist 51:166 D 15 '54

"Karl Stern's memorable autobiography, The Pillar of Fire, drew admiring epithets unusual even in rave-reviews. . . . We find the same rare blend of the wisdom of the serpent and the innocence of the dove in his new book on the hackneyed topic of psychiatry and religion." Victor White

+ Commonweal 61:336 D 24 '54 3000w

"An interesting book dealing with a touchy and important problem of finding place for religion and psychiatry in our day."

+ Kirkus 22:619 S 1 '54 300w

"Dr. Stern's frank expression of his profound faith may attract some Roman Catholics to psychoanalysis, but probably will be less successful in leading believers in psychoanalysis to religion." Louis Barron

Library J 79:1889 O 15 '54 230w

"The analysis of psychical states, perhaps the major art of healing in our time, has frequently been considered a grave challenge to religious belief. Dr. Stern's latest book, unusually subtle but absorbing nevertheless, is an attempt to refute this assumption. . . . The central doctrines, whether Christological or Marian, are grasped and outlined in a masterly way. But what is more unusual, the abstruse but for all that vital relationship between religious teaching and psychical attitudes is described with exemplary skill." G. N. Shuster

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 28 '54 550w

"Dr. Karl Stern is already well known through his autobiographical book 'Pillar of Fire,' in which he describes his conversion to the Roman Catholic faith. In his second book the author dedicates himself to the impact of the new credo on his professional concepts. However, the layman will enjoy this critical and often brilliant exposé of modern psychiatry and psychoanalysis, and many a psychologist will applaud the author's fight against psychology vulgarization." J. A. M. Meerloo

+ N Y Times p17 D 12 '54 750w

STERNE, MRS EMMA (GELDERS). Long black schooner; the voyage of the Amistad; il. by Earl H. Pringle. (American heritage ser) 192p $1.75; school ed $1.59 Aladdin

A novel for young readers which tells once more the story of the Negro mutineers of the Amistad and their eventual return to Africa.

"A thrilling tale." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ja 17 '54 60w

Reviewed by G. P. Lancaster

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 12 '53 30w

Kirkus 21:583 S 1 '53 110w

Reviewed by Augusta Baker

Library J 78:2108 D 1 '53 40w

STERNE, E. G.—Continued

"Mrs. Sterne has made use of this authentic episode in our history to write well and with sympathetic understanding the saga of the 'Amistad' and the efforts of her mutineers to regain their freedom. The young reader is given a very lifelike picture of the Africans. Both author and illustrator (Earl H. Pringle) have made a thorough study of Mandi behavior and appearances." Barbara Dillon
+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 15 '53 160w

STEVENS, DAVID HARRISON. Changing humanities; an appraisal of old values and new uses. 272p $4 Harper

378 Classical education. Humanities 53-8553

"The former director of the Humanities Division of the Rockefeller Foundation, now retired, writes of the part the liberal arts are playing and should play in contemporary life." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by W. J. Oates

Ann Am Acad 296:199 N '54 490w

"For the teacher and administrator at the graduate and post graduate level, the articulation of cultural concepts which while threatened, will survive."

+ Kirkus 21:515 Ag 1 '53 150w

Reviewed by Martin Judd

N Y Times p11 Ag 8 '54 420w

"If the appeal of this book proves to be mainly to academicians that will be because non-academicians in book-reading circles are lacking in a just mixture of the elements... Dr. Stevens is not skimpy on the tools for the study and dissemination of the humanities; he is important in reasserting and arousing faith in things beyond fact." J. F. Dobie

Sat R 36:21 D 12 '53 800w

"From the privileged vantage point of eighteen years' experience as director for the humanities of the Rockefeller Foundation, Dr. Stevens has written a richly informed and incessantly challenging survey of what has and has not been done in the United States in the field of the humanities during the last fifty years and of the tasks of humanists in the near and distant future."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:84 Mr '54 240w

"An extremely interesting and provocative book. It should be introduced to readers who will appreciate it."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:23 Ja '54

STEVENS, FRANK. She left a silver slipper. 249p $2.75 Mill

54-10207

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:414 J1 1 '54 60w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p43 O 10 '54 20w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 17 '54 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:39 N 27 '54 30w

STEVENS, JAMES HAY. Shape of the aeroplane; il. by [the author]. 302p $3.50 McGraw 629.141 [629.1341] Airplanes—Design and construction 53-10361

"This book contains a great deal more information than the title indicates and gives a pilot's-eye view of the whole field of flying by describing many types of airplanes developed in various countries, from the first powered flights of fifty years ago to the piloted missiles that fly beyond the speed of sound." N Y Times

Booklist 50:254 Mr 1 '54

"Although much detail is presented, the style is non-technical, hence the book will appeal to almost any reader with an interest in aeronautical history or design." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:991 My 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by Arthur Elton

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:20 Ja 2 '54 150w

"Many persons who have been of voting age for some time will be glad to join younger readers in learning about the changing shapes of the airplane. The book is an education for anybody who isn't an aeronautical engineer." B. K. Thorne

+ N Y Times p24 F 21 '54 140w

STEVENS, LESLIE CLARK. Russian assignment; with il. by Vera Drashevsky. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 568p $5.75 Little

947.085 [914.7] Russia—Description and travel 53-10230

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Written in the form of memoirs, the book is replete with keen notes and observations on the multiple phases of Soviet life. . . . At the present juncture of world affairs, however, the book is most important in its graphic, almost daily account of the tests and trials of our embassy personnel." A. O. Sarkissian
+ Ann Am Acad 294:221 J1 '54 700w

Christian Century 71:640 My 26 '54 110w

"The modest author would probably object, but this is a great book. In the form of a diary Admiral Stevens describes his three years of service as U.S. Naval attaché in the Moscow Embassy and conveys as no one else I know the atmosphere of the Russian capital. There is nothing sensational in this book. It commends itself, because of its quiet humor, its kindness, its modesty and its patience, as a true picture of Russian life. Not for a second does the author lose his sane and calm judgment, and at all times one can see his dignity as the representative of his country." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 59:383 Ja 15 '54 350w

Foreign Affairs 32:515 Ap '54 30w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 8 '54 470w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p10D Ja 17 '54 260w

"Admiral Stevens is, obviously, an alert observer with a sympathetic personality, although he tends to wax somewhat self-righteous in his comparisons between the Soviet Union and America or others of the western countries. . . . Unfortunately, the author's attitude toward the Russian people is not made clear. . . . Indeed, the reader's confidence in Admiral Stevens' analysis of national character will be seriously weakened by some of his statements."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:14 Mr '54 240w

Wis Lib Bul 50:29 Ja '54

"Appreciation and sympathy do not lead the author to sentimentalism or expressions of emotional admiration. 'Russian Assignment' is a happily balanced work of broad and deep humanity." Waldemar Gurian

+ Yale R n 43:461 spring '54 500w

STEVENS, WALLACE. Collected poems. 534p $7.50 Knopf

811

54-11750

"In the four decades since the name of Wallace Stevens began to appear frequently in periodicals publishing verse, he has established his unquestioned position as one of the significant and enduring poets of twentieth-century America. . . . The present volume was published to honor him on his seventy-fifth birthday, October 2, 1954." (Publisher's note) Index of first lines.

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 24 '54 300w

"The collection here proves that Stevens' powers have been at a consistently high level through the years and his later poems are equalled by his early ones. It bears witness to the stature of the man and his work, and should find a permanent place."

+ Kirkus 22:557 Ag 15 '54 210w

Reviewed by John Ciardi

Nation 179:346 O 16 '54 1100w

"This is clear in the very style and substance of his poems. The starting-point of Stevens' poems is often the aesthetic experience in isolation from all other experiences, ■ art is isolated from work, and as a museum is special and isolated in any modern American community. And if one limits oneself to the surface of Stevens' poetic style, one can characterize Stevens as the poet of the Sunday: the poet of the week-end, the holiday, and the vacation, who sees objects at a distance, as they appear to the tourist or in the art museum. But this is merely the poet's starting-point. Stevens converts aestheticism into contemplation in the full philosophical and virtually religious sense of the word." Delmore Schwartz

+ New Repub 131:16 N 1 '54 1850w

"This stout resplendent volume is ■ collection of earthy anecdotes that, individually and together, give us a new knowledge of reality. To do that as Wallace Stevens has been insisting for the better part of seventy-five years, is the poet's job. No one has ever done it quite in his fashion, and no man alive does it more refreshingly than he." Babette Deutsch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 O 3 '54 700w

"A triumph for the imagination. . . From 'Peter Quince at the Clavier,' first published nearly forty years ago, to 'Not Ideas about the Thing but the Thing Itself,' written this year, these poems assert the goodness of the imagination. They are proof, as their author has said, that Poetry is one of the sanctions of life." S. F. Morse

+ N Y Times p3 O 3 '54 1500w

"Stevens has never applied himself to the tasks of the satirist; he is by nature the contemplative poet 'pur sang,' who distills symbols, meaning, and what he calls 'ideas of order' from the crudity and the confusion of the actual. His ability to link the outer world of reality closely to the inner world of vision has been astonishing from the first." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 30:193 D 11 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 28 '54 240w

"The publication of these 'Collected Poems' on or about his seventy-fifth birthday is surely a convincing sign that this poet, unlike some famous neglected artists and poets of the past, has lived to see 'his imagination become the light in the minds of others.' Here today, and certainly not gone tomorrow, are nearly all the poems we have come to know in the separate volumes." G. P. Meyer

+ Sat R 37:26 D 4 '54 1700w

STEVENS, WILLIAM OLIVER. Famous humanitarians. 131p il $2.75 Dodd

923.6 Philanthropists

53-9025

Contents: Saint Vincent de Paul; Edward Jenner; Walter Reed; Samuel Gridley Howe; Helen Adams Keller; Dorothea Lynde Dix; William Lloyd Garrison; Harriet Beecher Stowe; Louis Braille; Florence Nightingale; Jean Henri Dunant; Clara Harlowe Barton; William Booth; Evangeline Cory Booth; Joseph Damien de Veuster, "Father Damien"; Ira Dutton, "Brother Joseph"; Jacob August Riis; Jane Addams, Sir Wilfred Thomason Grenfell; Albert Schweitzer. Index.

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 178:206 D '53 20w

Christian Century 71:370 Mr 24 '54 50w

"Very usable." R. M. McEvoy

+ Library J 78:1702 O 1 '53 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune ■K R pt2, p26 N 15 '53 30w

STEVENS, WILLIAM OLIVER, comp. Inspirational reader. See Bible. Whole—Selections

STEVENSON, ADLAI EWING. Call to greatness. 110p $2.25 Harper

909.82 [940.55] World politics. U.S.—Foreign relations 54-6028

In which the author surveys the problems facing us today and reaffirms his belief in the ability of democracy to compete with totalitarianism in the fight for survival. Based on the Godkin Lectures, delivered by the author at Harvard, March, 1954.

Booklist 51:5 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:7 O '54 20w

Reviewed by H. J. Hodder

Canadian Forum 34:190 N '54 300w

Reviewed by F. E. Faverty

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 29 '54 200w

"If Mr. Stevenson is again his party's nominee for the presidency it will be interesting to see how much of this sweet reasonableness is inflamed by the fires of campaigning. Be that as it may, Mr. Stevenson has done us all a fine service: he has traveled carefully, written penetratingly and supportingly of the nation's burdens in today's world. For those who want to know this remarkable American better, want to test for themselves the quality of his mind, nothing could be more useful than this book." E. D. Canham

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 10 '54 750w

"The clear brilliance, the cogent eloquence of all that Stevenson has spoken, or written, enhance the challenge here."

+ Kirkus 22:421 Jl 1 '54 240w

"As nonpartisan and objective an analysis as you might expect from an avowed politician, albeit an atypical one. Well worth purchase for any library keeping up with informed current opinion on foreign policy." E. M. Oboler

+ Library J 79:1398 Ag '54 100w

"The superb quality of Mr. Stevenson's Godkin lectures at Harvard is demonstrated by the fact that they demand to be quoted entire. Steadily and whole, he observes the state of the nations, and above all, the gravity of American responsibilities. For this is his sifted quintessential view of the world, after a visit to 53 countries." Herman Finer

+ New Repub 131:17 S ■ '54 1100w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 48:544 O 30 '54 240w

"Adlai Stevenson is a professional politician. He is ■ partisan controversial figure—a thoroughly useful one. What makes 'Call to Greatness' valuable is that it shuns partisanship. While the author's views are not uncontroversial—he would be horrified at that—the controversies they stir cut cleanly across party lines." Roscoe Drummond

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 29 '54 800w

Reviewed by James Reston

N Y Times p3 Ag 29 '54 1250w

New Yorker 30:156 ■ 11 '54 70w

"An important book, both because of the distinction of the author and of its forthright statements on the major issues of the world crisis of today. . . It is always an ungracious thing to ask from a book of pronounced excellence, like this one, something more than space or time permitted the author. But it might have helped our understanding of the nature of the crisis of today if there had been a little more on the nature of the industrial revolution which has remade the Western world and is now remaking Asia." J. T. Shotwell

+ Sat R 37:18 Ag 28 '54 1400w

Time 64:102 N 1 '54 130w

"These three lectures which Harvard was fortunate enough to hear proclaim the finest tradition of American statesmanship. In the ordeal of the mid-century, where perpetual peril is inescapable, America's burden is nobly stated and assumed by Mr. Stevenson. Many must hope that one day this private citizen may become America's first citizen."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p683 O 29 '54 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 50:202 O '54

STEVENSON, BURTON EGBERT, comp.
Standard book of Shakespeare quotations.
See Shakespeare, W.

STEVENSON, DOROTHY EMILY (MRS JAMES REID PEPLIE). Blow the wind southerly. 313p $3 Rinehart

54-9862

Romance of the young headmistress of an English school for girls, and the almost feudal head of a Scottish clan, father of one of her pupils.

Booklist 51:30; 111 S 15 '54; N 1 '54

Reviewed by N. E. Taylor
Christian Science Monitor p4 N 4 '54
330w

"The nice, not nauseating, school of fiction at its most agreeable."
+ Kirkus 22:548 Ag 15 '54 150w

"The descriptions of the Scottish locale and the people are done with warmth and feeling.
The author always has taste, spirit and humor to season her light fare." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p34 N 14 '54 200w

STEVENSON, ROBERT MURRELL. Patterns of Protestant church music. 219p $4 Duke univ. press

783 Church music 53-8271

Contents: Luther's musical achievement; Reformed church music; John Merbecke and the first English prayer book; Bach's religious environment; J. S. Bach's "Appeals to Caesar"; Bach's quarrel with the rector of St. Thomas school; Handelian oratorio; Dr. Watts's "Flights of Fancy"; John Wesley's first hymnbook; The musical Wesleys; John Mason Neale and tractarian hymnody; Ira D. Sankey and the growth of "gospel hymnody." Bibliography. Index.

"Highly interesting and instructive study."
W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:208 F 17 '54 380w

"Patterns of Protestant Church Music is addressed not to the specialist in the field but to the practical church musician, the pastor, or the churchgoing layman who wishes to learn something about the musical tradition of his particular denomination. Apparently based upon a series of lectures not directly related to each other, it offers perceptive discussions of particular phases rather than a comprehensive treatment of the entire subject.
Dr. Stevenson's reputation for meticulous documentation and clarity is upheld; and because the approach is factual and analytical, the librarian may safely recommend this book to those seeking information about Protestant church music." Irving Lowens

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:312 Mr '54
180w

Reviewed by P. L. Miller
Sat R 37:31 Ap 24 '54 180w

STEWART, DESMOND STIRLING. Unsuitable Englishman. 250p $3.50 Farrar, Straus 54-5688

The adventures of a young Englishman, with no interest in politics, in a Middle Eastern country. The country is in the throes of a nationalist revolt against British authority, and the young man's attempts to earn a living among the natives rouses a storm of protest.

Kirkus 22:346 Je 1 '54 180w

"Viciously anti-British in tone; the English are blamed for all Arabian ills. English officials are a despicable lot, the Ambassador a ruthless, lying, immoral, degenerate sadist and murderer. Surely an absurdly untrue picture!
Arabian sex standards defended contra Christian-Western. Not recommended." R. W. Henderson

— Library J 79:1311 Jl '54 120w

"Plot is not the strongest aspect of Mr.
Stewart's novel, and his story, believable and absorbing for the most part, limps home to a self-conscious climax. But there are some fine insights and a dazzling play of sharply realized local people and conflicts that make his book an affecting experience." Joseph Hitrec

+ N Y Times p36 N 21 '54 200w

"You'll have a good time reading 'The Unsuitable Englishman,' I think. The story moves fast; its satire is cutting; the action never lets down. With it all, Mr. Stewart writes admirably and has something to say. Maybe, after you finish, you'll also have a new idea of the Middle East and its people, which does no harm either." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 31 '54
650w

"A good many of the episodes are too slapstick and incredible in invention and too naive in conception for a book intended to be, though, satiric, not funny. And Mr. Stewart is unfair to the British as only a youth can be unfair to his parents. But he seems on his way to some excellent things." Jerome Stone
+ Sat R 37:17 Ag 21 '54 290w

STEWART, GEORGE. These men my friends.
400p $6 Caxton ptrs.

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, British 53-10251

"At the invitation of the War Office and Air Ministry, George Stewart visited and lived amongst countless units of His Majesty's Armed Forces. Here he has recorded his experiences during ten extended tours of service in the United Kingdom, Africa, Asia, and on the Continent, giving a narrative of both men and events in the British Army and the R.A.
F." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"If this book is a half-century out of step either way, it is yet a rewarding and refreshing few hours in contemplation of friendship not as the promise and facade of this or that program or organization or system of government, but as the natural, simple reality of even the most trying circumstances. If 'These Men My Friends' does nothing more than serve as a reminder of the common yet distinctly individual aspirations and qualities of all men it will have rendered a valuable service to the age." G. W.
DeArmond

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 4 '54
480w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 28
'54 50w

"His warm and sensitive accounts of the lives and words of men under arms reveal him as a kind of Ernie Pyle to the British forces.
While denied the front-line contacts that made Pyle's reporting so dramatic, Mr Stewart shows a superb feeling for the way war crowds and prods personalities, thrusting philosophy and religion into the lives of even the most un-reflective." T. E. Cooney

+ Sat R 37:33 Ag 28 '54 270w

STEWART, GEORGE RIPPEY. American ways of life. 310p map $3.95 Doubleday

973 [917.3] U.S.—Civilization. National characteristics, American 54-7323

"This book is twofold in its purpose. It attempts to present certain aspects of life in a particular nation, with special reference to the features that may be considered distinctive; and at the same time, to show how these distinctive ways of life have arisen historically, as the result of heredity and environment."
(p 13) Contents: Land and people; Language;
Religion; Food; Drink; Clothing; Shelter; Sex;
Personal names; Play; Holidays; Arts. Index.

Booklist 51:12 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:7 O '54 20w

"Despite its title this book is no more than a readable account of what the writer has picked up in the course of his reading and his travels. It might be described as a series of popular lectures, not profound, not argumentative. It leaves many questions untouched; and it makes many statements which invite criti-clism from ordinary readers and rejection from experts."

Cath World 180:80 O '54 70w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 18 '54 460w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 Ag '54

Reviewed by John Cournos

Commonweal 60:469 Ag 13 '54 450w

"Written as part of an adult education for foreigners, this still has merit for home consumption."

+ Kirkus 22:324 My 15 '54 110w

"Good social history based on documentary and secondary sources well seasoned by humorous turn of phrases. Recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:1224 Je 15 '54 150w

Nation 179:176 Ag 28 '54 270w

"The Greeks were lucky to have such a knowledgeable fellow as Professor Stewart to tell them about America, and we are equally lucky that his experience gave him the idea of writing this book." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 131:20 S 27 '54 700w

"This isn't just 'another of those things.' It is another plus some highly original research, some very exact observation and an impish sense of humor that can make graphs and charts sparkle." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Jl 18 '54 650w

"The result is a sound and provocative study in acculturation, the process by which different and conflicting cultures meet and mix, through interchange, adaptation and superimposition of traits. . . . Beyond its contribution to knowledge, the book has a propaganda value which one can only hope will be widely utilized by those responsible for making friends for Americans at home and abroad. By substituting 'American ways' for the illusory and specious 'American way,' and proving the preponderance of the hereditary and especially the North European influence in American life, the book belies the claims of sentimentalists and chauvinists for the 'uniqueness' or superiority of American civilization." B. A. Botkin

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 18 '54 850w

"Mr. Stewart, an engaging writer who knows how to keep his scholarship from showing, has a talent for writing unusual books, and this new one is a very stimulating piece of work."

+ New Yorker 30:81 Ag 28 '54 150w

"The publishers say this book grew out of the author's year as a Fulbright lecturer in Greece, and his efforts to explain America to his students. American readers will find that it also explains them to themselves in ways they hadn't thought of." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 18 '54 1750w

"Inevitably, though Mr. Stewart set out to generalize about American ways of life, his best passages are specific. It is too bad he felt unable to give us more of them. It is the absence of specific individuals, particular scenes and places, which makes it hard for the reader to experience the general propositions with which he is confronted." Bradford Smith

Sat R 37:15 Jl 31 '54 650w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 22 '54 330w

Wis Lib Bul 50:178 Jl '54

"As Mr. Stewart explains in his 'Author's Note' the book grew out of a series of lectures that he gave in Greece when he was at the University of Athens in 1952-53 on a Fulbright. This accounts for its tone of explaining a friend to a friend, and it also, in all probability, explains why it reads like the product of a man who has been performing a labor of friendship and not a labor of love." Russell Lynes

Yale R n s 44:145 autumn '54 600w

STEWART, GEORGE RIPPEY. To California by covered wagon; il. by William Moyers. (Landmark bks) 182p $1.50 Random house 978 [917.8] Overland journeys to the Pacific 54-5163

In his Foreword the author says: "About 1885, when he was nearly sixty years old, Moses Schallenger set down the story of the trip that he made to California more than forty years before. The original manuscript has disappeared, probably burned in a fire that destroyed the Schallenger house in San Jose, California. Before that time, however, it had been in the hands of Horace S. Foote, and he had reproduced most of it in his history of San Jose called Pen Pictures. To California by Covered Wagon, even in its details, is primarily based upon the story as preserved by Foote. I have been able to add certain details from the reminiscences of other members of the Stevens Party and from my own knowledge of the country." A school edition, published by E. M. Hale and Company, is priced at $1.68.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p32 N 14 '54 30w

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:34 Ja 15 '54 130w

N Y Times p50 N 7 '54 40w

"The accounts of the hardships endured by these sturdy pioneers are smoothly handled. Clearcut characterizations of the individuals participating are unfortunately lacking. This is 'pin prick' rather than full-bodied history written with a word list rather too near the author's elbow. For boys and girls age fourteen." D. M.

+ — Sat R 37:86 N 13 '54 130w

STEWART, HERBERT LESLIE. Winged words; Sir Winston Churchill as writer and speaker. 114p $2.50 Bouregy

B or 92 Churchill, Sir Winston Leonard Spencer 54-7188

"The purpose of this book is to consider Sir Winston Churchill's literary work—biographies and personal memoirs as well as his public speeches. This is neither a biography nor an estimate of his place in statesmanship, but strictly a study of Churchill's qualities in artistic writing and artistic speech." Publisher's note

Booklist 50:258 Mr 1 '54

"This is not Dr. Stewart's most important book, nor (we venture to say) would he have wished it to be so regarded; but, with a subject both great and complex, it is a fitting epitome of the skill to elucidate and interpret for which this eloquent teacher and critic will long be remembered." C. L. Bennett

+ Canadian Forum 33:255 F '54 390w

"Totally uncritical of the man he is not. But this is not the book which the title-page announces. It is one man's tribute to the spirit of 1940. For this there is always room. It would, however, have been useful to have had the other." J. C. Cairns

+ — Canadian Hist R 35:164 Je '54 350w

Kirkus 21:776 D 1 '53 120w

STEWART, JANICE S. Folk arts of Norway. 246p 152il 5 col il $10 Univ. of Wis. press 745 Folk art 53-13050

"[This work] deals with the peculiar cultural history of the country in its opening chapter, 'O Vikings and Farmers.' Exterior and interior features of early dwellings are taken up in the chapter 'In the Peasant Home.' Following chapters cover carving, rosemaling, metalwork, weaving, embroidery, and costumes. It is illustrated with 152 photographs and five color plates the latter printed in Norway." Sat R

"A handsome book with excellent illustrations. Recommended for reference use." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:65 Ja 1 '54 60w

STEWART, GEORGE RIPPEY, ed. Opening of the California trail. See Foote, H. S., ed.

STEWART, J. S.—Continued

"A comprehensive survey of the folk art of any country includes ceramics and glass. 'The Folk Arts of Norway' omits both. . . [Some] ill-founded opinions mar the otherwise excellent material, both factual and pictorial, supplied by Norway's museums and other sources. Nevertheless, this is a book worthy of study and will be of particular interest to persons of Norwegian descent." Iona Plath

+ — Sat ■ 36:48 D 19 '53 230w

"This book is a useful contribution to our knowledge of the culture and art of Norway. It will also serve as inspiration for craftsmen, who will, we hope, look upon the work illustrated as sincere expressions of a past period and place, not to be imitated in a different culture and time."

+ School Arts 53:47 Ja '54 110w

"Of general interest to artists and folklorists, the book will also appeal to the student of comparative folk art, and to those concerned with the European sources and traditions of American folk art and craft."

+ U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:39 Mr '54 130w

"A comprehensive survey of the folk art of Norway that will be of special interest to persons of Norwegian ancestry or to any others who find the subject intriguing."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:25 Ja '54

STEWART, JOHN INNES MACKINTOSH (MICHAEL INNES, pseud.). Dead man's shoes. 242p $2.75 Dodd

54-10576

A collection of detective stories, in all of which Inspector Appleby appears.

Bookmark 14:9 O '54

"As a novelist Mr. Innes seems to be stuffing us with an unrelenting diet of plum pudding. But these short stories resemble more an artfully toothsome dish of bon bons, some sweet, some bittersweet, some with a brisk bite." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 1 '54 130w

"Some of them are admirable serious detective stories (the surprise ending of the novellette stopped me cold), some are outrageously fantastic leg-pulls, and some, in the manner in which only Innes can bring off, manage incredibly to be both at once. Mr. Innes can write a short-short of 1,200 words with the same command and ease as a novel of over 100,000; and the collection glitters with his accustomed wit, ingenuity and allusive erudition. To my own taste, this is an approximately perfect book." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 22 '54 90w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat ■ 37:37 Ag 7 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 25 '54 40w

STEWART, KENNETH HOPE. Ferromagnetic domains. 176p il $4.75 Cambridge

537 Magnetism [54-4276]

"Chapters include magnetocrystalline anisotropy, magnetostriction, domain arrangement, domain walls, hindrances to domain wall movements, time effects and magnetic and thermal energy changes." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Chem & Eng N 32:3208 Ag 9 '54 20w

"A substantial outline of present-day theory of ferromagnetism. . . The audience will include graduate physicists working at the research level in college and industrial laboratories and a few technically educated electrical experimenters and inventors working independently." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:2220 N 15 '54 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:57 Jl '54

STEWART, KILTON. Pygmies and dream giants. 295p $3.75 Norton

572.9914 Ethnology—Philippine Islands. Scientists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-11189

"A dramatic story of self-discovery is told by a scientist who visited the Philippine pygmies to find out whether there was a universal man. He came to the Negritos, Ilongot, Ifuago, Bontoc and other groups armed with a battery of tests, from the Goodenough Draw-A-Man test to an Emotional Response Test. As he studied the relation of the tribes to the world about them in their fantasies and their shamanism, his own spirit became involved." Kirkus

Booklist 51:57 O 1 '54

Cath World 180:v D '54 80w

"A fascinating and unique study of psychotherapy and religion in simple societies with applications for modern Western man which will have a very special market."

+ Kirkus 22:326 My 15 '54 100w

"Because of its popular character and because the author knew nothing of the native languages his book may have comparatively small value to psychologists and anthropologists. But as a travel and adventure story in a country Americans were destined to know about through World War II, this book will have its appeal in public libraries." A. D. Osborn

Library J 79:1308 Jl '54 130w

Reviewed by Waldo Frank

Nation 179:236 S 18 '54 60w

"Some of the tribes with whom Stewart worked have been the subjects of very careful and excellent anthropological studies. For this very reason, this book is an especially valuable contribution to our understanding of their personality and thought. Beyond this, it is a book which the non-specialist reads with the excitement of participating in a complex adventure." Rhoda Metraux

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 18 '54 1050w

"Mr. Stewart, writing mainly for the general reader, gives just those details of life in the field which most anthropologists omit from their factual reports. From this book the reader may gain something of a view of the trials which the anthropologist must frequently undergo before he can successfully complete his mission. The author's trials were unusually numerous and exciting, and since he writes both well and colorfully, he has produced a book which may be read as an absorbing adventure story and as an exploration into the workings of the human mind under different cultural conditions." Ashley Montagu

+ N Y Times p19 Jl 18 '54 500w

"Outstanding for the general reader." A. C. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 10 '54 150w

Springf'd Republican p9C Jl 11 '54 150w

STEWART, SHAN. Planning and building your patio. 123p il $2.95 Crown

728.9 Patios. Outdoor rooms 54-9889

Text, photographs and diagrams give advice on where to put the patio, its size, and shape, choice of building materials, and step by step instructions on how to build it. The second part of the volume takes up such matters as seats, tables, grills, lighting and planting.

Booklist 51:35 S 15 '54

"Although the more elaborate types of installations are emphasized, the book will be of value to the average home-owner, and merits acquisition by all sizes of public libraries." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:2214 N 15 '54 170w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 10 '54 120w

STIERI, EMANUELE. How to make your home worth more. 204p il col il $4.95 Prentice-Hall

728 Building—Repair and reconstruction. House decoration 53-12735

Suggestions as to possibilities of adding to the comfort, usefulness and value of a home by remodeling or adding to the house as a whole or to the individual rooms. Such improvements vary from kitchen cabinets and storage closets to insulation and planting the home grounds.

Booklist 50:218 F 1 '54

Reviewed by Richard Johnston
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 24 '54
30w

STIERNOTTE, ALFRED P. God and space-time; deity in the philosophy of Samuel Alexander; with a foreword by Henry Nelson Wieman. 455p $3 Philosophical lib.

113 Alexander, Samuel. Space and time. God 54-12575

"Alexander's Gifford Lectures, Space, Time, and Deity, were first published in 1920, and represent the culmination of Alexander's metaphysical thought, unifying in a comprehensive synthesis his epistemology, his categorial system, his views on the tertiary qualities of truth, goodness, and beauty, and finally his novel study of the time-honored conceptions of God and 'deity.'" (p.1) "Dr. Stiernotte analyzes Alexander's doctrine of deity into four distinct categories and criticizes these by comparison with the evolutionary philosophies of Bergson, C. Lloyd Morgan, J. C. Smuts, and others." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Unfortunately, the book suffers from some ailments endemic to doctoral theses: over-quotation, repetition and the 'dissertation style.' Despite these superficial shortcomings, however, Stiernotte has succeeded admirably in presenting a lucid and sober critique of a difficult but profound metaphysic." Maurice Natanson

+ Christian Century 71:1464 D 1 '54 850w

"Recommended for stronger philosophy and philosophy of religion collection." A. D. Osborn
+ Library J 79:1511 S 1 '54 80w

STILES, LELA. Man behind Roosevelt; the story of Louis McHenry Howe [foreword by Eleanor Roosevelt]. 311p il $4.75 World pub.

B or 92 Howe, Louis McHenry. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 54-5340

The story of Louis McHenry Howe, the man who shaped Franklin D. Roosevelt's career from the time he first saw Roosevelt, then a man of thirty, until Roosevelt entered the White House. Altho named secretary to the President, after Roosevelt's election, Howe failed to survive Roosevelt's first term. The author was one of Howe's assistants. Index.

Booklist 50:340 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:184 My '54 30w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ap 25 '54
380w

"Miss Stiles makes no pretense that this is a 'definitive' book, though she has scoured the sources and used voluminous notes of her own. To anyone interested in politics it reads irresistibly." S. R. Davis

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 18 '54 650w

"Louis Howe deserves a place on the growing shelf of Rooseveltiana, and for the moment this portrait, by an assistant in his office during many critical years, is a positive affirmation of that role."

+ Kirkus 22:147 F 15 '54 160w

"Recommended for special collections and larger public libraries." James Heslin
+ Library J 79:984 My 15 '54 120w

"Miss Stiles describes fully and vividly the process leading to final victory in 1932. She makes clear Howe's large share in Roosevelt's triumph over his illness and as a candidate; she rightly stresses his ability to keep Roosevelt on an even political keel. In her effort to bring out Howe's qualities as a political mentor, however, she tends to overlook the crucial fact that his success was made possible only because Roosevelt possessed the attributes of greatness." C. A. Madison

+ Nation 179:14 J1 3 '54 420w

"The picture of Louis Howe is vivid, warm, and engaging. It becomes clear why Roosevelt loved him so much and why the people who worked for him, adored him. This book makes it possible for thousands of people to know him, for he emerges as a real person." Frances Perkins

+ New Repub 130:18 Je 21 '54 4500w

"The Man Behind Roosevelt' is an illuminating footnote to the history of our times, but it is required reading for any student of practical politics and it is high entertainment for a reader whose interest in history and politics may be casual, but who appreciates a story dealing with a salty character. Miss Stiles has presented it in a way that is worthy of the material; and there is not much higher praise for a biographer than that." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 25 '54 700w

"Highly readable and dramatic biography." Samuel Lubell

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 25 '54 1300w

New Yorker 30:122 My 1 '54 280w

"Miss Stiles was genuinely fond of the little boss and naturally one would expect her to present him in the best possible light. But she knows that people are loved for their faults as well as their virtues and she includes a generous portion of Louis' crotchets." G. A. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 20 '54 440w

"An exciting, authentic, three-dimensional portrait. This is due less to [the author's] search through the skimpy manuscripts and secondary accounts than to her skill in recording her own vivid memories of nine years' work with the 'little boss' and his close associates. It has some of the minor flaws and inaccuracies of the memoir form, but also its freshness and liveliness." Frank Friedel

+ Sat R 37:17 My 8 '54 500w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54
430w

STILLSON, BLANCHE. Wings: insects, birds, men; drawings by Kenneth Gosner. 299p $3.50 Bobbs

629.12 Flight. Birds. Insects 54-10855

"Miss Stillson has written a book about the three great flying orders—insects, birds, and men. Her story runs from the first brave flight by the Palaeodictyoptera in the Upper Carboniferous period, a quarter of a billion years ago, to the first brave flight by Wilbur and Orville Wright in 1903, with disquisitions along the way on the number of spots on ladybugs, the number of wings on cherubim and seraphim, the art of falconry, and the curious absence of air-mindedness in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries." (New Yorker) Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"A satisfying accumulation of facts of endless variety, so detailed as to have value as a reference book. And, in addition, there are fine literary, artistic, and philosophic overtones. Miss Stillson obviously loves her subject regardless of whether the wings are attached to tumblebugs or angels." John Lewellen

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 21 '54 360w

"Recommended." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:2327 D 1 '54 120w

New Yorker 30:222 N 20 '54 120w

STINE, G. HARRY (LEE CORREY, pseud). Starship through space; il. by Bill Llewellyn. 241p $2.50 Holt

54-5736

In which two boys help build the first ship to go faster than the speed of light, and go as

STINE, G. H.—Continued
crew members on the first trip to Alpha Centauri.

Kirkus 22:116 F 15 '54 130w

"The building of the ship is described in detail—too much detail, I feel, slowing the story unnecessarily. . . . Acceptable where there is a demand for science fiction." E. S. Yoneshige
Library J 79:992 My 15 '54 90w

"Lee Correy, a scientist recently converted to science fiction writing, has managed in his first novel to come closer than any one else this year to the level of the incomparable teenage science fiction stories of Robert A. Heinlein." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 4 '54 150w

"Mr. Correy knows his science and, even better, knows how to put his knowledge on paper." Sidney Lohman
+ N Y Times p16 Ag 8 '54 130w

Springf'd Republican p9C J1 11 '54 70w

STINETORF, LOUISE A. Beyond the hungry country. 352p $3.50 Lippincott

54-6110

"The heroine, Laura Woodbury, is the African-born child of American missionaries, who grows up the product of two cultures but belonging to neither. Her unhappiness as a student in America convinces her that she should undergo training as a nurse to return to mission work in Africa. These preliminaries quickly disposed of, Laura proceeds to recount her life as a missionary, bride, mother, and widow. At the last we see her receiving further training in America so that she may return to Africa as an agricultural missionary." Sat R

Booklist 50:421 J1 1 '54

"The book is full of episodes involving African customs. An anthropologist could comment on their authority and freshness; a lay reader can report that they are always interesting and often moving. [There are negligible theology and doctrine here; we read of the lives lived, not of the sermons preached]. The animals, trees, rivers, and diseases of a tropical region with a few white residents appear in their strangeness, but without arousing a 'heart of darkness' atmosphere." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 13 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:242 Ap 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by G. P. Slocum

Library J 79:1675 S 15 '54 70w

"Life may be stranger than fiction, but in telling Laura's story as fiction the reality of Africa rings true, however strange. At long last missionaries have a popular spokesman." M. C. Hubbard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 J1 11 '54 550w

"Miss Stinetorf, who has been a missionary herself, exposes the myth of the happy savages who were doing all right until they were fouled up by the white civilization for exactly what it is—a myth." Jane Cobb
N Y Times p21 Je 27 '54 240w

"As a carefully-observed, matter-of-fact description of mission work 'Beyond the Hungry Country' enlists the reader's admiration for the selfless and arduous labors of all Lauras." Milton Crane

+ Sat R 37:36 Je 26 '54 400w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54 90w
Wis Lib Bul 50:212 O '54

STIRLING, MONICA. Ladies with a unicorn. 180p $3 Simon & Schuster

53-10817

Story of four women, all of whom are more or less in love with an Italian film director. The story of which one finally wins, is told by one of them, a French musician, who has gone to Rome to write the music for a new film.

Booklist 50:241 F 15 '54

"An utterly delightful light novel." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 24 '54 500w

"Under the cover of a story as frothy as a glass of zabaglione, Monica Stirling has staged in her third novel, 'Ladies With a Unicorn,' a comedy of love and understanding which reveals unexpected depths." Sylvia Stallings
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ja 24 '54 750w

"Essentially lightly romantic and deftly whipped up in the continental style, this novel has civilized elegance and wit that lift it above the usual story of this kind. It is especially worth noting that the author's sense of irony blends rather naturally with a wise and tender understanding of human nature." John Nerber
+ N Y Times p21 Ja 24 '54 550w

"Miss Stirling's novel is worth reading, if only because she writes with tenderness and an unusual skill for accurately recreating the sights and sounds of life in modern Rome. Some of her characters, notably Valeria and the young actress, are also real creations, human beings brought vividly to life by the author's understanding of their motivations and her ability to communicate this understanding to her readers." William Murray
+ Sat R 37:42 F 13 '54 360w

"Ladies with a Unicorn is written about the love affairs of amusing people, in a foreign setting acutely described; the language is fresh, and the author has an ear for dialogue. Yet somehow the final effect is flat. This is partly because of the very odd aesthetic standards involved."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p593 S 18 '53 130w

STIRLING, WALTER FRANCIS. Safety last; with a foreword by Siegfried Sassoon; and an epilogue by Lord Kinross. 251p il $4 British bk. centre

B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs [53-12420]

"The adventurous life of an English soldier and diplomat, a friend and associate of Lawrence of Arabia and of the Arabs and Syrians, who has played an important role in the affairs of Albania, Syria and other countries of the Middle East." Publishers Weekly

Reviewed by Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 1 '53 50w

"Who will enjoy this readable book? It will disappoint those who want an analysis of Balkan politics or of Lawrence's great adventure at the head of the Arab revolt, for it is far too busy with narrative to pause for such thoughts. But for all those who suffer from fits of resentment at straphanging, adding columns or washing up, it is a guaranteed stimulant, and a far better one than strips of Super-man Garth and Captain Marvel, because it is true." Elizabeth Monroe

+ New Statesman & Nation 45:753 Je 20 '53 550w

Publishers Weekly p1423 S 26 '53 40w

"It would be something of an understatement to say that Colonel Stirling is a man of action. He is in fact that rare type, the man who really is prepared to go anywhere and do anything, and to do it exceedingly well. His book is a fascinating demonstration of how much most of us can miss by refusing to take chances with our careers; it is packed with incident, and it contains illuminating sidelights on the great, such as Kitchener, Allenby, Lawrence, Feisal of Iraq, King Zog and Wavell." Bickham Sweet-Escott

+ Spec p708 My 29 '53 550w

"Colonel Stirling's life has been so crammed with incident and adventure that his book cannot fail to interest a wide public."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p278 My 1 '53 550w

STODDARD, EDWARD. First book of magic; pictures by Robin King. 68p $1.75 Watts, F.

793.8 Magic—Juvenile literature 53-10260

Simple tricks of magic for beginners. Uses props that are inexpensive and easy to acquire. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 50:245 F 15 '54

"[Done] in a manner so convincing that, after careful reading and some slight experimentation, this reviewer feels almost ready to put on a one-woman show complete with the 'rabbit from the box' trick." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ja 31 '54 130w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 79:73 Ja 1 '54 20w

Wis Lib Bul 50:77 Mr '54

STOLZ, MARY (SLATTERY). Pray love, remember. 345p $2.75 Harper

54-10048

A novel for older girls. Dody Jenks, at eighteen, wanted to get away from her unattractive home. For one summer she tried being governess to a difficult little girl, the child of wealthy parents. And that summer was the turning point in Dody's life.

Booklist 51:154 D 1 '54

"This fine book for older girls should not for a moment be regarded as a 'juvenile.' Mary Stolz writes with maturity and insight to produce a serious, thought-provoking novel which will be enjoyed by girls who are already reading in the adult field." P. A. Whitney

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p36 N 14 '54 100w

"The story of Dody's and Simon's love is told with rare beauty." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:444 D '54 140w

"Thoroughly adult and constructive, this sort of book can take root in young people's consciousness and achieve a measure of good. Sound realism."

+ Kirkus 22:584 S 1 '54 200w

"It may not be the best of this writer's books for girls, and the rather trite theme could be better handled, but it has a lot to say to dreamy teen-agers who need to wake up as Dody did." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p22 N 14 '54 350w

"All Mrs. Stolz' novels have been distinguished by a mature approach to the problems of young people but this is the most challenging and the best of them all." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p50 N 7 '54 240w

STOLZ, MARY (SLATTERY). Two by two. 310p $3.50 Houghton

54-6813

A story of inter-relationships in a family in which, the mother having died, the father and two post-adolescent children have difficulty understanding each other and themselves.

Booklist 51:111 N 1 '54

"A slight story, this cuts somewhat deeper in its implications and insights, finds more than a little charm in an awkward age."

+ Kirkus 22:498 Ag 1 '54 130w

"This is a timid book which seems unreal even though the author is dealing with a very real subject. Characters are fragile and introspective and never seem really alive. However, it will appeal to older teen-agers and can be recommended for young adults more widely than could Salinger's Catcher in the Rye, a better book dealing with the same subject." G. P. Slocum

+ Library J 79:2259 N 15 '54 100w

"Mary Stolz has painted her portrait of Harry with warmth, understanding and loving care. Other portraits in the book emerge solid and clear to stand beside the boy; Harry's older sister in particular, torn by neurotic conflicts, is a very moving study. And the picture of Harry's family as a whole, and of its way of life, is well realized. Some readers will feel that the final resolution of 'Two by Two' is unnecessarily violent and melodramatic. But a deep respect for human beings and a firm belief in the values of good human relations are implicit in the narrative."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 28 '54 270w

"To explore, to interpret, to define the struggles of youth's raw, aching emotions has proved a pitfall for more than one writer. But Mary Stolz, who has written several novels about adolescents for adolescents, understands her young people thoroughly, and in this portrait of 17-year-old Harry Lynch has written a first-rate novel." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p33 S 26 '54 280w

STONE, ALMA. Harvard tree. 309p $3.50 Houghton

54-10083

The scene is Texas; the time, 1922. "[Novel about] three generations of a Southern family—Grandpa, who figured that Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson were the nation's founding fathers; Mama, who saw her blasted collegiate romance every time she glanced at the Harvard Tree; Rowena, a freshman sorority girl in Southern Methodist, and Laura who had a boney hump on her little nose and lived for the day when she could wear a brace to get rid of the hump." N Y Times

Booklist 51:64 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:35 N '54 20w

Kirkus 22:452 Jl 15 '54 190w

"The style, at its best, is earthy, mildly derisive and always colloquial. Miss Stone, who is librarian at Sarah Lawrence College, has a remarkably acute ear for human speech and understands the art of understatement. Recommended." M. L. Barrett

+ Library J 79:1505 S 1 '54 190w

"In her fine first novel Alma Stone tells, with artistry and poignance and humor, the story of a town in her native Texas during a summer soon after the first world war. The qualities here, the mood and the manner, are not those which we ordinarily associate with Texas. Miss Stone is a prose stylist who sustains her tone with a sure control throughout her relatively long novel." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 26 '54 600w

"A delightful novel. . . The story is an excellent and refreshing picture of life in a Southern county seat—the ups and downs, politics, summer revivals, economic woes, and the sharp-edged gossip. This is the first novel of Miss Stone, who grew up in the Texas piney-woods town of Jasper, but is now a New Yorker." Lewis Nordyke

+ N Y Times p24 S 19 '54 500w

"Miss Stone has brought two delightful young sisters to life here, but instead of concentrating her energy on her central characters, she allows her imagination to lead her off in so many scattered, uninteresting directions that her book is much less touching and entertaining than it should be."

New Yorker 30:146 S 18 '54 70w

Reviewed by Jerome Stone

Sat R 37:34 N 27 '54 270w

STONE, IRVING. Love is eternal; a novel about Mary Todd and Abraham Lincoln. 468p $3.95 Doubleday

Lincoln, Mary (Todd)—Fiction. Lincoln, Abraham—Fiction. 54-9678

Biographical novel telling the story of the marriage of Abraham Lincoln and Mary Todd. The story ends with Lincoln's death.

Booklist 51:42 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:9 O '54 10w

"Mr. Stone handles the political background with his usual dexterity. There is some of the 'She stood by Abraham—would Illinois?' sort of thing, but not much. Love Is Eternal tells an often repeated tale, but with freshness, vigor, and authority." Riley Hughes

STONE, IRVING—Continued

+ — Cath World 180:150 N '54 350w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 22 '54 400w

"Irving Stone's highly readable novel attempts to pronounce triumphantly that the calumnies are entirely disproved. He makes a good case for the Lincoln marriage as a great American love story. His case for the uncompromising reinstatement of Mary Lincoln is less convincing. But his book is a valuable addition to the overflowing shelves of Lincolniana." N. E. Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 14 '54 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

Kirkus 22:401 Jl 1 '54 210w

"All who have read President's Lady (1951) and Immortal Wife (1944) will know the plan of this author's biographical novels. All are done with minutiae detail, but never quite successfully, since the characters just do not live. The period is important, the characters are interpreted accurately but without élan. So Mary Lincoln will take her place with Rachel Jackson and Jessie Fremont in historical novels that offer little but fact. For general purchase." K. T. Willis

Library J 79:1400 Ag '54 140w

"'Love is Eternal' is a long novel and an absorbing one. In Mary Todd Lincoln, Irving Stone finds not only a heroine after his own heart but a woman who, cruelly villified in her own times and perhaps in ours, challenges reappraisal by just such a gallant sentimentalist as he. . . . But whether Mr. Stone has succeeded in his main purpose—persuading the reader to accept Mary Todd Lincoln as the woman he determinedly sees her to be—is another matter. To one reader at least there is a basic psychological flaw in Mr. Stone's long argument with history." F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 22 '54 600w

"Mr. Stone's researches into the whole Civil War epoch have been wide and deep; historians will quarrel with particulars, of course, but the general achievement is admirable. The book has atmospheric reality, not only in terms of physical detail . . . but in respect to intellectual ferment. Debates, politicking and battles are worked into the domestic picture with skill; so, too, are many of Lincoln's most famous stories and quips. Sometimes Lincoln seems excessively given to yarning and occasionally the dialogue is marred by an anachronism, as the style is by sentimentality. But taken all in all 'Love Is Eternal' is a warm and solid achievement." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 22 '54 750w

New Yorker 30:146 S 18 '54 40w

"There are times when Mr. Stone moves the reader to genuine feeling, particularly when he suggests the new levels of understanding Mary and Abe reach after failure and defeat. At these times his theme rises above the sentimental one of the title to those frequently quoted words, 'wisdom is minted out of mortal wounds.'" Ann Comfort

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 22 '54 800w

"The Lincoln scholars may demur, but a wide audience is bound to find this new Stone novel fully as entertaining as 'Immortal Wife' and maybe a little better than 'The President's Lady'. If one says truthfully that the ladies' literary clubs will lap up the book, the comment is not meant to be disparaging. Mr. Stone is no stylist, but he is an expert at his craft. He writes a vigorous, dramatic prose, and he knows how to make his story move." H. B. Woodward

+ Sat R 37:15 Ag 21 '54 650w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 500w

"In Stone's version, it is not Lincoln who lifts himself to eminence by his bootstraps, but Mary who raises him with her apron strings. This may make Love Is Eternal the ideal woman's home companion, but scarcely good history. In the main, Author Stone rushes about in his chosen role of literary fire warden, stamping out the flame of another great personality."

Time 64:83 Ag 30 '54 180w

Wis Lib Bul 50:212 O '54

STORM, MARGARET, and STORM, JOHN.
Treasury of fine desserts. 214p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

641.8 Desserts

53-10816

"Basic recipe cards arranged on inside covers make this a book better for private ownership than for public libraries. Pastries, pancakes, souffles, custards, cakes and pies of all kinds give us an irresistible book. Exotic fruits, festive drinks and dessert wines are featured." Library J

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 79:1230 Je 15 '54 40w

"This is the kind of thing every good cook should have on the shelf; in fact, it might well make a cook's reputation. On the rich side? Well, maybe. But a really luscious dessert is rich; it has to be, most of the time. And you don't have to use the book every day." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 22 '53 600w

STOURZH, GERALD. Benjamin Franklin and American foreign policy. 335p $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Franklin, Benjamin. U.S.—Foreign policy 54-9355

"This book is a study neither in diplomatic history nor in political theory. It endeavors to analyze systematically the principles of Franklin's approach to foreign policy by probing into his actions as well as into his expressions of opinion concerning international politics." (Pref) Index.

"The book is fully and carefully annotated in a most helpful way. Notes are consolidated at the end of the volume. The index is adequate. This is a volume of substantial excellence which seems for the first time to provide a satisfactorily balanced interpretation of Franklin's ideas in the field of foreign policy." J. J. Meng

+ Am Hist R 60:122 O '54 800w

"Though much of this material has been covered in biographies and special articles, I do not know of any other study that isolates this facet of Franklin's thought and analyzes it in similar detail. Important, but requires close reading. For college, university and larger public libraries, historical and foreign policy collections." Dorothy Sinclair

+ Library J 79:1056 Je 1 '54 140w

"In crisp, clear prose, Mr. Stourzh has given us a work of first importance for comprehending the meaning and the objectives of American foreign policy." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 4 '54 700w

"A serious work based on extensive research and sound scholarship, this book will be welcomed by those who have an interest in Franklin and in the history of American foreign relations." J. F. Hopkins

+ Sat R 37:18 My 29 '54 260w

STOUT, REX. Black mountain. 183p $2.75 Viking

54-11617

Detective story.

"Wolfe following an international line is something to sit up about, and Goodwin does. Surprise, surprise!"

+ Kirkus 22:552 Ag 15 '54 50w

"Archie's reporting is entertaining (it always is) and the goings on are something fierce and often pretty funny, especially when the self-indulgent Nero is behaving like a mountain goat with sore feet." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 O 24 '54 90w

"Some Wolfe addicts may, like me, regret the experiment; a straight foreign intrigue tale with neither humor nor deduction hardly seems a proper Wolfe exploit. Others may well relish the change of pace; and all who (again like me) were fascinated by Bernard DeVoto's searching venture into 35th Street Irregularity in the July Harper's will welcome the flood of new data on Wolfe's ambiguous Balkan background." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p50 O 24 '54 120w

"There are some lively and characteristic passages, but on the whole the change in tone and method is unfortunate."

New Yorker 30:176 O 23 '54 120w

"Archie Goodwin seems to trail along rather helplessly, which is disappointing, but the novelty of scene and action somewhat makes up for it." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 31 '54 70w

"OK all the way." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:39 N 27 '54 20w

STOUT, REX. Three men out. 181p $2.50 Viking 54-7052

Three detective stories featuring Nero Wolfe.

Booklist 50:453 J1 15 '54

Kirkus 22:136 F 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ap 25 '54 60w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p27 Ap 25 '54 80w

"The three stories in this collection first appeared in a magazine, and perhaps for that reason Archie Goodwin and his employer, Nero Wolfe, don't seem to have quite enough elbow room in any of them. . . Each has some of Mr. Stout's characteristic touches, but none of the problems is really worth Wolfe's attention."

New Yorker 30:136 Mr 27 '54 80w

"Wolfe doesn't display his usual brilliance, but thanks to Archie you'll probably have fun." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 16 '54 40w

"Good variety show." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

"These stories are not quite up to the usual standard. Nero and Archie need more space than can be provided in short novels even though Mr. Stout's plotting is as expert as usual." R. F. H.

+ — Springf'd Republican p9C My 11 '54 70w

STOVER, BLANCHE MARGARET. Family cookbook. See Parents' magazine

STRANDBERG, MALCOLM WOODROW
PERSHING. Microwave spectroscopy. 140p
$2.50 Wiley

539.1 Spectrum analysis 54-8089

"Gives relevant information used to obtain and interpret microwave spectroscopic data. Treatment presupposes some familiarity with modern quantum mechanics and matrix methods." Chem & Eng N

"It is a valuable supplement to a more general discussion of the field such as the one found in the book by Gordy, Trambarulo and Smith." B. P. Dailey

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:5262 O 20 '54 140w

Chem & Eng N 32:765 F 22 '54 20w

"This book is not an elementary treatise, nor is it as comprehensive as the title would indicate, but it is a useful addition to the literature of the subject. P. Kisliuk

+ Chem Eng 61:359 N '54 430w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:29 Mr '54

STRAUSS, LEO. Natural right and history.
327p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

323.4 Natural law

53-12840

"This analysis of historicism and natural right is at once a basic and clear interpretation of the theories underlying each and at the same time a careful historical depiction of the rise and development of each idea through the centuries from the Greeks to Rousseau, Burke and Max Weber." (Christian Century) Index.

"The author's tight discussion of the exponents and the opponents of natural right rests upon a solid and sober foundation of learning. That one has the right to expect of the author. It is illuminated by understanding and warmed by a deep and contained emotion which is more sensed in the reading than released in the writing. The control is explicit; the emotion, implicit. Lucid as it is, the argument throughout is complex and involved, for the facets of Strauss's scholarship are many and he puts heavy demands of concentration upon his readers. Yet the effort required is repaid in rich dividends, and not the least the heightened awareness that the problem which he raises in an independent and searching way cuts to the heart of the dilemma, in which thinking man today is caught." Leo Gershoy

+ Am Hist R 59:588 Ap '54 370w

"Professor Strauss brings to his task an admirable scholarship and a brilliant incisive mind. His style reflects the lucidity of his thinking and as a consequence his book deserves a wide audience, not only among political theorists, for whom it is indispensable, but among political scientists generally. Any reservations I have about the book would refer to the author's initial presuppositions rather than to the details of his analysis." J. H. Hallowell

+ — Am Pol Sci R 48:538 Je '54 1650w

"Today our task is to discover some absolute natural standards, if we are to provide a basis for just laws and resolve the conflicting claims of social groups. The present volume is devoted largely to the history of the problem, and there are hints that a subsequent study will reveal a solid basis for a rehabilitated natural right theory." O. L. Reiser

Ann Am Acad 292:193 Mr '54 270w

Reviewed by R. W. Albright

Christian Century 71:554 My 5 '54 1050w

"Unfortunately, the argument confuses the need for binding value judgments with a need for uncritical, dogmatic value judgments. It should serve, therefore, mainly to stimulate the development of other means to ward off moral and political nihilism. Nevertheless, the work is the best presentation of the great aim and the hopeless shortcomings of present-day natural-right theory."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:69 Mr '54 240w

STRAUSS, RICHARD. Recollections and reflections; ed. by Willi Schuh; English translation by L. J. Lawrence. 173p $2.50 Boosey
B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 53-4368

"A well-translated selection from the prose writings (1903-1948) of the eminent German composer who died in 1949." Library J

"Anyone interested in the creative process will want to read this book." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:1894 O 15 '54 80w

"Unlike Wagner, who was only too ready to burst into print on the slightest provocation, Strauss had an insuperable aversion to literary labour.' Yet in spite of their almost ostentatiously casual style there emerges from this small collection of occasional pieces more of Strauss's complex character, in which an acute sensibility took refuge behind the mask of a sceptical and detached man of the world, than is to be found in the adulatory biographies that appeared in his lifetime." P. H.

+ Spec p54 Ja 8 '54 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p778 D 11 '53 50w

STREATFEILD, NOEL. First book of the ballet; pictures by Moses Soyer. 93p $1.75 Watts, F.

792.8 Ballet—Juvenile literature 53-10259

"The story of a ten-year-old girl who goes to the theatre, sees a ballet for the first time, and, like many other children under the same circumstances, thinks that she wants to become a ballerina. Only, she is in dead earnest, and we follow her through her first interview with the teacher, the beginning of her training, the development of her technique." (Sat R) Copiously illustrated. Glossary of ballet terms.

Booklist 50:226 F 1 '54

"Any young girl who like the Anne of the story, has dreamed, after seeing her first professional ballet performance, of being a dancer herself, will want to read and own this admirable book." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ja 3 '54 150w

"Much information in an uncrowded book with attractive illustrations." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:110 Ap '54 150w

Kirkus 21:585 S 1 '53 130w

Reviewed by Mary Strang

Library J 79:150 Ja 15 '54 30w

"[This book] from England, informative, well written and beautifully illustrated, will delight young balletomanes from coast to coast." R. J. Woody

+ N Y Times p14 D 27 '53 130w

"In a book which acknowledges its debt to Arnold Haskell we are surprised to find no mention of Isadora Duncan. . . Except for this one omission we find this first book on the ballet absorbing and distinguished in its simplicity. A must for all young devotees of the ballet." C. H. B.

+ Sat R 37:43 F 6 '54 300w

Wis Lib Bul 50:80 Mr '54

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Case of the forty thieves. 218p $2.50 Dodd

54-5627

Detective story.

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54

"This is a police novel, making its way by chain-deduction, and working here at a nicely ingenious puzzle. And it represents the steady Mr. Rhode in sound form." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 14 '54 100w

"Superintendent Jimmy Waghorn's bit-by-bit unveiling of these clever rackets sustains a fair amount of interest in a story weak on action and characterization." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p15 F 7 '54 50w

"It's a pretty good hunt for a gang leader, done (while Waghorn is in charge) in Rhode's best vein. C plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 7 '54 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:52 Mr 13 '54 20w

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Dovebury murders. 238p $2.75 Dodd

54-8495

Detective story.

"Mr. Rhode, here as usual, sets a problem, finds evidence, upsets premature convictions, looks for others and finally supplies them solidly battened and not quite predictable. It is a mode nostalgic, mildly soporific as Mr. Rhode manages it, but comfortably free of distressed damsels or of sub-literate hardboiled eggs." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 4 '54 170w

"You should be something like 100 pages ahead of Superintendent Waghorn and even Dr. Priestley on all the important plot developments; but the murder-by-wine token is ingenious and the leisurely narrative of village life agreeable." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 4 '54 30w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 1 '54 90w

"Ploddingly pleasant." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 Jl 17 '54 20w

STREET, JAMES HOWELL. Good-bye, my Lady. 222p $3 Lippincott

54-9416

The boy Skeeter living with old Uncle Jesse in a Mississippi swamp, finds a strange dog and the two become close friends. The time comes when Skeeter and Lady have to part, but thanks to Uncle Jesse's training the boy does what he has to do with dignity and integrity.

Booklist 51:16 S 1 '54

"'Good-bye, My Lady' is no 'The Yearling' but it is that kind of yarn, a clean story cleanly told." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 22 '54 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

"Simple, heartwarming, skilful in catching the accents of the backwoods folk, this belongs on the shelf with The Yearling and My Friend Flicka." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 30:464 D '54 120w

"This is no Biscuit Eater, but it is in that general category. Street manages to skirt the edge of sentimentality, however, and gives a tight, spare quality to his characterizations, that makes this a community vignette as well."

+ Kirkus 22:346 Je 1 '54 160w

"Unfortunately occasional sentimentality mars an otherwise grave and dignified story." Barbara Klaw

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 29 '54 260w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 22 '54 40w

"No doubt about it—Novelist Street has written him a little old classic of the maudlin school."

Time 64:77 Ag 23 '54 230w

STREET, JAMES HOWELL. Revolutionary war. 180p il $3 Dial press

973.3 U.S.—History—Revolution 54-10535

"The late James Street's account of America's secession from England—accurately subtitled 'a de-mythed account of how the thirteen Colonies turned a world upside down.' A companion volume to Mr. Street's rambunctious re-telling of the Civil War story, it is another over-simplification of a high point in our social evolution." N Y Times

"Similar to his Civil War observations, though less successful. Street is more pre-occupied with people than events in this volume, and it lacks the humorous blend. Few (outside the DAR which he side-swipes occasionally) will quarrel with his 'de-mything,' and on the whole his reduction of the Revolutionary cause seems . . . plausible; some of his many general observations are acute. But Street's writing here seems not so crisp as before." Karl Brown

Library J 79:2208 N 15 '54 100w

"Most of the myths unscrambled here have been explained in more authoritative volumes; some of the opinions expressed are guaranteed to raise blood pressures, both in and out of the D. A. R. By this time every schoolboy must know that our break with the mother country was engineered by a determined minority, that some of the bitterest fighting was between American loyalists and rebels, that our eventual success was due to good luck, incredible mismanagement in London and the eventual help of France. Mr. Street slams these points home in rip-roaring fashion." William Du Bois

N Y Times p20 N 28 '54 350w

Sat N 37:15 D 18 '54 550w

STREETER, EDWARD. Mr. Hobbs' vacation; drawings by Dorothea Warren Fox. 248p $3 Harper

54-6030

A New England island vacation described to the last humorous detail by the author of Father of the Bride (Book Review Digest 1949).

Booklist 50:193; 359 Ja 15 '54; My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:219 Je '54 50w

"Streeter writes in the serio-comic vein of gentle probing; and he avoids slapstick. He takes the sting out of his barbs toward the end, moreover, by summarizing some of the positive factors on the credit side of Pop's vacation ledger." Henry Cavendish
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 16 '54 550w

"His story is tender, whimsical, jocose, by turns—its absurdities and exasperations as familiar as orange juice and cereal for breakfast." O. D. H.
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 1 '5 200w

Kirkus 22:165 Mr 1 '54 130w

"Edward Streeter has a sharp eye for the minutiae of everyday existence, and he has a cheerful prose style in which he records his observations; the combination makes 'Mr. Hobbs' Vacation' an almost constant delight. It is written from the point of view of a grandfather who gathers his family around him for five weeks of seaside relaxation, but you don't have to be a grandfather to appreciate the various things that happen." Nathaniel Benchley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 16 '54 450w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols
+ N Y Times p4 My 16 '54 450w

Sat R 37:15 Je 5 '54 160w

Reviewed by John Metcalf

Spec p323 S 10 '54 260w

Time 63:114 My 24 '54 380w

Wis Lib Bul 50:212 O '54

STREETER, STEPHEN. This is Buenos Aires. 223p il $3.50 McBride co.

918.21 Buenos Aires—Description 54-7377

A guide to Buenos Aires, called by the author the Paris of South America. In it the following subjects are considered: Getting there; Packing up; Passports and papers; Getting accommodations; Argentina and the Argentines; Profile of a city; Seeing the sights; Parks and plazas; Let's go shopping! Social circles; Eating out. An appendix translates the names of Argentinian food and drinks into English. There is a brief language guide. No index.

Booklist 50:449 Jl 15 '54

"Aside from occasional overstatement and fulsomeness, this discussion is to be commended for travel guide value and for a wealth of absorbing general information." Leon Harpole
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 10 '54 90w

"The author's style is breezy, but the book has depth and perspective. Mr. Streeter is greatly concerned that the American tourist should make a good impression on his South American neighbor." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 79:1597 S 15 '54 60w

STREIT, CLARENCE KIRSHMAN. Freedom against itself. 316p $3.75 Harper

341.1 International federation. Liberty

54-6031

"Clarence Streit has returned in this volume to the theme of liberty and union, which runs through all his work, but he has come to it with a new approach and a variety of new facts. His central idea is a paradox. Freedom, he argues, has created scientific advance, with all its transforming discoveries and inventions; scientific advance has brought the world an unprecedented measure of coherence and unity. This same freedom, acting in the political sphere, has created disunity. The result, according to Mr. Streit, is a tension and a basic incongruity throughout the modern world." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 50:412 Jl 1 '54

"The reader must take Mr. Streit's word for it that federal union is 'the answer.' There is little close reasoning here to reach the thinking of the unconverted. In fact, one would have to read some of his other books to find the arguments for what he calls an 'atlantican' federal government. . . . Union of the democracies for Mr. Streit is both a defensive and offensive action. His plea is urgent—his proposal one for careful deliberation." R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 2 '54 500w

Kirkus 22:279 Ap 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by James Heslin

Library J 79:1315 Jl '54 120w

Reviewed by B. E. Brown

New Repub 132:19 Ag 2 '54 1050w

"Mr. Streit's solution—liberty plus union—has been made familiar in a persistent stream of publications from his pen. No one can deny the large validity of the theme or fail to be moved by the urgency with which it is here set forth. Mr. Streit makes a book according to a very individual recipe: he argues minutely, filling his pages with bits of reminiscence, autobiography, out-of-the-way quotations and unusual facts. The personality of the man himself comes through." August Heckscher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 30 '54 800w

"In the warmth of his convictions the author is inclined to repeat himself and to exaggerate a case that is basically desirable. The book suffers from persistent repetition; in fact, the whole argument would have been more cogent and persuasive if presented in a single article. Nevertheless, despite all this and despite the tendency to confuse the desirable with the possible, 'Freedom Against Itself' deserves a wide hearing. It should help to stimulate discussion about a world situation that is really as serious as Mr. Streit says it is." S. K. Padover

+ — N Y Times p13 Jl 18 '54 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 30 '54 500w

Wis Lib Bul 50:171 Jl '54

STRUGHOLD, HUBERTUS. Green and red planet; with editorial assistance and a foreword by Green Peyton. 107p il $4 Univ. of N.Mex. press

574.1 [577.4] Altitude, Influence of. Life (biology). Mars (planet) 53-8894

"A physiological study of the possibility of life on Mars." (Subtitle) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:72 O 15 '53

"The book will not please the space travel enthusiasts who are determined to find men-like creatures on all of the planets, but it should prove interesting to more logical readers." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:560 Mr 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by Anthony Barnett

New Statesman & Nation 48:191 Ag 14 '54 300w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 21 '54 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p444 Jl 9 '54 650w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:122 Mr '54 240w

STRYKER, LLOYD PAUL. Art of advocacy; a plea for the renaissance of the trial lawyer. 306p $5 Simon & Schuster

347.92 Lawyers. Trial practice 54-5815

"Well-known New York trial lawyer first guides us through the various stages of a criminal trial, from meeting the client to the end of the closing speech. Then he discusses advocacy—which he sees on the decline—in various aspects in criminal law, the appellate courts, its ethics, etc." Library J

Reviewed by H. C. Havighurst

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ap 18 '54 400w

Kirkus 22:55 Ja 15 '54 140w

"Delightful work; is scintillating without being shallow, human, without being sentimental and wise without being technical. Recommended for all libraries with reader interest in our system of justice." H. H. Bernt + Library J 79:549 Mr 15 '54 140w

"Despite the self-imposed limitations which writing lawyers must assume, since their best tales are secrets belonging only to their clients, this book will entertain as well as instruct and it is written with clarity." M. L. Ernst + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 28 '54 850w

"Here is a book that will delight any lawyer who has ever tried a real case and that will kindle the ambition of every law student who aspires to court work. The appeal of the volume, however, is not alone to the lawyer. It will fascinate those laymen who, either because of their interest in the drama of it all or by reason of their concern for the due administration of justice, are forever asking questions—often embarrassing questions—about what goes on in the courtroom." A. T. Vanderbilt + N Y Times p3 Mr 28 '54 1750w

Reviewed by D. W. McGregor

Sat 37:38 O 54 700w

STRYKER, PERRIN. Guide to modern management methods; by Perrin Stryker and the editors of Fortune. 300p $3.50 McGraw

658.3 Business management 54-9710

"An enlightened guide to the techniques and problems of business management in the post-war period, including reports on what actual companies have experienced with the newer management methods and the lessons they have learned from their failures or successes. The book proposes no short cuts to successful management. It merely suggests ways of rethinking such new methods executive development, psychological testing, and employee training programs." Booklist

Booklist 51:7 S 1 '54

"Because it is approached from the viewpoint of some particularly keen and observing reporters, this book should go a long way in helping management appraise its own methods." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:1518 S 1 '54 210w

STUART, FRANK STANLEY. Seal's world; an account of the first three years in the life of a harp seal; il. by Walter Ferguson. 223p $4 McGraw

54-6227

A nature tale in which the heroine is a seal. The Wanderer was orphaned before she had learned to swim, but she was adaptable, and soon she was swimming like the others. The story traces her life during the three years from babyhood to maturity.

Booklist 50:394 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:236 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by August Derleth

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 27 '54 260w

"Mr. Stuart is content to let his seal remain seal with no human borrowings. But the author's sympathy with all life, that stayed his hand in the war, is implicit in this work and refreshes us by its courageous gentleness. Perhaps this is the best reason of all for the unusual attention to his writings." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 29 '54 500w

Kirkus 22:261 Ap 1 '54 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 11 '54 40w

"Mr. Stuart describes his charming heroine with as much detachment as warm enthusiasm for his subject permits. Without attributing to seal intelligence or emotion which is not plainly the property of such a highly specialized mammal, he manages to make the reader feel conscious always of the presence of a living being whose living problems are, if not human problems, understandable in human terms." Raymond Holden

+ N Y Times p12 Je 13 '54 450w

"Mr. Stuart, like Sally Carrighar, whose work his own much resembles, is not a zoologist but a storyteller whose preference for the shallows of scientific fact, opposed to the depths of anthropomorphism, is sufficiently firm to justify our unguarded attention. In this [is] informative entertainment."

+ New Yorker 30:102 Je 19 '54 160w

"Some of these 27 short chapters possess unusual beauty of style; they also contain some rare description. Once the Wanderer followed, on his way to the bottom, the macabre pas de seal of a drowning man washed overboard from a trawler." D. B. B.

+ Springfield Republican p7C Je 27 '54 300w

STUART, JOHN LEIGHTON. Fifty years in China; the memoirs of [the author] missionary and ambassador [pref. by George Catlett Marshall; introd. by Hu Shih]. 346p il $5 Random house

B or 92 China—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.

—Foreign relations—China. Missionaries—

Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-7808

The author went to China as a missionary for the Southern Presbyterian church in 1904; in 1919 he was elected president of Yenching University, and in 1946 he was appointed Ambassador to the Republic of China by President Truman. This book is his own story and his observation on life and politics in China.

Booklist 51:149 D 1 '54

Reviewed by Kenneth Colegrove

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 17 '54 420w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 71:1462 D 1 '54 2000w

Reviewed by Gordon Walker

Christian Science Monitor p4 N 4 '54 1100w

Kirkus 22:648 S 15 '54 350w

"His integrity, personality, intellectual capabilities, and perceptiveness, together with his close involvements with Chinese of all kinds, make his observations and interpretations extremely important. Despite Dr. Stuart's efforts to allot fairly credits and criticisms, persons on 'both' sides of the China question will disagree with numerous statements, including pleas to support the National Government and to oppose the Communists. But both factions—in fact, all those in between as well—should carefully study his reasoning. Highly recommended." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 79:1889 O 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by O. E. Clubb

Nation 179:341 O 16 '54 1200w

Reviewed by K. S. Latourette

New Repub 131:21 N 8 '54 1100w

"The book is Mr. Stuart himself and at his unflinching best. It is frank, intimate, self-revealing, with vivid accounts of the events in which he has had a part, and there are thumbnail sketches, kindly but objective and honest, of Chinese whom he has called his friends, of the colorful cities he knows so intimately." K. S. Latourette

+ N Y Times p4 O 17 '54 850w

New Yorker 30:165 O 16 '54 230w

Reviewed by H. H. Fisher
 Sat R 37:13 D 25 '54 900w
 Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 130w
 Time 64:92 O 25 '54 600w

STUBBS, HARRY CLEMENT (HAL CLEMENT, pseud). Mission of gravity. 224p
 $2.95 Doubleday

Science fiction.

54-5720

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

"A charming, humorous epic full of elemental hazards and contacts with other life on the planet. An excellent science fiction romance." Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 2 '54 110w

Kirkus 22:85 F 1 '54 80w

"Adequate as a novel of adventure and enthralling as an exercise in imaginative logic, this is a book to be read slowly, savoring every detail—conceivably hard going for the superficial reader, but the answer to the prayers of all who want more science in science fiction." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 28 '54 170w

"Clement's disciplined imagination is at its best in this creation of Mesklin, with its enormously variable gravity pull, and of its peoples, who sail about its equatorial skies in gliders but dare not rise an inch above the ground at its poles." J. F. McComas

+ N Y Times p19 My 23 '54 210w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 13 '54 190w

STURE-VASA, MRS MARY ALSOP (MARY O'HARA, pseud). Novel-in-the-making. 244p
 $3 McKay

808.3 Fiction—Technique. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-12913

Partly autobiographical, partly literary shop talk, this tells of the course of the author's work while she was planning and writing her successful novel, The Son of Adam Wyngate.

Booklist 51:103 N 1 '54

"It should be immensely valuable for critics, providing as it does some of the touchstones by which sound fiction writing should be judged. I found it provocative and challenging."

+ Kirkus 22:554 Ag 15 '54 170w

"Most interesting, as books of this type almost invariably are. (Like Thomas Wolfe's The Story of a Novel, to which she often refers). Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1586 S 15 '54 110w

"This book will prove a provocative and instructive one for the fiction writer, presenting as it does so many of his own problems, along with a range of possible solutions and much sound sense on the relations of author to publishers and critics. It is also convincing evidence how much more a skilled professional writer knows about the nature of writers and writing—about literature, in short—than any mere scholar or critic can know." Stanley Vestal

+ Sat R 37:22 S 16 '54 600w

STURGEON, THEODORE, pseud. See Waldo, E. H.

STURMTHAL, ADOLF FOX. Unity and diversity in European labor; an introduction to contemporary labor movements. 237p
 $3.75 Free press

331.88 Labor and laboring classes—Europe. Trade unions—Europe 53-7399

"Traces the beginnings of the labor movements in Great Britain, Germany and France, emphasizing the differences in each the result of the climate in which they evolved. The place of the communists in each movement before and after the war and the relation of the internationals to these movements receive careful attention. A final section is devoted to present developments in such aspects as collective bargaining, political policies and union attitudes toward nationalization." Library J

"This book is a useful addition to the literature on contemporary European labor movements, and could be used to good advantage as a supplementary text on modern European labor and Socialist history. It may not have quite the same reading appeal as Sturmthal's earlier work in the field, but it largely makes up for this in coverage and timeliness." A. M. Cartter

+ Am Econ R 44:709 S '54 950w

"In a simple, lucid way some developments are brilliantly presented. . . . This book, which is the outcome of classes the authors gave for members of the International Garment Workers' Union, is an excellent contribution to workers' education. It is written for a reader who wants to familiarize himself with the essentials of a situation rather than with its details. It gives a vivid account of the atmosphere in which European labor functions." Frieda Wunderlich

+ Ann Am Acad 295:204 S '54 550w

"A valuable addition to the field of trade union development."

+ Current Hist 26:62 Ja '54 150w

Foreign Affairs 32:510 Ap '54 10w

"It is scholarly but not too technical for the general reader wanting information on the subject." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 79:458 Mr 1 '54 130w

SUAREZ CARRENO, JOSE. Final hours; tr. from the Spanish by Anthony Kerrigan. 273p
 $3.50 Knopf

52-12195

Tells the story of three people during one night in Madrid. The three are a beautiful girl, a prostitute; her lover, a middle-aged millionaire; and a young boy of the streets strangely attracted to the girl.

"The action is choppy, but the author keeps a firm grip on his people and on the reader. His novel has intensity, a flow of striking incident, and a sharply individual flavor." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:84 Mr '54 210w

"A strange perverted tale, with intimations of sexual aberrations and an aura of abnormality."

— Kirkus 21:716 N 1 '53 220w

"Though reminiscent of Sartre in the picture it gives of the utter futility of human existence, its style is sharp, its scenes photographic. Recommended for adult fiction collections." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:145 Ja 15 '54 100w

"Suárez Carreño depicts the roguery of the denizens of the lower depths with a verve and sympathy reminiscent of the picaresque writers of the Golden Age, and with a realism which serves to counterpoint the inventive fantasy of his central plot." Angel Flores

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk p6 F 7 '54 600w

"What remains in the memory is not the sordid, utterly pointless lives of these and other people, but the atmosphere of Madrid at night—the suppressed violence in the crowded taverns, the contrast of the rich and poor on the gran vias. . . . With this atmosphere 'The Final Hours' is saturated, but of Spain's political atmosphere, of its dictator, of war or revolution, of what any one of his characters in 'present-day Madrid' thinks of his country or the world in general, Señor Carreño says not a word." James Stern

+ N Y Times p26 F 7 '54 450w

"Mr. Carreño paints a rich and detailed picture of the city, but some of his observations are more memorable than any of his characters, and the total effect is of a lively unhappiness pursued for the sake of its liveliness."

New Yorker 29:101 Ja 23 '54 80w

SUAREZ CARRENO, JOSE—Continued

"Although the leading characters and some of the minor ones, too, are very odd and graphically portrayed, the author does not succeed in arousing much sympathy for them. They have too much self-pity, too little sense of direction, and, what is worse, too little ability to communicate either with each other or the reader to emerge as either interesting in themselves or symbolically effective. Still, I would not say that the novel is without interest." T. G. Bergin

+ — Sat R 37:16 Ja 23 '54 550w
Time 63:85 Ja 11 '54 380w

SUBERCASEAUX, BENJAMIN. Jemmy Button; tr. from the Spanish by Mary and Fred Del Villar. 382p $4 Macmillan (N Y)

Fitzroy, Robert—Fiction 54-8538

"A fictionalization of material from two of the Beagle's voyages centers its attention on Commander Robert Fitz-Roy's attempts to civilize Fuegian natives. From diaries and logs of the expeditions of 1830 and 1833, this tells of the enthusiasm and madness, the dedication and despair that motivated him, the capture of the four, Fuegia Basket, York Minister, Boat Memory and James (Jemmy) Button, and their introduction to English speech and ways, as they live aboard ship, make their way to Montevideo and arrive in England. There Boat dies, and others live in the country with the devoted Bennett and a vicar's family; Jemmy runs away, they meet the King and Queen, and York and Fuegia's natural passion drive Fitz-Roy again to play God. Darwin is a passenger on their return trip and a witness to the 'return of the native', and Jemmy accomplishes a final viciousness in his treatment of the missionary, Matthews, leaving Fitz-Roy with nothing proved, nothing gained." Kirkus

Booklist 50:298 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 4 '54 180w

+ Kirkus 22:41 Ja 15 '54 220w

"Based on Captain Fitz-Roy's Diary and Darwin's Voyage of the Beagle and told as a novelist might by a top-drawer South American geographical writer and poet, this is worth the reading. Some purists will object to the words put in the mouths of, and the psychological interpretations made of these famous men, but the author has made them live. Recommended for all libraries." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:552 Mr 15 '54 100w
Nation 178:338 Ap 17 '54 140w

"As a narrative, 'Jemmy Button' is absorbing; as a novel of ideas, it is provocative." Taliaferro Boatwright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 4 '54 490w

Reviewed by Burke Wilkinson
N Y Times p5 Ap 4 '54 300w

"Penetrating historical novel. It is an almost unforgettable book." T. C. Chubb

+ Sat R 37:17 Ap 11 '54 850w

SUCKLING, NORMAN. Paul Valéry and the civilized mind. 285p $4 Oxford

841 Valéry, Paul

"The author of this study accepts [Paul Valéry] as the perfected type of what he calls 'the civilized mind' and attempts to systematize his thought in a 275-page essay on the meaning of civilization. Valéry and his interpreter understand it. A first chapter on the Biological Irrelevance of Spiritual Values states the fundamental premise, and the rest of the study logically draws the conclusions." Nation

"It is unfortunate that Suckling did not undertake a commentary on the whole of Valéry. If he had, this would have been an important book. As it is, I am afraid that its interest is confined to those who are already convinced admirers of the great French poet. As an introduction to his work, or as a survey, I think the total effect of Paul Valéry and the Civilized Mind is to distort. But ■ ■ complement to a reading of Valéry's own work and other criticism, this book has an undeniable fascination, one which is inevitable given the subject of the study." Michael Harrington

+ — Commonweal 60:372 Jl 16 '54 650w

"A work which shows at times thought, scholarship and dialectical skill and a remarkable lack of understanding of poetry and poetic creation." Joseph Chiari

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Je 1 '54 180w

"Mr. Suckling, a lecturer in French at the University of Durham, writes with admirable force and clarity if also with something like well-bred fanaticism."

+ Nation 179:77 Jl 24 '54 280w

New Yorker 30:227 N 20 '54 180w

Sat 37:65 D 4 '54 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p512 Ag 13 '54 400w

SULLIVAN, FRANK. Sullivan bites news; perverse news items; il. by Sam Berman. unp $1.95 Little 817

54-5115

"Here are thirty-five 'perverse news items,' which appeared originally in 'The New Yorker.' Each is accompanied by one or more Sam Berman illustrations and tells, in capsule form, a news story with an ironic twist." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:376 Je 1 '54

"You'll get a lot of fun out of reading this little book." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 2 '54 200w

Kirkus 22:99 F 1 '54 110w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Ap 25 '54 30w

SULLIVAN, HARRY STACK. Psychiatric Interview; ed. by Helen Swick Perry and Mary Ladd Gawel; with an introd. by Otto Allen Will [prepared under the auspices of the William Alanson White psychiatric foundation, Committee on publication of Sullivan's writings]. 246p $4.50 Norton

616.89 Interviews. Psychology, Pathological 54-11198

"This is the second of the posthumous books of Harry Stack Sullivan prepared under the auspices of the William Alanson White Psychiatric Foundation, Sullivan's literary executor. This book is based on two lecture series which Sullivan gave, in 1944 and again in 1945, under the title of The Psychiatric Interview. . . While the lectures were directed primarily toward psychiatrists, Sullivan also meant them for all those who engage in dynamic interviewing." Editors' Pref

"Unlike articles which Sullivan himself prepared for publication, which by their complexity have exasperated and confused even specialists, this collection of lectures is wonderfully clear, simple, and often delightfully humorous. There is a splendid introduction by Dr. Otto Allen Will." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1401 Ag '54 160w

"The technique of interviewing and communicating goes far beyond the pure professional interest of the psychiatrist. Lawyers, judges, Congressional investigators, ministers, teachers, journalists and many others will profit from this study." J. A. M. Meerloo

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 8 '54 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 10 '54 50w

SULLY, ARTHUR HENRY. Chromium. (Metallurgy of the rarer metals) 272p il $5.50 Academic press

669.734 Chromium

54-1043

"A useful survey of the present state of the chemistry and technology of the metal chromium. The first chapter contains an outline of the history of the discovery of the metal and a summarized presentation of information on the known deposits, world production, etc. All other chapters, devoted to chemical or technical aspects, are considerably fuller in detail. They are based on the literature and are keyed to lengthy bibliographies. The book will be of interest primarily to metallurgists and metallurgical chemists. It is the first number of what promises to be a useful series in metallurgy, planned to cover such metals as zirconium, titanium, molybdenum and platinum." N Y New Tech Bks

"This first book in a series expected to cover chromium, zirconium, titanium, molybdenum, manganese, platinum and allied metals, and uranium sets a high standard for the series. A physicist, Dr. Sully combines a scholarly treatment with clear evidence of appreciation of the engineering and economic aspects." G. C. Williams

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:5578 N 5 '54 460w
Chem & Eng N 32:1267 Mr 29 '54 10w

"The index seems incomplete and will probably reduce the value of the volume as a reference. The illustrations are plentiful and good. When compared with the second volume of the series on zirconium, this volume appears noticeably poorer in its organization of material. It contains several misleading section headings." A. E. Newkirk

Chem Eng 61:357 N '54 550w
Library J 79:921 My 15 '54 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:37 My '54

SULTAN MUHAMMAD SHAH, SIR, agha khan. Memoirs; world enough and time [pref. by W. Somerset Maugham]. 367p il $6 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 54-8644

The life of Aga Khan has spanned the years from Queen Victoria's reign to that of Elizabeth II. He is known to Americans as the spiritual head of the Ismaili branch of the Shia Moslems; as the owner of race horses; for the ceremony in which he is weighed against his weight in gold or diamonds; and, briefly, as the father-in-law of Rita Hayworth. His autobiography is a chronological account of his life from his boyhood in Bombay to the present. Index.

"What could have been a fascinating story is at its best moderately interesting." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 194:98 N '54 350w

Booklist 51:107 N 1 '54

"Everyone has heard of the Aga Khan. . . But until he wrote his memoirs, most of us had little opportunity to have a balanced knowledge of this fabulous man. It is an opportunity not to be missed, for on further acquaintance the Aga Khan proves to be a serious statesman, an authentic religious leader, a magnanimous human being—and an entertaining companion thruout this long book." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 26 '54 400w

"It is not from such a book, by turns naïve, simple, trivial, deep, that the role of this gently cultured man, who said he never was bored, can be judged. He may not be the best of raconteurs. But as one man's story, this is as rich and ripe as a basket of black figs and golden mangoes." S. R. Davis

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '54 900w

"An important man's honest look at his own fabulous life, this sheds its light on world history too."

+ Kirkus 22:429 J1 1 '54 270w

"Should be in most large collections, and may be of interest to a wide range of readers who enjoy a lively autobiography." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 79:1397 Ag '54 160w

"The Aga Khan has written one of the most interesting books of the year. Its range fascinates." Guy Wint

+ Manchester Guardian p6 S 24 '54 600w

Reviewed by Bennett Epstein
Nation 179:311 O 9 '54 70w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson
New Statesman & Nation 48:364 S 25 '54 480w

"The legend of the Aga Khan is perhaps one of the world's greatest living legends. And for once the subject of a legend has lived to write his own story. At the age of seventy-seven, His Highness the Aga Khan has published his 'Memoirs,' which happily is a book that does not explode the legend, but helps in a quiet, factual way, and at times with simple but profound sincerity, to explain it." Jean Lyon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p3 S 26 '54 1100w

"An extremely literate and intelligent autobiography, telling his story with surprising grace and vigor. . . The Aga Khan is a little too keen to record the honors that have been heaped upon him, a little too certain that the Munich settlement was a wonderful solution to a difficult problem, and he will shock you with a comparison of Jinnah and Mussolini to their mutual advantage. But all his judgments on people are charitable. He has lived fabulously and written a fabulous account of himself." Robert Payne

+ N Y Times p1 S 26 '54 1500w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Yorker 30:163 O 23 '54 1550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 1 '54 500w

Reviewed by Cleveland Amory
Sat R 37:26 O 23 '54 950w

Reviewed by David Stone
Spec p376 S 24 '54 850w

"The sage who recently took tea with Queen Elizabeth must be very different from the young prince who dined with Queen Victoria, but these memoirs, more's the pity, offer no key to that astounding transformation. An account worthy of this great character remains to be written. It may seem captious to ask a man of his highness's eminence to revise the proofs of his book himself, but a great racing man should not write of Ray Ronald, nor the friend of Marcel Proust of the Duchesse de Guermont."

Times [London] Lit Sup p588 S 17 '54 950w

SULTZER, KENNETH D., ed. See Grolier encyclopedia

SUMMERS, JOSEPH HOLMES. George Herbert; his religion and art. 246p $4.25 Harvard univ. press

821 Herbert, George A54-3214

"The major assumption of this book is that George Herbert, the parson-poet of seventeenth-century England, is one of the best lyric poets who has written in the English language. I have not attempted the hopeless task of 'proving' such an assumption; rather, I have tried to assume an ideal reader of taste and availability to literary experience who will recognize a good poem once he is given the materials which enable him to understand it." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by Millar MacLure
Canadian Forum 34:142 S '54 240w

"Professor Summers's main concern is with Herbert's poetry. He documents in fascinating detail his account of Herbert's conception of form in art, explores with a fine discrimination the implications and significance of Herbert's language, investigates the 'hieroglyphic' use of imagery and pattern in the poems, shows how important Herbert's knowledge of music was in the structure and sometimes the vocabulary of his verse, and examines the relation between tradition and originality in Herbert by his study of his use of allegory and of his wholly original handling of the sonnet form." David Daiches

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 18 '54 300w

SUMMERS, J. H.—Continued

"It is impossible to appreciate his work fully without a knowledge of the symbolism and church tradition he made use of, and the background material supplied by Professor Summers enables the reader to grasp the general spirit of Herbert's poems as well as many fine touches of craft which are generally overlooked in his direct and fervent declarations of faith."

+ Nation 178:527 Je 19 '54 240w

"Those who enjoy the panoply of literary criticism, learned, subtle, plainly expressed, will find [the book] deeply rewarding. The author is an American and he makes a good many references to other American critics in the same field—a pleasant reminder of the present high tide of English criticism on the other side of the Atlantic." Andrew Wordsworth

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:762 Je 12 '54 550w

"This book will be of most value to those who already care enough for Herbert's poetry to welcome scholarly aids towards fuller appreciation. For those less familiar with the poems the emphasis on doctrine and ritual does injustice to the no less important human element. . . . As with other lyric poets, the reader's delight depends, in part, upon the communication of individual human experience."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p358 Je 1 '54 1050w

SUMMERS, ROBERT EDWARD, ed. Freedom and loyalty in our colleges. (Reference shelf) 214p $1.75 Wilson, H.W.

323.44 Loyalty. Communism—U.S. Teaching, Freedom of 54-7533

"This Reference Shelf volume has captured all the salient pro and con arguments bruited about academic freedom and communism in our schools. Many of the excerpts are from the Congressional Record, committee reports, newspaper editorials, the learned journals and popular magazines of both the far left and far right." Current Hist

Booklist 50:402 Je 15 '54

Current Hist 27:63 Jl '54 100w

SUMMERSON, JOHN NEWENHAM. Architecture in Britain, 1530 to 1830. (Pelican history of art ser) 372p il $8.50 Penguin

720.942 Architecture—England 54-2199

A history of British architecture beginning in 1530 and ending with 1830. There is an appended chapter on English architecture in America. Copiously illustrated with photographs and plans. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Rexford Newcomb
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 F 14 '54 70w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 79:861 My 1 '54 140w

"That the book would seem assured of wide distribution is an architectural event of real moment, for it gathers up for the edification of professionals and amateurs alike all that is essential in these three great centuries of our architectural history with a mastery and precision that it is a pleasure to salute." Clough Williams-Ellis

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 11 '53 600w

Reviewed by S. L. Faison
Nation 178:367 Ap 24 '54 160w

"This is a very good book indeed. It is written from a critical standpoint which inspires confidence and which the reader respects, even when, on particular points, he may disagree. . . . The quality of this book is very even and it is well balanced, and to single out parts for special mention is largely a matter of personal feeling. The treatment of the great buildings of the late sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries is, however, particularly distinguished and it is immensely refreshing to find these buildings treated seriously architecture after so many years of depreciation by the half-baked." Geoffrey Webb

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:263 F 27 '54 700w

"Polished and incisive volume. . . . There are fewer of those flights of critical interpretation that in the other books lift one above the pressure of factuality from time to time. On the other hand, the quality of Mr. Summerson's prose serves to ease that pressure in a steadier way and to make the reader feel at home in a field otherwise inhospitable to any but the professional and the connoisseur. If we are not stirred, we are informed and oriented—which is a lot." Clement Greenberg

+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 17 '54 110w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews

+ Sat R 37:63 F 20 '54 250w

"Nearly 200 pages of illustrations are superbly deployed in alliance with the text, and plans are distributed both profusely and pointedly. Bibliographies are provided to each chapter. There is no escaping the conclusion on a cliché; that this will long remain the standard work." Maurice Craig

+ Spec p21 Ja 1 '54 650w

"Mr. Summerson's outstanding quality as an architectural writer is that he can deploy masses of facts while producing a readable narrative. In this respect his first chapters especially are a model; examples, dates and sources are given in full without any appearance of a display of learning, and his picture of the emergence of English architecture from a condition of intuitive trial and stimulating error into the brilliant certitude of the work of the Italian-trained schoolmen is particularly vivid."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p86 F 1 '54 1100w

SUMMERSON, JOHN NEWENHAM. Sir Christopher Wren. (Brief lives ser) 160p il $1.75 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Wren, Sir Christopher 53-12511

A biography of Sir Christopher Wren which fits "the career of the designer of St. Paul's so carefully into the social and economic framework of the late seventeenth century that it is hard to tell where architectural history begins and history itself leaves off." (Sat R)

Reviewed by James Bone

Manchester Guardian p2 S 1 '53 230w

"Mr. Summerson's contributions to Wren scholarship are well-known and he has done an extraordinarily good job. It is only a 'brief life,' not an extended monograph, and yet the enlargements of knowledge accumulated in the Wren Society's volumes have been incorporated into it without strain." Reyner Banham

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:294 S 12 '53 330w

"Though this slender volume comes to us so soon after Ralph Dutton's charming study and Martin Brigg's conscientious reappraisal of the matter, it is nonetheless welcome. It is popular history, written so that anyone may understand the greatness of Wren's achievement. But it is also excellent history from any point of view." Wayne Andrews

+ Sat R 37:63 F 20 '54 250w

"Wren's career responds to Mr. Summerson's lively and authoritative, if necessarily restricted, treatment. He had faults—to the nineteenth century, St. Paul's was a 'mere imposing show'—which Mr. Summerson assesses carefully; but the achievement of Wren remains: incomparable?" M. J.

+ Spec p494 O 30 '53 250w

"Far more important than the inclination to add a halo to the image of this great and admirable Englishman—though derived from it—has been a tendency to accept his pre-eminence uncritically. It was, therefore, a healthy jolt that Mr. Summerson gave to conventional opinion in 1936, when he wrote a brilliant Prize Essay for the R.I.B.A., entitled The Tyranny of Intellect. In this he discovered that Wren's work throughout was flawed with a fundamental weakness, resulting from 'that tyranny of intellect which the seventeenth century established.' . . The dominant note, now, is one of profound admiration for his subject. Well, it is the mark of an open mind to reconsider its judgments."

Times [London] Lit Sup p52 Ja 22 '54
1100w

SUNDBORG, GEORGE. Hail Columbia; the thirty-year struggle for Grand Coulee dam. 467p $5.75 Macmillan (N Y)

627.8 O'Sullivan, James. Grand Coulee dam 54-10173

A popular account of the Grand Coulee dam on the Columbia River in central Washington (state). The story centers in the political struggles over the dam and particularly the part played by James O'Sullivan who had moved into the country in 1909 and had fought for it thru the years.

Reviewed by M. L. Cooke

Ann Am Acad 296:180 N '54 400w

Booklist 50:374 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 14:7 O '54 20w

Reviewed by S. H. Holbrook

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 J1 ■ '54
330w

"'Hail Columbia' should make not only American readers but all who find inspiration in remarkable human achievements blink in pleased amazement and lift their heads with pride." Max Gilstrap

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 15 '54
750w

"A better story might have been told had the bright personality of the fighting O'Sullivan been amplified with a more intimate appraisal of his drives and dreams."

Kirkus 22:144 F 15 '54 110w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 79:1056 Je 1 '54 110w

"A fascinating and fast-moving book." R. L. Neuberger

+ Nation 179:16 J1 3 '54 1000w

Reviewed by K. W. Hamilton

New Repub 131:21 Ag 30 '54 1100w

"His is a fascinating, heart-breaking, inspiring story. But Mr. Sundborg tells it in such detail that perhaps his book might interest only those who are already interested in the history of electric power—except for one thing. Except for this: that it is also the story of a thirty-years' battle with the enemies of public power and in particular with the utilities of the Northwest." Bernard De Voto

+ — N Y Herald Tribune ■ R p12 Je 27 '54 800w

SURVEY of international affairs, 1941-1946 [v3] America, Britain and Russia; their co-operation and conflict, by William Hardy McNeill, with an introd. by Arnold Toynbee [issued under the auspices of the Royal Institute of international affairs]. 819p $15 Oxford

940.532 World war, 1939-1945—Diplomatic history (52-2741)

"[A survey] of the crucially important co-operation of the United States, Great Britain, and Soviet Russia against the Axis Powers from December, 1941, to February, 1945, and of the tragic, though seemingly inevitable, breakdown of that co-operation from February, 1945, to December, 1946. The author writes on the military, political, and economic bases of Allied co-operation, and shows great skill in presenting the plans and factors that determined the course of events. He relies exclusively upon published source-materials and the main secondary accounts available in English, French, and Italian." Am Hist R

"An excellent survey. . . Historians will find especially useful his lucid presentation of the complex questions affecting the conduct of the war and the postwar peace settlements. . . Some criticisms and warnings deserve to be set down. The author strives to be impartial but reveals certain debatable presuppositions." Sidney Ratner

+ — Am Hist R 59:900 J1 '54 750w

"In this magnum opus Mr. McNeill has produced a thorough compendium of World War II, and therein lies its real value. As a contemporary history, however, the work is not without serious blemishes: it is seriously marred by the author's personal views." A. O. Sarkissian

+ — Ann Am Acad 296:168 N '54 650w

"This admirable work, which forms part of the Chatham House survey series for the war years, shows the advantage of giving to a single writer a single intelligible theme as opposed to breaking up a continuous story by the artificial divisions of the calendar and then assigning fragments to separate hands. It also justifies, at least in part, what might seem to be a curious decision to have a work sponsored by a Royal Institute on a subject deeply involving this country entrusted to an American historian." Max Beloff

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 20 '54
350w

"Professor McNeill has not written the definitive story of these years. That was not his aim. Nor was it possible at the time he did his work. But this reviewer wishes McNeill would take the time to write an interpretative summary of his book so that those who can spend $3 but not $15 could benefit from his insights and research. Such a book would not save the world, but it would make it more comprehensible." W. A. Williams

Nation 179:408 N 6 '54 950w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 46:800 D 19 '53 1050w

"Mr. McNeill has produced a valuable and distinguished contribution to the history of the Second World War. It is devoutly to be hoped that his informed but forthright treatment of Anglo-American relations will contribute to the further strengthening of the unwritten alliance among the English-speaking nations which both preceded and survived the Grand Alliance itself." S. E. Gleason

+ Pol Sci Q 69:625 D '54 1050w

"Even those familiar with the printed sources for the period on which Professor McNeill has had perforce to rely will find in his cool and lucid setting out of the problems of interallied co-operation at their various stages much food for reflection, while for reference purposes the book will be invaluable." M. B.

+ Spec p218 F 19 '54 140w

"Owing to the attitude of the British authorities, no access to British documents has been given; and this volume has therefore had to be written entirely on the basis of well known published sources. Within the limits set, the work is not badly done. But it is not done well enough to justify this large-scale re-hash of familiar and easily accessible material; and one reaches the conclusion that the volume has really no raison d'être except to fill a gap in a series."

Times [London] Lit Sup p68 Ja 29 '54
200w

SURVEY of international affairs, 1939-1946 [v4] Hitler's Europe; ed. by Arnold Toynbee and Veronica M. Toynbee [issued under the auspices of the Royal Institute of international affairs]. 730p $14.50 Oxford

940.532 World war, 1939-1945—Diplomatic history (52-2741)

"A survey of international affairs from 1939-1946, issued under the auspices of the Royal Institute of International Affairs. It is divided into six parts: The Political Structure of Hitler's Europe; The Economic Structure of Hitler's Europe; Italy; France; The Occupied Countries in Western Europe, and The Occupied and Satellite Countries in Eastern Europe. The contributors include Clifton J. Child, Patricia Harvey, W. Klatt, Viscount Chilston and Sidney Lowery." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 22 '54
500w

Foreign Affairs 33:155 O '54 30w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Nation 179:233 S 18 '54 140w

SURVEY of international affairs—Continued

"The latest volume in the Chatham House survey of the war years is an improvement on its predecessors. Professor Toynbee's ruminations are limited to an introductory ten pages."

A. J. P. Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 48:47 J1 10 '54 300w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 22 '54 40w

"Thoroughly documented and impartially written, this volume, it seems clear, will remain one of the principal reference works covering this period." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 10 '54 400w

Reviewed by Max Beloff

Spec p180 Ag 6 '54 290w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 90w

"Marshalling the talents of eleven British scholars under the Toynbees' editorial aegis, the Institute has given us, in 700 pages, a remarkably comprehensive panorama of Festung Europa. To be sure, the sort of mass attack on the riddle of history has its drawbacks, and the end product is considerably lacking in continuity and distinctive character. Often the reader finds himself engulfed in what seem to be gigantic encyclopedia articles, rather than enthralled by stories of the past. Few will have time or inclination to read from cover to cover. Rather, this is a skilfully compiled and generally accurate chronicle which will be valued chiefly as a reference work." Telford Taylor

+ Yale R n s 44:284 winter '55 550w

SURVEY OF MEDICAL EDUCATION. Medical schools in the United States. See Deitrick, J. E., and Berson, R. C.

SUTCLIFF, ROSEMARY. Eagle of the Ninth; il. by C. Walter Hodges. 255p $2.75 Oxford 54-12901

A young Roman centurion, invalided out of service in Britain, is the hero. His father's Ninth Legion, with the eagle standard, symbol of honor, had disappeared somewhere in the wilds of what is modern Scotland, and the youth was determined to trace both the standard and his father. In this story for ages eleven to fifteen is the account of his search.

"Maturely conceived, grounded in scholarship."

+ Kirkus 22:711 O 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by Mary Crozier

Manchester Guardian p11 O 8 '54 90w

"One of the most interesting writers of children's historical novels today is Rosemary Sutcliff; her new book, The Eagle of the Ninth, seems to me a work of real distinction." Naomi Lewis

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:404 O 2 '54 100w

"This noteworthy book, imaginatively conceived and superbly written, recreates the times with rare vividness." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:214 N 27 '54 60w

Reviewed by Carol Stewart

Spec p654 N 19 '54 90w

"It was perhaps a pity to let the supernatural element intrude as it does twice, the hero's prayers on one occasion thinning the mist and on another restoring a failing light. A minor point is that the map does not agree with the author about the spelling of 'Eboracum.' Nevertheless the book generally is a considerable work and very readable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup pvi N 19 '54 550w

SUTCLIFF, ROSEMARY. Simon; il. by Richard Kennedy. 257p $2.75 Oxford

A story of the Civil war in England from 1642 to 1660, and the friendship of two boys who grew to manhood taking part in the activities. For high school age and older.

"A well-written and thrilling tale. . . All the characters are well drawn." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:252 Ag '54 100w

Kirkus 22:119 F 15 '54 120w

"Good characterization and accurate historical facts, but the many descriptions of battles and English expressions have a tendency to lessen the interest. Will be useful in high school and public libraries. Boys especially interested in wars and history will enjoy it, but not slow readers. Format fair with illustrations by Richard Kennedy having almost the effect of etchings. Recommended." Elizabeth Malone

+ Library J 79:566 Mr 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Mary Cozier

Manchester Guardian p5 O 9 '53 80w

"The setting, always vivid with this writer, is most memorable here, for this is country she knows well. There is romance, for the older girls who like 'costume' stories, but chiefly it is for those boys who love old battles with youth as hero whether or not the war is one they have met already in history. The English reviews have given it high praise."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 16 '54 250w

"Rosemary Sutcliff's earlier stories, for all their charm of writing, have been marred by excessive sweetness. Too many of the characters are too often unbearably nice. . . In Simon, however, she comes to sudden and unexpected maturity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p12 N 27 '53 200w

SUTNAR, LADISLAV. Package design; the force of visual selling. [123p] il $9.75 Arts 659.12 Packaging

"A book of photographs with text reduced to brief running commentary, this volume examines the selling qualities in the mass market of various types of package designs for food, household items, perfume, and cosmetics. Emphasis is upon the development of a philosophy of package design in which simplicity, clarity, and visual definition are combined in a 'visual selling unit.'" Management R

"Will appeal to the advertising world, and art and design personnel and students." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 79:211 F 1 '54 130w

Management ■ 43:70 Ja '54 50w

SUTTON, FELIX. Big treasure book of clowns; pictures by James Schucker. [24p] $1 Grosset 791.3 Clowns—Juvenile literature 53-3527

"The different types of clowns, their makeup, favorite acts, and clown animals are described in exciting full-color pictures and brief text in this large flat book. Included also are the history of clowns and clowning and biographical sketches of two famous clowns, Felix Adler and Emmett Kelly. Good for both individual enjoyment and display purposes. Age 4 and up." Booklist

Booklist 50:152 D 1 '53

Chicago Sunday Tribune p30 N 15 '53 100w

Kirkus 21:424 J1 15 '53 40w

"This is a find for any age, even up to fourteen, who love these special heroes of the circus." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 31 '54 20w

SUTTON, HORACE. Sutton's places. 270p $3.50 Holt

910.4 Voyages and travels 54-7725

A collection of the author's travel sketches, most of which originally appeared in the Saturday Review. Places visited and informally described take in "most of Europe, and some of North Africa, much of the Caribbean, and out into the Pacific as far as the Orient."

Booklist 50:378 Je 1 '54

"Skillfully blending wit and description with helpful information about foreign countries and our own."

+ Bookmark 13:216 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by Mason Warner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 27 '54 160w

Kirkus 22:177 Mr 1 '54 90w

"This is definitely not a guide book, but it is a vastly entertaining footnote to the standard tour. Mr. Sutton is discerning, unfailingly witty—and surprisingly informative, too, in a strictly off-beat fashion. Whether he is drinking Pernod in a Paris zinc, sampling boullabaisse on the Cannèbiere, or sipping mint tea with an Arab friend in North Africa, he makes you feel that you've been along." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p32 My 9 '54 100w

"His sophisticated impressions and witticisms may conceal the fact that you are also being provided with a good deal of handy information such as the price of a hotel room or the best place to buy handmade pottery. And if you don't know how to get out of town and leave your relatives behind, Mr. Sutton will tell you. From my own point of view, though, I can't see why Mr. Sutton should be paid to enjoy himself." William Murray

+ Sat R 37:38 Jl 3 '54 180w

SWABEY, MRS MARIE TAYLOR (COLLINS). Judgment of history. 257p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

901 History—Philosophy

54-11097

"A consideration of the various approaches to history, with a strong plea for what the author calls 'philosophic' history. Deploing the tendencies toward determinism and relativism found in 'scientific' history, she also finds wanting the older common-sense attitude, and urges a view which recognizes the importance of man's ideas and value-judgments and the validity of moral absolutes. A number of prominent historians are discussed, including Beard, Toynbee and Parkman. Neither Acton nor Collingwood is mentioned, but there are points of similarity with the ideas of both." (Library J) Index.

"Difficult for the general reader, and probably limited in interest to historians and advanced students. Many of the former will disagree in whole or in part." Dorothy Sinclair

Library J 79:981 My 15 '54 140w

"This is a serious, clear, and straightforward essay on how modern perplexities invade the mind (if there be such an entity) of the historian, and on how the historian's exhibition of human affairs affects men's actions (if men have freedom to act.) The conclusions reached are, perhaps, not so very far in spirit from those which led so many penetrating and sensitive natures in the 'dark ages' to the contemplative life." Cecil Sprigge

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 24 '54 600w

"This is neither an easy nor a well written book, but it is full of valuable comment on a subject of vast importance. History is, or at least should be, one on the main weapons in the struggle which dominates the world scene today, the struggle for the conquest of power by mind. To this, Dr. Swabey's book... is a contribution."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p723 N 12 '54 1350w

SWALLOW, ALAN. The beginning writer. 68p $2; pa $1.25 Johnson pub. co, 839 Pearl st, Boulder, Colo.

808.06 [029.6] Authorship

54-7926

"Counsel for the beginning writer of fiction and nonfiction, in the form of questions and answers drawn from a column the author once conducted in Author & Journalist. The book is arranged in the order in which questions were submitted, but the lack of subject arrangement is compensated for by a detailed index. Includes advice on creative ideas, literary techniques, preparation and marketing of the manuscript, agents, reprints, serial rights, copyright, and professional affiliations." Booklist

Booklist 50:294 Ap 1 '54

"Beginning writers should welcome this slim but information packed volume." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 My 23 '54 60w

SWAN'S Anglo-American dictionary; ed. by George Ryley Scott. 1514p $10 Lib. pubs.

423 English language—Dictionaries 52-12036

"Swan's Anglo-American Dictionary, according to information furnished by Library Publishers, Inc., is a new work published jointly by Gerald Swan, Ltd., London, England, and Library Publishers, New York, and is printed and bound in England. It is described on the dust cover as defining 'adequately all the words anyone is likely to require,' and as containing 'more than 133,000 colloquial, literary and slang terms as used in every country where English is spoken.' The Introduction states, 'Considerable care has been expended to make Swan's Anglo-American Dictionary distinctive and unique, adhering to basic concepts of conciseness and simplicity, yet ensuring that comprehensiveness is one of the most characteristic features of the Dictionary.'" Subscription Bk Bul

"Swan's Anglo-American Dictionary is strong in slang, colloquialisms, vulgarisms, and dialectal words. The many derivatives appearing as entries with definitions will be helpful to some users. The entries in capital letters, and the lack of pronunciation and etymologies are serious defects in a general, all-purpose dictionary. As a unique one-volume compilation featuring the differences in British and American usage it is recommended for libraries and individuals not having The Shorter Oxford Dictionary on Historical Principles (Oxford), Partridge, A Dictionary of Slang and Unconventional English (Macmillan), and Berrey, The American Thesaurus of Slang (Crowell)."

Subscription Bks Bul 25:9 Ja '54 1200w

SWARTOUT, JACK MAX (RALPH E. BARKER, JOHN D. BERNARD, pseud.). Lawns; il. by Rebecca and Douglas Merrilees. (Rinehart's garden lib) 94p $1.50 Rinehart

635.964 Lawns

54-5330

Advice on planting and maintaining good lawns. Partial contents: First, some science (about your soil); Preparing your soil; When to plant; Now that you've got a good lawn, keep it that way; And the bugs came; Weeds aren't so tough; If your lawn gets sick.

Booklist 50:281 Mr 15 '54

Kirkus 21:781 D 1 '53 60w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 79:207 F 1 '54 30w

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 15 '54 20w

SWARTOUT, JACK MAX (RALPH E. BARKER, JOHN D. BERNARD, pseud.). Small fruits; il. by Rebecca and Douglas Merrilees. (Rinehart's garden lib) 90p $1.50 Rinehart

634.7 Berries. Fruit culture

54-5331

Explicit directions for the selection, planting, and care of such small fruits as strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, black currants, and grapes.

Booklist 50:281 Mr 15 '54

"Has some sound, down to earth advice, and a heartening note as to the values and low costs of small fruit."

+ Kirkus 21:781 D 1 '53 20w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:207 F 1 '54 30w

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 15 '54 20w

SWARTOUT, JACK MAX (RALPH E. BARKER, JOHN D. BERNARD, pseudos). Vegetables; il. by Rebecca and Douglas Merrilees. (Rinehart's garden lib) 92p $1.50 Rinehart

635 Vegetable gardening 54-5332

Partial contents: Why you should grow vegetables; What to plant; Tools, equipment, and supplies; How to keep your soil productive; How to sow seed; How to control bugs and diseases; How to grow specific crops.

Booklist 50:281 Mr 15 '54

Kirkus 21:781 D 1 '53 20w

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 15 '54 20w

SWARTZ, HARRY FELIX. Allergic child. 297p $3.95 Coward-McCann

618.9 Allergia. Children—Diseases 53-8891

An allergy specialist has written this study for the general reader. It is estimated that five million children in the United States suffer from some form of allergy, and up to twenty million may have allergy manifestations some time in their lives. Partial contents: What is allergy? How does allergy begin in the child? Emotion and allergy; Behavior problems and allergy; Nutrition and allergy; The over-all treatment of the allergic child. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 50:292 Ap 1 '54

Kirkus 21:777 D 1 '53 160w

"The whole book is useful and solidly informative, and those who have an allergic child can profit greatly by reading it." J. H. Jackson + San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 25 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 90w

SWEET-ESCOTT, BICKHAM. Greece; a political and economic survey, 1939-1953. 206p maps $4 Royal inst. of int. affairs

949.507 Greece, Modern—Economic conditions. Greece, Modern—Politics and government A54-3352

The purpose of this book is to meet "the need for a comprehensive account of the country, its people, and its complex history and politics; and it pays special attention to the economic and financial problems which have given rise to Greece's dependence on foreign aid. There are full accounts of British and American efforts to put the economy on a workable basis, and of production, labour conditions, finance, and commerce. . . . The author has also given an account of the part played by Greece in the Second World War, together with the origin and growth of the resistance movements. The author, a banker by profession, served from 1939 to 1945 with Special Operations Executive (resistance movements), operating in the Balkans and elsewhere." (Publisher's note)

"This book provides a useful survey of the economic development since World War II, but the political section needs to be balanced by other sources." L. S. Stavrianos

+ — Am Hist R 60:187 O '54 380w

"Mr. Sweet-Escott has written a very good book and has made a substantial contribution to the knowledge of Greece today that is available to us in the West." H. F. Alderfer

+ Ann Am Acad 295:202 S '54 400w

Foreign Affairs 32:680 J1 '54 30w

"The story of these years is not only unhappy but at times confused and almost always bitterly controversial. The first thing to be said about Mr. Sweet-Escott's writing, therefore, is that it is eminently clear and fair."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p179 Mr 19 '54 600w

SWEETZY, PAUL MARLOR. Present as history. 376p $5 Monthly review press, 66 Barrow st, N.Y. 14

335.04 Capitalism. Socialism 53-12728

"Essays and book reviews on capitalism and socialism, written by a Marxist economist during the last 15 years." Booklist

"A collection of magazine articles and book reviews written during the last fifteen years—articles of quite unequal length, depth, and worth—would not normally be very exciting were it not for the author's personality and point of view. The author is a competent economist, and his point of view is such as to make the book something of a collector's item—academic Marxism. The title is misleading, since the book has nothing to do with historiography; it only conveys the author's conviction that 'Marxism is the only genuine and comprehensive science of history and society.'" Frank Munk

Am Econ R 44:958 D '54 750w

"A Marxist voice that cries out today in the United States is veritably a voice crying in the wilderness. Even when that voice is a persuasive and intelligent one, it has a strange sound and almost no echo. Its very isolation makes it awesome; while its condescending tone, derived, I suspect, from a conviction that it speaks from absolute truths, renders it mildly offensive. Few scholars I know would bring together the book reviews which they have written in the last twenty-five years and publish them in book form along with random articles. It is almost a professional rule not to serve up warmed over dishes, and by and large infractions of it are unfortunate. For my part, this present effort is no exception." S. B. Clough

Am Hist R 59:971 J1 '54 180w

Am Pol Sci R 48:601 Je '54 60w

"The Present as History contains some solid analysis and some very controversial ideas. It is a challenging book." A. K. Davis + — Am Soc R 19:632 O '54 550w

"The collection may interest the student who wants to know what stand the Marxists take on current problems. The writer, who seems to be strait-jacketed by his Marxist doctrines, tends to over-simplify complex issues. Conservative communities may object."

Booklist 50:196 Ja 15 '54

"The volume is remarkably coherent. It demonstrates Dr. Sweezy's quality as a professional scholar in classical, neoclassical, Keynesian, and Marxian economic theory. In his essays on Hayek, Luxemburg, Sternberg, Veblen, Keynes, Schumpeter, Pigou, and Hansen a lay reader can easily distinguish what the economist said and what his critic is saying. This is a virtue of high order in economic literature."

+ Nation 178:136 F 13 '54 300w

SWIGGETT, HOWARD. Power and the prize. 326p $3.50 Ballantine

54-6476

A novel about American big business and the men who run it. The scene is New York and London.

"Swiggett makes Big Business as exciting as a neck-and-neck Derby finish; he has a wonderful feel for London; his Barwick is excellently realized and his story moves swiftly and surely. On the debit side I would report that I found some of the love scenes somewhat stilted; I thought Rachel's stubborn suspicions of her engaging American were pushed beyond even exasperation. But these are minor reservations with what, otherwise, is a finely conceived and executed novel." V. P. Hass

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 16 '54 400w

Kirkus 22:166 Mr 1 '54 160w

"A dull, pedestrian novel." P. H. Wasserman

— Library J 79:983 My 15 '54 130w

"Mr. Swiggett handles his story on three fronts with sustained interest. . . 'The Power and the Prize' [is] an unusually entertaining—and informative novel. Mr. Swiggett rarely goes much below the surface, of course, but his cheerfully extrovert, faintly amused account of life as it goes on in the world of big business is tops of its kind." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 16 '54 450w

"Readers addicted to the ultra-melodramatic type of romance will find 'The Power and the Prize' interesting in its sweep as a narrative and picturesque in its characterizations. A deeper reality is absent. The author, as represented here, is to the modern novel what Elbert Hubbard was to the essay a generation ago. Still, it should be kept in mind that Hubbard had a world of followers in his heyday." Henry Cavendish

+ — N Y Times p26 My 16 '54 550w
New Yorker 30:118 Je 12 '54 120w

Reviewed by W. J. Eisenlord
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 3 '54 650w

"Whether or not the reader believes that tycoons are small boys at heart or that a tourist's infatuation can set up this kind of business chain reaction, he will respect Mr. Swiggett's handling of the idea. 'The Power and the Prize' deserves the attention it will get." James Kelly

+ — Sat R 37:13 My 15 '54 650w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 230w

Time 63:76 My 31 '54 200w

SWING, RAYMOND, ed. This I believe, v2.
See Murrow, E. R.

SWINNERTON, FRANK ARTHUR. Month in Gordon square. 313p $3.95 Doubleday

54-5370

A character study of an English girl, Flora Vandal, aged twenty, who had assumed a prickly exterior to protect herself from fancied hurts. The month she spent in her uncle's home in Gordon Square showed her how wrong she had been in building her defenses.

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 179:154 My '54 250w

"If, for some American readers, 'A Month in Gordon Square' may seem too slow paced, Victorian British, for Frank Swinnerton's devotees it offers one of their pet authors at his characteristic, slyly satirical story telling best." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 21 '54 480w

"It is a perceptive study of youth awakening from intense egotism, and the telling has much of Swinnerton's subtle charm. Slighter in substance and development than most of his novels, this none the less conveys a vivid picture of one segment of London drawing room survival, as a gentleman of the old school somehow manages to dominate the people about him, from the hangers-on to the youthful critics who ultimately succumb. Special."

+ Kirkus 22:11 Ja 1 '54 120w

"This is a sound professional job." Norman Shrapnel

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 6 '53 120w

"The story of Flora and her metamorphosis is benignly conceived, and delicately, artfully told in typical Swinnerton fashion. Written with dignity and elegance, it has a faint aroma of lavender and old lace, which, oddly enough, seem, not at all out of order in the tender narrative of a modern English girl's emotional coming-of-age." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 21 '54 410w

"Mr. Swinnerton shows himself, as always, an excellent casting director. His types are wisely and relevantly chosen. . . Flora finally faces the truth without her dark-colored spectacles, through a series of melodramatic devices which often seem unworthy of her genuine search for reality. The dénouement reminds us of those adroit thrillers where the true criminal is discovered to be the supposed victim. Only the universal appeal of Flora's bewilderment saves the novel from sinking to theatrical entertainment at the end." Isabelle Mallet

+ — N Y Times p4 F 21 '54 360w

"Mr. Swinnerton does not confine himself to an examination of Flora's difficulties. He juggles many hearts, both young and old, in this story, and succeeds, with his customary skill, in bringing each of them to some kind of rest, but his manner of telling about it all is a little marred by a faint but inescapable air of archness."

+ — New Yorker 30:114 F 20 '54 140w

"Neither a very profound nor significant writer, Mr. Swinnerton doesn't seem to give a hang for the stodgy literary effects. He is out for fun and some harmless target practice, and any reader should enjoy his company." D. R. McD.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 18 '54 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p721 N 13 '53 110w

SWISS, FOUNDATION FOR ALPINE RESEARCH. Everest: the Swiss expeditions in photographs [introd. by Othmar Gurtner]. [144p] $7.50 Dutton

954.2 [915.42] Everest, Mount. Mount Everest Swiss expedition, 1952

"Othmar Gurtner introduces this volume with a recapitulation of the story of Everest from the first attempts on the mountain through the Swiss expeditions in the spring and autumn of 1952, to the ascent of 1953. Following the introduction are 144 pages of photographs in monochrome gravure picturing the Swiss expeditions." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Bookmark 14:57 D '54 40w

"A remarkable collection of photographs."

+ Kirkus 22:748 N 1 '54 110w

Reviewed by Patrick Monkhouse
Manchester Guardian p8 N 26 '54 60w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 D 5 '54 30w

"A beautiful album of full-page photographs in color and black and white. . . Mountain photography, particularly of high altitudes is not easy. The Swiss album recalls the best work of Vittoria Sella and the reproduction, done in Switzerland, is better than any ever given to Sella's work." Raymond Holden

+ N Y Times p44 D 5 '54 50w

+ Time 64:133 D 6 '54 20w

SYLVESTER, ROBERT. Big boodle. 247p $2.75 Random house

54-5964

Detective story.

"At times engaging, at times superfluously vulgar." Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 1 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:322 My 15 '54 50w

"Mr. Sylvester seems to know something about Cuba, but nothing that he says here is likely to ingratiate him with Cubans. Noxious." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 18 '54 90w

"Offers a dazzling yet believable new method of making counterfeit money, a credible private detective, an agreeable half-humorous style and much background detail on the history and atmosphere of Cuba—in all, just about enough to atone for a coincidental and episodic story and an irritating number of howlers in Spanish." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p11 Jl 11 '54 50w

SYLVESTER, ROBERT—Continued

"General hardboiled attitude prevails, but there are few clichés and plentiful excitement."
L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 22 '54
50w

"Characterization spotty (some good); pace lively; local color neat. . . Plus mark."
+ — Sat R 37:41 Jl 24 '54 20w

SYME, RONALD. John Smith of Virginia; il. by William Stobbs. 192p $2.50 Morrow
B or 92 Smith, John—Juvenile literature
54-5521

"A compact, comprehensive account of Smith's adventures as soldier, navigator, and colonizer. With particular emphasis on incident and action, the author, nevertheless, clearly reveals his character and portrays well the conditions and atmosphere of the Jamestown Colony. Direct style makes for easy reading." Library J

Booklist 50:327 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by Millicent Taylor

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 120w

"It makes good reading for those who like quick blood-and-thunder action. At the same time it gives a real impression of the early colony at Jamestown. William Stobbs' drawings as usual add strength to the historical picture." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:257 Ag '54 70w

Kirkus 22:63 F 1 '54 120w

"Less fictionized than the biographies by Ruth Holberg and Margaret Leighton, and more space is given to Colonial Virginia. Recommended for grades 5-8." Virginia Haviland
+ Library J 79:563 Mr 15 '53 90w

"Mr. Syme writes well for twelve-year-olds; the short sentences that bore adults will appeal to them, also the lack of sentimentality or condescension. As in his former biographies, the stunning drawings of Mr. Stobbs emphasize the thrills of action and also make the characters very much alive."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 My 16 '54 200w

"Smith's remarkable character and personality are effectively portrayed through Mr. Syme's choice of incidents and by William Stobbs' vigorous illustrations. Quotations from Smith's own writings add realism to this readable biography." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 4 '54 170w

Times [London] Lit Sup piv My 28 '54 20w

SZENES, ANDRE (ANDRE DUGO, pseud).
Tom's magic TV [story and pictures]. [29p]
$2 Holt

53-8964

Tommy O'Hara, watching the TV set, is told to go out and play but before he goes, Tom falls asleep and has some funny and terrifying adventures before he awakens and decides the garden is a good place to be.

Kirkus 21:629 ■ 15 '53 80w

"Author-artist's spirited illustrations will appeal to boys and girls from 4-8. Recommended." V. A. Russell

+ Library J 78:1853 O 15 '53 70w

"The pictures and story will prove amusing and possibly exciting to children under eight. What it proves about TV we have no idea. Anyway at the end Tom and Joan were glad to go play in the garden in the sun." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 31 '54 70w

"If André Dugo had written 'Tom's Magic TV' for adults, to illustrate how some of the current television programs build up nightmares among the small fry, his book would be worth the asking price. As a juvenile, however, it deserves little of the praise that Mr. Dugo's past efforts have justly received." Pat Clark

N Y Times p40 N 8 '53 200w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 29 '53 10w

T

TAILLIEZ, PHILIPPE. To hidden depths; photographs in color and monochrome; maps and diagrams. 188p $5 Dutton

797.2 Diving, Submarine. Marine biology
54-10157

"Captain Tailliez completed, with Captain Cousteau and M. Dumas, the three French musketeers who pioneered the aqualung. His book inevitably resumes much that the other two have written of their initial adventures, but it surveys the scene from a highly individual angle. . . But for the most part we follow the author's fortunes as head of the Undersea Research Unit of the French Navy, in perfecting techniques for locating and salvaging wrecks in shallow seas. We meet the fantasies of the treasure hunters and the new opportunity of the archaeologist. We are plunged briefly back a decade into the France of her scuttled fleet and the problems of clearing her coastal waters of explosives, and forward again into the maritime fringe of her war in Indo-China." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 51:101 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:33 N '54 30w

"The beauty, the danger, the fascination comes out in every page. One would feel that this should follow reading of earlier books on the subject, for there is assumption that terminology and procedure and current inventions relating to this 'silent world' are familiar to the reader."

Kirkus 22:556 Ag 15 '54 260w

"This book lacks a certain definiteness of style and continuity which will probably limit its appeal to those who are eager to read anything about undersea diving." E. M. Cole

Library J 79:1587 S 15 '54 110w

"During the war [the author] worked with Cousteau making his first brilliant underwater films, and was appointed to command the Groupe d'Études et de Recherches Sous-Marines of Toulon. The work and adventures of these pioneers has already been described in The Silent World, so that Tailliez's excellent, if rather episodic, story is often largely a repetition of the earlier book." Richard Garnett

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:707 My 29 '54 550w

"Readers of Capt. J. Y. Cousteau's recent best-seller 'The Silent World' will find here familiar names and faces and will read again many of the same tales of deep-sea adventure. . . In spite of the repetition of events, these twice-told tales are related in interesting fashion, and they run the full gamut of items beloved by readers of deep-sea stories." Gilbert Klingel

+ N Y Times p32 O 24 '54 450w

New Yorker 30:185 O 9 '54 200w

Reviewed by Eugenie Clark

Sat R 37:16 N 27 '54 650w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 120w

"This writing (and the unnamed translator must be praised for it) is elegant, often witty and terse. The author does not linger over his marvels and the still imperfectly known hazards that protect them."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p444 Jl 9 '54 750w

TALBERT, ANSEL EDWARD MCLAURINE. Famous airports of the world; il. by Clayton Knight. (Gateway bks) 96p $1.75 Random house

387.73 [629.136] Airports 53-6273

Contents: Idlewild and Pittsburgh—the airport cities; Thule—a polar airport; Muroc—

United States air speedway; Wake—Pacific steppingstone; London—home of the jets; Europe's reborn air centers—Schiphol and Tempelhof; Airports in far-away places; New York City heliport.

Booklist 50:245 F 15 '54

Reviewed by N. S. Zipf
Library J 78:1942 N 1 '53 50w
N Y Times p28 F 7 '54 50w

TALBOT, CHARLES HUGH, ed. and tr. Anglo-Saxon missionaries in Germany; being the lives of SS Willibrord, Boniface, Sturm, Leoba and Lebuin, together with the Hodoeporicon of St Willibald and a selection from the correspondence of St Boniface. (Makers of Christendom) 234p $3.50 Sheed

922 Christian biography. Germany—Church history 54-11139

"The texts gathered together in the present volume provide a cross-section of the religious life of the eighth century." (General Intro) Contents: The life of St. Willibrord, by Alcuin; The life of St. Boniface, by Willibald; The correspondence of St. Boniface; The Hodoeporicon of St. Willibald, by Huneberg of Heidenheim; The life of St. Sturm, by Eigil, Abbot of Fulda; The life of St. Leoba, by Rudolf, Monk of Fulda; The life of St. Lebuin, by an anonymous writer. Bibliography.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 71:1492 D 8 '54 600w

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzsimons
Commonweal 61:341 D 24 '54 330w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 12 '54 40w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p39 S 26 '54 30w
Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p661 O 15 '54 300w

TALBOT, DANIEL, ed. Treasury of mountaineering stories. 337p $5 Putnam

Short stories—Collections 54-10505

Nineteen stories about mountaineering, all but three of which are fiction. Partial contents: Little mother up the Mörderberg, by H. G. Wells; Top man, by J. R. Ullman; Maiden, maiden, by Kay Boyle; Over the mountain, by Ruthven Todd; The ascent, by R. B. West; The mountain, by S. G. Ervine; Splendid fellow by Phyllis Bottome; The inn, by Guy de Maupassant; Their kingdom, by R. Frison-Roche; Climbing for goats, by S. E. White; The Matterhorn, by A. F. Mummery.

Reviewed by E. A. Richter
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 21 '54 60w

"Singuarly high level interest for those to whom tales of mountaineering hold fascination. Many of the writers, whether the stories are fiction or fact, are themselves experienced mountain climbers."

+ Kirkus 22:598 S 1 '54 180w

"There might be grounds for quarrel over the editor's choice of some of his stories. The least effective of those included have in them, nevertheless, something of the magnificent quickening which comes to men, through fear or love or sheer exaltation from the earth's unruly heights." Raymond Holden

N Y Times p12 N 14 '54 320w

TALLANT, ROBERT. Mrs Candy strikes it rich. 253p $3.50 Doubleday

54-7663

This third novel about Mrs Eustacia Candy Petit of New Orleans describes her efforts to live up to her second husband's money. Henry Petit pays the bills, or lets his wife pay them, but disapproves of her efforts to enter high society.

"It is cool and frothy—ideal summer fare." Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 J1 4 '54 300w

"The riches seem to make life pretty drab compared to the warm role as landlady and Cupid. Even her latest venture in arranging her young friends' matrimonial experiments goes sour on her. Her parties lack the spontaneity of the ones she gave down town. And her own matrimonial bark founders on the unsuspected reefs of prosperity's perils. She's a very real person, our Mrs. Candy, and we almost hope the oil well runs dry before her next adventure."

Kirkus 22:293 My 1 '54 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 3 '54 270w

"The story about the workingclass couple who come into a lot of money has always been a good one, and if Robert Tallant's material isn't exactly original, he has handled it well." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p14 Je 20 '54 400w

"Mrs. Candy Strikes It Rich' would be an even funnier novel if Mr. Tallant didn't consistently overplay his hand by making everyone in the book so much of a 'character,' and by rigging Mrs. Candy's predicaments so heavily for obvious laughs. Still, anyone essaying humor these witless days deserves a round of applause—and any return visit that Mr. Tallant pays to Cairo Street should be of interest." Martin Levin

+ — Sat R 37:40 Ag 14 '54 230w

Springf'd Republican p5C J1 4 '54 40w

TANNER, EDWARD EVERETT (VIRGINIA ROWANS, pseud). House party. 276p $3.50 Crowell

54-6893

This light, satirical novel deals "with a weekend house party in the palatial but somewhat run-down Long Island residence of Mrs. Lily Ames, a charming lady of about fifty whose relatives descend upon her to rest themselves and to straighten out their lives and their love affairs." (New Yorker)

"Amusing, ironic tale, Sophisticated."

+ Bookmark 12:219 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by A. F. Otis
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 30 '54 350w

Kirkus 22:211 Mr 15 '54 80w

"The writing is polished and mature and holds memorable moments of descriptions which are rich in subtle satire of a social scene." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 J1 18 '54 550w

"A clever and entertaining novel. . . The story runs on just a little too long, but up to a certain point, not far from the end, it is fast reading and often irresistibly funny."

+ New Yorker 30:132 My 22 '54 120w

"This is light summer fiction, and intended as that. The author has a sharp eye for people's more peculiar foibles and a nice knack at exaggeration, both these talents being prime bases for humor. The result is a pretty funny book, and a nice satire too, sometimes gentle, and now and then sharp as a tack. I'd make one reservation: it all could have been a touch shorter and no harm done. One thing: With the right screen-writer and director 'House Party' could make a wildly funny picture. Box-office, moreover." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 J1 5 '54 650w

TANOUS, HELEN NICOL. Making clothes for your little girl. 255p il col il $2.95 Bennett

646.4 Dressmaking 54-8539

This book is designed to help in selecting and fitting childrens' clothes. More than half of the suggestions are for making dresses, many of these being developed from a basic dress pattern. Includes sections on "no-patterns," on playclothes and sleeping garments.

Booklist 50:293 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:184 My '54 20w

TANOUS, H. N.—Continued

"For the mother with some sewing knowledge she can learn to make her needle fly. The illustrations are sharp and clear." Letty Leitner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 11 '54 50w

"Written from the point of view of a mother, for other mothers of little girls, this charming book should be an inspiration to create attractive clothing. Though no longer a full-time designer, Mrs. Tanous remains active as a free lance worker for garment manufacturers." E. N. Crouthamel

+ J Home Econ 46:611 O '54 160w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 80w

T'AO, CH'EN. Poems; tr. by Lily Pao-hu Chang [and] Marjorie Sinclair; brush drawings by Tseng Yu-ho. 133p $4.75 Univ. of Hawaii press

895.11

53-8575

"No one acquainted with Chinese poetry need be told that T'ao Ch'ien (A.D. 372-427), who is also known as T'ao Yuan-ming, is one of the really great poets of the world. . . In their preface to the present collection the translators assert that it comprises all of T'ao's verse. But since specialists differ on the exact number of his poems, this claim must be accepted with some qualification. . . A biographical sketch of the poet written early in the seventh century, appears in the appendix." U S Quarterly Bk R

"It is an extraordinarily beautiful volume. Its brush drawings by Tseng Yu-Ho, its cadmium-yellow end-papers and jacket, its binding of Terek cloth, and the text itself combine very well to convey those things traditionally associated with T'ao Ch'ien; Wine, the chrysanthemum, love of nature and the simple life." L. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 22 '53 140w

"Although it is admittedly impossible to carry over to another language and culture all the rich moods of the Chinese original, any sincere and reasonably successful effort to do so must be commended. In not a few places the translators have improved on earlier renderings; in others they have been only moderately successful. In many instances a slight transposition of words or phrases would have brought out more clearly the stress and rhythm of the original."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:56 Mr '54 200w

TATE, ELIZABETH. Little Teddy and the big sea; pictures by Kurt Werth. [32p] $2.50 Lothrop

53-6733

Picture-story book, for ages three to six, all about the Teddy Bear family and how little Teddy learned about the ocean.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 25 '54 90w

Kirkus 22:287 My 1 '54 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:701 Ap 15 '54 20w

"His Teddy bear family stands out clearly for the very young eyes, however dull they may seem to an adult. . . It is all very slight." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk 11 p14 My 16 '54 60w

"Mr. Werth's lively water-color scenes have just the right amount of detail; they won't crowd a child's imagination." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 4 '54 120w

TATE, HENRY CLAY. Building a better home town; a program of community self-analysis and self-help. 236p $3.50 Harper

301.36 Community life

54-6451

"This is an expression of the desire to decentralize in a modern society becoming too complex for human comprehension. It does not advocate haphazard, economically weak communities, but rather strong local units based upon co-operative relationships with primary centers. The bulk of the present volume consists of illustrative examples drawn from the area surrounding Bloomington, Illinois." Library J

Booklist 50:372 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Chad Walsh

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 5 '54 280w

"As an aid to city planners, civic leaders, and all persons affected by rising taxes, traffic delays, and suburban shopping, this book merits a top shelf location in the average library. It is a powerful, practical, hence forceful contribution to an American scene punctuated by the confusion of urban saturation." W. C. Harvey

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 13 '54 600w

Reviewed by Leon Crain

Library J 79:1057 Je 1 '54 90w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 13 '54 140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:171 Jl '54

TAUBMAN, HYMAN HOWARD. How to build a record library. 94p $1.50 Hanover House

789.913 Phonograph records 53-3386

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"No matter how much a buyer may ultimately depend on his own judgment, he should appreciate a book which tells him which of the many recordings of, say, Pictures at an Exhibition, to examine first. If I may judge from a brief glance, Taubman's book seems to fulfil this limited function admirably. That it tries to do a good deal more need not bother us too much." Milton Wilson

Canadian Forum 33:185 N '53 320w

"It would be pointless to question the recommendations made since these, as the author states, represent his tastes. The long section on Jazz, containing 190 items, appears to be an excellent one. . . Although the book is not directed to the collector interested in esoterica, this scarcely explains the omission of many composers from the lists. . . The accompanying text has little to say of real significance. A sensitive reader might almost feel as if he were being written down to, and might hope that the author knows a great deal more about his subject than he communicates. The book will prove helpful—almost any guide would be helpful to a beginner after looking into Schwann's Catalog for the first time—but it is routine; and very little of whatever enthusiasm Mr. Taubman must have for the music he selects is transmitted to the reader." M. C. Bartlett

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:118 D '53 450w

TAYLOR, ALICE. South Africa; il. by Rafaello Busoni. (Lands and peoples ser) 26p $1.75; pa $1.25 Holiday

968 South Africa—Juvenile literature

54-10954

A brief introduction to South Africa for grades 7 to 9. It outlines geography and history, and the cultural, economic, and political aspects of South Africa.

Booklist 50:406 Je 15 '54

"The writer might have included more about native life and perhaps famous people, but it is good introductory material as it stands."

+ Kirkus 22:234 Ap 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by Elenora Alexander

Library J 79:1238 Je 15 '54 70w

TAYLOR, CARL CLEVELAND. Farmers' movement, 1620-1920. 519p $5.50 Am. bk.
630 Agriculture—U.S. Agriculture—Economic aspects 53-9515
For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"The Farmers' Movement, 1620-1920, is not, as its name implies, a history of farmer movements over this three-century period. It is rather an attempt to identify and analyze common types of behavior on the part of farm groups in their efforts to correct what they considered to be maladjustments or injustices. . . To base a concept of farmer movements so largely on the relatively radical and violent episodes here described seems to this writer a too narrow approach. Farmers did sway national policies in very significant ways during the formative years of the nation, but usually without violence or even formal organization." M. R. Benedict

Am Hist R 59:454 Ja '54 380w

"All in all, this is a most excellent book, the best in its field, and will be widely read. This book fills a long felt need. The reviewer wishes that somehow or other there could have been a chapter on the Farm Bureau and a synopsis dealing with the period since 1920. However, the Farm Bureau has been well presented by others, and perhaps a worthwhile presentation of what has happened since 1920 could not be included in this book without making it too bulky." S. H. Hobbs

+ Social Forces 32:301 Mr '54 480w

"That there is an 'American Farmers' movement' in the same sense as what is called the 'labor movement' is a thesis difficult to establish. Dr. Taylor is at all times acutely conscious of the difficulties, and tries to meet them with fairness and candor. . . The main account is detailed and valuable, and is based on materials drawn from a very large assortment of monographs, and from newspaper, pamphlet, and special-interest publications, the collection of which required years of search."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:467 D '53 220w

TAYLOR, DAVID. Lights across the Delaware. 366p maps $3.75 Lippincott

54-5600

Historical novel based on the events leading up to the capture of Trenton by Washington's troops on Christmas, 1776. The heroine is Phoebe, an ardent patriot; the hero is her Quaker sweetheart, whom Phoebe won over to the cause of the Colonists.

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

"Sound and vigorous novel." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 2 '54 270w

Kirkus 22:162 Mr 1 '54 190w

"Although there are one or two startling episodes and the love story is not more than ordinary, it is a lively tale. And it upholds a convincing argument." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p26 My 9 '54 350w

TAYLOR, ELEANOR KENDRICK. Public accountability of foundations and charitable trusts. 231p $3 Russell Sage

060 Foundations, Charitable and educational. Trusts and trustees 53-6590

"This study treats of statutory and administrative provisions which are, or might well be, made to assure on the one hand that the public know that trust funds are being applied to their legitimately intended purposes, and on the other hand that foundations be protected from arbitrary political censorship and control. . . The seven chapters of the text and the appendixes include summaries of American, British, and Canadian experience, selected statutes, a model Non-Profit Corporation Act drafted by a committee of the American Bar Association, and tabulations of information from state attorneys general concerning actual accounting and reporting procedures." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"Federal and state officials, foundation officers and trustees, and lawyers, for whom the publication is especially designed, as well as others concerned with the social usefulness of endowments, will welcome this volume. . . More skillful organization and presentation of the material collected by Professor Taylor would have increased the usefulness of this important book. Nevertheless, it must be hailed as a valuable addition to publications dealing with philanthropic endowments." W. S. Rich

+ Ann Am Acad 292:167 Mr '54 440w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey

Christian Century 71:1207 O 6 '54 400w

"Miss Taylor's monograph appears opportunely at a time when a congressional committee is investigating tax-exempt foundations. Published by the Russell Sage Foundation, it reflects the conviction of conscientious trustees and officers that such organizations owe the public an accounting of their stewardship of wealth dedicated to the general welfare."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:87 Mr '54 280w

TAYLOR, MRS ELIZABETH. Hester Lilly, and twelve short stories. 210p $3 Viking

54-9595

One short novel, Hester Lilly, followed by twelve short stories make up this book. Hester Lilly is the story of a bewildered adolescent who plays havoc with the marriage of a middle-aged cousin and his wife. Some of the stories have appeared in magazines.

Booklist 51:64 O 1 '54

"Mrs. Taylor brings her great technical skill to bear upon the most perishable and delicate subject—the decay of love. . . She seems not so much to concoct as to have, ready-made and to hand, the whole heart of the matter she would have you know about, and she leaves it with you, so finely prepared, so perfectly served up, that any evidence of the way it was done has completely vanished." Doris Grumbach

+ Commonweal 61:46 O 15 '54 700w

Kirkus 22:413 Jl 1 '54 210w

"At least one of these stories, 'Swan Moving,' appeared in the New Yorker, and all might have. They are clever, sophisticated, cynical, the dialogue witty. But the characters, shrewdly enough drawn with keen psychological insight, and the emotions and incidents about which they revolve, all tend to denigrate personality. They lay bare vulgar indecencies, revealing human beings at their worst: arid, lustful, frustrated, and futile. . . Mrs. Taylor is undoubtedly brilliant, but her mood is morbid and depressing." R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:1505 S 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by Isabel Quigley

Manchester Guardian p4 O 22 '54 270w

"Short stories of nuance and depth from a thoroughly competent and sensitive writer, one who is, fortunately, old-fashioned enough to make a craft of her fiction. The balance of each sentence, the texture of the images, the darting and exact point of the metaphors result in a charming and incisive book." Stanley Cooperman

+ Nation 179:346 O 16 '54 50w

"Economical, precise and witty, Mrs. Taylor's style appears here in all its maturity. So does her faculty for uncovering the intense drama that lies beneath the surface of quiet lives. And here, once again, she plunges unerringly to the heart of her characters, understanding them herself, and making us understand them, with an almost appalling clarity. Subtly and wonderfully perceptive, at once relentless and compassionate, 'Hester Lilly' has an impact out of all proportion to its length. . . Taken together, Mrs. Taylor's stories exhibit as her six novels do a range and variety surprisingly wide in a writer who devotes herself entirely to the interplay of moods, emotions and relationships among average inhabitants of a circumscribed area in rural and suburban England." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p6 S 26 '54 600w

TAYLOR, ELIZABETH—Continued

"Miss Taylor's purview seems parochially limited on the whole to dull, hopeless people—who talk, however, above their mental station—but only the unduly idealistic, fearful of warmhearted carnal truth, will raise this objection. For at all times Miss Taylor conveys a profoundly healthy tenderness with a consummate economy of style. She has a woman's unfoiled realism and sympathy, and uses them to give quiet enjoyment to all who believe, despite our estranging new conveniences, that man is still the best show of all." Gerald Sykes

+ N Y Times p5 S 26 '54 450w

"[In Hester Lilly] Mrs. Taylor develops her characters with intelligent understanding. Working conservatively and with admirable restraint, she builds up a climax which is superficially obvious but actually shocking in its delineation of the tormented Muriel, who, in a series of shattering revelations, sees herself for the first time nakedly, steadily, and pitilessly. . . . Few of the shorter pieces are really distinguished pieces of fiction; even the slightest, however, are the work of a highly intelligent observer who is always a skilled disciplined craftsman." William Peden

+ — Sat R 37:15 S 16 '54 600w

"Her people—normal or eccentric, and she is particularly good with eccentrics—are astonishingly alive; you get the feeling of being part of the action, of prowling about inside it and peering from the middle of things, of seeing the characters round and solid enough to touch them." Isabel Quigly

+ Spec p648 N 19 '54 130w

"The title story is really a novelette; it is, for all its muted keynote, an excellent example of how close to tragedy the author's whimsicality and mild irony often comes. All 12 stories, without trying very hard, manage to reach the core of love in all its infinite and sometimes awesome variety." Richard McLaughlin

+ Springf'd Republican p7C O 10 '54 200w

Time 64:114 O 4 '54 200w

"Mrs. Taylor confirms, in Hester Lilly, her calm and confident possession of one of the brightest talents to have emerged in English fiction since the war."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p725 N 12 '54 420w

TAYLOR, FRANCIS HENRY. Fifty centuries of art; published for the Metropolitan museum of art. 183p 342col il $5 Harper

709 Art—History 54-8996

A general survey of art from the early Egyptian to modern times. The author is director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Illustrated in color. No index.

Booklist 51:101 N 1 '54

Reviewed by Gary Sheahan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 19 '54 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p35 D '54

"Recommended for reference, for home use, and in libraries generally." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:2333 D 1 '54 160w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 14 '54 30w

"The most remarkable feature of this highly compact history of art . . . is that its author . . . has been able to keep his eye on the wood without failing to enumerate its principal trees and even, occasionally, its undergrowth. This is no small accomplishment and again calls attention to the fact that intelligent popularization is held in far less esteem than it deserves. . . . The chief drawbacks of this book are its lack of freshness of opinion—its parade of judgments that have grown weary from repetition when they are not outmoded—and its avoidance of personal responses which, however eccentric, have at least the power to make a work of art come alive." Stuart Preston

+ — N Y Times p10 O 3 '54 450w

"Certainly a laudable project, and the fact that it was prepared by the Director of the Metropolitan Museum, with the Museum's full coöperation, should have assured it distinction. Where it fails is in its effort to give too much in too little space. In the text, completeness is sacrificed for compactness, and the whole thing reads more like an outline for a history of art than a history itself. . . . The main value of the book, which is still considerable, is as a kind of syllabus, in which the student can search out the subjects he finds interesting, preparatory to fuller exploration elsewhere."

+ — New Yorker 30:139 O 30 '54 160w

Reviewed by L. R. Sander

Sat R 37:34 D 4 '54 40w

TAYLOR, GEORGE AIKEN. Sober faith; religion and Alcoholics anonymous. 108p $2 Macmillan (N Y)

616.86 [178.6] Alcoholics anonymous 53-3159

"Believing that religion has things to learn from the success of AA and that AA in turn can gain from closer co-operation with the church, Mr. Taylor made this forthright analysis of AA and its methods." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by W. I. Newstetter

Ann Am Acad 292:191 Mr '54 600w

"This is an interesting sidelight for anyone interested in the disease of alcoholism." William Yates

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 29 '53 160w

Kirkus 21:529 Ag 1 '53 180w

"Recommended for all general collections."

E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 78:1527 S 15 '53 90w

"An important book for anyone who wishes to understand this great problem and to help alcoholics."

+ Wis Lib Bul 49:250 N '53

TAYLOR, GLADYS. Old London gardens. 194p il $4.50 British bk. centre

712.7 Gardens—London [53-13137]

A history of London's famous gardens, in which the author attempts to find out about "the intangible influence which gardens have had on men and women" and thru them on history. Bibliography. Index.

"Despite the noncommittal title, the book has a firm if gentle fascination." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 28 '54 100w

"Attractive and scholarly volume." Leila Flower

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 D 31 '53 500w

TAYLOR, GORDON RATTRAY. Sex in history. (Past in the present ser) 336p $4 Vanguard

177 [176] Sex [54-23129]

"The author of this new book is admittedly a popularizer of the findings of the social sciences. In his previous books he dealt with economic issues and industrial relations. In Sex in History he covers an extremely wide range of materials documenting his discussion of the changing philosophies of sexual behavior in our western civilization. The book is not limited, however, to straight accounting of relevant data. The author is a humanist and a student of modern psychology, and as such, bitterly antagonistic to the repressive and guilt-breeding western tradition." Library J

Kirkus 22:141 F 15 '54 200w

"Professional historians may find fault with this or that specific discussion. The book nevertheless, will be read with profit as adding the historical dimension to strictly contemporary discussions of sex in our society." Joseph Bram

+ — Library J 79:549 Mr 15 '54 140w

"The author develops his theme with a serious scholarship which by no means detracts from the entertainment value of his book. In fact, there are too many quotable stories for easy choice." Adam Curle

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:134 Ja 30 '54 1050w

"A methodical history of the sexual regulations of a given country or group of countries, or a methodical treatment of the variations in decency and modesty could be entertaining and enlightening; but, unfortunately, Mr. Rattray Taylor has provided neither. . . . Although the book cannot be considered history in any ordinary meaning of the word, it is more or less organized around two interrelated themes, a private schema of social forms and hostility to nearly all organized Christian churches."

Times [London] Lit Sup p7 Ja 1 '54 1050w

TAYLOR, HAROLD. On education and freedom. 320p $3.50 Abelard-Schuman

378 Education—Philosophy. Education, Higher 53-13096

A volume of essays and addresses by the president of Sarah Lawrence College. Contents: Moral values and the experience of art; The college president; Moral leadership and education; Philosophy and the teacher; On the education of women; Life, art, and the humanities; Communism and the American colleges.

Booklist 50:271 Mr 15 '54

Reviewed by R. H. J. Hanley
Cath World 180:77 O '54 440w

Kirkus 21:750 N 15 '53 200w

"A cogently stated, maturely considered work on modern education as practiced in American universities and colleges." E. M. Oboler

+ Library J 78:2100 D 1 '53 210w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar
Nation 178:547 Je 26 '54 550w

"If you read many books on education and on freedom, chances are that for quite a while you have been hoping somebody would write this book, and here it is, even better than you dared hope. For this is not 'about' education or 'about' democracy: it is philosophy of education and of democracy. And Harold Taylor writes as though it were easy never to use a platitude. His avoidance of the cliché is nothing short of miraculous, considering the company a college president must keep." F. M. Hechinger

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p4 Mr 7 '54 100w

"Mr. Taylor's voice is never strident. It is calm, and even melodious. His argument is not passionate but judicious, as befits a philosopher. It is the voice of sanity and common sense, it is the voice of reason. And though Mr. Taylor was born in Canada and educated in England, it is a very American voice. We will do well to heed it." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 4 '54 950w

"So many treatises have been written on the American college and the problems of liberal education that I felt reluctant to read 'On Education and Freedom,' by Harold Taylor, president of Sarah Lawrence College. But I am glad that I did. There lives in this book a high spirit of practical idealism and of courageous criticism tempered by profound confidence in the qualities of our youth." Robert Ulich

+ Sat R 37:34 S 11 '54 750w

Wis Lib Bul 50:64 Mr '54

TAYLOR, JEREMY, bp. House of understanding; selections from the writings of Jeremy Taylor by Margaret Gest. 118p $2.75 Univ. of Pa. press

208.1 54-5011

A collection of excerpts from Jeremy Taylor's writings arranged under such general headings as Tolerance and liberty of thought; The nature of God; Free will versus predestination; etc. The anthology is preceded by a biographical and critical sketch.

"Taylor, long valued for his style, has long been undervalued for his thought; and he is probably little known to many readers today, save for what may be found of him in Logan Pearsall Smith's garland of elegant extracts, 'The Golden Grove.' Smith, most charming of superficialists, was more interested in verbal patterns than in sustained thinking; so it is no cause for wonder that he did full justice to Jeremy Taylor's manner, while doing less than justice to his matter. Miss Gest's slim book tends to redress the balance. In it we may read Taylor's considered ideas on the subjects that most profoundly concerned him; and on no subject does he speak to us today more pertinently than upon tolerance." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 37:31 Ag 28 '54 230w

"Taylor appears in his true proportions; and anyone wishing to learn the notable facts of his career will be adequately informed. Miss Gest has epitomized not only the corpus of Taylor's works but his personality as well."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p428 J1 2 '54 750w

TAYLOR, NORMAN. Color in the garden. 118p il $2 Van Nostrand

635.9 Gardening 53-5461

Designed to enable the gardener to plan gardens featuring a predominant color: red; blue; yellow; pink; white; green; and gray and lavender. The chapters devoted to the various colors give information on flowers and shrubs to use, time of bloom, and varieties for certain locations. Includes plans. Bibliography. Index.

"For the gardener who wants a reliable book on the use of color. . . . Recommended."

+ Bookmark 13:137 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p25 Mr 16 '54 50w

TAYLOR, NORMAN. Everblooming garden! [decorations by John De Pol]. 104p $2 Van Nostrand

635.9 Gardening 54-6905

Advice and suggestions on plants to include in the garden if one wants color all year round. The first section covers the period Thanksgiving to Washington's Birthday. Thereafter the arrangement is by month.

Booklist 50:314 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:232 J1 '54 10w

Kirkus 22:26 Ja 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown
Library J 79:626 Ap 1 '54 90w

TAYLOR, NORMAN. Fruit in the garden. 134p il $2.50 Van Nostrand

634 Fruit culture 54-6906

Information for a week-end gardener on how to plan, select, grow and care for fruit trees in a limited space. Covers soils, soil fertility, planning, planting, after care, pruning. Varieties are divided into growing districts for easy choice of adaptability and usefulness.

Bookmark 13:232 J1 '54 10w

Reviewed by Art Kozelka
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 18 '54 60w

"A sound basic text on fruit, prefaced by an eloquent plea for growing your own."

+ Kirkus 22:90 F 1 '54 180w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown
Library J 79:626 Ap 1 '54 90w

TAYLOR, PETER HILLSMAN. Widows of Thornton. 310p $3.75 Harcourt

53-7839

Nine short stories which have been previously published in The New Yorker, The Sewanee Review, or Harper's Bazaar. They deal with the histories of four or five families living in a southern country town called Thornton, Tennessee.

Booklist 50:381 Je 1 '54

TAYLOR, P. H.—Continued

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 30 '54
230w

Reviewed by Richard Hayes

Commonweal 61:317 D 17 '54 650w

Kirkus 22:133 F 15 '54 220w

"Verdict on this collection: very good, but tends to repeat its best efforts." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1058 Je 1 '54 90w

"More substantial than the earlier and notable short novel, 'A Woman of Means,' this new book makes us eager for the day when Peter Taylor will settle down to the major novels he is surely equipped to write. Meanwhile, it seems improbable that any American work of fiction more distinguished and enduring than 'The Widows of Thornton' will appear this year." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 2 '54
650w

"Mr. Taylor's Negro characters are superb, especially Aunt Muncie in 'What You Hear From 'Em?' . . . The stories in 'The Widows of Thornton' are outwardly simple, but psychologically complex and powerful, and under the surface of events in the regions he knows best the author discloses the universal longings of the human heart. Mr. Taylor never preaches, but he has a message and a valuable one: If the sanctity of the home is preserved, all will be well with mankind." F. H. Lyell

+ N Y Times p5 My 2 '54 800w

"It is a rare and welcome thing to find so much consistently fine writing in a single volume by one author. Not one of these stories is superfluous or out of tune with the others. Blessed with nearly unanimous praise for his first novel, 'A Woman of Means,' Mr. Taylor should find the critics and readers no less susceptible to this collection." D. R. McDaniel

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 13 '54
650w

"'The Widows of Thornton' is as free of ugliness as the lingering nutmeg and as unpretensions as coldwater cornbread. In so doing, the gentle Mr. Taylor, Tennessee-born, has created a wistful, clinging, but utterly non-depraved image of the Deep South that some of us his regional contemporaries have kept trying to recall from our childhood. . . [It] also confirms the talents of a very fine Southern writer. He has suggested that his stories may explain why a Southerner of the blood never entirely leaves home. But they are, more than that, a tender and perceptive treatment of clanspeople of the same name but different pigment, drawn so close together from their beginnings that their real beauty is in each other and not in themselves. Mr. Taylor writes of women with an unashamed respect and a remarkable delicacy, and his kitchen and parlor are parts of the same house." Mack Morriss

+ Sat R 37:14 My 8 '54 550w

TAYLOR, ROBERT JOSEPH. Western Massachusetts in the Revolution. 227p $4 Brown univ.

973.344 U.S.—History—Revolution. Massachusetts—History 54-5644

"This study concerns itself primarily with political and economic developments in Western Massachusetts during and after the American Revolution. Besides narrating some of the major events, it attempts to describe the contribution or reaction of the western towns and their leaders to the larger issues of the day. For better perspective, it gives some account of events like the Land Bank struggle and the Great Awakening, which occurred in the 1740's, and it carries the story of Western Massachusetts to the ratification of the Federal Constitution in 1788." (p3) Bibliography. Index.

"This study will undoubtedly become the standard account of Shay's Rebellion and will be of great value to students for this reason alone, but it deserves attention for its examination of frontier political development and the often mistaken generalizations which have arisen from earlier concepts of it." S. G. Kurtz

+ Am Hist R 60:210 O '54 400w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 13 '54
550wTAYLOR, ROBERT LEWIS. Bright sands. 254p $3.50 Doubleday

54-5504

"The setting of this quasi-satiric novel is Cape Cod in the summer. Bill Willis, belatedly identified in the last chapter as a famous oil geologist, is vacationing at Chatham with his neurotic wife, Myra, who is addicted to barbiturates. For reasons concealed until well along in the argument, Myra is giving Bill a bad time. Her behavior contrasts unfavorably with that of Joan, her tomboy sister. . . The anecdotal burden of the tale is borne by three Cape Codish phantoms named Captain Cobb, Veenie and Good Samuel. Bill and Joan take part in the beachy pranks of these grotesques, who monologize archaically like so many phonographs." N Y Times

Booklist 50:280 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54 40w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:232 Je '54 220w

Reviewed by Walter Harding

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 21 '54
260w

Kirkus 21:799 D 15 '53 150w

"Recommended for all public libraries." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 79:455 Mr 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by Patricia Hodgart

Manchester Guardian p4 D 7 '54 110w

"A mighty nice season in the sun to read about." Tallaferro Boatwright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 21
'54 450w

"This is a peculiar book. Mr. Taylor, ■■■ readers of the glossier magazines know, is ■■■ first-rate journalist, a competent popular biographer. Now that he has turned to creative fiction, he must have had something in mind—but it could not have been ■■■ novel. For he does not try to tell ■■■ coherent story, establish a mood, or even develop a reasonably lifelike set of characters. Maybe he was thinking in terms of satiric fantasy. Yet much of the writing is doggedly factual." E. B. Garside

N Y Times p22 F 21 '54 300w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 28 '54
550w

"All in all, 'The Bright Sands' is a thoroughly happy argument in favor of the simple, dishonest life, of which the most convincing advocate is Captain Ezra Cobb, theological counter-puncher and evader of wealth." M. L.

+ Sat ■ 37:51 Mr 13 '54 210w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 80w

"The Bright Sands offers a good share of laughs, plus ■■■ steady run of chuckles and ■■■ warm feeling for the human race."

+ Time 63:107 F 22 '54 450w

TAYLOR, MRS ROSEMARY (DRACHMAN). Ghost town bonanza. 248p $3 Crowell

54-6335

An unemployed actor and a girl who wanted to be a CPA were on their way to California when they met with a freak accident. Stranded in a ghost town they embark on an ambitious scheme to make money out of it, and strangely enough, they succeed.

Booklist 50:230; 322 F 15 '54; Ap 15 '54

"Fine relaxation." A. F. Otis

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 18 '54
370w

"Have fun here if you have nothing else to do."

Kirkus 22:241 Ap 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 79:773 Ap 15 '54 130w

"An expert in the Western scene, Mrs. Taylor offers a neat pack of risible incidents and characters." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 18 '54 500w

"Mrs. Taylor's outlandish people often get out of control and flop around the stage knocking down props while the author strives breathlessly to restore order and get on with the plot, such as it is. I didn't mind. Confusion notwithstanding, this book is excellent lemonade literature even though it is a cut below Mrs Taylor's 'Chicken Every Sunday' of eleven years ago." Marshall Sprague

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 18 '54 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 9 '54 250w

TAYLOR, SAM S. So cold, my bed. 189p $2.50 Dutton

53-10334

Detective story.

Kirkus 21:554 Ag 15 '53 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 20 '53 50w

"A vein of screwball humor and even gal-lows humor brightens some pretty routine proceedings." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p32 N 1 '53 80w

"Goodness knows there's plenty of action, but crowded cast and poorly arranged material make heavy reading." L. G. Offord

— San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 22 '53 60w

"Give this a plus mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 36:35 O 24 '53 20w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 24 '54 40w

TAYLOR, SAMUEL A. Sabrina Fair; or, A woman of the world; ■ romantic comedy [in 4 acts]. 182p il $2.75 Random house

812

54-6858

Reading text of a comedy which was well-received on its Broadway presentation in the 1953-54 season. The play deals with the results when the chauffeur's daughter returns from Paris and upsets various members of a well-to-do Long Island family.

Booklist 50:294 Ap 1 '54

"A delightful high comedy and a Broadway hit which will be played by every community theatre in the land. Recommended to all libraries serving this public." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:561 Mr 15 '54 30w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 4 '54 120w

TAYLOR, THEODORE. Magnificent Mitscher; with a foreword by Arthur W. Radford. 364p il $5 Norton

B or 92 Mitscher, Marc Andrew. World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations 54-12896

The story of Admiral Marc Mitscher, who devoted his life to the advancement of Naval air warfare, and died in 1947 at the age of sixty. Index.

Booklist 51:150 D 1 '54

"The likeable personality and day by day achievements of Mitscher shine through to lift this above the run of the mill military biography."

+ Kirkus 22:612 S 1 '54 280w

"Recommended." F. J. Anderson

+ Library J 79:2328 D 1 '54 100w

"Mr. Taylor has done well with this rather obdurate material; he writes easily, with much direct quotation which at least sounds authentic, and the life of this thorough-going naval professional who fought several of our greatest sea battles has much of absorbing interest in it." Walter Millis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 26 '54 900w

"The author has come up with a first-class biography-history, 'The Magnificent Mitscher.' It is a flesh-and-blood presentation of Mitscher the naval aviator; for 350 pages the sea-air warrior breathes, flies and commands." W. J. Lederer

+ N Y Times p36 N 7 '54 650w

"The author of this book can't have had an easy task, for he didn't know Mitscher, and Mitscher never kept a diary or wrote autobiographical memorandums. Mitscher comes through, though, and we get a fully defined portrait of the scrappy, wizened man who helped change the whole concept of war at sea."

+ New Yorker 30:172 O 23 '54 240w

Reviewed by Jack Howard

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 24 '54 70w

"Dry but workmanlike biography."

+ Time 64:104 N 1 '54 300w

TAZIEFF, HAROUN. Craters of fire; tr. from the French by Eithne Wilkins. 239p il maps $3 Harper

551.21 Volcanoes

53-11860

The author of Caves of Adventure (Book Review Digest 1953) here tells of his earlier adventures as a volcanologist. Shortly after the war, the author, a young mining engineer in the Belgian Congo was sent to "observe" the formation of a new volcano, Kituro. Most of the book is a popular account of this expedition with added chapters on his visits to other volcanoes, notably Etna and Stromboli.

Booklist 50:235 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:107 F '54 30w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 10 '54 400w

Reviewed by R. C. Cowen

Christian Science Monitor p9 F 12 '54 360w

Horn Bk 30:113 Ap '54 70w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 79:145 Ja 15 '54 100w

"Only a very few technical terms are used and these are adequately explained in one of the appendices. In another appendix there is a list of all the presently and recently active volcanoes in the world. No less dramatic than the writing are the twenty-four plates of photographs, some of them being spectacular close-ups of eruptions, taken at great risk. The translation by Eithne Wilkins is extremely well done, catching the rich fervor of the original French." Howel Williams

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 10 '54 800w

"'Craters of Fire' must have been assembled with a good deal of haste. Parts of it are polished-up notes; other parts sound like warmed-over newspaper articles. There is ■ good deal of padding, and in spots the translation from French is curious. In spite of this messiness, the book has some strong stuff." J. N. Leonard

N Y Times p6 Ja 10 '54 430w

New Yorker 29:109 F 6 '54 160w

"Other than the gangster, the scientist-adventurer is probably the only type of adventurer left in the world. Each little effort of man against the unknown must be justified with something one can sell to a zoo or with a few pages of data. Most of the data here is happily relegated to the appendix where it doesn't intrude on the adventure. Yet even in the appendix, the 'data' is highly suspicious when one notes that the figures on our own West Coast volcanoes are inaccurate." J. W.

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 4 '54 320w

"Much of the narrative suggests breath-taking melodrama but, along with his own spirited enjoyment of the dangerous task, Tazieff presents a scientific study, marked by methodological investigation, discipline, conscientiousness, and the humility necessary for taking precise measurements. At the same time he made a series of magnificent photographs, which illustrate his book." Marguerite Clark

TAZIEFF, HAROUN—Continued

+ Sat R 37:19 Ja 23 '54 1100w

"Excellent science for the amateur reader."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:65 Mr '54

TEALE, EDWIN WAY, ed. Wilderness world of John Muir. See Muir, J.

TEBBEL, JOHN WILLIAM. George Washington's America. 478p $5 Dutton

B or 92 Washington, George. U.S.—Description and travel 54-5826

A study of America in the time of George Washington, and of Washington's life and especially his journeys in those times. The book is divided into five parts: The world of Washington; The Revolution: journeys and headquarters; Washington in New York City; Washington in Philadelphia; Washington and the South. Washington chronology. Index. Map.

Booklist 50:379 Je 1 '54

"Readable. A good stock item."

+ Kirkus 22:148 F 15 '54 170w

"A highly entertaining and readable volume which will be useful in all historical collections." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:770 Ap 15 '54 140w

"Mr. Tebbel is not forever arguing with himself about small points, going off on so-called bypaths. . . . Following Dr. Freeman's evaluations, he is unlikely to mislead anybody; and he indulges in no solo flights of fancy. Add to these negative virtues then the positives of smooth, expert writing, a new, enthusiastic plan, a clear conscience, a sharp perception and the subject of which George Washington's America never tires, and you have in Mr. Tebbel's George Washington's America' a most readable book." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p29 My 16 '54 500w

"Not intended for scholars or students, 'George Washington's America' is for the wider audience of general readers. . . . The best part of the work is a description of the ex-President's last years at his plantation home on the Potomac, revealed in a number of quotations from distinguished visitors received at Mount Vernon." S. F. Bemis

+ N Y Times p20 My 16 '54 350w

New Yorker 30:136 Je 5 '54 180w

"Only a skillful and resourceful writer of history could tackle his subject with the tools of novelist, biographer, formal historian and bring the job off successfully. This John Tebbel has managed in 'George Washington's America.'" D. A. Pitt

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 12 '54 650w

"This work is frankly aimed at a popular audience, not at schoolmen. Yet it is uncertain how much popular appeal the book will have because of the very nature of the author's conception. It does not appear to me to come off, being neither a good life of Washington nor a picture of his America from which the average reader can take away any connected impressions." Carl Bridenbaugh

Sat R 37:16 My 29 '54 550w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 360w

TEBBEL, JOHN WILLIAM. Voice in the streets. 383p $3.95 Dutton

54-8858

Historical novel about life in New York city of a century ago. The central figure is a young Irishman who begins his New York career as a hungry waif on lower Broadway and rises to wealth and power.

"A clear picture of a city of mounting rebellion is a panoramic background for stubborn but almost honest man whose fate was not always in his own hands. Earnest."

+ Kirkus 22:344 Je 1 '54 190w

"Well seasoned with sex. . . . For public libraries, rental collections, libraries of schools of journalism." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:1311 Jl '54 90w

"Scrupulously documented and generously spiced with those bits and pieces of fact which ease the conscience of the historical novelist and reassure the readers, 'A Voice in the Streets' makes good and, at times, titillating reading." Max White

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 8 '54 470w

"A perfectly adequate and adventurous historical romance with which only a bolder would take the trouble to find flaws." John Haverstick

Sat R 37:37 Ag 21 '54 290w

TELLER, JUDD L. Scapegoat of revolution. 352p $4.50 Scribner

296 Jews. Revolutions 54-11019

Concerns the interrelationship of revolution and the Jewish people from the time of the Reformation in Europe to the present day. The author is an expert on Middle East affairs and Hebrew culture. Bibliography. Index.

"A spirited and scholarly study."

+ Kirkus 22:524 Ag 1 '54 230w

"Here is a forceful book offering a much needed antidote to the widespread conception which has identified radical movements with philosemitic and tolerant attitudes and extreme conservative trends with antisemitism." Joseph Bram

+ Library J 79:2445 D 15 '54 210w

"There are two main theses advanced in the book. The first of these, that social upheavals have almost invariably brought woe to the Jews, is indisputable. . . . Mr. Teller's second main thesis is that Jews don't like revolutions and have never liked revolutions, and that those Jews who take part in revolutionary movements are a negligible minority and not really Jews in any case. This is not a new thesis. . . . But it is a thesis which can only be maintained by subjecting the facts to a Procrustean distortion, which Mr. Teller does." M. J. Goldbloom

New Repub 131:17 D 13 '54 2900w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 28 '54 20w

TEMPLE, PHILLIPS. Federal services to libraries; prepared for the Federal relations committee of the American library association; foreword by John H. Ottemiller. 227p pa $3.50 A.L.A.

021.8 Libraries—U.S.

54-8697

"An alphabetically arranged guide to the services that Federal agencies within the metropolitan Washington area provide for librarians and scholars. The agencies are those supported by both Federal and nonfederal funds; the services listed are direct and indirect, hidden and obvious. Cross references in the headings and annotations enable the reader to bring together subject matter of related interest. The author obtained his information from interviews with Federal employees rather than from published sources. The first part of the handbook analyzes the program and policy that the Federal Government has adopted in relation to libraries. This handbook also provides the facts which will help the American Library Association form a policy in its dealings with the Federal Government." Booklist

Booklist 51:75 O 15 '54

Discussion by the author

Library J 79:1855 O 15 '54 4900w

TENG, SSU-YU, and FAIRBANK, JOHN KING. China's response to the West; a documentary survey, 1839-1923 [with E-tu Zen Sun and others; prepared in coöperation with the International secretariat of the Institute of Pacific relations]. 296p $6.75 Harvard univ. press

327.51 China—Relations (general) with foreign countries 53-5061

"An annotated survey of selected Chinese documents from 1839 to 1923 reflecting the struggle of Chinese statesmen and scholars with the task of adjusting ancient institutions and conservative procedures to those aspects of a changing contemporary world which would no longer be denied ingress." (Nation) Index.

Canadian Forum 34:188 N '54 130w

Foreign Affairs 33:168 O '54 60w

"A very valuable contribution." H. P. Linton
+ Library J 79:549 Mr 15 '54 160w

Reviewed by O. E. Clubb
+ Nation 179:427 N 13 '54 80w

TENNANT, KYLIE (MRS LEWIS CHARLES RODD). The battlers. 400p $2.50 St Martins [54-12123]

"A sort of Southwestern Australian Grapes of Wrath concerning a migrant population which vaguely follows seasonal employment, and consists mainly of counterparts of the American hobo and tramp—restless, lazy, and victim of a dole system." Library J

"Miss Tennant describes her people vividly and with authority and in their travels she has captured all the charm of the regional novel. Unfortunately, somewhere along the line the caravan makes the wrong turn and the story meanders aimlessly away. In spite of this the unusual setting gives the tale a freshness that is enjoyable for itself, alone." P. M.
+ Canadian Forum 34:192 N '54 60w

"Recommended." Karl Brown
+ Library J 79:1589 S 15 '54 160w

"Miss Tennant's men and women are all very much alive, and the scenes she describes have such reality that their atmosphere remains with us after the book is finished. It is therefore disappointing to find that the novel grows more in monotony than in power as it progresses. This may be due partly to Miss Tennant's insistence on the enduring worth of purely spiritual beauty, which she celebrates to the rather fanatical extent of excluding physical beauty of any kind from her characters."

+ New Yorker 30:142 O 2 '54 170w

TERRES, JOHN KENNETH. Songbirds in your garden [introd. by Edwin Way Teale; il by H. B. Kane]. 274p $3.95 Crowell

598.2 Birds 53-8440

Advice on how to bring birds into a small garden, in city or suburb, by supplying them with food, shelter and water, with feeding stations, tree and shrub plantings, bird houses and bird baths.

Booklist 50:217 F 1 '54

Reviewed by J. A. May
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 24 '53 340w

"There have been other books on planting to attract birds, on building bird houses, etc. But none, so far as I know, that comes down to practical facts so completely and so satisfactorily as this."

+ Kirkus 21:574 Ag 1E '53 160w

"There are a number of books in print on attracting birds; this one has an enthusiastic and personal approach which will make it very usable in public library collections." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 78:1684 O 1 '53 110w

"An excellent book for the recent convert to the exciting hobby of attracting and feeding birds." A. C. Smith

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 31 '54 80w

TERROT, CHARLES. Angel who pawned her harp. 254p $3 Dutton

54-5033

"Story of the visit paid to the East End of London by what a tough police sergeant calls 'V.H.P., or Very Heavenly Person. The angel, wearing 'a dress of striking simplicity—low necked, with bishop sleeves and a skirt pleated on Greek classical lines,' exercises a beneficial effect on the lives of Sergeant Lane and his daughter Jenny, the Jewish pawnbroker Mr. Webman and his repressed assistant Len." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 50:205 Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:108 F '54 20w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 179:153 My '54 150w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 17 '54 380w

Horn Bk 30:112 Ap '54 80w

"A whim of iron keeps this fantasy earth-bound rather than air-borne."

— Kirkus 21:745 N 15 '53 110w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:59 Ja 1 '54 60w

"A thoroughly sentimental, efficiently constructed moral tale." Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p4 J1 10 '53 40w

"The book is of such stuff as films are made, a natural if ever there was one, with action, comedy and sentiment combined in exact proportions. For any author wishing to get the best of both worlds—and with television here to stay there will be many with such ambitions—Mr. Terrot, a master in this genre, has provided here the definitive receipt." P. L. Travers

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 17 '54 500w

"This unpretentious and light-heartedly infectious novel of a quiet East London suburb—and the effect the sudden appearance of a girl, suspiciously angelic, has upon the lives of its inhabitants—is one of the unexpectedly delightful reading experiences of this or any recent year. A deft and whimsical fantasy, it has lightness and humor, warmth of characterization and the ability to make the fabulous entirely reasonable." John Nerber

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 17 '54 450w

"The author must be a muboxodist, a collector of music boxes. His extensive knowledge of this subject is cleverly integrated into the story and gives it a fresh and piquant flavor. It's a light little story, living up to the author's intention. It's the kind of thing that, as the jacket puts it, will kindle a warm response in the reader who likes this kind of writing." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 7 '54 270w

"Although the metaphysics of all this are down-right elementary, the characters (excepting the heavenly visitor) are always amusing, and the dialogue they speak is delightfully apt." Nicolas Monjo

+ Sat R 37:34 F 27 '54 250w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 2 '54 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p457 J1 17 '53 170w

TERRY, C. V., pseud. Buccaneer surgeon. (Hanover House bk) 309p $3.50 Garden City bks.

54-9850

Tale of the Spanish Main in the days of Sir Francis Drake. The hero is a surgeon, loyal to his father's country, England, and understanding thoroly the language of his mother's country, Spain. These two assets were his stock in trade during his experiences on land and sea, and in his pursuit of the Spanish beauty, Doña Maria.

"A tale which, if somewhat over-erotic at times, achieves an appeal for readership on the intellectual level. It is an appeal which arises out of the sense of psychological fitness crowning the action." Henry Cavendish

+ N Y Times p30 S 12 '54 550w

TERRY, C. V.—Continued

"An excellent sea tale. . . It ought to please all those who like a generous dash of salt water seasoning for their exciting historical novels." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C S 12 '54 160w
Time 64:105 S 27 '54 50w

TERRY, WALTER. Star performance; the story of the world's great ballerinas; il. by Marta Becket. 224p $2.95 Doubleday

927.933 Ballet. Dancers 54-5179

"Walter Terry, dance critic and dance editor of the New York Herald Tribune has written a junior book which relates in his characteristically clear, descriptive style the lives and achievements of the world's greatest ballerinas." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 51:88 O 15 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p36 N 14 '54 100w

Commonweal 61:201 N 19 '54 50w

"Teen-age girls and even those ballet lovers who are a little younger will love to own this book." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:433 D '54 120w

Kirkus 22:396 J1 1 '54 100w

"Recommended for ballet appreciation, for young people and adults, also for dance students." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 79:2502 D 15 '54 60w

"A book on ballet for teen-age girls from the distinguished ballet reviewer of this paper is welcome news. For young dancers and balletomanes, it is a revealing history; for general readers of any age, it will prove a fascinating introduction to that special world." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 26 '54 220w

"Not every balletomane will agree with Mr. Terry's evaluations, but on the whole the book is accurate, fresh and comprehensive. It belongs on every young dancer's bookshelf." R. J. Woody

+ N Y Times pt2 p12 N 14 '54 180w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith

Springf'd Republican p9C S 19 '54 400w

TEVIS, JAMES HENRY. Arizona in the '50's; il. by Horace T. Pierce [foreword by Russell C. Ewing]. 237p $4 Univ. of N.Mex. press

979.1 Frontier and pioneer life—Arizona. Apache Indians 54-6516

"The manuscript of this narrative was completed in 1886. It was not published because it mentioned a lady who had been captured by Apaches, escaped, married and was living happily after. . . Tevis was a Twenty-two-year-old veteran of William Walker's filibustering [expedition] when this narrative opens in 1857. It covers his first three years in the Arizona Territory, closing with his enlistment in the Confederate Army at Old Mesilla in New Mexico." San Francisco Chronicle

"Colorful, entertaining, and exciting." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 1 '54 30w

"A remarkable human document. One of the best descriptions of an actual fight with the Apache is related, given an added flip by the fact that Tevis' companion in the scrimmage was Moses Carson, Kit's older brother." W. H. Hutchinson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 1 '54 360w

TEXAS FOLKLORE SOCIETY. Folk travelers. See Boatright, M. C., and others, eds.

TEY, JOSEPHINE, pseud. See Mackintosh, E.

THANE, ELSWYTH, pseud. See Beebe, E. T. R.

THARP, MRS LOUISE (HALL). Until victory: Horace Mann and Mary Peabody. 367p il $5 Little

B or 92 Mann, Horace. Mann, Mary Tyler (Peabody) 53-7321

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Here is a welcome addition to the literature of American history. Horace Mann's position in the history of his country is probably fixed. No new biography was needed to justify his title as the 'father of the American common school.' But, while Mrs. Tharp confirms his contributions to public education, she does far more than that. In this book Mann lives as he has not lived before in history books. He appears a living, vibrant, human being. The volume is as much about Mann as about his contributions to society. He comes to life as a boy, a student, a lover, a husband, and a father." W. H. Cartwright

+ Am Hist R 59:390 Ja '54 360w

Reviewed by R. S. Harris

Canadian Forum 33:263 F '54 250w

Christian Century 71:302 Mr 10 '54 150w

"At a time when English scholars, under amazing circumstances, are apparently trying to make up their minds whether or not to reevaluate the life and times of Richard III, one can be patient with our national consciousness. But it deserves to be augmented; and with respect to Horace Mann, there is little enough among secondary sources one can offer a live student which is not dull or imperceptive. What, then, ought one to say to the eager and pleased student who tells one that she has just read Until Victory and was surprised to find it interesting? If one qualifies one's own enthusiasm, there still seems no gain in totally dampening hers. A better book than Mrs. Tharp's about Horace Mann as a person and as public figure is yet to be written." Louis Filler

New Eng Q 27:121 Mr '54 900w

"This interesting book uses new sources of information which increases its historical value. It will be useful to teachers of both history and literature." W. H. Mohr

+ Social Studies 45:193 My '54 350w

"In this semisolarly but lively biography, Mrs. Tharp does much to rescue from oblivion a man whose name is familiar to nearly everyone, but whose personality and achievements have been largely forgotten. . . The author's skill in the delineation of detail produces a vigorous characterization of Horace and Mary Mann. Because of Mrs. Tharp's indifference to the standards of historical form, however, particularly of documentation, there is some loss of usefulness, and the stress upon Mann as a person has left little room for evaluation of his contribution to American education."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 9:399 D '53 280w

THAYER, FRANK. Newspaper business management. 438p $8 Prentice-Hall

070.3 Newspapers 53-12347

"An introduction to the fundamental procedures of newspaper management for the journalism student who plans to enter newspaper work from the managerial rather than the editorial side. The author keeps the organization and operation of the larger metropolitan daily in mind when he discusses such practical matters as circulation, display advertising, accounting, and plant and office management. For larger public and special libraries." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:310 Ap 15 '54

"The layman will be especially interested in the newspaper's handling of advertising; benefits to the public in addition to regular press coverage, and insurance service to readers." David Parson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 J1 25 '54 240w

THAYER, JANE. Where's Andy? pictures by Meg Wohlberg. 46p $2 Morrow

54-6259

Story of a game of hide-and-seek played by a mother and her young son. Simple, repetitious text and many pictures suitable for the very young and for first readers.

Booklist 51:23 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:11 O '54 20w

"The story has a natural spontaneity, exactly suited to the kind of games that mothers and their youngsters play together." E. C. Mann
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 100w

"Clear print, appealing illustrations by Meg Wohlberg and a gentle story ensure Where's Andy all the mistreatment of a small reader's affection. It will be read, thumbed and pored over." P. O. Marsh

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 11 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:432 J1 15 '54 70w

"Three- and four-year-olds will love having this read to them, and beginning readers will enjoy the large print and easy vocabulary and the 'thick book' appearance. Appealing pictures by Meg Wohlberg. Recommended." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 79:1661 S 15 '54 40w

"This happy story, with amusing pictures, is a good one to read with young children." C. E. V. N.

+ N Y Times pt2 p38 N 14 '54 90w

THAYER, PHILIP WARREN, ed. Southeast Asia in the coming world; with a foreword by William O. Douglas. 306p $4.75 Johns Hopkins press

959 Asia, Southeastern 53-6492

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"In the book edited by Thayer, a distinguished group of specialists render southeast Asia comprehensible to the inquiring reader. A recapitulation of our historic outlook toward this region is followed by clear-cut pictures of the people of the area, their social institutions, resources, economic outlook and political problems. Particularly notable is the treatment of the impact of Western ideas and the awakening of aspirations in these traditionally placid people. The role of the West toward this area and the need to clear up misunderstanding provide serious food for thought." D. W. Knepper

+ Christian Century 71:554 My 5 '54 270w

Foreign Affairs 32:518 Ap '54 10w

"Southeast Asia in the Coming World is composed of a series of papers presented at a conference held in Washington in August, 1952, under the auspices of the School of Advanced International Studies of Johns Hopkins University. Like many other collections of papers, including a somewhat similar volume, South Asia in the World Today, published by the University of Chicago Press in 1950, it suffers from diffuseness, lack of continuity, and variability of quality. Nevertheless, it is a valuable book for the student of Southeast Asian affairs and international relations in general. The roster of co-authors includes some of the more distinguished Western students of Asian affairs, as well as several Southeast Asian scholars." N. S. Ginsburg

+ J Pol Econ 62:76 F '54 450w

"As an over-all picture of Southeast Asian problems, the symposium is highly inconclusive. One reason may be that, with few exceptions, the contributors seem to regard the exigencies of the cold war and the dangers of communism as basic components of every problem. . . The general psychological outlook suggested in several of the papers, the lack of scholarly criticism, the direct relationship assumed to exist between political science and political aims—all these would seem to point to the need for reconsideration. Fortunately, warning signals were hoisted at the conference: of these, Paul Clyde's magnificent paper, 'Historical Reflections on Continuity in United States Far Eastern Policy', and Rupert Emerson's concluding remarks, 'Our Responsibilities in Southeast Asia', deserve particular attention." C. A. O. van Nieuwenhuijze

+ Pacific Affairs 26:358 D '53 480w

THAYER, VIVIAN TROW. Public education and its critics. (Kappa delta pi lecture ser) 170p $2.50 Macmillan (N Y)

370.973 Education—U.S.

54-9475

"The author defends the public schools against the planned attacks of skilled propagandists, revealing their motives and differentiating between their misleading attacks and the honest criticisms of good citizens." Cleveland Open Shelf

"His analysis of the great issues now at stake in American education makes this an important book in its field."

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p23 Ag '54

Reviewed by Benjamin Fine

Sat R 37:29 S 11 '54 320w

"It is unfortunate that the author finds it necessary to take up space by beating dead dogs, those irresponsible enemies of the schools. In general, however, his treatment of the situations in education is to the point and specific. Nowhere does he take cognizance of the Essentialist critics of American education, a fact which makes his book rather one-sided and unrepresentative as a commentary on educational criticism. Were he less a special pleader and more an impartial observer, he would have found occasion to consider additional evidence which would perhaps have modified his uncompromising stand on 'sectarian attacks' upon the American public school." W. W. Brickman

+ School and Society 80:139 O 30 '54 200w

THEOBALD, ROBERT ALFRED. Final secret of Pearl Harbor; the Washington contribution to the Japanese attack; with corroborative forewords by Husband E. Kimmel and William F. Halsey. 202p $3.50 Devin-Adair 940.531 Pearl Harbor, Battle of, 1941. World war, 1939-1945—U.S.

54-9575

It is the author's thesis that the attack on Pearl Harbor was the responsibility of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Admiral Theobald was serving at Pearl Harbor at the time of the attack. It is his contention that Roosevelt wanted to counteract American apathy by forcing a decision upon the nation, and that it took the form of the attack of December 7, 1941.

Cath World 179:400 Ag '54 250w

Reviewed by George Morgenstern

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 2 '54

600w

"What the Admiral's little book poses is not a question which may launch new investigations, as intended. Instead it will impress careful readers with the growing need for responsibility in handling history, the need for eliminating partisan and personal feelings in handling matters which affect the nation as a whole, of supporting rather than breaking down the vital institution of National Unity, not only when dealing with past events, but in meeting new crises when they arise." Gordon Walker

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 20 '54

650w

Foreign Affairs 32:674 J1 '54 40w

Kirkus 22:139 F 15 '54 130w

"For his argument that this is the basic truth, the Admiral presents no new pertinent proved facts, only new inferences. Time and again he asserts that his version of some fact or action could only mean what he infers it to mean, when it could have had, and usually did have, any one of a number of other meanings. He does not seem to have measured the flow of his assertions against any of the other studies on the historical events of which the Pearl Harbor attack was the climax, such as that of Langer and Gleason, or against the Japanese records, now of easy access." Herbert Feis

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 25 '54

1600w

"Until positive evidence is forthcoming responsible historical scholarship should not accept Admiral Theobald's strictures as anything more than a questionable hypothesis." S. F. Bemis

N Y Times p3 My 2 '54 550w

THEOBALD, R. A.—Continued

"This is a typical example of special pleading. One must realize that Admiral Theobald is sincere and believes what he writes. . . It won't hold water. Admiral Theobald knows that high authority can only guess what a potential enemy will do. He also knows that superior authority is not bound to tell subordinates its doubts and uncertainties." Powers Symington

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 25 '54
500w

"It seems unfortunate that Admiral Theobald should have chosen to devote his very considerable talents to the assemblage of such a miscellany of partial facts and innuendo. Its lack of balanced objectivity of judgment, and its ignoring of most of the relevant facts and data that do not gibe with author's predetermined thesis render the book of dubious value."

A. H. McCullom

— + Sat R 37:13 My 29 '54 900w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54
300w

THIRKELL, MRS ANGELA (MACKAIL). What did it mean? 346p $3.95 Knopf

54-8769

This new chronicle of Barsetshire describes the activities of the coronation summer in the town of Northbridge.

Booklist 51:111 N 1 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 180:232 D '54 220w

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 14 '54
400w

"It is surprising how pleasant a picture Mrs. Thirkell has been able to paint for us within the limits of one English county. But we sometimes wish that a writer who can handle so skillfully the conversation of a miscellaneous dinner party . . . would launch out into deep waters. We find the constant allusions to liquor somewhat threadbare, and we know she does not ever have to resort to questionable taste to display her wit and her considerable knowledge of human nature. Cannot she be persuaded to devote her fine talents to new worlds?" Edith Prudden

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 O 28 '54
400w

"The familiar divagations are wearing thin-ish, the tone is getting waspish, although the people are as pleasant."

Kirkus 22:544 Ag 15 '54 130w

"Recommended to the elect, e.g., Mrs. Thirkell's large and devoted following." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:1506 S 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by Isabel Quigly
Manchester Guardian p4 J1 13 '54 40w

"Mrs. Thirkell cannot be dull. But in 'What Did It Mean?' there is some reason to suspect that the satisfactions of a land restored to Conservative guidance and Elizabethan greatness do not serve her so well as did adversity. She is too well content to entertain her readers altogether in the manner to which they have become accustomed." Frances Lindley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 31 '54
300w

Reviewed by Isabelle Mallet
N Y Times p43 O 17 '54 430w

"In her meandering way, Mrs. Thirkell can still charm."

+ New Yorker 30:162 O 16 '54 110w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Sat R 37:27 N 6 '54 550w

"This is a confident piece of work in which the bold, easy style seems impatient of some maddening repetitions and nonchalant delaying tactics. . . Mrs. Thirkell is well known for her lively-eyed description and quick-tongued dialogue. In What did it Mean? these qualities, together with other good things, clamour for inclusion in a narrative that is something more than a succession of diverting episodes."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p437 J1 9 '54
200w

THIRUMALAI, S. Post-war agricultural problems and policies in India; issued in co-operation with the Indian society of agricultural economics, Bombay. 280p il $3.50 Inst. of Pacific relations

338.1 Agriculture—India 54-3563

"A monograph on India's agricultural problems and on the agrarian, technological and economic reforms required to overcome them." Foreign Affairs

"A highly specialized and detailed study of a problem that has world-wide implications. . . On the whole, the picture is not encouraging, but the author shows in what areas more can be done than is now being tackled."

Current Hist 27:325 N '54 60w

Foreign Affairs 33:167 O '54 10w

THOMAS, BRINLEY. Migration and economic growth; a study of Great Britain and the Atlantic economy. 362p $8 Cambridge

325 Emigration and immigration [A54-5994]

"Deals with an area long neglected in the economic sphere—the movements of peoples. . . Here the author examines migration from 1815 to 1945 between the Commonwealth, Germany and the United States from the viewpoint of the economic effects in the old and the new countries, its effects on capital export, on the social stratification within the countries. He analyzes the economic factors constituting 'push' from the home country and 'pull' towards the new area, and decides that on the whole the 'pull' is stronger than the 'push.' . . The lessons which the author discovers from his study on the growth of the Atlantic economy throws much light on present-day imbalances between the dollar and the sterling areas, and indicates hopeful possibilities for future action." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

"Impressive study."

+ Current Hist 27:190 S '54 200w

"This is a first-rate pioneer study of the development of the international economy up to 1913 and beyond. . . The writing is scholarly and statistical, but such is its lucidity that the general reader, especially if he skips the first eighty pages, will find plenty to hold his interest." W. A. Lewis

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 4 '54 550w

"Professor Thomas's numerous tables have been calculated with statistical ingenuity in face of many glaring defects and discrepancies in the official figures. . . Economists and economic historians will welcome Professor Thomas's announcement that he hopes to apply his methods of analysis on a more elaborate scale to the experience of Canada (to which he admits he has not done justice in the present volume), Australia and Brazil since 1900."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p359 Je 4 '54
900w

THOMAS, CAROLYN. Hearse horse snickered. 255p $2.50 Lippincott

Detective story.

"Although still wordy beyond need Carolyn Thomas' mysteries become more tolerable as they multiply. This third, more or less in the tradition of the Norths, catches at interest on the score of setting (New Mexico) and plot (nicely ingenious) and acceptably sketched personnel." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 14 '54
20w

"Often amusing, if superficial and wordy." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p39 O 31 '54 20w

"Fairly well plotted and most amusingly told." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 21 '54
30w

"Slightly confusing." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 20w

THOMAS, DYLAN. Doctor and the devils; from the story by Donald Taylor. 138p $2.50
New directions

822

53-12848

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"The last work of Dylan Thomas to be published in his lifetime is a product not of his genius but of his talent. The distinction is imperative if the present work is to be fairly assessed and properly placed within the body of his writings. . . As a form of literature, the scenario has teased writers ever since D. W. Griffith made it clear that the motion picture could be a kind of visual literature. In Thomas' hands we have, perhaps, the most useful illustration of its literary potentialities. Much of the Doctor and the Devils reads like a series of prose poems, yet nowhere does Thomas make the mistake of trying to have words perform that which is properly within the province of the camera's eye. His words are directives, suggestions, colorations. Economical and felicitous in themselves, they never indulge in tricks of their own, or muddled with an idea perceptions that must communicate visually." J. M. Brinnin

+ New Repub 130:19 Ja 25 '54 650w

"Thomas unfurls the grisly tale with admirably few clichés, in either dialogue or shooting directions."

+ New Yorker 30:120 Mr 11 '54 90w

"One can't exactly say that Thomas sheds any new light on the case of Burke and Hare, but this extremely interesting treatment has deepened its tragic and awesome shadows." L. G. O.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 7 '54 240w

"As a study in the macabre, the scenario exhibits enough thrills and shudders to satisfy the most gruesome taste; and as a problem-drama it explores the distance between a scientist's proud dedication and his pity for the inhuman means of attaining it. Except for some repetitiousness and a stilted tone in the doctor's utterances, the scenario reads easily, and with vivid visual effect." Robert Halsband

+ Sat R 37:38 Mr 6 '54 180w

THOMAS, DYLAN. Quite early one morning [stories, sketches, and essays]. 240p $3.50
New directions

828

54-12907

An anthology of twenty-five prose pieces by Dylan Thomas, some newly discovered, some heard over the air or on records. Those in the first section of the book are autobiographical; some of the others are about other Welsh poets.

"This is the closest we shall come to the autobiography of one of the finest lyric poets of our time and I must say I find it delightful." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 195:78 Ja '55 430w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 19 '54 250w

"From high comedy Dylan Thomas turns to high seriousness and fine criticism as he evaluates the contribution and person of Wilfred Owen—this is as moving tribute and commentary as one will ever read—and of Sir Philip Sidney, another poet lost to us, like Thomas, too soon. With quicksilver wit and high-voltage verbiage, with love and candor, Dylan Thomas lays before us a feast of creation and criticism, rich and varied."

+ Kirkus 22:720 O 15 '54 180w

"The book is scrappy, but the writing is vivid and glowing, giving us another reason to mourn the death of this author. Libraries that have his Collected Poems will want this." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:2208 N 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by Jacob Korg

Nation 179:552 D 25 '54 800w

"It is an enchanting collection, though the second part, consisting of talks on literary subjects, is less exciting than the first: in them,

Thomas is on his best behaviour, and when he was on his best behaviour he was at less than his best. What are really valuable here are the reminiscences of childhood and holidays and Swansea and the pieces of casual reporting, on the Festival of Britain, the International Eisteddfod at Llangollen, and the wonderful impression of English lecturers in America." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:586 N 6 '54 750w

"A delightful and a moving book." Gene Baro
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 19 '54 500w

"He was liable to get drunk on words (some of the early poems suffer from this), but in the best pieces in this book that sheer horse sense, which inspired the Fool in 'King Lear' and which enabled Thomas to chat with any chance comer, binds his fantasies to earth, while that earth itself, since he fulfills the requirements of Synge, is lit with the lights of dream. Stage lighting? Certainly. That makes it no less real." Louis MacNeice

+ N Y Times p1 D 19 '54 950w

+ Time 64:68 D 27 '54 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p731 N 19 '54 2250w

THOMAS, DYLAN. Under Milk wood. 107p $3
New directions

822

54-9641

A prose radio play dealing with the life of a Welsh village during twenty-four hours.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 193:82 Je '54 20w

"In this small masterpiece, Thomas gives a display of verbal pyrotechnics which suggests a deity disporting himself with the element he rules. Mercury playing with fire or Neptune with water could hardly turn in a more virtuosic performance than Dylan Thomas making with the Welsh blarney." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:82 Jl '54 340w

Booklist 50:354 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:218 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by Millar MacLure

Canadian Forum 34:191 N '54 240w

Reviewed by Claudia Cassidy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 18 '54 300w

Reviewed by Francis Russell

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 6 '54 700w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 79:1232 Je 15 '54 110w

Reviewed by L. F. Duchene

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 11 '54 350w

"The effect produced by the whole is that of a smaller, sweeter version of the 'Night-town' scene in Joyce's 'Ulysses.' 'Under Milk Wood' is delightful and not difficult to understand, and it will probably become Thomas's most popular work." Jacob Korg

Nation 178:360 Ap 24 '54 400w

Reviewed by William Empson

New Statesman & Nation 47:635 My 15 '54 850w

Reviewed by W. T. Scott

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 23 '54 450w

"Approaching it as an innocent reader, I find that its distinguishing character, as opposed to some of Thomas' poetry, is the immediate intelligibility of the prose. While studded with his special capering marks and turns of style, enjoyable inventions all, it relates in a saucy love of life the carryings on around the clock of some typical characters in a Welsh seacoast village. Everything happens, but nothing is accomplished." Richard Eberhart

N Y Times p5 My 9 '54 700w

New Yorker 30:104 My 29 '54 140w

Reviewed by I. L. Solomon

Sat R 37:18 Jl 3 '54 500w

"The printed words give the reader, at every turn, the Welsh voice and, frequently, the voice of the author. . . This is writing as mischievously and as wittily true about Wales as any of Caradoc Evans. It is some measure of the truth of his sympathy that Wales is not angry. This piece stands, by right and in its particular department, within the small body of the work of as original a writer as we have produced in the last twenty years. No current literary fashion, over-seriousness, personal or critical controversy ought to be allowed, however, to obscure the glorious quality of fun of Dylan Thomas and Under Milk Wood." John Arlott

THOMAS, DYLAN—Continued

+ Spec p441 Ap 9 '54 700w

"Employing the vivid imagery and robust rhythms, along with his gifts of ribald humor and sharp characterization, which have distinguished him as the outstanding lyricist of the younger generation of poets, Dylan Thomas has provided the theater with a rich slice of rural life." Richard McLaughlin

+ Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54 550w

"Under Milk Wood is the most gaily gruesome of bawdy rhetorical fancies: is it very much more? It would be wrong to weigh too heavily upon a work that has received fortuitous publicity through its author's early death; but it must be said that the view of life expressed here, which is implicit also in Thomas's poems, is an adolescent one."

Times [London] Lit Sup p148 Mr 5 '54 1100w

Reviewed by L. L. Martz

Yale R n s 44:302 winter '55 550w

THOMAS, HENRY, pseud. See Schnittkind, H. T.

THOMAS, MAUD MAY. Wait long, wait still. 224p $2.50 Arcadia
Mystery story.

"Plot remains obscure but developments are mildly diverting." Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 11 '54 110w

"Once more good material is wasted because of poor presentation." L. G. Offord
— + San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 11 '54 70w

"Plus mark." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 37:35 Ap 17 '54 10w

THOMAS, MAUDE MORGAN. Sing in the dark [a story of the Welsh in Pennsylvania] il. by Clifford H. Schule. (Land of the freer) 203p $2.75 Winston

53-7340

A novel for young people telling a story of Welsh coal miners in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania in the 1870s.

Booklist 50:384 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 20 '54 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"This could have been a longer book, for Mrs. Thomas obviously knows her subject and her writing is never dull. More information about the Eisteddfod would have been interesting—there is very little available for children about this unique Welsh festival." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:252 Ag '54 160w

"Authentic and sympathetic, this has the feeling of a people in their richness and their plight and should rank with the best in young literature."

+ Kirkus 22:120 F 15 '54 170w

"Well written. Recommended for grades 7-9." Margaret McFate

+ Library J 79:1240 Je 15 '54 100w

"Mrs. Thomas has given us a moving account of those conditions and of the back-breaking, often heartbreaking drudgery which the immigrant Welsh miners met with dignity and courage. Huw's story also illuminates the deeply religious nature of the Welsh and their musical genius." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 25 '54 80w

THOMAS, NORMAN MATTOON. Test of freedom. 211p $3 Norton

323.4 Civil rights. Communism—U.S.

54-8184

A study of civil liberty in the United States at the present, under the attacks "called communism and McCarthyism." Index.

"Sane and sober are the words which well describe this book. But they fail to do full justice to it. The balanced record and analysis of facts are interspersed with passages worth remembering for the political wisdom which they convey." Helmut Kuhn

+ Ann Am Acad 295:149 S '54 390w

"It has the triple merit of coming from a man who is scrupulously balanced in his appraisals; who is a stern critic of the doctrinaire liberal; and whose anti-Communist credentials are unassailable and hitherto have not been assailed." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:82 Ap '54 320w

Booklist 50:292 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:158 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by F. E. Faverty

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 4 '54 280w

"It is a careful examination and appraisal of the condition of civil liberties in the United States since 1947 and is a most timely book." R. R. Bruun

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 27 '54 420w

Foreign Affairs 32:674 Jl '54 30w

Kirkus 22:48 Ja 15 '54 280w

"Recommended for purchase by public and circulating libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:556 Mr 15 '54 100w

"Norman Thomas was never able to make the Socialist party a strong force in American politics, but he did make himself respected for his intellectual integrity and his championship of freedom against every threat. As might be expected, therefore, his present study is distinguished by calmness and fairness." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 7 '54 900w

"If anyone should expect that this book must be doctrinaire because it was written by a Socialist, he is in for a shock. A more temperate expression of moderate views, sandwiched between full-blooded denunciation of the extremes of Right and Left, could hardly be found." J. B. Oakes

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 7 '54 1050w

New Yorker 30:132 Mr 27 '54 140w

"Some of his opinions, especially concerning Mr. J. Edgar Hoover and the Jenner Committee, may be questioned as somewhat complacent. But, these flaws apart, Mr. Thomas' little book is a welcome addition to the literature of sanity and decency." Peter Gay

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:475 S '54 350w

"This book is calculated to stir the fires of freedom that are in danger of being stifled in the land. It imparts a better understanding of the Jeffersonian ideal. All varieties of McCarthyism are discussed, from the methods of the Senator himself to the many small-fry menaces, including local censorship groups." G. A. Barker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 21 '54 410w

"The key to Norman Thomas's thought here as elsewhere is his belief that the ethics of the democratic process takes primacy to the mechanics of government and of economics. He has never been a doctrinaire or fanatical socialist who confused the good life with an efficient economy. His stature as a democratic American grows with the time. Our children will see him as one of America's representative men in the tradition of Emerson and John Dewey." Sidney Hook

+ Sat R 37:16 Ap 24 '54 1050w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 11 '54 380w

THOMMEN, GEORGE V. Complete guide to spinning tackle. 72p il $1.50 Crown

799.12 Fishing 54-6632

Discusses how to choose the right line for your spinning outfit, tricks in using different types of tackle, and the different casts a good fisherman should master.

Booklist 50:396 Je 15 '54

"This little handbook on the very popular sport of spin casting for fish doesn't waste a word in telling the beginner how to assemble an outfit and learn the technique of spinning. . . The numerous illustrations not only are good, but unusually helpful to a novice just taking up spinning." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 16 '54 90w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:1522 S 1 '54 10w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 15 '54 70w

THOMPSON, DUNSTAN. Dove with the bough of olive. 279p $3.75 Simon & Schuster

54-5817

"Dunstan Thompson has peopled his first novel with a group of Catholics living in London, some Americans, some English. . . The episodes described are the events leading up to a dinner party, the party itself, and its immediate consequences. The story is told from the point of view of each of the central characters, chapter by chapter. They include Lady Katherine Diss, the sixty-five-year-old American beauty who is the focal point of the story, her elderly admirer, an aristocratic monsignor, a convert poet, Lady Katherine's gay and irresponsible son, the son's admirer, a husband and wife acting team, a diplomat, and assorted others." N Y Times

"Mr. Thompson's characters talk and think at great length on every contemporary attitude toward the Church, the state, and the world generally. Much of this is fun and some of it is penetrating, but the author makes far too many points through his glib puppets." Riley Hughes

Cath World 180:72 O '54 300w

"That frequently bad penny, The Catholic Novel, has turned up again, complete with spiritual regeneration in the final chapters. But this time, we gratefully report, the coin is so fresh from the mint, so shiny with a kind of Firbankian polish, that its value is many times enhanced." Jean Holzhauer

+ Commonweal 60:206 My 28 '54 600w

Kirkus 22:83 F 1 '54 180w

"For those who are interested in reading about sophisticated Londoners." M. P. McKay

Library J 79:623 Ap 1 '54 100w

"A thoughtful first novel by an American writer known until now for his poetry." Gouv-erneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 15 '54 600w

New Yorker 30:118 Je 12 '54 220w

"The Dove with the Bough of Olive is a brave and interesting try, but it seems to prove that any author who attempts to mix the frivolities of Belgravia with the profundities of Heaven is in mortal danger of going straight to Hollywood."

Time 63:132 My 17 '54 600w

THOMPSON, ERA BELL. Africa, land of my fathers. 281p $3.75 Doubleday

960 [916] Africa—Description and travel. Africa—Social conditions 54-10091

The editor of Ebony magazine, an American-born Negro, spent three months touring Africa, visiting or seeing briefly eighteen countries and traveling 12,000 miles. This is the account of her trip, and some of the startling discoveries she made.

Booklist 51:105 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:6 O '54 30w

"Miss Thompson is a competent journalist, but she has cluttered her book with nebulous details, and her reporting is all too brief and fragmentary." Roi Ottley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 3 '54 550w

"Miss Thompson has courage as well as gaiety and charity, and although hers are sometimes surface impressions there is here none of the superficiality of bitterness." J. A. May

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 30 '54 250w

Kirkus 22:554 Ag 15 '54 150w

"Recommended for all general collections as a different African travel book." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 79:1830 O 1 '54 160w

"Graphic, penetrating, this is a highly pertinent contribution to current thinking." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 10 '54 600w

"Making this journey was an act of courage, and the description, in subjective terms, of the psychological torture suffered by an educated Negro in multi-racial Africa today gives her book a rare importance." Peter Abrahams

+ N Y Times p28 S 26 '54 320w

"It is a travel book, and one is given to feel that Miss Thompson traveled too fast, too far, and in too short a time to see very much. What she did see, however, she saw vividly and she sets it down with urbane wit." Saunders Redding

+ Sat R 37:19 O 23 '54 800w

THOMPSON, FAITH. Short history of Parliament, 1295-1642. 280p $4.50 Univ. of Minn. press

328.42 Great Britain. Parliament—History

53-10471

"A social, historical and political study of the evolution of the British Parliament during the years it spanned the Medieval Ages and modern times. The author, Professor of History at the University of Minnesota, has not written a textbook on Parliamentary growth. The work assumes much basic historical knowledge—from this springboard, she has evolved an account of the social background and the personalities involved in shaping Parliament from the days when it was a meeting of the King's tenants-in-chief to the Long Parliament and the unhappy demise of Charles I." Current Hist

"Criticisms notwithstanding, Miss Thompson has prepared a book with few errors and one which many will find very useful as an introduction to the history of parliament or as a partial summary of the last half-century of work on the subject." W. H. Coates

+ Am Hist R 59:609 Ap '54 360w

"Obviously in a book of this sort any reviewer will find statements that trouble him. . . But these are small flaws that will not trouble most readers of this excellent book." Sidney Painter

+ Ann Am Acad 293:197 My '54 460w

Reviewed by F. D. Blackley

Canadian Hist R 35:163 Je '54 390w

"Interesting, highly readable."

+ Current Hist 26:62 Ja '54 100w

"In the present state of parliamentary studies no one would be bold enough to attempt a definitive single-volume history, and Miss Thompson's book must be judged in terms of her restricted intentions. She is writing, not for scholars, but for students, certainly American students, of college age in courses in English history and literature, and for a wider reading public with an interest in parliamentary government. In four of her announced aims she is largely successful." R. K. Webb

+ Pol Sci Q 69:150 Mr '54 600w

THOMPSON, FAITH—Continued

"Miss Thompson is at her best when dealing with the legal developments and personalities connected with early Parliaments. Generous quotations from both contemporary sources and modern commentators do much to enliven this well-told tale of that ancient English form of government, which 'is and by rights ought to be, King, Lords, and Commons.'" John True-man

+ Sat R 37:33 Mr 27 '54 230w

"Faith Thompson's history of Parliament down to the mid-seventeenth century is a short readable account, sound in scholarship, with more character and substance than a textbook, yet less detailed and technical than a specialist's monograph." Mildred Campbell

+ Yale R n ■ 43:457 spring '54 250w

THOMPSON, GORDON VALLINS ELLIOT.
Adventure of space travel. 253p il $3 Roy pubs.

629.14353 [629.1388] Interplanetary voyages 53-12116

"This British book explains the problems of man as he attempts to conquer space by rocket power. Explanation is highly technical but accurate and mostly non-mathematical. The adventurer in space rides, in imagination, a rocket and experiences thrills that a rocket passenger will some day have. The last chapter deals with ways in which man will not be able to conquer space. For the reader who knows no science." Library J

Booklist 50:324 Ap 15 '54

"Touching on the many aspects of space travel from historical development through mechanical principles and on to the first space station and actual flights, he stresses the problems yet to be solved and while sure of a future in space has his feet at all times firmly on the ground."

+ Kirkus 22:67 F 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by M. I. Ross

Library J 79:1240 Je 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Arthur Elton

New Statesman & Nation 47:20 Ja 2 '54 180w

Reviewed by Creighton Peet

N Y Times p16 Ag 8 '54 80w

THOMPSON, JOHN ERIC. Rise and fall of Maya civilization. (Civilization of the American Indian) 287p il $5 Univ. of Okla. press 972.015 [913.72] Mayas 54-10054

"In this nontechnical introduction to the greatest of pre-Columbian cultures an archaeologist suggests some causes behind the rise and fall of Maya civilization. He outlines Maya history and evaluates the intellectual and artistic achievements of the Mayans. He presents daily life as it might have been experienced by five representative and imaginary members of the culture." Booklist

Booklist 51:59 O 1 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 24 '54 30w

"Eric Thompson has spent the greater part of his academic life in the investigation of this culture. He has now written this short fascinating chronicle of the genesis, decay and disappearance of the most advanced American cultures. Fully aware that archaeology is not a science but an art, that a man succeeds in it only by a play of the imagination, Thompson tries to get away from the technical and the dull; for him archaeology 'is a backward projection of history' and he tries to re-create the forces that made the Maya." V. W. Von Hagen

+ N Y Times p26 O 3 '54 750w

THOMPSON, LAURENCE VICTOR. Time to laugh. 190p $3.50 Messner

54-6777

"The story recounts the misadventures of Gadein, good-natured incompetent son of an African chief, in the mysterious world of the British Army Service Corps, where his magic and spirits do not seem to help him." Library J

Booklist 50:343 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:219 Je '54 30w

"There are many Britishisms in this book that may make it a little more difficult for American readers than it would otherwise be. In places also Mr. Thompson seems to lapse from comedy to crudity. But it would be a pity if either of these reservations discouraged a reader who looked for a time to laugh or wanted an unusual sidelight on modern Africa." J. A. May

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22 '54 550w

"A delightful and touching story."

+ Kirkus 22:128 F 15 '54 160w

"A delightfully comic story... Highly recommended as good reading and good writing." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 79:552 Mr 15 '54 80w

"The book is delightful and most ably done." Elizabeth Jenkins

+ Manchester Guardian p6 O ■ '53 300w

"The best part of 'A Time to Laugh' is the author's clarity of heart which enables him to depict stupid, good, sly, devious, lazy, conscientious, brutal, kindly men, all with sympathy."

+ Nation 178:447 My 22 '54 240w

"Mr. Thompson has seemed to imagine sometimes that his story is flagging, and has there attempted to remedy the matter by injecting it with the strained facetiousness of the humour columns of the Saturday evening papers. The book suffers this without any real harm; but it is sad that it should be marked at all by so completely unnecessary a blemish." Derwent May

New Statesman & Nation 46:609 N 14 '53 180w

"So far as I know, no pleasanter nor funnier book has yet come out of World War II." Marion Hargrove

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 4 '54 350w

"The book, for an American reader, is difficult to understand in many places because of the Britishisms, the Sudanisms and the fact that both are mixed with military slang. This makes for a unique but very special reference novel which gives, as the title promises, time to laugh, but a reader has to work pretty hard at it." Herbert Mitgang

+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 28 '54 380w

"Mr. Thompson's writing is forthright and economical, and his book is effective in a brittle, wry way."

+ New Yorker 30:133 My 22 '54 90w

"It is a little masterpiece of sympathetic comedy and carries a gentle moral along with the humor." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 28 '54 550w

"An excellent first novel which never tries to go beyond its chosen limits." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p408 O 9 '53 50w

Time 63:108 Ap 5 '54 500w

"A good-natured and high-spirited skit."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p689 O 30 '53 80w

THOMPSON, LAWRENCE SIDNEY, and THOMPSON, ALGERNON D. Kentucky novel. 172p $2.50 Univ. of Ky. press

016.813 Kentucky in literature—Bibliography. Fiction—Bibliography 53-5520

"As the term is used in this work, a 'Kentucky novel' is one in which a major portion of the action takes place in that state. In this volume are listed and described more than four hundred such novels published between 1793 and 1951. The work is divided into three parts: Adult Fiction, Juvenile Fiction, and Dime Novels. Each part is arranged alphabetically by author. Each entry in the first two parts includes the full name of the author of the novel, complete title of the first edition, place, publisher, date, and pagination of the main text. Copies are not located. Part three describes only those dime novels which are in the University of Kentucky libraries. The annotations give brief descriptions of the plots and locales with occasional critical comments. There are both author and title indexes." U S Quarterly Bk R

Sat R 37:19 Ja 30 '54 200w
U S Quarterly Bk R 10:136 Mr '54 200w

THOMPSON, LOVELL, ed. Youth's companion. See Youth's companion (periodical)

THOMPSON, MORTON. Not as a stranger. 948p $4.75 Scribner

53-13297

"Lucas Marsh, a dedicated young man who was, in the words of his creator, born to be a doctor, struggles from boyhood to get his training, and becomes at last a fine doctor who promises someday to become human enough to try to make a success of the unfortunate marriage he has wished upon himself and upon the unhappy, long-suffering woman who is his wife." New Yorker

Booklist 50:260 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:108 F '54 30w

"Because of this book's materialism and its failure to rise very much above materialistic values, and its continuous and insistent emphasis on medical cases and experiences which involve the sexual, this book should not be generally recommended." Riley Hughes

— + Cath World 179:153 My '54 250w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 10 '54 290w

"Two major factors should be considered as operative in the popularity potentials of this book, a novel dedicated to the cause of pure medicine. First, the sometimes inexplicable and almost morbid fascination medical data, even scientific medical data, holds for many laymen. Second, the selection of the book as January Literary Guild. The story itself comes in a poor third. . . Doctors will resent many of the charges, but will read the book for its intimate closeup of their own problems, through training to practice."

Kirkus 21:765 D 1 '53 360w

"Dr. Marsh is not an attractive protagonist and many of the lesser characters are familiar stock figures. The medical details are very well done, but their very profusion occasionally drugs one into mistakenly believing that he has wandered into a copy of Merck's Manual. Yet despite annoying style mannerisms and the frequent artificiality of the more 'serious' dialogue, Mr. Thompson drags the weary reader along to the happy ending by the force of his narrative and the power of his ideas." Louis Barron

+ — Library J 78:2213 D 15 '53 220w

"Years of research on the author's part made it possible for him, though he was not himself a doctor, to write with authenticity about disease, operations, treatments, techniques and routines. But the author's instinctive observations of the heart lift this long tale from the confines of the tract and make it a moving, wounding, absorbing human drama." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 10 '54 900w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks

N Y Times p4 Ja 10 '54 550w

"Although this is a thoroughly coherent story, there is at times a disconnectedness about it, as if Mr. Thompson, who died last year, had combined the stories of a great many young doctors he knew, and while it is interesting, effective, and at times even exciting, it is never very moving."

New Yorker 29:86 Ja 9 '54 120w

"'Not As a Stranger' is a really good book — something that is not necessarily true of all best sellers." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 13 '54 800w

"'Not As a Stranger' is a work of beauty and power, possibly the finest novel about a doctor that this country has seen. This will not come as any surprise to those who remember 'The Cry and the Covenant,' Morton Thompson's distinguished novel about Semmelweis, in 1949. Yet unlike the earlier one, which was rooted in biography, 'Not As a Stranger' is creative work from the whole cloth, a massive book certain of popularity and, I think, of long survival." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 36:18 Ja 9 '54 750w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 31 '54 550w

"'Not As A Stranger' is a heartwarming though crudely repetitive story of a passionate idealist whose passion is medicine. No novel ever written has contained more authentic, hard-won facts about doctors, patients, hospitals. Hypochondriacs will devour it; few of those who are not will consider its nearly 1,000 pages a waste if they stick it out. With all its literary embarrassments, Not As a Stranger speaks up for life as few recent literary successes have done."

+ Time 63:108 Ja 18 '54 500w

"The novel sags by the weight of its implausible protagonist. But it was honestly written and at its best is honestly moving."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:195 Je '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:32 Ja '54

THOMPSON, NELLIE ZETTA. Your school clubs. 317p $3.50 Dutton

371.8 Student activities 53-10337

"A complete guide to 500 activities for group leaders and members." (Subtitle) Chapter bibliographies, Index.

Booklist 50:136 D 1 '53

"Local interest and leadership are more real than ideas, however good, borrowed out of a book and applied on; yet for the teacher whose time and effort are overstrained, and who has had slight activity experience herself, such a book is extremely useful and can meet an urgent need. Good short lists for further reading are included for each club."

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 19 '53 130w

"Quite comprehensive and should be useful in spite of some shortcomings. First, there is the terrible multiplication and classification of activities, broken down by fine distinctions, presumably in order to hit the magic figure of 500. Second, her style of writing is pedestrian. Third, her organization is poor. Finally, the book contains some embarrassing mistakes." G. E. A.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p33 N 29 '53 300w

"The author has made a constructive effort to communicate the importance and need of the club program in the modern high school, and she has outlined a competent plan of procedure. We have here an excellent, if somewhat mundane, base from which to start. Although considerable credit should be given to Thompson for her lists of specific activities, bibliographical materials, and additional sources of information, the actual tenor of the discussion could be more inspiring. Nevertheless, the usefulness of this work as a sourcebook is substantial, and users of the volume will be grateful for the variety of information offered under one cover." M. F. Hamp

+ — School R 62:246 Ap '54 450w

THOMSON, PETER. Sierra ranger. 212p $2.50 Dodd

54-7756

A novel for older boys about the early experiences of a college boy in the pursuit of his chosen career, forest ranger.

Booklist 51:45 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:14 O '54 20w

"As in most career books, success is obtained too easily. However, the author is well qualified to write in this field and gives us a good, fast-paced story of the out-of-doors, as well as a good picture of the round-the-clock job of a ranger. For boys 11-15." R. H. Urban

THOMSON, PETER—Continued

+ Library J 79:1328 J1 '54 80w

THORNBURY, WILLIAM DAVID. Principles of geomorphology. 618p il maps $8 Wiley

551.4 Geology. Physical geography 54-7553

"A college text with several distinctive and valuable features. It presents geomorphology, or the study of landforms, as a science with potential practical applications. It emphasizes basic processes, and the illustrations have been selected as examples of the effects of these processes rather than as scenes of natural beauty. The various theories on the evolution of specific varieties of landforms are presented critically, with references to source articles. Intended primarily for college students, the book should prove worthwhile reading for geology graduates as well." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Some introductory texts in geomorphology are pleasant descriptions of landscape forms, beautifully illustrated, but with sparse references to the scientific aspects. In contrast, this book is solidly anchored to basic principles and is in effect a survey of modern scientific findings and hypotheses." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 79:1595 S 15 '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:56 J1 '54

THORNTON, FRANCIS BEAUCHESNE. Catholic shrines in the United States and Canada. 340p il maps $4.75 Funk, W.

282.7 Shrines 53-10386

"The esthetic, architectural and historical points of interest of 119 shrines, supplemented by more than 140 photographs and maps. This book takes the reader from the Spanish missions of California and the Southwest to the Basilica of St. Anne-de-Beaupré in Quebec." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:294 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:180 My '54 10w

"Recommended to public, school and Catholic libraries." R. J. Hurley

+ Library J 79:1228 Je 15 '54 140w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 7 '54 60w

"The book is very beautifully printed and includes more than 140 outstanding photographs. Of incidental value is the comparison of architectural styles which this affords. The mission churches with their beautifully simple lines possess an integrity of form seldom found in the churches of the east." R. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 16 '54 250w

THORP, WILLARD LONG. Trade, aid, or what? a report based upon a conference on international economic policy at the Merrill center for economics, summer, 1953. 224p $4.50 Johns Hopkins press

382 Foreign economic relations 54-9177

"A report based on eight weeks of discussions by experts of the topic 'trade, aid, or what?' Nearly sixty men, recruited mainly from academic and government circles with a sprinkling of business men, contributed their ideas on commercial policy. . . . The author, formerly Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, and now an economics professor at Amherst College has attempted to outline the problems that were discussed and indicated the various considerations affecting each." Ann Am Acad

"A lucid and straightforward statement of a complex and difficult range of problems. Occasionally, the author expresses his own view of the directions in which a solution must be sought, but for the most part he confines himself to a thoughtful discussion of the ins and outs of the problems that come within his purview." I. B. Kravis

+ Ann Am Acad 296:166 N '54 300w

"Lucid and illuminating book." Robert Lekachman

+ New Repub 131:19 Ag 16 '54 1150w

Reviewed by T. C. Blaisdell
Pol Sci Q 69:610 D '54 850w

THRUENSEN, RICHARD. Transocean: the story of an unusual airline. 241p $3 Holt

387.74 Nelson, Orvis Marcus. Transocean air lines, incorporated 53-9593

"The story of an unusual airline—one which has flown Moslems to Mecca, Army officers to Okinawa, a load of contraband sweepstakes tickets (unknowingly) across the Atlantic and plane parts to Pakistan. In 1946, with a lot of flying hours and a little over $1000 cash, Orvis Nelson organized Transocean Air Lines. Today that airline operates 114 aircraft, a printing plant, a construction company, a hotel, half a dozen airlines and a number of other enterprises." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 50:159 D 15 '53

Kirkus 21:616 S 1 '53 120w

"Recommended for the interested of all ages." Karl Brown

+ Library J 78:1844 O 15 '53 110w

Springf'd Republican p10D Ja 17 '54 100w

THURMAN, HOWARD. Meditations of the heart. 216p $2.75 Harper

242 Devotional exercises 53-10980

A series of brief meditations on religious subjects. They are grouped under five headings: The inward sea; The binding ties; Life is alive; The moment of celebration; and Meditations of the heart. The author is Dean of the Chapel at Boston University and professor of spiritual disciplines and resources in the School of Theology.

"The chapters on prayer are among the best in the book. They give not only a philosophy of prayer, but also practical suggestions for strengthening the prayer habit. The minister will find this a source of ideas and illustrations for sermon material. The layman will find it helpful for personal devotions and family worship." H. G. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 10 '54 180w

"Highly recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:22 Ja '54

THURSTON, HERBERT. Ghosts and poltergeists; ed. by J. H. Crehan. 210p $4 Regnery

133.1 Ghosts 54-8235

"A collection of writings on the activities of the poltergeist which begins with a chapter on 'A General View of Poltergeist Phenomena,' goes on to discuss 'Ghostly Visitants that Bite' and 'Ghosts that Tease,' and then recounts a number of individual cases of supernatural visitations. Fr. Thurston described himself as a 'firm believer in the reality of poltergeists and in the impossibility of finding any natural explanation of their recorded activities.'" N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The list of happenings which the critical-minded Jesuit classified as genuine will delight his old admirers and will open the eyes of many a new reader. If all the persons who would really find delight in its reading are fortunate enough to come upon the book it will have a wide circulation."

+ Cath World 179:79 Ap '54 130w

Reviewed by August Derleth

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 18 '54 150w

Christian Century 71:585 My 12 '54 200w

Reviewed by Francis Sweeney

Commonweal 60:126 My 7 '54 550w

Reviewed by Letitia Fairfield

New Statesman & Nation 47:377 Mr 20 '54 600w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 28
'54 50w

Reviewed by J. N. Leonard

N Y Times p18 Ap 18 '54 450w

"Father Thurston's book will give you a good rundown on the history of poltergeist phenomena. The author's comments will interest you if you care at all for this sort of thing. After all, the great pragmatist, William James, for one, is on record as believing in poltergeists. Maybe the studies of Father Thurston will convince unbelievers. For myself—perhaps like you—I'll stay on the fence for a while."

J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 15 '54
700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Je 25
'54 250w

TIETZE, HANS. Toulouse Lautrec. 61p $4.75
Beechhurst press

759.4 Toulouse-Lautrec Monfa, Henri Marie
Raymond de 53-13338

An analysis of the life and art of Henri Toulouse Lautrec, illustrated with forty-nine reproductions, including twelve in full color. The author is an internationally known art historian. Selected bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ap 4 '54
30w

Reviewed by Dorothy Adlow

Christian Science Monitor D 3 '53 20w

"Good buy for popular and up-to-date use."

A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:208 F 1 '54 10w

"All three texts are well written, but only the Tietze essay on Toulouse-Lautrec can claim to be original. Cutting beneath the surface of biography, it achieves an imaginative interpretation."

+ Nation 178:339 Ap 17 '54 160w

Reviewed by Robert Richman

New Repub 129:21 D 21 '53 20w

Reviewed by Aline Louchheim

N Y Times p4 D 11 '53 20w

TIETZE, HANS. Treasures of the great national galleries; an introduction to the paintings in the famous museums of the Western world. 424p pl $10 Phaidon

759.08 Art—Galleries and museums. Paintings 54-13297

"With the help of three hundred illustrations, twenty-four in full color, the reader has an opportunity to visit vicariously major art galleries of Europe and to see reproductions of works by the great masters. Here are works of the early Flemish masters, the great painters of Germany, France, England, Spain, and Italy... H. Tietze has told the story of these national galleries of Vienna, Florence, Paris, Madrid, Amsterdam, Berlin, London, Washington, New York, Venice, Rome, Dresden, Munich, Milan, and Budapest." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

Booklist 51:148 D 1 '54

Reviewed by Gary Sheahan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 19 '54
50w

"The photography is of good quality and in the way in which the camera can bring art to all of us, there is much to learn, much to enjoy."

D. A.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 2 '54
120w

"Want to see three-star items in the world's great National Galleries for less than the price of an air-tourist ticket? Then Phaidon's new book on the subject is the answer... Mr. Tietze deserves praise not only for his research but also for his tactful honesty, as, for instance, in handling the quality of the gargantuan Kress gift versus the Widener weeded-out one to our National Gallery." A. B. Saarinen

+ N Y Times p4 D 5 '54 180w

"This is such an excellent idea that one wonders why it has never been tried before—at least in a single, moderately priced (ten dollars) volume... There are around three hundred illustrations, twenty-four of them in full color, and they are all well reproduced and, in general, well selected."

+ New Yorker 30:223 N 13 '54 160w

"For the serious reader, general or otherwise, the solidest portion of this book consists of the essays on the various galleries. Set together, these accounts form a history of museums and collecting which is of enthralling interest." S. L. Faison

+ Sat R 37:16 D 18 '54 850w

TILLICH, PAUL JOHANNES. Love, power, and justice; ontological analyses and ethical applications; given as Firth lectures in Nottingham, England and as Sprunt lectures in Richmond, Virginia. 125p $2.50 Oxford

241 Religion—Philosophy. Love (theology). Power (philosophy). Justice 54-6522

"In these lectures, first given in the University of Nottingham, Professor Tillich discusses the interrelations of love, power, and justice. He is at his best when showing how these become sentimentalised or brutalised if they fall apart from each other, either in personal or social morality." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 193:82 Je '54 40w

"Tillich's ontological approach is very commendable and his excellent insights into the nature of love, power, and justice are not to be minimized. The book is well worth reading for it is the interesting odyssey of a powerful intellect in an absorbing search for an ontological solution to the riddle of reality." John Carr

+ Cath World 179:318 Jl '54 650w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 15 '54
150w

"One could never suggest that any of Professor Tillich's writing is easy prey for the casual reader. However, Love, Power and Justice can be highly recommended as a helpful introduction, since many of the concepts and principles which figure prominently in his system appear in this volume. But even in itself it offers an unusually rewarding experience." Morley Mays

+ Christian Century 71:671 Je 2 '54 1100w

"There are many valuable things in this little book... Yet it is just to say that the book leaves one with the impression that it has all been too neat... The book is useful, then, in spite of the framework; it is an important contribution to the theological discussion of ethics. We can thank the author for a stimulating book—if only because it stimulates us to disagree." J. H. Thomas

+ Hibbert J 52:415 Jl '54 420w

"Professor Tillich is quite persuasive. More than that, he is a profound thinker and it is possible for those who do not share many of his convictions to appropriate a good deal. Not the least of his merits is to bring, again in this book, philosophy and theology into a creative relationship to their mutual profit." J. G. Gray

+ J Philos 51:644 O 14 '54 1000w

"This is a book which requires close reading, but inasmuch as Professor Tillich is one of our outstanding religious thinkers anyone who wants to become acquainted with the intellectual base of much of our current theological discussion should be familiar with this book."

+ Kirkus 22:192 Mr 15 '54 120w

"Recommended for religion and philosophy collections." Lajos Borsody

+ Library J 79:775 Ap 15 '54 80w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 13 '54 260w

"Prof. Tillich's erudition and brilliant reasoning always command respect. But his speculations are admittedly difficult and his conclusions somewhat distant from ordinary human experience." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 2 '54
330w

TILlich, P. J.—Continued

"Unlike most books of its kind, Professor Tillich's seven lectures are far too short; and, unlike many writers who treat of metaphysics, the author expounds his thesis with a winning, unevasive clarity, with an amazing economy of words, and with a power to shed light in passing on a host of associated problems. There is a joy in feeling that, while much has perforce been left unsaid, we are presented with a compact and coherent body of thought which has been carefully selected from a well-wrought doctrine of reality."

Times [London] Lit Sup p365 Je 4 '54
1150w

TIMBERLAKE, CRAIG. Life and work of David Belasco, the bishop of Broadway. 491p il $4.75 Lib. pubs.

B or 92 Belasco, David 54-11646

A documented life of David Belasco, copiously illustrated with photographs of Belasco himself and many of the stars who played during his lifetime. Chronology of Belasco's New York productions. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:61 O 1 '54

"Highly recommended for theatre and biography and American collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1596 S 15 '54 40w

"This is the first attempt to cast an objective light on one of the theater's most controversial figures."

+ Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54
110w

TIMOSHENKO, STEPHEN. Collected papers [pref. by E. L. Eriksen, and others; biographical sketch by D. H. Young]. 642p il $15 McGraw

620.1 Engineering 54-8461

"In this book 35 papers published in French, German or English by Professor Timoshenko have been reprinted in full. In addition, a list of papers published in Russian (but with titles translated into English) and a long biographical sketch written by D. H. Young are included. During his remarkable career Professor Timoshenko has made contributions of major importance to mechanical engineering, has taught in three countries and has had much influence on the development of engineering education in the United States. His treatises and textbooks are to be found in most engineering libraries, and this volume belongs with them." (Library J) No index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:991 My 15 '54 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:22 Mr '54

TIPPETT, JAMES STERLING. Search for Sammie; pictures by Beth Krush. 47p $1.50 Abingdon

54-11968

Sammie was a four-month old beagle puppy belonging to a little girl named Ann. One day Ann let Sammie outdoors without his collar and he disappeared. It was only after several days of anxious searching that Ann got her little dog back.

"Sammy is a wonderful puppy. Beth Krush's pictures bring out his qualities in full."

+ Kirkus 22:361 Je 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 79:1661 S 15 '54 70w

"It's an unpretentious little story but it carries its full quota of suspense. Beth Krush's illustrations are admirably suited to the direct, realistic tone of the book." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p38 O 10 '54 120w

"Beth Krush's delightful pictures in black-and-white and tan fit the mood of this easy-to-read story and will add to the pleasure younger children will have in reading it." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:70 N 13 '54 110w

TISDALL, EVELYN ERNEST PERCY. Alexandra, Edward VII's unpredictable queen. [Eng title: Unpredictable queen]. 308p il $4.50 Day

B or 92 Alexandra, consort of Edward VII, king of Great Britain 54-5887

A biography of the Danish princess who married Edward VII and became Queen Alexandra of Great Britain. Index.

"Mr. Tisdall has gathered from scattered printed materials the accessible facts and stories about Alexandra's life; the results are agreeable if not important. For the first thirty years his characters hardly come alive, and the author's somewhat airy way with dates and historical events is occasionally irritating or confusing. Some unbiased obiter dicta on political matters are easily ignored. Gradually accumulation of anecdotes and impressions ends in a fairly rounded portrayal. It is always, however, Alix as she appeared to others, for of letters or direct discourse by her there is strikingly little." H. D. Jordan

+ Am Hist R 60:162 O '54 200w

Booklist 50:399 Je 15 '54

"This makes the most of royal glamour but balances the stateliness with the many personal anecdotes and reflects a charming rather than a regal woman."

Kirkus 22:101 F 1 '54 200w

"As always, Mr. Tisdall writes easily and simply for all to read. General purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:770 Ap 15 '54 90w

"An entertaining narrative grounded on solid fact, the story seems to be pretty complete—except that, although Mr. Tisdall's publishers call him 'the frankest royal biographer,' there are some discreet gaps in the description of Alexandra's domestic relationship with her sybaritic husband."

+ New Yorker 30:142 My 8 '54 160w

Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54
140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:177 Jl '54

TOBA SOJO. Animal frolic [text by Velma Varner]. [41p] il $2.75 Putnam

741.91 Drawings 54-5500

"Among the treasures in the exhibit of Japanese art that toured this country last year was a thirty-six-foot scroll which depicted frogs, rabbits, monkeys and a variety of other animals disporting themselves in the manner of small boys anywhere. It is traditionally attributed to Toba Sojo (or Kakuyu), a twelfth-century priest. . . . Now for the diversion of American children—and their elders—this classic has been reproduced in book form, printed from the original in the Temple of Kozanji, Kyoto, with all its impish wit intact. Velma Varner has written a very brief text, just enough to give a sense of continuity to the pictures." N Y Times

Booklist 50:327 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:162 Ap '54 30w

"A distinguished picture book for children and art loving adults." M. B. King
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Mr 7 '54
110w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13
'54 110w

"Well reproduced on softly tinted pages, the pictures have great movement, simplicity and humor and invite one's continued examination. A book in distinguished format, with many special uses." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:93 Ap '54 160w

Kirkus 22:110 F 15 '54 80w

"Recommended for art education use." M. M. Gantt

Library J 79:787 Ap 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 16
'54 270w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p24 F 28 '54 180w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinhead

New Yorker 30:222 N 27 '54 90w

"Miss Varner has shown sensitivity in writing the simplest text, a mere running line to accompany the pictures. A child's first picture books can help to establish taste and an appreciation of art. 'The Animal Frolic' might well serve as a first introduction to art for the small child. It is a book to which he will return again and again with increasing pleasure, for the pictures speak to him directly with their robust humor, vitality, and rhythm." H. A. Masten

+ Sat R 37:54 My 15 '54 320w

Wis Lib Bul 50:216 O '54

TOBINO, MARIO. Women of Magliano; tr. by Archibald Colquhoun [Eng title: Mad women of Magliano]. 183p $3 Putnam

54-10491

"In translation from the Italian this doctor's notebook of the day to day events within a woman's asylum is more fact than fiction (Tobino was in charge of one just such as this) but the realism here is tempered by lyricism, by a sense of sadness of the sickness in this derelict, desolate world, and by spiritual faith." Kirkus

"The whole range of imbalance from shameless sensuality to frenzy to despair is transcribed with precision, and always with compassion. Limited, nevertheless."

Kirkus 22:543 J1 15 '54 150w

"The Women of Magliano' is called a novel, but only for want of a better pigeonhole in this category-minded trade. It is not that, of course, though there is material in it for novels, two or three to a page. It is the journey through a climate made familiar to us by Dante, traveled by a saddened, less robust poet, who comes to no conclusions and reports no panaceas. . . This [is an] unusual, memorable book." Evelyn Eaton

+ N Y Times p27 D 12 '54 480w

"The writing, almost devoid of psychiatric concepts or terminology, is usually explicit and neutral, but from time to time it blossoms with imaginative insights expressed in vivid and arresting figures." J. S.

+ Sat R 37:30 S 25 '54 220w

"Portraying humanity at its most forlorn, the book affirms the dignity of man, not only through the puns and nurses but through the unhappy creatures who torment them. To readers who can face the padded cell this book offers a strange and salutary experience. Mr. Archibald Colquhoun's translation is excellent." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p478 O 15 '54 110w

"Although short, it suffers from the fact that it is all on one note, a note of questioning despair; there is necessarily no variety except the varieties of madness, and it remains a series of case-histories, however well disguised by poetic and literary skill."

Times [London] Lit Sup p725 N 12 '54 60w

TOBOLDT, WILLIAM KING, ed. New automotive encyclopedia. See Motor service magazine

TOBOLSKY, ARTHUR VICTOR, and MESROBIAN, ROBERT BENJAMIN. Organic peroxides: their chemistry, decomposition and role in polymerization. 207p il $5.75 Interscience

546.2 Peroxides. Polymers and polymerization 54-7234

"Book is divided into three sections. First section deals with classification, structure, and synthesis of organic peroxides. Second part treats physical chemical aspects of the cleavages of the peroxide molecules. Third section treats role of peroxides in initiation of homogeneous vinyl polymerization." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng N 32:1507 Ap 5 '54 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:37 My '54

TODD, FREDERICK P. Soldiers of the American army. See Kredel, F., il.

TODD, MARY FIDELIS. Juggler of Notre Dame; an old French tale; retold and il. by [the author]. (Whittlesey House publication) 38p $2 McGraw

54-7366

Another retelling of the ancient French legend of the monk who did honor to the Virgin with a performance of juggling.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 193:84 Je '54 40w

Booklist 50:384 Je 1 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"The well known story simply and reverently retold, for young in heart from six to one hundred and beyond!"

+ Commonweal 61:201 N 19 '54 20w

"Still another version of the famous legend is lent a new charm with the author-artist's sturdy pictures done in stone blue and brown colors, with a simplicity that magnifies the theme. . . Done with respect and friendly reserve."

+ Kirkus 22:265 Ap 15 '54 40w

"This well-known and well-loved tale is retold very well for younger children. Illustrated with line and color wash pictures by the author. Age appeal is 6-9. Recommended." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 79:1063 Je 1 '54 40w

"The medieval legend of the monk who had only his juggler's tricks to offer as homage to the Blessed Mother has been delightfully retold for children in an attractive book." Eugenia Garson

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 15 '54 140w

"There is much charm in Miss Todd's retelling of the simple tale, and in her illustrations of the story also." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 16 '54 60w

TOKLAS, ALICE B. Cook book; il. by Sir Francis Rose. 288p $4 Harper

641.5 Cookery

54-8997

A collection of some 350 recipes by Alice B. Toklas who for many years was the companion of Gertrude Stein. Includes anecdotes about Miss Stein and about their friends, most of whom they met in France. Index.

Booklist 51:167 D 15 '54

"Intriguing as many of the recipes sound, what really fascinates the reader is the series of reminiscences which makes up more than half the book. They cover two world wars and the years between, and are populated by many of the most famous men and women of that period. Alice Toklas has a tart wit even in talking about recipes." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 28 '54 420w

"This is indeed a book for cooks, but even more for all who love life, and good writing, and above all France, and the U.S.A." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:2453 D 15 '54 100w

"Miss Toklas has ceased reading cook books at bed-time: they keep her from sleeping they are too exciting—the exciting ones, that is. And now she has added one of her own. It is illustrated by Sir Francis Rose fittingly enough, since it is his early paintings that enliven Miss Toklas' dining room. And on the back cover is Dora Maar's fine, recent portrait of Alice B. Toklas—the portrait of a wonderful, proud, distant lady, who, it seems, once sat for Goya in a Spanish shawl." J. A. Barry

+ New Repub 131:17 N 29 '54 1200w

"Immensely enjoyable to read, but I cannot imagine it becoming honourably dirty in daily use, or getting its pages stuck together with egg. On the other hand it gives one a great deal of entertaining information about domestic goings-on chez Gertrude Stein." Margaret Lane

New Statesman & Nation 48:752 D 4 '54 650w

TOKLAS, A. B.—Continued

"Miss Toklas approves of 'some man in the family' supervising or even cooking a dish because 'this raises the standard of cooking in the home.' Living so long in France is, I suppose, an acceptable excuse for advice so flagrantly un-American, but doesn't Miss Toklas want American housewives to buy her book? They'll miss something if they don't. Whether or not you care for the cord of comment and episode on which Miss Toklas has strung her beads, the recipes, the beads themselves, have 'the distinction of being distinctive.'" Rex Stout

+ N Y Times p26 N 21 '54 650w

"Actually no cook-book can contain a great deal that is wholly new; cookery has been worked over too many times. But there are many exceptions here, and the recollections and notes are wonderful." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 19 '54 700w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 21 '54 50w

"The Cook Book may give a little trouble to brides who can't afford expensive ingredients or don't know their way about a kitchen. Alice assumes that her readers not only have money but know how to make dough and can keep several other kitchen operations going at once... This is richer cooking than most U.S. diners are used to, but it will be the fiercest Francophobe who can read Alice's recipes and not hanker for a taste, the dullest cook who will not want to get to the kitchen and try them out."

+ Time 64:110 N 22 '54 600w

TOLBERT, FRANK X. Bigamy Jones; il. by Edwin Schmidt. 183p $2.75 Holt

54-5460

Story of mid-19th century Bigamy Jones, a most unusual cowboy. Bigamy can shoot better than most, is the danciest man, can work from dawn to dawn without stopping, is a fine teacher, organizer of pageants, and trainer of cattle, but marrying is Bigamy's hobby.

Booklist 50:298 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Al Chase

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Mr 14 '54 180w

Kirkus 22:72 F 1 '54 160w

"Good adult reading and in part good young adult fare. Recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:452 Mr 1 '54 120w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Mr 7 '54 50w

Reviewed by Hoffman Birney

N Y Times p33 Ap 11 '54 110w

TOLBOOM, WANDA NEILL. Tosie of the Far North; an Eskimo story; il. by Robert Bruce. [62p] $2.75 Aladdin

54-6158

"While Tosie-apik, a little Eskimo boy, loved to play with his sister and pet puppy, he dreamed of the time when he would be allowed to go hunting. Finally, his chance came, and he proved that he was old enough for the responsibilities and dangers of seal hunting." Library J

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 15 '54 40w

"Background is authentic, and Robert Bruce's illustrations are interesting. Good for reading aloud to second-graders, and third- and fourth-graders will enjoy reading it themselves. Useful for Eskimo and nomad units." Edna Rose

+ Library J 79:1064 Je 1 '54 100w

"An author who lives far within the Arctic Circle, has written an informational story, all true."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p20 My 16 '54 190w

"One seldom reads ■ story about people in ■ faraway land so appealing as 'Tosie of the Far North.' ■ The story has universal appeal in that it deals with ■ small boy's desire to conform to adult standards. Robert Bruce's poster treatment of landscapes is effective, as are the slightly caricatured Eskimo faces and figures done in bold brush line." Jeanne Massey

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 4 '54 140w

TOLKIEN, JOHN RONALD RENEL. Lord of the rings; v 1, Fellowship of the ring. 423p $5 Houghton

(54-4943)

"This is the first volume of a trilogy in which Mr Tolkien is to tell the history of the 'War of the Ring.' This magic ring, originally forged by Sauron, the Lord of Darkness, was later lost and, by what seemed a strange chance, found by Bilbo, one of those dwellers of the Middle-earth called Hobbits of whom Mr Tolkien has written in an earlier book [The Hobbit. Book Review Digest 1938]." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 26 '54 380w

Kirkus 22:598 S 1 '54 240w

"To have created so enthralling an epic-romance, with its own mythology, with such diversity of scene and character, such imaginative largess in invention and description, and such supernatural meaning underlying the wealth of incident, is a most remarkable feat. Mr Tolkien is one of those born story-tellers who makes his readers as eager as wide-eyed children for more. His style, is prose and verse, is fresh and fluent and equally apt to the expression of unearthly beauty, homely humour, or stark horror." H. I. A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 20 '54 200w

"Certain aspects of this mythic world are not completely worked out. Professor Tolkien is not an economist; there are uncertainties on the scientific side. But on the fully human side, from the standpoint of history and semantics, everything is there. And above all it is a story magnificently told, with every kind of colour and movement and greatness." Naomi Mitchison

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:331 S 18 '54 750w

"The fact remains that this is an extraordinary, a distinguished piece of work. The sustained imaginative exuberance which was one of the notable qualities of 'The Hobbit' is again apparent, and far more effective from the adult standpoint for having been subjected to a much stricter discipline. The style, though simple, is wonderfully graphic, and repeatedly rises into real eloquence. And the sweep and scope of the first volume justify what may seem its inordinate length." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 14 '54 750w

"The first thing that one asks of an adventure story is that the adventure should be various and exciting; in this respect Mr. Tolkien's invention is unflagging, and, on the primitive level of wanting to know what happens next, 'The Fellowship of the Ring' is at least as good as 'The Thirty-Nine Steps.'"

Mr. Tolkien is fortunate in possessing an amazing gift for naming and a wonderfully exact eye for description. . . . Lastly, if one is to take a tale of this kind seriously, one must feel that, however superficially unlike the world we live in its characters and events may be, it nevertheless holds up the mirror to the only nature we know, our own; in this, too, Mr. Tolkien has succeeded superbly." W. H. Auden

+ N Y Times p37 O 31 '54 850w

"The work has the air of having been written as a hobby by ■ man with ■ ferreting imagination and a capacity for industry that will not allow him to stop inventing long after all the facts are down and the picture is clear. The language is majestic and gleeful by turns, but it is almost always artificial, and, except for Hobbit enthusiasts, there is a great deal too much of it. Perhaps this is ■ book that should be read as it was presumably written—■ little at ■ time. Mr. Tolkien will reward such patient attention, because in his unhurried and independent way he has created a country, a magic, and ■ race of creatures that are entirely credible."

+ New Yorker 30:218 N 13 '54 230w

"This book has certain virtues of ■ high order, and I think we should be well advised to remember that what we have before us now is the first volume only of ■ larger work only arbitrarily divided at the point where it leaves off, and be willing to suspend judgment of this 'curious and inexplicable object' until we have seen the whole. In the meantime, I can assure the reader, the pleasure to be derived from this first volume is a pleasure not to be missed." Richard Hughes

+ Spec p408 O 1 '54 900w

Time 64:108 N 22 '54 400w

"Only considerable skill in narrative can surmount the difficulty of the complete change of key within the limits of one book. It is a near thing, but Professor Tolkien just pulls it off. The facetious account of banquets in the Shire leads on to gently beautiful descriptions of Rivendell and Lothlorien, the lush greenwood of the elves; later the grim record of the slaying of Balin, son of Fundin, the prince of the dwarfs . . . echoes deliberately the matter-of-fact despair of the Sagas. The copious invention of background and the excitement of thrilling adventure carry the reader safely from mood to mood. Yet the plot lacks balance."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p541 Ag 27 '54 750w

TOLLES, FREDERICK BARNES. George Logan of Philadelphia. 362p il $5 Oxford

B or 92 Logan, George 53-9192

"A shadowy figure in the background of early American history, George Logan has been known only as the quixotic, self-appointed emissary to France in 1798. He was the Quaker idealist whose private intercession against an impending war caused an enraged and bellicose Congress to pass the Logan Act forbidding unofficial communication with foreign governments in diplomatic disputes. In this first biographical study, Logan assumes a larger, more attractive stature. . . He was a pioneer of scientific agriculture, a sturdy opponent of slavery, and so uncompromising a pacifist that he had no stomach for trade embargoes and undertook a second peacemaking venture in 1810 in blithe disregard of the statute provoked by his first." U S Quarterly Bk R

"The author's opinion given in the book that Logan 'set himself unequivocally against the aristocratic principle,' that he 'identified himself irrevocably with the common people,' is not entirely convincing, and conflicts in some measure with his judgment expressed in the introduction. With this exception, Mr. Tolles has succeeded in doing what he set out to do, namely, 'to convey, as far as may be, some sense of how it felt to be George Logan.' If there is no recipe for immortality, the next best thing is a biography as good as this." Byron Fairchild

+ — Am Hist R 59:942 J1 '54 500w

"Dr. Tolles has drawn an attractive picture of the man and his friends and a useful one of the tangled politics, both state and national, of the post-Revolutionary generation. As a history, the anti-Federalist bias is perhaps a little overdone; but a biographer may be pardoned for seeing things through the eyes of his hero." Max Beloff

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 4 '54 300w

"This biography, in its simple, chronological unfolding, does not attempt a level of analysis beyond its subject's range and depth. With mellowness and scrupulous fidelity, it succeeds in conveying 'some sense of how it felt to be George Logan.'"

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:159 Je '54 240w

TOLSON, MELVIN BEAUNORUS. Libretto for the republic of Liberia. [48p] $2.75 Twayne

811

"Composed for the Liberian Centennial and International Exposition [this book] celebrates the new, emergent status of Negro peoples throughout the world, and particularly in Africa, the rediscovery of ancient wisdom and human value, the reassertion of principles of freedom and equality, and the cultural sophistication of the modern Negro's intellectual life." U S Quarterly Bk R

"This is obviously ■ book to return to. The blast of language and vision is simply too overwhelming for first judgments. It seems ■ reasonable guess, however, that Tolson has established a new dimension for American poetry." John Ciardi

Nation 178:183 F 27 '54 320w

"It is not only by all odds the most considerable poem so far written by an American Negro, but ■ work of poetic synthesis in the symbolic vein altogether worthy to be discussed in the company of such poems as 'The Wasteland,' 'The Bridge' and 'Paterson.' . . The felicities of language, when they occur, are not as with Crane inspired by ■ Dionysiac frenzy, but ■ with Eliot intellectually contrived. . . By the same token Tolson's weaknesses are the weaknesses one encounters in 'The Wasteland.'" Selden Rodman

+ — N Y Times p10 Ja ■ '54 1000w

"In the very difficult form he has attempted, Professor Tolson's achievement is striking indeed."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:198 Je '54 240w

TOMALIN, RUTH. W. H. Hudson. 143p $3.50 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Hudson, William Henry 54-11705

A study of the life and writings of W. H. Hudson, the naturalist, who was born in Argentina, but spent most of his life in England, his spiritual home. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 51:40 ■ 15 '54

"Though there seems to be no really new material in this new Hudson biography, it is very well written and will appeal to the general reader. . . Recommended for large public libraries and for college and university Hudson collections." J. R. Willingham

+ Library J 79:981 My 15 '54 90w

Nation 179:219 S 11 '54 80w

Reviewed by James Reeves

New Statesman ■ Nation 48:707 N 27 '54 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p559 S ■ '54 190w

TOMASIC, DINKO ANTUN. Impact of Russian culture on Soviet communism. 287p $4.50 Free press

947 Russia—Civilization, Communism—Russia 53-7397

"In the current dissatisfaction with the old-fashioned historical explanations of the wonder and mystery of the Russian character that have brought about the establishment of the present Soviet state, recourse has been had to various other approaches ranging from geographical and climatic influences to the swaddling of the anthropological school of diaper determinism. Professor Tomasic has elected to combine the historical with a sociological approach. . . The greater part of Professor Tomasic's book is concerned with an analysis of the structure of czarism; of ideologies and movements; and of the personality development of the Russian people. . . The last and least extensive part of the book is concerned with the broad subject of 'power and personality in Soviet Russia.'" Pol Sci Q

"Tomasic presents us with rather vague concepts and gives virtually no specification ■ to the methodology by which he reaches his conclusions from the evidence presented. . . Throughout the study it is relatively unclear where culturally prescribed behavior norms end and personality begins. . . Fortunately, almost none of this criticism is applicable to the last quarter of the book, in which Mr. Tomasic deals predominantly with Soviet society. Unburdened by an overarching theory, and in firm command of the materials, he has with impressive succinctness set down the main facts about the development and current functioning of the Soviet social system." Alex Inkeles

Am Anthropol 56:510 Je '54 700w

TOMASIC, D. A.—Continued

"The present reviewer is unable to summarize Mr. Tomasic's views on the impact of Russian culture on Communism, for on this question, the author does not offer anything tangible." N. S. Timasheff

— Am Soc 18:725 D '53 700w

"No thinking man can in these days fail to be challenged by the question of the sources of Russian conduct. . . Is race, in spite of our reluctance to resort to racial thinking, a clue to the enigma? Or are personality and policy, whatever their remoter causes, fundamentally Russian rather than Communist, going back perhaps to Rurik and to Byzantium in a history and tradition more than millennial? . . . It is my belief that no one has written of these problems more judiciously, with fuller knowledge, or with greater wisdom than Professor Tomasic." W. R. Crawford

+ Ann Am Acad 290:186 N '53 450w

"The parallels to the present conditions in the Soviet Union are patent. But to one reader at least they are unconvincing. The countless and extremely interesting details which Mr. Tomasic has woven into a colorful pattern do not prove that the way in which Russia has developed was inevitable. . . Despite the reservations on its basic premise, however, Mr. Tomasic's book is of indubitable value. It offers a great wealth of well-arranged material and insight into the intimate life of the Russian people through the ages. The author's failure in his higher effort to produce an acceptable philosophy of history leaves him in the excellent company of Spengler and others who would not see that the sense history makes is the sense the historian has—no more, no less, and no other." E. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 30 '53 550w

"In this book, Dinko Tomasic has assembled all of the material necessary for a profound study of the relation between contemporary Russia and its own past: yet he has not made that study. The Impact of Russian Culture on Soviet Communism documents the long managerial tradition of Russian society, but it fails to link the past to the present. . . It is in one of the most important sections of the book—the discussion of current Soviet society—that Mr. Tomasic's failure to fulfil the promise of his materials is most apparent." Michael Harrington

— Commonweal 58:354 Jl 10 '53 550w

Foreign Affairs 32:515 Ap '54 20w

"A result of the rather lopsided emphasis between the old and the new is that the real subject of the book is never conclusively demonstrated. In many cases the influences of the old on the new are implied rather than convincingly argued. . . Finally, the customary and exclusive concentration on all the well-known and endlessly reiterated evils of Soviet society leaves unexplained the equally important sources of Soviet strengths and accomplishments. Nevertheless, the huge net that Professor Tomasic throws out brings to the surface many illuminating and provocative confrontations of the old and the new which contribute to our understanding of the personality of the Soviet man and of the totalitarian power structure that has formed it." E. J. Simmons

Pol Sci Q 68:605 D '53 800w

Reviewed by M. L. Kalb

Sat R 36:49 O 17 '53 310w

TOMPKINS, JANE F. (MRS BURT MORTON MCCONNELL), and MCCONNELL, BURT MORTON. White House; a history with pictures. 80p $3.95 Studio

975.3 Washington, D.C. White House

54-5622

An informal history and description of the White House, which contains 66 pictures, some of them in color. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:356 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:216 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by Leon Harpole

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 My 9 '54 70w

Reviewed by Emilie Tovel

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 6 '54 240w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 11 '54 40w

Reviewed by William Murray

Sat R 37:43 Ap 17 '54 100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:135 My '54

TOPORCER, GEORGE. Baseball from backyard to big league; drawings by Doug Anderson. 160p $2.50 Sterling

796.357 Baseball

54-9765

A former big-league baseball player, manager, and coach explains how to begin at the backyard type of baseball and advance to the big leagues.

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:718 Ap 15 '54 30w

"It is a simply written little book that can be of value to the aspiring young player too." I. T. Marsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 11 '54 70w

Reviewed by David Dempsey

N Y Times p16 Jl 18 '54 30w

TOR, REGINA. Getting to know Germany [il. by the author]. 64p $2.50 Coward-McCann

943 [914.3] Germany—Juvenile literature

54-6322

A companion volume to Getting to Know Korea (Book Review Digest 1953). It tells in text and pictures the most important facts about the land and people of Germany. For ages eight to twelve. Map. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:365 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 160w

Kirkus 22:233 Ap 1 '54 80w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 79:865 My 1 '54 80w

Wis Lib Bul 50:143 My '54

TORFF, SELWYN H. Collective bargaining; negotiations and agreements. 323p $5.50 McGraw

331.891 Collective bargaining

53-8012

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Torff has set himself the task of describing and analyzing the collective bargaining process in 'an objective and constructive manner.' He deserves particularly commendation for the objectivity and balance with which he presents his material. And, since clear and thorough description is always constructive, he may in a sense be said to have attained that goal as well. But he is not really constructive in the sense of moving the ball in a new direction. . . Torff has covered a large and important area in a careful and informative way. His book should be a useful initial reference point for practitioners in this field and a helpful text for courses in collective bargaining contracts." G. P. Shultz

+ Am Econ R 44:472 Je '54 550w

"The book contains little documentation or case material except a number of useful citations to National Labor Relations Board and court cases in connection with points discussed in the text. It will serve as an up-to-date briefing for practitioners in industrial relations; and, because it helps to see perspectives in the larger picture, it will also find use in various training programs." Z. C. Dickinson

Ann Am Acad 292:173 Mr '54 450w

"Within brief compass, Dr. Torff has developed a sound guide to the practical problems of everyday collective bargaining. The structure of the book is simple: the problems are defined and oriented; then the considerations involved, the varying viewpoints, and the possible solutions are discussed. All of this is done in succinct, nontechnical language. Non-economic, economic, administrative, and enforcement problems are treated, with apposite and concrete illustrations giving the reader every opportunity to understand the issues and how to cope with them."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:106 Mr '54 240w

TOXOPEUS, KLAAS. Flying storm; tr. from the Dutch by Alfred van Ameyden van Duym, 246p il $3.50 Dodd

614.86 Life saving 54-6709

"Adventures of the skipper of a rescue boat off the stormy coast of Holland." Subtitle

Booklist 50:314 Ap 15 '54

Horn Bk 30:194 Je '54 60w

"Captain Toxopeus' 'incidents' not only warm the blood, but reveal the devotion of these rugged men who willingly answer every call for help." Walter Hayward

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 28 '54 380w

"A matter-of-fact account of the author's adventures as skipper of the life-saving boat Insulinde on the dangerous northern coast of the Netherlands, this volume is a good, but minor, addition to the maritime shelf." R. H. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 13 '54 110w

TOY, SIDNEY. Castles of Great Britain; il. with plans and photographs by the author. 276p $5.50 British bk. centre

728.81 Castles [53-38663]

A scholarly study of the castles of Great Britain by an English architect, the author of an earlier book, Castles: A Short History of Fortifications from 1600 B.C. to A.D. 1600. In his Preface the author says: "Though it is not possible to include within the confines of a single volume mention of all the forts and castles of Great Britain, most of the outstanding examples are noted; and in the selection for particular and detailed description choice has been made of those having the best preserved original features of the period reviewed. The author has examined personally the castles he describes, measuring and plotting the plans, elevations and sections, and taking photographs. . . In the main the castle is considered in its military aspect, as a fortress, and its domestic arrangements in so far as they influence or are ancillary to its military functions."

Booklist 50:315 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 11 '54 600w

"Notable for its excellent photographs and plans. The author is an architect and his plans of castle lay-out—there are over a hundred of them—are a real contribution to the study of the subject."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 30 '53 60w

"Mr. Toy has written an admirable book, packed with information. This is not a large tome for professional archaeologists who are already well served; on the other hand it is not just one more of those innumerable 'outlines' and handy guides that are the curse of the age. It is a technical book and, like all good technical books, is therefore fascinating to anyone who regards a castle as something more than an August litter basket." R. F. Jordan

+ Spec p66 Jl 10 '53 550w

"The author's style is clear and the general reader, to whom the book can be confidently recommended, will welcome the avoidance of too many technical terms. In addition to the 130 diagrams and plans there are 75 photographic plates, mostly taken by Mr. Toy himself."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p546 Ag 28 '53 550w

TOYNBEE, ARNOLD JOSEPH. ed. Hitler's Europe. See Survey of international affairs

TOYNBEE, ARNOLD JOSEPH. Study of history; issued under the auspices of the Royal Institute of international affairs. 10v v 7-10 $35 Oxford

901 Civilization. History—Philosophy

"The publication of volumes VII through X brings to a close the monumental study begun by the historian in 1929. The four volumes, summing up the author's philosophy of history, consider such questions as the universal state, collisions between modern nations, the future of Western civilization, the nature of renaissances, and history and historians." Booklist

Booklist 51:80 O 15 '54

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:1553 D 22 '54 1800w

"To this task, Professor Toynbee brings an erudition so vast, a memory so inclusive, and a literary ability so congenial that a perusal of these volumes is unquestionably one of the most mentally invigorating experiences which literature or history affords. It is impossible to read even a single volume and not have one's horizon and knowledge expand almost beyond recognition." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 18 '54 1600w

"Viewed as a whole it is a remarkable achievement, the most massive work that our generation has seen or is likely to see, for it numbers nearly six thousand pages each of which is pregnant with meaning and heavily weighted with erudition. . . However strongly we dissent from Dr. Toynbee's theological views, we can agree fully with him in his conclusion that the vital problem that confronts Western Civilization today is to prevent the modern secularized world empires from destroying one another, and humanity with them, and to bring back civilization to an awareness of its true function as a means to a higher end, as a bridge builder and a road maker, an interpreter and a peacemaker, preparing the way for spiritual unity." Christopher Dawson

+ Commonweal 61:62 O 22 '54 1850w

"To any budding historian or serious scholar, a close study of Toynbee is basic to the challenge historical research poses today."

+ Kirkus 22:561 Ag 15 '54 300w

"What then is 'A Study of History'? It is a grand obsession. An obsession first of all with the apparatus of scholarship, with references and tables and diagrams and method. It is also a private obsession. Nothing in Professor Toynbee's personal experience, one feels, is omitted. . . But 'A Study of History' is fascinating, and the obsession makes it so." Noel Annan

+ Manchester Guardian p6 O 14 '54 1750w

"If he is critically discriminating, the intellectual gourmet will often be shocked and challenged, as the author intends him to be. The 'Study' is not 'objective' narrative . . . but a swift stream of judgments, political, military, moral, and religious, graciously expounded and perfectly calculated to promote controversy. Each reader can find his own bête-noire. . . Toynbee's voice is among the most eloquent of our years. It is a voice of sanity and salvation, inspired by deep concern for truth, beauty, and love. It is therefore a voice from on high, summoning men to keep faith, to cherish one another, and to prove worthy of their strange destiny—which no one has done more to record and explain than Arnold J. Toynbee." F. L. Schuman

+ Nation 179:405 N 6 '54 1300w

"Toynbee's historical breadth in posing the problem of human life and destiny has been nullified, despite his good intentions, by his philosophic narrowness in seeking the answer. Yet if our world civilization survives its threatened ordeals, A Study of History will stand out as a landmark, perhaps even a turning point." Lewis Mumford

+ New Repub 131:15 N 8 '54 4200w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

New Statesman Nation 48:478 O 16 '54 1300w

TOYNBEE, A. J.—Continued

"It now appears reasonably certain that we have the Toynbeean philosophy of history in a form approximately complete if not in all respects final. He first envisioned that philosophy over forty years ago, published his master plan twenty years ago, and has adhered to that plan with remarkable fidelity. It is possible that he may refine upon but improbable that he will reconstruct an edifice with such unfaltering purpose. . . With a multitude of quotations from inscriptions, coins and the masterpieces of world literature, he fortifies the conclusions he reached as a young man on the genesis, growth, breakdown and disintegration of civilizations." Geoffrey Brunn

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 17 '54
1000w

"The prodigious range, the fertility of illustration will reward every reader willing to invest time and industry and to ignore minor faults—such as an excessive passion for normalizing and the most maddeningly pedantic system of transliteration I have ever encountered." D. W. Brogan

+ — N Y Times p 1 O 17 '54 2000w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 17 '54
1350w

"Although he is anti-materialistic and never rigidly dogmatic, Dr. Toynbee does attempt a scientific synthesis of the facts of history. But, while he draws analogies from the physical and biological sciences, he does not equate his data with the rules of any fancied 'social science.' Both his thought and its expression are heavily freighted with aphorisms and illustrations from classical literature and from the Bible. His style has a richness that is sometimes majestic; but the clothing of rational and measured theses in archaic, poetic, or symbolic garb creates a disturbing effect. These last four volumes indicate that Mr. Toynbee has not substantially altered either the plan of his work or his main conclusions during the twenty-five years he has been at work on them." P. L. Ralph

+ Sat R 37:18 S 16 '54 2000w

Reviewed by Lawrence Stone

Spec p526 O 29 '54 2000w

Time 64:108 O 18 '54 3750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p665 O 22 '54
4600w

"The Toynbee of the first six volumes has not changed in these four. His encyclopedic learning and unflagging energy drive him on to very great length indeed. . . Mr. Toynbee's footnotes are often little essays, which sometimes have to be relegated to separate appendices. His sentences roll on in not quite eighteenth-century periodic style, and rather more than eighteenth-century length. His love for allusions, which sometimes tempts him into what the Fowlers call 'elegant variation,' must keep the most learned reader, if he is conscientious, constantly turning to his reference books." Crane Brinton

+ Yale R n s 44:264 winter '55 1650w

TOYNBEE, PHILIP. Garden to the sea. 219p $3
Doubleday

54-6249

"In the beginning (though there is no real beginning to the story as it is told), Adam, the hero, is living an idyllic life with his wife, Daisy in an isolated country house in England. He leaves her to join the air force. Upon his return after the war they find it impossible to regain their idyll, and Daisy drifts into an affair with another man. After a violent quarrel, Adam leaves her again, and begins a life of debauchery. At the edge of death and total despair, he is finally forced to face the truth of his life. Accepting his own errors and forgiving of others, he experiences a rebirth of spirit, and the novel ends (though there is no real ending, either) on a note of hope." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by Warren Beck

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 11 '54
350w

Reviewed by Jean Holzhauer

Commonweal 60:254 Je 11 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:130 F 15 '54 160w

"Enthralling to read but difficult to describe. . . This can scarcely be recommended as a book that almost anyone will enjoy, but anyone who has deplored the dying away of poetry and imagination in modern fiction should make a point of reading it." Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 J1 24 '53 300w

Reviewed by Tom Fitzsimmons

New Repub 30:21 My 10 '54 550w

"For me The Garden to the Sea remains experimental, interesting: a poem-novel or psychological incantation which everyone with a grain of curiosity should read. Whatever its faults or derivations (echoes of Eliot and Auden), it hits the commonplaces of the novel high out of their usual clutter." G. W. Stonier

New Statesman Nation 46:109 J1 25
'53 700w

"An experimental novel, an odd and fascinating book. . . The situation isn't particularly unusual, but Mr. Toynbee's presentation of it is. Like Joyce, he uses the mythical method to tell his story, instead of the more familiar narrative form. The experiences of Adam are related in an intricate, flickering pattern of symbols, time and incidents vibrating with the undertones of one of the great, enduring myths; the story of the Garden of Eden." H. P. Porter

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 11 '54
400w

"Mr. Toynbee writes a carefully studied poetic prose of considerable rhetorical and imagistic intensity. It steadily requires and often rewards close reading. 'The Garden to the Sea,' however, is chiefly distinguished as an attempt to introduce the extreme characteristics of the 'new' criticism and the 'new' poetry into the novel, without making any concessions to the novel's peculiar virtues as a form." R. G. Davis

N Y Times p4 Ap 11 '54 700w

"Writing this book must have been a very luxurious experience, but it is not a very entertaining book to read. . . Now that Mr. Toynbee has run through his practice work, perhaps he will come up with the novel."

New Yorker 30:158 Ap 24 '54 100w

Reviewed by Isabelle Stradley

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 18 '54
60w

"A very good novel, one that will be praised but not widely read. Like his earlier 'Propylaeum,' and unlike his more fashionable 'The Barricades,' Mr. Toynbee's new novel is experimental, a shock, something only those who prefer what they haven't experienced before prefer." H. C. Webster

+ Sat R 37:20 Ap 10 '54 500w

Reviewed by Stevie Smith

Spec p110 J1 24 '53 270w

Time 63:106 Ap 19 '54 400w

"The Garden to the Sea is what is called an experimental novel. In substance it is not unlike other novels; the difference is largely a matter of presentation. It is written in rhythmical prose, some of it reminiscent of Joyce, some of it reminiscent of Mr. Eliot, and it is presented in the form of a dialogue between the hero, Adam, who is lying ill in hospital, and three interior voices called Noel, Tom, and Charley."

Times [London] Lit Sup p473 J1 24 '53
400w

TRACY, CLARENCE RUPERT. Artificial bastard; a biography of Richard Savage. 164p il $4.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Savage, Richard A54-1402

"Richard Savage, a colorful poet of the Augustan Age and friend of Pope and Johnson, claimed to be the son of the then Lady Macclesfield and Lord Rivers, an eighteenth century rake. . . Contrary to the contentions of many previous writers, the author feels that the weight of evidence is on the side of the poet. Professor Tracy follows the fortunes of the poet from 1715 when as a very young man he was arrested for writing verses of ■ treasonable nature, i.e., favorable to the Jacobite cause, through the years when he clamored for recognition and succeeded in finding a patron, to his final fall from grace and miserable death in prison." Canadian Forum

"Professor Tracy, a scholar from the University of Saskatchewan, has given us a factual biography. The author invariably sifts all the conflicting evidence to the point where scholarly virtue seriously impedes the dramatic progress of the Life. . . . If a writer could combine the grace and wit, which were characteristic of Savage's time, with the honest workmanship of Professor Tracy, then we should have a truly outstanding biography." A. MacP.

Canadian Forum 33:284 Mr '54 370w

"Without making any concessions to the taste for fictionalizing Professor Tracy has written a very readable account."

+ Nation 178:56 Ja 16 '54 200w

"A first-rate biographical study of the early-eighteenth-century poet. . . . It is a life as fascinating to read about as it must have been nerve-racking to live."

+ New Yorker 29:103 Ja 23 '54 200w

TRACY, DON. Second try. 189p $2.50 Westminster press

54-7472

Buzz Hart, a football star suspended from the state university, takes up lacrosse in the small college where he makes his "second try." For grades nine and ten.

"A lively yarn about a little known [in these parts] sport." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p42 N 14 '54 40w

"Average sports fare, with the lacrosse angle, this may cater to special tastes."

Kirkus 22:490 Ag 1 '54 90w

"Good details of the game; otherwise negligible. Recommended only where this sport is wanted." F. K. Jones

Library J 79:2258 N 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by I. T. Marsh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 12 '54 50w

"Whether or not readers are familiar with the game, they will find that lacrosse provides Mr. Tracy's well-written story with interesting background material." J. D. S.

+ N Y Times p38 N 21 '54 60w

TRAVER, ROBERT, pseud. See Voelker, J. D.

TRAZ, GEORGES DE (FRANCOIS FOSCA, pseud). Degas [biographical and critical studies; tr. by James Emmons]. (Taste of our time) 107p col il $4.95 Skira

759.4 Degas, Hilaire Germain Edgar 54-7291

"The author shows that subject and temporal factors in Degas' work were superficial considerations. Taking up one by one the subjects of the paintings—horses, portraits, theatre, ballet themes and nudes—Fosca points out with penetration that all these were but materials for Degas in his unceasing analysis of form." N Y Times

Booklist 50:402 Je 15 '54

"The reader is impressed both by picture and text with a sense of Degas' thoughtful deliberation and exquisite pattern that carries eye and mind with the painter's concept." O. D. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 15 '54 60w

Library J 79:1832 O 1 '54 10w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 2 '54 10w

"The color reproductions seem sometimes overbright and lend themselves in texture to the oils, on the whole, rather better than to the pastels. Except for details so stated, pictures are not cropped—the cardinal sin of reproductions—which permits the infallible designs to speak for themselves. This is an admirable volume for the more than casual reader." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 11 '54 490w

TREASE, GEOFFREY. Young traveler in England and Wales; il. with photographs and map sketches by Henry C. Pitz [Am ed] ed. by Frances Clarke Sayers. 223p $3 Dutton

942 [914.2] England—Description and travel —Juvenile literature. Wales—Juvenile literature 53-6073

Two young Americans spend ■ summer in England exploring London, discussing the welfare state, having picnics by the Thames, etc. For ages eleven to sixteen.

Bookmark 13:16 O '53 10w

Reviewed by Mary Handy

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 12 '53 50w

Kirkus 21:634 S 15 '53 80w

Reviewed by C. W. Field

Library J 78:2044 N 15 '53 20w

TRECKER, MRS AUDREY R., and TRECKER, HARLEIGH BRADLEY. Committee common sense. 158p $2.50 Whiteside

301.15 Committees

54-7554

"A handbook on successful committee operation for chairmen and members, based on what the authors have learned from their years of experience with all kinds of community organizations. They try to answer the why, who, when, what, and how of committee work, from the appointment of members to the windup of committee business. This realistic and workable manual is not afraid to criticize current committee practice." Booklist

Booklist 51:76 O 15 '54

"A concise, helpful manual."

+ Bookmark 14:34 N '54 20w

Reviewed by J. W. Stein

Library J 79:1585 S 15 '54 30w

"Pulls no punches and can be recommended in spite of its pedestrian style." G. E. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 28 '54 80w

TREFFLICH, HENRY. They never talk back; as told to Baynard Kendrick. 246p il $3.50 Appleton

591.5 Animals

53-10672

The largest wholesale animal dealer in the world recounts his years of experiences with his charges who "never talk back."

"Informal, exciting and amusing narrative."

+ Bookmark 13:131 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p6 Ap 15 '54 320w

Horn Bk 30:193 Je '54 50w

Kirkus 21:621 S 1 '53 180w

"Written in a manner to get the most fun out of every situation, the book is amusing and easy to read." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:556 Mr 15 '54 140w

"Trefflich is ■ merchant and he has written for that vast body of us who are fascinated by the other fellow's means of livelihood. . . . Mr. Trefflich's merchandise may not talk back to him, but his book reveals their countless other means of retaliation. After all, animals have voices if not words—voices enforced by fang, talon and hoof. They go on hunger strikes. They eat too much. They eat the wrong thing. They moe. Mr. Trefflich closes his case with the statement: 'From anteaters to zebras, they have their own peculiar methods of expressing what they want to say.'" D. T. Carlisle

N Y Times p6 Mr 7 '54 700w

TREFFLICH, HENRY—Continued

"A pleasant little book about wild animals by the world's largest wholesale dealer in them. It would have been a good deal pleasanter if Mr. Trefflich had felt able to write it himself, for the gratuitous and brash attempts at humor that scar the book are all too obviously the embellishments of a professional."

+ — New Yorker 30:135 Ap 3 '54 130w

Reviewed by John Pfeiffer

Sat R 37:25 Je 26 '54 50w

TREFUSIS, MRS VIOLET (KEPPEL). Don't look round [her reminiscences] with decorations by Philippe Jullian. 240p $3.50 British bk. center

B or 92

[53-27606]

Random reminiscences of the elder daughter of the Honorable Mrs George Keppel, one of the most famous of London's hostesses in the Edwardian era. Index.

"Drawings by M. Phillipe Jullian add much to the distinction of this period piece which may well be included in all collections for general readers." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1587 S 15 '54 130w

"From 'Don't Look Round', Violet Trefusis steps out as an intelligent, artistic, aristocratic cosmopolitan. . . Few writers have described as succinctly, as perceptively, the fundamental characteristics of, as well as the differences between, the peoples of Europe—and few men or women have had better reason to know what they are talking about." James Stern

+ N Y Times p6 S 26 '54 650w

TRENCH, JOHN. Docken dead. 224p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-7906

Detective story.

"This is very bright, lively and seemingly a little diffuse as it busies itself but tied together with firm authority after all. It possesses a number of charms incidental to its coil of mystery from a pertinent salting of literary allusion past a succession of amusingly sketched characters to a teasing double deduction brightly effected." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 28 '54 140w

"A British first novel which Margery Allingham hails as 'a discovery for the civilized reader.' I'm afraid I found it more precious and exasperating than civilized; but if you have a good deal of patience with awkward construction, genteel snobbery and over-alusive prose, you'll be rewarded with some clever puzzle-making and flashes of genuine wit." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p21 Mr 14 '54 40w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 21 '54 60w

"High I.Q. number." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 20w

TRESSELT, ALVIN R. Follow the road; il. by Roger Duvoisin. [24p] $2 Lothrop

53-6736

In large pictures and brief text this is the story of a road which leads from a dusty country lane across a bridge and then thru a wood, passes thru a small town and onto a super highway, encounters a big city, and on and on, until it comes again to a farmer's lane.

Booklist 50:226 F 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 D 27 '53 150w

"It would be fun to take this along when traveling with children so that they might see how many of the details they could find on their road." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:30 F '54 90w

+ Kirkus 21:759 D 1 '53 60w

"Good for developing awareness. . . Recommended 3-7-year-olds." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 79:71 Ja 1 '54 80w

"The rhythmic prose and the finely detailed pictures capture the tantalizing wonder of a road that goes on and on—over the hills and through the valleys. All over the world."

E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 3 '54 130w

TRESSELT, ALVIN R. I saw the sea come in; il. by Roger Duvoisin. [24p] $2.35; $2 Lothrop

54-12395

Picture book for ages four to six. It describes in pictures and simple text the adventures of a little boy at the seashore.

Booklist 51:91 O 15 '54

Kirkus 22:580 S 1 '54 60w

Reviewed by L. R. Markey

Library J 79:2252 N 15 '54 70w

"The highly sentient quality in the experiences presented will probably escape younger members of the picture-book age. But for those who are older and have been to the shore its charm will nourish growing tastes for beauty and simple pleasures. Roger Duvoisin's illustrations in line and color complete the book's excellence." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p44 O 17 '54 170w

TREVELYAN, GEORGE MACAULAY. Layman's love of letters. 125p $2.50 Longmans

820.4 English literature—History and criticism A54-4859

"The Clark lectures, which may deal with any subject connected with English Literature, are provided each year by Trinity College for the use of the University of Cambridge. For many years past they have been delivered usually by persons distinguished as professional students or critics of literature. In October 1953, however, Dr. Trevelyan has spoken from the point of view of a 'layman.' . . While warmly acknowledging the services of professional students to the general reader, Dr. Trevelyan argues that critics, even the best of them, are not infallible guides. . . The lectures also deal with Browning; A. E. Housman; mountain poetry; the 'aids of geography' to poets; the relation of history to literature, and the poetry of George Meredith." Publisher's note

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 18 '54 80w

Manchester Guardian p4 F 12 '54 150w

"Dr. Trevelyan belongs in spirit to that golden generation of critics—it included Leslie Stephen, Augustine Birrell and Charles Whibley—in whom a keen literary appetite blended with a powerful and detailed knowledge of men and affairs. It is a disturbingly diminishing band today."

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:202 F 13 '54 230w

Reviewed by Delancey Ferguson

N Y Times p24 My 16 '54 450w

New Yorker 30:138 Ap 17 '54 160w

"As befits a 'layman,' Dr. Trevelyan ranges far and wide in these lectures. As befits a scholar, he deals not only with what is well known but also with certain authors and passages which will be unfamiliar to many readers. Among those authors who are too often unfamiliar both because of fashion and neglect (his collected poems are, we are told, out of print) is Meredith, to whom Dr. Trevelyan devotes the last, and one of the best, of his lectures. . . Dr. Trevelyan seems to me peculiarly enlightening and just in his estimate both of Meredith's prose and poetry. But he is enlightening and just throughout. His book is a pleasure to read in itself and it will make the reading of other books more pleasurable. This is the kind of 'layman' who should make the clergy look to their cloth." Rex Warner

+ Spec p298 Mr 12 '54 950w

"This book is a love story, as fresh and delightful in its course as in its beginning... There is much courteous controversy in Dr. Trevelyan's book. With Matthew Arnold, whose assessment of Byron he cannot accept; with Mr. E. M. Forster in a well-sustained defence of Scott, leading on to our ballad-lore, to the historical novel, to the use of names in poetry, whether it be the poetry of Milton and the fleet."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p154 Mr 5 '54 650w

TREVELYAN, JANET PENROSE (WARD)
(MRS GEORGE MACAULAY TREVELYAN).
Two stories, 222p il $4.50 Longmans

B or 92 Trevelyan, Theodore Macaulay.
Playgrounds 54-3999

The first of the two stories describes the life of the author's son who died in 1911, when he was five years old. The second story is about the long fight to save nine acres in London for a children's playground, with a day nursery, nursery school, lawns, wading pool, and shelters for wet weather, and shade against hot weather. Among the prominent people who helped in this project was the author's mother, Mrs Humphry Ward.

Reviewed by L. M. Jeger

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 7 '54 340w

New Statesman & Nation 47:447 Ap 3 '54 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 30 '54 60w

Spec p664 My 28 '54 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p234 Ap 1 '54 800w

TREVES, RALPH. Complete book of basement improvement; how to add new rooms to your home. 173p il $4.95 Wyn

694 Building—Repair and reconstruction 52-11579

Describes how to construct a playroom, music and TV room, workshop, and other rooms in the basement. No index.

Booklist 50:217 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:129 Mr '54 20w

"The book is well illustrated, but has no index. Also certain unpleasant matters such as safeguarding the new woodwork against termite attack have been omitted." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:560 Mr 15 '54 90w

TRIPP, EDWARD. Tin fiddle; pictures by Maurice Sendak. [35p] $2 Oxford

54-8727

Picture-story book about a little boy named Cicero who got a tin fiddle for a present, but could not find an audience for his playing. In despair he donated the fiddle to a family of mice for a house.

Booklist 50:365 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:162 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 25 '54 110w

"A wistful, tender, yet humorous picture-story." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:93 Ap '54 90w

Kirkus 22:197 Mr 15 '54 60w

"Recommended for picture book age." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 79:781 Ap 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 16 '54 250w

"Although some children may not find the end of the adventure entirely satisfactory, meeting along the way with such fun-to-pronounce names as Junius, Lorenzo, Lucretia and Calpurnia is a payoff in itself." Pat Clark

N Y Times p22 Ap 18 '54 150w

"An appealing story, told in warm, guileless prose and expressive drawings." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:202 N 27 '54 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 16 '54 40w

Wis Lib Bul 50:140 My '54

TROMBLEY, KENNETH E. Life and times of a happy liberal; a biography of Morris Llewellyn Cooke. 270p $4 Harper

B or 92 Cooke, Morris Llewellyn 54-8998

"An impersonal personal history of Morris Llewellyn Cooke, engineer and conservationist who figured on the socio-economic and political scene for many years and to further many causes, this is the record, not of the man, but of his admirable activities. Waste was his particular opponent, whether in manpower or in resources, and he worked off and on in the labor-management field to further efficiency; he crusaded for academic freedom; he battled the big utility companies to lower rates; he tried to put through the Mississippi Valley Authority under F.D.R.; he was the head of the rural electrification program; he served this country in Mexico." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 51:150 D 1 '54

Kirkus 22:517 Ag 1 '54 120w

"Written in straightforward style, using too many dull clichés, this book nevertheless presents a man of integrity whose penchant for dealing with observable facts is coupled with a zeal for the general welfare. Recommended for college and large public libraries." Jerome Cushman

+ Library J 79:1824 O 1 '54 210w

"This is a good book about a great man. Let me say at once that its subject is a friend of mine, and if you are looking for an impartial or hostile review, you should stop reading now. . . Mr. Trombley's book is clearly a labor of love. He admires Cooke and considers him a thoroughly useful citizen. I don't see how it would be possible to read this volume without sharing these attitudes." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 131:18 N 29 '54 1350w

"Some of the more important passages of the book—such as the R. E. A. chapter—seem unduly sketchy; and, on the whole, the work suffers from the fact that it was written too much out of interviews and not enough out of documents. Still, Mr. Trombley does get down the main features of Mr. Cooke's career." A. M. Schlesinger

N Y Times p9 D 19 '54 700w

Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54 450w

TRUAX, RHODA. True adventures of doctors; il. by Paul Galdone. 216p $2.75 Little 926.1 Physicians—Juvenile literature 54-5118

Brief biographical sketches of men and women who have fought disease from the time of Paré and Vesalius in the sixteenth century, to Taussig and Blalock of the present.

Reviewed by Rees Jones

Am J Pub Health 44:1370 O '54 110w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:720 Ap 15 '54 50w

"Recommended." Mary Strang

+ Library J 79:1673 S 15 '54 70w

"The Truax book will be useful as a supplement to the few existing books for the young on the history of medical discovery. The author skillfully dramatizes her unusual knowledge, giving us a fascinating lot of brief biographies." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 2 '54 120w

"Miss Truax captures the drama of the constant war against man's physical and mental ills in a group of excellent stories." Iris Vinton

+ N Y Times p18 Je 27 '54 60w

TRUETT, RANDLE BOND. First ladies in fashion; with fashion notes by Philip Robertson. 80p il $3 Hastings house

391 Costume. Presidents (U.S.)—Wives
53-12947

A dress belonging to each of the First Ladies of the White House has been photographed, accompanied by brief biographies of the wearers, and descriptions of the costumes. The dresses are on display in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

"This book is a pleasantly informative introduction to the First Ladies of American history, threaded on a theme of fashion." Helen Henley

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 6 '54
450w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 28
'54 60w

TRUMBULL, JOHN. Autobiography of Colonel John Trumbull, patriot-artist, 1756-1843; ed. by Theodore Sizer; containing a supplement to [the editor's] The works of Colonel John Trumbull. 404p il $6 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 53-7771

This autobiography of an early American painter, a soldier and friend of Washington, was written and published over a hundred years ago. "Theodore Sizer, author of The Works of Colonel John Trumbull, has edited this classic of 1841 with notes and appendices that fill in the portions that Trumbull omitted or glossed over, locate his known works, and add new material to the check list of his paintings. The editor is professor of the history of art at Yale University, and like Trumbull, was both Harvard trained and a soldier." (Publisher's note)

"In this very attractive book Professor Theodore Sizer adds a companion piece to his volume concerning John Trumbull's artistic works which appeared in 1950. He intended originally to write a biography of the recorder of the Revolution but has chosen instead to republish Trumbull's autobiography, together with generous notes and appendixes which explain obscure passages and offer valuable information not included in the artist's own chronicle. Room may remain for a biography of Trumbull. Nevertheless, there is no reason to question the wisdom of Professor Sizer's decision to change his plan, for he makes readily available in a pleasing format a minor American classic and at the same time offers some rich fruits from his own researches." J. R. Alden

+ Am Hist R 59:1024 Jl '54 240w

"This reviewer has yet to behold a more masterful and scholarly piece of editing than that performed by Professor Sizer. Casual references are carefully documented, hidden details are supplied, and Trumbull's errors are meticulously corrected. This edition might well serve as a model of what fine historical editorship can accomplish." A. H. Kelly

+ Ann Am Acad 293:176 My '54 400w

"Trumbull was at best a second-rate artist, but as contemporary documents his paintings have a unique importance. His memoirs too are valuable, not for their literary merits, but as a first-hand account of life in America and England during the Revolution by a man who knew most of the notables from Washington down. We must be grateful, therefore, for this handsome new edition."

Nation 178:205 Mr 6 '54 270w

"Angered by attacks made on him by his enemies—he had so many—Trumbull wrote as a very old man a defensive autobiography. Readers throughout the years have realized that the book presented a masked face and they have peered with some success through the chinks, yet much has remained hidden. Now Theodore Sizer, who has already brought out an excellent check-list of Trumbull's paintings, has republished the autobiography explained with notes and appendixes. If the mask is not completely torn away, it is much less obscuring." J. T. Flexner

+ N Y Times p3 N 29 '53 950w

"Reprinted—and much edited—in 1954 Trumbull's observations on men, events and art are valuable; in 1841 they roused no interest from a generation full of enthusiasm for the future but scant in its respect for the past. Yet, even in 1954, it is not so much the detail of Trumbull's record which fascinates, lively as that detail is at times. It is Trumbull's Autobiography as a case-book in divided loyalty which makes of it an important contribution to the understanding of what the American Revolution meant to many who lived through it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p774 D 3 '54
2400w

"The chief value of the book lies in the self-characterization presented in it of a brilliant and artistically talented man. In all of Trumbull's reports of his travels, there is a notable visual acuity. Meticulously edited this is one of the shrewdest and most vigorous of American autobiographies."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:15 Mr '54
220w

TRUSCOTT, LUCIAN KING. Command missions; a personal story. 570p maps $7.50 Dutton

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. World war—Personal narratives, American 53-10860

"This is a purely military memoir limited to General Truscott's experiences in World War II. He discusses his experiences in England, North Africa, Italy and Germany in detail, emphasizing, of course, the Italian campaigns. The account is limited to a description of strategic and tactical matters, with little comment on personalities and none on political events, except for brief speculation on what a thrust into the Balkans might have accomplished." Library J

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 7 '54
320w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer
Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 11 '54
450w

Current Hist 26:318 My '54 100w

Kirkus 21:755 N 15 '53 180w

Reviewed by Donald Wasson
Library J 79:142 Ja 15 '54 120w

"The outstanding characteristic of this book is its fair-mindedness. . . The battle accounts which form the greater part of this volume are invariably easy to follow and exciting to read. They are interlarded with reflections upon command relations, co-ordination of weapons, troop training and morale problems which, it is to be hoped, will not be disregarded by officers who will be charged with other command missions in the future." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 F 14
'54 550w

"General Truscott's personalized judgments of men and events, though by far the most interesting parts of 'Command Missions,' do not reflect fully the book's basic worth. This narrative of a combat commander is simultaneously a study in leadership, a case book of strategy and tactics and a solid slice of history, written from the records by a man who was there." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p3 F 7 '54 1800w

"All in all, one of the most spirited and informative of the war books by generals."

+ New Yorker 30:115 F 20 '54 160w

Reviewed by Jim Walls
San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 21 '54
800w

"It is an appropriate climax to the Truscott career that this wild-eyed ex-cavalryman has produced in 'Command Missions' a book which sings with writing quality, rates the highest praise for its informational values, and in its battle descriptions is often deeply moving."

S. L. A. Marshall

+ Sat ■ 37:14 Ap 17 '54 650w

TRUSS, SELDON. Other side of the wall. 186p
$2.75 Doubleday

54-7021

Detective story.

"Smoothly concocted mystery entertainment with serious detecting and drollery neatly blended." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 23 '54
130w

Kirkus 22:250 Ap 1 '54 40w

"There are a number of characters involved and Mr. Truss cuts nervously from one set to another laughing most of the time. As a partial consequence of this rabbiting, it's almost midway of the proceedings before boredom settles immovably." James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 30
'54 90w

"It's shorter and less rich in character humor than the best Truss novels, but still rewarding in its detailed detection and its picture of London's art world." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p16 Je 13 '54 60w

New Yorker 30:88 Ag 21 '54 120w

"Good entertainment." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 11 '54
90w

"Jolly, nicely handled, and with plausible personnel." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:31 Jl 10 '54 20w

TUCKER, GLENN. Poltroons and patriots; ■ popular account of the War of 1812; maps by W. T. Tucker. 2v 402;413-812p il $10 Bobbs
973.52 U.S.—History—War of 1812 54-6059

A popular history of the War of 1812. "To understand why we got into the war, as the author shows, one must explore the realm of emotion and political passion. The war achieved very little for the adolescent United States, and its cost, ■ hundred and twenty-five million dollars, was almost ruinous for a population of seven million." (New Yorker) Index.

"Recommended for its reference value to history collections. General collections may find that these volumes have ■ place there also." James Heslin

+ Library J 79:2101 N 1 '54 200w

"Most Americans know a few high spots of shame or glory—the burning of the Capitol, Fort McHenry, Lake Erie, New Orleans, the single-ship actions at sea. But it is a safe bet that not one American in a hundred could name these events. . . Mr. Tucker has undertaken to set forth in readable fashion the events themselves and the people and motives behind them. He has done a first-class job." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 10 '54
1000w

"If we take Mr. Tucker on his own terms, he gives us a good story. He has the journalist's sense of action and of character, the readiness to find room for an anecdote. He has given us the English side of the story and enlivened his narrative with apposite quotations from the English press. He tries to understand the New England Federalists. He is patient with the failings of President Madison and his hapless Cabinet. Finally, the book is embellished with over a score of illustrations and with maps that are, on the whole, clear and accurate." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p24 N 21 '54 1000w

"In his running account of the war, Mr. Tucker makes lavish use of the popular journalism of the time, and this gives his book the cogency of good war correspondence."

+ New Yorker 30:173 O 23 '54 180w

"While Mr. Tucker's book must take a place below its most distinguished predecessor [Henry Adams' History of the United States During the Administration of James Madison], it is still worth reading. The text and footnotes are ■ real encyclopedia of human interest material. Here, for example, you will find ■ speculation about the origin of the term 'Uncle Sam.' Any reader interested in the wars of the United States will enjoy 'Poltroons and Patriots' and will refer back to it for anecdotes and curiosities." J. K. Mahon

+ Sat R 37:14 D 18 '54 1100w

"Mr. Tucker is a journalist and an advertising man rather than a historian. He has searched the archives with care and has written his findings with the enthusiasm of the amateur anxious to impart his discoveries to others. No other book gives so clean and comprehensive a picture of the United States during the years from 1811 to 1814 and of the blunders as well as the heroisms that characterized the period. Its pages are full of incidental information about the people and what they were doing, as well as about the war itself." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54
550w

TUCKER, LAEL. Festival. 244p $3 Random house

54-7811

A music festival in France is the scene of this novel. The leader is a seventy-four year old cellist who had fled to France from his native Spain as a protest against the Franco regime. Many of the performers and visitors at the festival are Americans, among them Joshua Middlebush and his wife. During the course of the festival the Middlebush marriage, which had been on the point of breaking up, is made whole again.

Booklist 51:16 S 1 '54

Kirkus 22:321 My 15 '54 160w

"As in the case of the small town in Georgia which was the setting of her first novel, Miss Tucker—who has lived on the Basque Coast of France and as a correspondent wrote several articles on the Prades Festival—is again dealing with a scene with which she has first-hand familiarity. And though we see Lutie Middlebush but for a week, in contrast to the span of twenty years for the four protagonists of the earlier novel, it is enough to convince us that she and they are sisters under the skin. Which is to say that a good many readers may be interested in her week at Prades." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 1 '54
900w

"In her first novel, 'Lament for Four Virgins,' Miss Tucker showed her ability to deal with complex character. Some readers may feel that in her present novel she has, quite the contrary, oversimplified her characters to the point of repetition. Yet, few will deny that in other respects 'Festival' is the work of an accomplished writer." Whitney Betts

+ — M Y Times p5 Ag 1 '54 380w

"It is an acceptable enough little plot, almost lovable in its unashamed banality, but some day Miss Tucker must realize that womanliness alone will never make a writer."

+ — New Yorker 30:67 Jl 31 '54 90w

"Lael Tucker has developed since her first novel. This is more tightly constructed, better written, has more to say. If it is also a more emotional story, there's nothing wrong with that, either." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 6 '54
600w

"This is a compactly planned novel, more skilful in design than Miss Tucker's earlier book. But any story covering so short ■ period of time in the lives of so many characters, set as this is against an alien background, is automatically one removed from reality. This is ■ difficulty which the author has not been able to overcome. The reader is left with a sense of frustration, with the wish that Miss Tucker, with her easy dialogue and fluent writing, might have made us care more deeply about her Joshua and Lutie." C. R. Sumner

+ — Sat R 37:38 Jl 31 '54 410w

TUCKER, WILSON. Wild talent. 250p $2.50
Rinehart

53-10921

Science fiction novel which tells the story of a young American blest—or cursed—with the power to read minds.

Kirkus 21:750 N 15 '53 70w

"If the story is somewhat unresolved, never quite meeting the psychological problems posed, it's still a first-rate thriller, with top marks in suspense, surprise and fast readability." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p14 F 14 '54 180w

"Deftly plotted, this s-f adventure proves Mr. Tucker to be an adept in the genre." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p21 F 7 '54 80w

"Tucker somehow avoids the extravagances inherent in the theme and builds a believable and disquieting novel around a mind that is all minds, and a danger greater than any manipulation of atomics." Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 11 '54 160w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 37:14 Ag 7 '54 60w

TUCKERMAN, ARTHUR. Old school tie. 240p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92

54-12545

Reminiscences of an American who spent much time abroad in his younger days, and attended Cheltenham, a public school for boys, where his father had been at school before him. The book ends with the return of the family to the United States after the beginning of World war I.

Booklist 51:30; 150 S 15 '54; D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:60 D '54 30w

Reviewed by Gwen Morgan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 31 '54 420w

"There's great charm and little pretension in these reminiscences. . . A family story whose minority report has its humor along with its pathos, a sunniness with its shadows."

+ Kirkus 22:428 Jl 1 '54 300w

Reviewed by Bennett Epstein

Nation 179:311 O 9 '54 90w

"A fresh and entertaining memoir. . . Mr. Tuckerman has remembered clearly, recorded deftly. His sketches of people and places are vivid, his insights are illuminating and his evocation of mood is touched with an unassuming poetry. Although he has set out chiefly to entertain, he writes best, perhaps, when he is being most serious. But all of 'The Old School Tie' is uncommonly good reading and it is a more substantial book than its title may suggest." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 12 '54 550w

"A family chronicle that is warmly moving, at times hilariously funny, with qualities of writing and insight that lift it far above any ordinary product of its kind. In 'The Old School Tie' Arthur Tuckerman has created something that has the feel of permanence about it." Edmund Fuller

+ N Y Times p39 S 12 '54 550w

"The tone is pleasant and humorous, in a rather low-keyed fashion, and the schoolboy japes and preoccupation with sex seem authentically remembered, but the material is all sadly overfamiliar by now."

+ New Yorker 30:226 N 20 '54 80w

Reviewed by W. R. White

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 10 '54 480w

"The sections of the book dealing with Cheltenham College itself are among the least interesting, having that unfortunate dullness which seems inseparable from all attempts to depict the good and the beautiful. . . The best parts of the book—and they are very good—are the accounts of the vacations on the Continent, motoring with his parents in their Hotchkiss, with its chauffeur, Hutchings."

Bergen Evans

+ Sat R 37:19 S 25 '54 700w

TUCKMAN, JACOB, and LORGE, IRVING.

Retirement and the industrial worker; prospect and reality, a research study of the Institute of adult education. 105p $2.75 Teachers college

301.43 Retirement (from work) 53-8339

"This volume reports the findings of a study of the attitudes to retirement of 660 workers 55 years of age and over. Comparisons were made of three groups: 204 men and women still on the job, 216 workers who had applied for retirement, and 240 who had already retired on a pension. The New York Cloak Joint Board of The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union supplied the subjects; the federal security agencies provided the volunteer field staff; and Teachers College, Columbia University, planned, supervised, and published the research." (Am J Soc) No index.

"Especially valuable is the chapter on 'Factors Related to Retirement Attitudes,' in which factors—health, attitude of spouse, children's attitude, preparation for retirement, kind of activity after retirement—are analyzed for their association with looking forward to retirement or liking it, and those factors associated with not looking forward to retirement or disliking it." E. W. Burgess

+ Am J Soc 59:402 Ja '54 750w

"In essence this report, although hampered by the typical handicaps of presenting the quantitative aspects of an attitude study, manages to convey information which every student of retirement in our industrial society will want to know and to consider." Otto Pollak

Am Soc ■ 18:584 O '53 300w

"A statistical presentation that will interest the specialist rather than the layman; but a valuable addition to the literature on the subject of old age. Purchase where this subject is of great interest." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 78:2034 N 15 '53 90w

TUDOR, TASHA (MRS THOMAS LEIGHTON MCCREADY). A is for Annabelle. [55p] il $2.50 Oxford

Alphabet books

54-13078

An illustrated alphabet book about Annabelle, a beautiful and well-dressed doll dating back to grandmother's time. The brief text is in rhyme.

Booklist 51:157 D 1 '54

"The perfect gift for a little girl is this enchanting new alphabet book. . . Mothers and grandmothers will love this one, too." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 14 '54 100w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p17 D 9 '54 90w

Commonweal 61:204 N 19 '54 10w

Kirkus 22:725 N 1 '54 80w

"Recommended for little girls from 3-6 and for their mothers, grandmothers, and doll collectors." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 79:2493 D 15 '54 60w

"Thanks to Tasha Tudor for the prettiest book of all she has made, for letting us share her own wonderful Annabelle and her own characterful small daughter." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt2 p4 N 14 '54 180w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times pt2 p38 N 14 '54 90w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:202 N 27 '54 30w

"For the very young to enjoy." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:70 N 13 '54 60w

TUNIS, EDWIN. Weapons; a pictorial history; il. by [the author]. 152p $4.95 World pub.

399 Arms and armor—History 54-5342

A pictorial history of man's defensive weapons from the flint ax of the stone age to the present atom bomb. Descriptions are non-technical. The book could be used with high school pupils. No index.

Booklist 50:351 My 15 '54

"A really admirable piece of work." J. A. Menaugh

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 25 '54 150w

"Valuable for excellent illustrations. . . Style of writing inferior to drawings." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 79:1328 Jl '54 70w

"Will be a treasure for junior high and high school libraries. History teachers should take it home to find refreshing, new openings for many a lesson."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p23 My 16 '54 230w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkad

New Yorker 30:222 N 27 '54 70w

"There are omissions, of course. To discuss every variant of Man's arsenal would fill a library. Mr. Tunis has set out to select the significant weapons—i.e., those that marked the beginnings of significant changes. This job he has done admirably. Maybe you are indeed a peace-loving human being; so are we all—with one side of our natures. But the other side is there, too, for which reasons Mr. Tunis' book, handsomely done as it is, will find a large body of readers, I think." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 18 '54 '54 550w

TUNIS, JOHN ROBERTS. Go, team, go! 215p $2.75 Morrow

54-5520

Story of high school basketball in an Indiana town, and the difficulties the coach had to meet when one of his team was caught making book on a fight. For ages 12 to 16.

Booklist 50:303 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:165 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Mr 28 '54 130w

Reviewed by Harry Molter

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 150w

"An exciting story and much the best of Mr. Tunis' recent books." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:105 Ap '54 120w

Kirkus 22:4 Ja 1 '54 80w

"Good values in this one. Recommended for all children's rooms and young people's collections." M. D. Read

+ Library J 79:791 Ap 15 '54 50w

"The style is fast-paced and realistic. The key characters are excellent. We know them through action, which is what Mr. Tunis' readers want, but all are well-rounded portraits. The betting on a high school sport is a surprise, but this writer must know his Indiana towns." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p8 Mr 21 '54 360w

"With fine game chatter, realistic backroom politics and a generous demonstration of democracy, John Tunis proves that he is still one of the best sports writers of the present day." L. T. Bulman

+ N Y Times p24 F 28 '54 150w

"There will never be another Ralph Henry Barbour in the field of junior sports stories, but John R. Tunis is worthy to carry the ball in his place. Mr. Tunis has written many fine books and this one matches any of them." M. P. Allen

+ Sat R 37:53 Mr 20 '54 140w

"If there is a better story about basketball, that gives more insight into the skills and refinements of the game, I do not know it. In all his books Mr. Tunis brings to bear an amazing amount of expert knowledge of the sport he is writing about. He has made basketball almost as thrilling to the armchair reader as it is to the delirious townsmen in Indiana." Raymond Swing

+ Sat R 37:40 Je 19 '54 1000w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:145 My '54

TURFERY, COSSAR, and PALMER, KING.

Musical production; a complete guide for amateurs. 226p il $6 Pitman

792.92 Musical comedy. Amateur theatricals [A54-5823]

"The book attempts to cover every aspect of amateur operatic stagecraft. Among the problems discussed are the formation of an amateur operatic society, public relations, choosing a show, production problems, music in the show, stage lighting, costumes, rehearsal techniques." (Music Lib Assn Notes) Copiously illustrated. List of light operas and musical plays suitable for amateur production. List of theatrical suppliers. Index.

"So far as I know there is no book on musical comedy and comic opera production on so high a level as this one—in fact it is the only one. . . Highly recommended to theatre and music collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:561 Mr 15 '54 40w

"The book would be of value to the amateur who is well grounded in one or two phases of stagecraft, and wants to learn more about the rest of the field. There are two appendices: a list of musical plays suitable for amateur production, and a list of theatrical suppliers (all British). There is no bibliography." Robert Monschein

Music Lib Assn Notes 11:474 Je '54 270w

TURGEON, MRS CHARLOTTE SNYDER. Time to entertain; with il. by Vee Guthrie. 236p $3.75 Little

642 Entertaining. Cookery. Menus 54-5129

Cookbook for the housewife who wants to stay with her guests. Insisting that timing does the trick, the author gives planned menus with times for each step of the preliminaries. Index.

Booklist 50:353 My 15 '54

"The dishes themselves, while they have a continental, custom look and sound—are on the whole easy to prepare and do not require too accomplished a cook."

+ Kirkus 22:53 Ja 15 '54 110w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 79:1230 Je 15 '54 50w

"The menus are interesting and the recipes are excellent. Since few of us are cordons bleus, some dishes should be practiced separately. Next try a dry run through a complete menu obeying the charts, pretending that some guest with a Byzantine excuse is very, very late. After that it's time to entertain." Mary Poore

+ N Y Times p32 My 16 '54 320w

"The housewife, the bon vivant, and the lover of just plain everyday good cooking will be equally delighted with Mrs Turgeon's guide to oven and skillet success. In its pages they will find the answers to every sort of cooking problem." B. F. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 150w

Wis Lib Bul 50:174 Jl '54

TURKIN, HY, ed. Official encyclopedia of Little League baseball [pub] for Little League, incorporated. 238p il $2.75 Barnes, A.S.

796.357 Baseball. Little League baseball, incorporated 54-5414

"The first comprehensive volume dealing with every phase of this baseball league. Hy Turkin lives in Forest Hills, New York, and has been a newspaper sports reporter, as well as official scorer at the Polo Grounds, sports editor of Police Gazette Magazine, conducts a weekly column on Little League Baseball for the New York Daily News, and has a sports show on TV." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

TURKIN, HY—Continued

Booklist 51:36 S 15 '54

"A must item for anyone concerned with Little League Baseball, in any way."
+ Kirkus 22:342 Je 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis
Library J 79:710 Ap 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by I. T. Marsh
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 12 '54 50w

Reviewed by David Dempsey
N Y Times p16 J1 18 '54 20w

TURNELL, MARTIN. Baudelaire; a study of his poetry. 328p il $5 New Directions

841 Baudelaire, Charles Pierre 54-602

"A book on Baudelaire, the major portion of which is devoted to an analysis of the poetry. . . In the foreword of this new book, he tells us that he has been reading Baudelaire constantly for twenty-five years, and that what was intended to be a chapter in a different book turned out to be an entire book on the French poet. This long familiarity with Baudelaire is in evidence throughout this new book. It is so organized that one moves from the more simple to the more difficult. After a discussion of the poet's biography, followed by a detailed analysis of the poems considered in their position in the Fleurs du Mal, Mr. Turnell presents, in the final chapter on 'style,' some valuable suggestions and notes on Baudelaire's versification, language and imagery." Commonweal

"In view of Baudelaire's influence on all modern poetry (whether French or other), Mr. Turnell's enthusiastic and scholarly study should be welcomed by all lovers of the art. . . Mr. Turnell's criticism is always sensitive and well-informed. He sometimes seems to underline the obvious, but to this reviewer his main fault is a tendency to indulge in naïve dogmatism." A. F. B. Clark

+ — Canadian Forum 34:68 Je '54 350w

"This new work will add considerably to Mr. Turnell's stature and influence as critic. With it, he imposes himself as a critic in the great tradition, able to move from genre to genre, able to treat with the same illuminating power a tragedy or a novel or a poem. He places himself centrally within the orbit of his author, but never forgets the relationship of the author with his period and with past periods, and never neglects the significant picture of a work of art in its relationship with other works of art." Wallace Fowlie

+ Commonweal 60:18 Ap 9 '54 1200w

"This is an excellent book in every way if you think, as the author does, that Baudelaire is the greatest European poet of his century. But in that century lived Keats, Shelley, Tennyson, Swinburne, Meredith, Thomson of 'The City of Dreadful Night,' Lamartine, Hugo, Mallarmé, and Verlaine, whom, personally, I place as high as and, for some, higher than Baudelaire. . . That he is a very great poet of permanent and universal value one cannot deny; but it is time to realize that a great proportion of his verse is bad poetry, and even very bad poetry." Denis Saurat

Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 8 '54 450w

"Although Mr. Turnell has interesting and illuminating things to say, although he is stimulating and provocative, he, no more than his predecessors, manages to convey the real essence of the poet's art, and the least convincing part of his essay is that dealing with his style." Enid Starkie

New Statesman ■ Nation 47:166 F ■ '54 1200w

"Carefully documented, knowledgeable, and suggestive study."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 19 '54 90w

"No matter how one disagrees with this study of Baudelaire, any reader of 'Les Fleurs du Mal' must have respect for it. The author is palpably immersed in its poetry, and has gathered together nearly all the significant things that have been said about the poet."

M. M. Colum

N Y Times p5 My 9 '54 800w

"It is excellent in its thoroughness, its sensibility, its own prose style." W. T. Scott
+ Sat ■ 37:28 D 4 '54 250w

"The commentary is the fruit, not simply of scholarly enquiry, but of enthusiasm: Mr. Turnell tells us that Les Fleurs du Mal has been his bedside book for the past fifteen years. Unfortunately, it needs more even than a combination of scholarship and enthusiasm to wrestle creditably with this particular angel. . . Mr. Turnell, in his modest introduction, offers his book 'simply as a reading of Baudelaire.' It is not, however, a reading which brings to us a deeper and more unified conception of Baudelaire's poetry. The verbal criticism, such as it is, fails to relate itself to the 'architectural' concept: certain basic problems, such as the Christian conflicts in Baudelaire's imagination, are touched only in the most superficial way, and the theory of correspondances is described as if it were an isolated phenomenon. Loose ends dangle, perhaps of a thread to the labyrinth." Donat O'Donnell

— Spec p21 Ja 1 '54 1150w

"The section on Baudelaire's style suggests that Mr. Turnell has turned to the study of Baudelaire's versification without first paying enough attention to versification tout court. Mr. Turnell has drawn very freely indeed on such predecessors—they are more numerous than his foreword suggests—as have said something 'useful' about Baudelaire's art; where he is independent he is often rash. The book gives the impression of following upon the too-rapid assimilation of too much information. The writer is evidently interested; but it is difficult for the reader—particularly the reader who has read a good deal of it before—to respond with an interest as acute."

Times [London] Lit Sup p138 F 26 '54 1950w

"Mr. Turnell offers his readers something like a miniature anthology with commentary. It is impossible to read this book from cover to cover without being haunted by the music and power of Baudelaire's verse. This is in itself an achievement. Moreover, Mr. Turnell's analyses are frequently pertinent, though not everyone will agree on the importance attributed to some poems and the comparative neglect suffered by others. But this is as it should be. The occasional superficiality is less forgivable, in spite of an agreeable style." V. H. Brombert

+ — Yale R n s 43:636 summer '54 550w

TURNELL, MARTIN. Jacques Rivière. (Studies in modern European literature and thought) 64p $2.50 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Rivière, Jacques A53-5269

"Mr. Martin Turnell is a member of the staff of the British Broadcasting Corporation in London and is well known in this country for his critical writings on French literature. His study of Jacques Rivière is the first to appear in English on the man who was editor of La Nouvelle Revue Française between 1919 and 1925. Rivière was thirty-eight years old at the time of his death in 1925. Mr. Turnell does not attempt to prove that he was a great writer, but he is fully justified in claiming for him a place of importance in contemporary French letters." Commonweal

Reviewed by A. F. B. Clark

Canadian Forum 34:19 Ap '54 80w

Reviewed by Wallace Fowlie

+ Commonweal 59:144 N 13 '53 650w

"Admirable, acute study."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p106 F 12 '54 1750w

TURNER, ERNEST SACKVILLE. Shocking history of advertising! 351p il $4.50 Dutton

659.109 Advertising—History 53-10342

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Booklist 50:198 Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:107 F '54 30w

"This is a good humored survey of British and American commercial advertising from the seventeenth century to the present. . . One wishes for more evaluative data, but the book has value as a historical and social presentation. Slight mention is made of radio and television. Recommended for public, but with reservations for college libraries." Jerome Cushman

+ — Library J 79:145 Ja 15 '54 100w

"E. S. Turner has taken a long look at advertising practices, past and present. The result is a book that will give a pleasant evening of reading not only to professionals in this field but to the intelligent layman who wants to be entertained while he is being informed." J. M. Black

+ Management R 43:482 Jl '54 800w

"The story of advertising in Great Britain and the United States . . . is told in E. S. Turner's brilliant and creative 'The Shocking History of Advertising.' Mr. Turner is an Englishman who has a clear perspective of the strange road traveled by advertising, from its earliest days of puffery to its highly moot and expensive present." E. L. Bernays

+ Sat R 37:45 Ja 23 '54 650w

TURNER-HIGH, HARRY HOLBERT. Château-Gérard; the life and times of a Walloon village. 297p il maps $5.50 Univ. of S.C. press

309.1493 Walloons. Condroz, Belgium 53-12849

"A community study of a Walloon-speaking village in Belgium, this is the only work of its kind devoted to the French-speaking area, and one of the few such studies in English of a continental European region. Having first visited the locality as an officer of the United States Army in the winter of 1944-45, the author returned in the winter of 1949-50 in order to do his research. . . About one-half of the space here is apportioned to a description of Château-Gérard, the other half to the placement of the community within its historical and geographical setting. Dr. Turney-High goes back to Neolithic times in order to trace the origins of some elements in this culture, and to France, Germany, and other parts of Europe to uncover the more recent influences which have helped determine the contemporary configurations." U S Quarterly Bk R

Reviewed by Morton Rubin
Am Soc R 19:509 Ag '54 330w

Reviewed by Felix Oppenheim
Ann Am Acad 296:213 N '54 360w

"Harry Turney-High has produced a small masterpiece in this very thorough and highly readable community study. . . The book is a distinguished piece of writing, especially within the field of anthropological community studies. Turney-High is not afraid of being entertaining nor of describing places and peoples so that the reader can 'see' something more than scientific constructs and abstractions alone. Excellent as it is as a description, however, the book is well structured with theory. This is introduced in informal, although incisive passages and directly 'tested' against the data of the field work wherever appropriate throughout the account. All in all one hopes that this book will receive the wide circulation it deserves." John Gillin

+ Social Forces 32:387 My '54 600w

"The author has combined anthropological, sociological, and historical method to draw a composite, yet well-integrated, picture of Walloon culture and personality. Although he has obtained his information as a participant-observer whenever possible, Dr. Turney-High has also acquired data from informants and from the library and staff of the nearby University of Liège. The many digressions will perhaps annoy the professional reader, but they serve, as they were apparently designed, to lighten the text and to attract a wider audience for the book."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:73 Mr '54 220w

TURNER, ANNETTE. Have a lovely funeral, by A. T. Hopkins [pseud]. 247p $2.50 Rinehart

54-5650

Detective story.

"Intricately entangled plot with bewildering shifts in action." Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 Mr 28 '54 110w

"High-strung, but an attractive atmosphere and personnel."

Kirkus 22:17 Ja 1 '54 70w

"After a singularly unhelpful prologue Mr. Hopkins keeps things hopping madly with a corpse here and chloroform there." James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 14 '54 30w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p27 Ap 11 '54 20w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 18 '54 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

TUTTON, DIANA. Guard your daughters. 249p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

54-7190

The Harveys were a devoted English family. The father was a famous writer; the mother lovely and aristocratic, but terrified of any outside life for her five daughters. The oldest daughter had married, which surprised the four remaining sisters. In the course of the story the mystery of the mother's fear is explained.

Booklist 50:230; 241 F 15 '54

Reviewed by La Tourette Stockwell
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 28 '54 290w

"Episodic accounting of an eccentric, alive household, this has its charm in its high spirits, keen awareness and complete Britishness."

+ Kirkus 21:801 D 15 '53 160w

"[The Harvey daughters'] natural intelligence and spontaneous gaiety, plus their efforts to meet eligible young men make amusing moments. However, a sombre element in the over-all plot concerning the mother is unconvincingly developed, and the denouement out of keeping with the light-heartedness of the story." R. W. Henderson

+ — Library J 79:143 Ja 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Honor Tracy
New Statesman & Nation 46:110 Jl 25 '53 180w

"Diana Tutton's story of how five sisters react to isolation and to each other, of how their seclusion is broken into by chance meetings with two young men, holds the reader's interest throughout. Mrs. Tutton has an eye for the unexpected that is combustibly funny, as well as the gift of making even a first French lesson seem momentous." Ferdinand Moltke-Hansen

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 28 '54 290w

Reviewed by Jane Cobb
+ N Y Times p22 F 28 '54 240w

"An uneven but interesting first novel by a lively and intelligent writer who should restrain her almost implacable impulse toward coyness, archness, and whimsey."

+ — New Yorker 30:116 F 27 '54 60w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong
Spec p184 Ag 14 '53 170w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 120w

"A gay but at times unexpectedly perceptive book which will probably appeal to most women and some men."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p545 Ag 28 '53 120w

TUTUOLA, AMOS. My life in the bush of ghosts; with a foreword by Geoffrey Par-rinder. 174p $3.50 Grove

54-12101

A fantasy by the author of The Palm Wine Drinkard (Book Review Digest 1953). It describes the adventures of a seven-year-old boy lost in a forbidden jungle, called the Bush of Ghosts. Here he meets monstrous figures, evil-smelling ghosts, snakes, scorpions, bearded women and river ghosts, among whom he has to live.

"Amos Tutuola, out of the freshness of an unconventional background, has hit upon what is simply one possible way of describing life. To do that, successfully to describe life on any level, is to evoke the half-lit memories of anyone alive." Jean Holzhauser

+ Commonweal 61:23 O 8 '54 550w

"You can hear it spoken to a rapt African audience, and the oddest thing of all is that down on paper it should have kept its air of grotesque and toppling magic, its flavour of a continent that, in a literary way, we have so far barely met." Isabel Quigley

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 9 '54 140w

Reviewed by J. V. Murra

Nation 179:261 S 25 '54 600w

"Tutuola's fancy is endless; yet it is controlled by the tribal folk-lore. It discernibly expresses the unconscious of a race and even moments of the nightmare element in our own unconscious. The slimy or electric movements of nightmare, its sickening logic, its hypnotising visual quality, its dreadful meaningfulness, are put down by an earnest and ingenious story-teller. One feels one has been taken back thousands of years to the first terrors of human nature." V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 47:291 Mr 6 '54 1300w

"Amos Tutuola writes with freshness in a kind of new language; he has a clear way of seeing; and he is dealing with rich materials essentially unexploited; all of these factors combine now with his natural artistry to give us another beguiling novel." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 N 28 '54 650w

Reviewed by Lee Rogow

Sat R 37:57 N 13 '54 130w

"Mr. Tutuola's book is a severe test of our originality as readers, of our ability to throw all our preferences and preconceptions out of the window when the need arises. It will probably only go to show that I can't do this if I say that my interest flags when I read something that so rarely evokes anything in life as I know it, and if I anticipate a possible objection by pleading that even misery, pain and the rest cannot be universal and become blurred in a strange context. But this book clearly needs repeated readings before its extraordinariness can be fully noted, let alone mastered." Kingsley Amis

Spec p244 F 26 '54 650w

"Mr. Tutuola is a Nigerian, and his style has a picturesque virility that has not lost its poetry. His imagination is a splendid mixture of native myth, legend, superstition and hearsay, and no one with a taste for the fantastic or surrealistic could fail to be interested, and possibly entertained by his exercise of it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p117 F 19 '54 120w

TYMAN, LORETTA MARIE. Michael McGillicuddy; il. by Gioia Fiammenghi. [48p] $2 Abelard-Schuman

53-8360

Picture storybook about the red-headed McGillicuddy family living in Chicago. Michael, the youngest of the five brothers wanted a dog, but their home was too small for even one dog. The story tells what happened when they found they had to lose even their small home, and what Michael did about it.

"This is a first book for both author and illustrator—we hope there will be many more." M. M. R.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 15 '53 110w

"Recommended for ages 5-8." Virginia Russell

+ Library J 78:2042 N 15 '53 60w

"Rollicking pictures in fireman red, gray and black add much to the humorous plot." C. E. V.

+ N Y Times pt2, p43 N 15 '53 140w

TYRE, NEDRA. Journey to nowhere. 209p $2.75 Knopf

53-9483

Mystery story.

Kirkus 21:723 N 1 '53 90w

"All in all, a firmly guided excursion into nightmare." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ja 17 '54 120w

"A neurotic girl sets out on a journey, intended to release her from her fears but instead leading her into fresh terrors—and you'll remember the terrors, and the economy and insight with which they're depicted, long after you've forgotten their detective solution." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p26 Ja 10 '54 100w

"The balance of doubt is beautifully handled, and there's a nightmare quality about the story that makes the villains almost plausible." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 7 '54 60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:52 Mr 13 '54 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p669 O 22 '54 200w

TYRRELL, GEORGE NUGENT MERLE. Apparitions; with a pref. by H. H. Price; published under the auspices of the Society of psychical research. rev ed 172p $3 Pantheon bks.

133.1 Apparitions [54-16110]

"This book was first composed in 1942 as a lecture to the Society for Psychical Research. [It] has never before been made available to the general public, and is likely to be a classic in its field. Mr. Tyrrell, whose early training was as an electrical engineer, marshals a series of the best attested cases of apparitions, ghosts, hallucinations, telepathy, clairvoyance and similar supernormal (non-physical) phenomena which are to be found in the files of the Society for Psychical Research." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Recommended to the scientific student of extra-sensory perception." Waldo Frank

+ Nation 179:236 S 18 '54 20w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 47:132 Ja 30 '54 1650w

"Since Mr. Tyrrell's study relies on this method of case analysis, it is to be rated as an exploratory, rather than as a conclusive research. For the purpose of suggestions for new lines of inquiry, however, this analysis of spontaneous experiences is not only valuable but sufficiently reliable as well." J. B. Rhine

+ N Y Times p14 S 19 '54 400w

"Is likely to be regarded as a classic of its kind [and] gives the general reader an admirable survey of the whole subject."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Je 25 '54 550w

U

ULLMAN, JAMES RAMSEY. Age of mountaineering. 353p il $6 Lippincott

796.52 Mountaineering 54-9421

The book is based on the author's earlier book High Conquest [published 1941] and continues the story of mountaineering through the post-war years and the climbing of Mount Everest. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:86 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:34 N '54 20w

"Himself an alpinist, as well as a first rate novelist, Ullman has turned out a book that will please not only climbers but also those who take their mountaineering thrills vicariously while reading in an easy chair." E. A. Richter

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 26 '54 230w

Kirkus 22:469 J1 15 '54 250w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:2458 D 15 '54 30w

"This book, of course, isn't a novel, and it doesn't command similar writing. But it is all here; and if reading about this kind of impulse is in the blood, Mr. Ullman's book is the very thing to satisfy the whimsy." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p35 S 26 '54 160w

New Yorker 30:163 O 16 '54 130w

Reviewed by Keith Kent

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 24 '54 550w

"A beautiful narrative of the conquests of mountains that is as exciting as fiction." W. O. Douglas

+ Sat R 37:18 N 13 '54 650w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 300w

ULLMAN, JAMES RAMSEY. Banner in the sky. 252p $2.75 Lippincott

54-7296

A well known writer of adult fiction and non-fiction on mountaineering, here tells a story for boys about a boy and a mountain—the boy's ambition to conquer the mountain and how he finally failed—but succeeded.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:96 D '54 50w

Booklist 51:88 O 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 3 '54 300w

Christian Science Monitor p15 N 11 '54 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 30w

"A masterpiece of adventure-writing, this Swiss mountain-climbing story reminiscent of the author's White Tower, for adults, stands far above the usual in narrative power. Mr. Ullman achieves success through his convincing awareness of the spell of mountains and the urge to climb, his depiction of a kind of heroism that is intelligence and nobility of spirit more than mere courage, and his evocative picturing of scene and movement with a step-by-step view of climbing in formidable situations." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:338 O '54 200w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 30:465 D '54 80w

"The finale is a foregone conclusion, with Rudy's victory and Saxo's failure. But the techniques emerge rather than the emotional. Disappointing."

Kirkus 22:392 J1 1 '54 170w

"This good adventure story will appeal to grades 8-10." L. R. Markey

+ Library J 79:2258 N 15 '54 100w

"A disappointment because of the author's established reputation and the current popularity of the subject. Not recommended." Robert Van Benthuyzen

— Library J 79:2258 N 15 '54 210w

"As a story of a boy of sixteen, who had a very personal feeling about the conquest of an Alpine mountain, it will be absorbing and revealing to youth. As a tale of expert mountaineering, based only very slightly on the conquest of the Matterhorn in 1865, it may appeal to adults also. Mr. Ullman makes us feel the inescapable impulse that drives certain men to climb the greatest heights; makes even non-climbers thrill to the terrifying danger surmounted more by inner will than by physical skill; and creates an interesting ethical situation which draws his book to a dramatic, deeply felt climax." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 S 12 '54 550w

"With the same sure touch that characterized his novel, 'The White Tower,' Mr. Ullman has come up with a superb mountain-climbing story for younger readers." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p32 S 12 '54 230w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkad

New Yorker 30:212 N 27 '54 60w

"This is a moving, sensitively written story and it should make a deep impression on teenage readers." Augusta Baker

+ Sat R 37:34 S 18 '54 150w

Time 64:107 S 27 '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:219 O '54

ULRIKSSON, VIDKUNN. The telegraphers: their craft and their unions. 218p $3.75 Public affairs press

331.88 Telegraphers. Commercial telegraphers union 52-12861

"Vidkuun Ulriksson has had the unusual experience of spending some two dozen years as a railroad and commercial telegrapher, and of being active in the industry's leading union. . . The volume is not as broad in scope as the title would indicate, for it is confined to commercial telegraphy and eschews the important field of the railroad telegraphers. After an introductory chapter on the development of the industry, the author sets forth in detail the attempts of various unions to organize the industry. In effect, this is a story mainly of Western Union because of the dominance of this company. The account is carried forward in a combination of topical and chronological treatment." Ann Am Acad

"The volume as a whole is a good beginning. But there is still much to be explored in the story of a small and impotent union coming suddenly into its own, confronted with the problems of unifying an inexperienced membership, of solving structural difficulties, and of bargaining over a sprawling countryside domain which, to boot, has a future which is none too bright at this reading." H. J. Lahne

Ann Am Acad 291:172 Ja '54 800w

"For those concerned with the industry and also with the history of this union, it will prove interesting reading. Recommended for large labor collections or for college collections in this field." D. K. Oko

Library J 79:458 Mr 1 '54 120w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:234 Je '54 240w

UNDERKOFER, LELAND ALFRED, and HICKEY, RICHARD JAMES, eds. Industrial fermentations. v 1 565p $12 Chemical pub. co. 660.28 Fermentation (54-7960)

"Fermentation is not only one of the oldest chemical processes employed by man, but it is one which has undergone remarkable development especially in regard to new applications in our own time. Here is the first volume of a two-volume systematic account. The point of view is primarily that of the industrial chemist, and most of the processes described are of industrial importance at the present time. The individual chapters are concise surveys based on the literature and—in most cases—on the author's experience. Each one includes a substantial reference list. All of the authors are recognized specialists in the field." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:2639 Je 28 '54 20w

"A much-needed work on the various industrial chemical processes which are based on fermentation. The signed chapters are the work of American experts."

+ Library J 79:916 My 15 '54 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:22 Mr '54

UNDSET, SIGRID. Catherine of Siena; tr. by Kate Austin-Lund. 293p $3.50 Sheed

B or 92 Catherine of Siena, Saint 54-6143

The first translation into English of a book which was finished not long before the author's death in 1949. It is the life story of the fourteenth century patron saint of the Dominicans, who prevailed upon Pope Gregory XI to return to Rome from Avignon.

"Catherine poses a problem to any biographer, and Sigrid Undset, with her great mind and heart, comes as close as any to solving it. She probes the magnificent intelligence of the saint, and the psychology of Catherine's greatness is convincingly presented." M. R. Grennan

+ Cath World 179:397 Ag '54 400w

"The great medievalist's effort to present her heroine in her daily habit as she lived in her particular world of time and place, and all too human humanity, has resulted in a portrait at once more full-blooded and, surprisingly, more edifying than the traditional image." H. C. White

+ Commonweal 60:444 Ag 6 '54 700w

"Primarily a book for Catholic readers, but the author's skill and reputation as a writer will appeal to others."

+ Kirkus 22:195 Mr 15 '54 190w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p23 Ap 25 '54 90w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p21 Ag 15 '54 20w

"It is interesting to have the biography of a great woman saint written by a great woman writer, especially by a Scandinavian whose whole mentality and upbringing and Weltanschauung must differ so entirely from those of her subject. Perhaps the very width of the gulf between them (chronological, racial, latitudinal, and temperamental) may paradoxically have enabled Sigrid Undset to assess down a long perspective this life so utterly removed from her own."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p461 Jl 16 '54 700w

UNGERSMA, AARON JOHN. Handbook for Christian believers; faith explained for today's needs. 215p $2.75 Bobbs

230 Christianity. Theology 53-5233

A statement concerning the author's belief about and his work among men. It is a book for those "wanting to explain their faith, those seeking a faith, and those struggling with intellectual problems and doubts, the growing pains of replacing childish beliefs with more mature faith." (San Francisco Chronicle) The author is head of the department of psychology at San Francisco Theological Seminary.

"A much-needed volume. Recommended for college and public libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 78:1326 Ag '53 110w

"An excellent elementary theology for the general reader in clear, non-technical terms."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ja 24 '54 100w

UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION. Education and art, a symposium; ed. by Edwin Ziegfeld. 129p 35pl 24 col pl $5.50; pa $5 Columbia univ. press

707 Art—Study and teaching

"Artists, educators, and specialists from many countries joined in this symposium, a follow-up to the UNESCO Seminar on the Teaching of the Visual Arts in General Education. Concerned with both philosophy and techniques, these international authorities discuss the methods, materials, and problems of administration involved in teaching art to the child, adolescent, and the adult. Children from all over the world contributed the charming illustrations in color and in black and white. For the art teacher, educator, and parent." Booklist

Booklist 50:353 My 15 '54

"A book of this nature can only be preliminary, focusing on common agreement resulting from migratory beliefs, exploring common and uncommon opinions, trends, and practices. This it does well. In its main purpose, to bring information about art education into international focus, it succeeds admirably. Although at times one feels the writers are cramped by space limitations, some statements are excellent in their brevity." R. L. Wickiser

+ — Sat R 37:32 S 11 '54 1050w

"This attractive book deserves more than usual mention because it is the first publication to treat art education in a comprehensive manner from the world point of view. One cannot help read the excellent essays and articles by art leaders in various countries without being conscious of similarities and common aspirations which bind the creators together regardless of nationality. The many fine illustrations of children at work and the actual examples reproduced give further emphasis to the oneness which makes art the universal language."

+ School Arts 53:47 Ap '54 400w

UNSEEN and silent; adventures from the underground movement narrated by paratroops of the Polish home army; tr. from the Polish by George Iranek-Osmecki [foreword by Wladyslaw Anders and Sir Colin Gubbins]. 350p il $4.50 Sheed

940.548 World war 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Polish. Poland—History—German occupation, 1939-1945

Forty studies in which are described the activities of the Polish paratroops during World war II. They tell of the training of the troops in Britain, their jumps over Britain, and the work they did in Poland.

"It is a story of the underground more valuable than most for being seen through many eyes, and more moving for having no happy ending." E. G.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 25 '54 140w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 4 '54 60w

"The general reader will find in the book many a breath-taking episode and example of Poland's undying gallantry. The military student will find in 'The Unseen and Silent' a valuable contribution to the understanding of actual problems of four-dimensional war." Mikhail Koriakov

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 25 '54 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p451 Jl 16 '54 1200w

UPFIELD, ARTHUR WILLIAM. Death of a lake. 188p $2.75 Doubleday

54-5711

Detective story.

Bookmark 13:186 My '54

"The puzzle is minor and slowly spun out, but the picture of isolated life in Australia's vastness is unusually captivating." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 11 '54 90w

+ Kirkus 21:804 D 15 '53 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 48:368 S 25 '54 120w

"This is really a most absorbing piece of work, less for the perfunctory if plausible tangle of passions which admit it to the Crime Club category than for the account of the drying up of that lake in the teeming wastes of the Australian Bush which is Mr. Upfield's richer and predominating concern." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p13 Mr 21 '54 130w

"Arthur W. Upfield has been less successful than he often is in creating the character and pattern behind ■ crime, but has more than made up for that by producing ■ exciting ■ picture of regional color as even he has achieved." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 7 '54 110w

"This sort of thing is Upfield at his best, with a natural-history background that dwarfs any human activity, superbly observed and described." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 21 '54 80w

"Among his best." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat ■ 37:62 Ap 10 '54 20w

"The technique is ■ bit heavy-handed, but the story develops enough tension to sustain its interest, even if one cannot wholly share Mr. Upfield's liking for his solemn little detective." Penelope Houston

+ — Spec p40 Jl 2 '54 90w

"The puzzle is dwarfed by the superb tragedy of the lake and it is to be regretted that the author could not make a real imaginative synthesis of the squalid human situation and the grandeur of the natural catastrophe."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p469 Jl 23 '54 90w

UPFIELD, ARTHUR WILLIAM. Sinister stones. 187p $2.75 Doubleday

54-9187

Detective story.

Bookmark 14:9 O '54 10w

"Thoroly engaging detective exploit in captivating environment." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 29 '54 30w

"Real down-under."

+ Kirkus 22:371 Je 15 '54 90w

"This seventeenth of Inspector Bonaparte's cases is certainly one of the richest. A substantial part of its excitement comes (as it did in 'Death of a Lake' earlier this year) from Mr. Upfield's evocation of yet another huge stretch of the fabulous Fifth Continent about which Bony's cases take him." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune ■ R p10 Ag 8 '54 160w

"The most devout fans of Arthur W. Upfield are apt to be disappointed, perhaps unjustly, when the Australian novelist merely writes a very good detective story such as another equally able writer might have produced; but we rear up and cheer loudly when he publishes a uniquely Australian case which could not possibly be solved by any detective other than half-caste Detective Inspector Napoleon Bonaparte—such a case, in short, as that narrated in Sinister Stones." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 8 '54 220w

"Nice going." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:37 S 25 '54 30w

UPTHEGROVE, CAMPBELL L. Empire by mandate. 239p $3.75 Bookman associates

325.31 Mandates. League of nations. Permanent mandates commission 54-1125

"A study, completed in 1941, of the relations between Great Britain and the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations with respect to the British mandates in Africa, Iraq and Palestine." Foreign Affairs

"Dr. Upthegrove seldom lifts his eyes from his sources, chiefly the minutes of the Mandates Commission and the reports of the British Colonial Office on the administration of the mandated territories. There are, therefore, despite a few feeble gesture, no real attempts to put the problem of governing quasi-internationalized dependent areas in its setting or to evaluate the mandatory experiment as it operated within the British Empire... The writing is undistinguished, the proofreading is careless, and amazing errors have crept into the work." P. L. Hanna

— Am Hist R 60:162 O '54 280w

"One looks in vain for anything of current developments in this study. Nowhere is the Trusteeship Council mentioned. The work simply covers an historical interval and is presented almost as it was first written." V. J. Puryear

Ann Am Acad 296:204 N '54 360w

"It is unfortunate that this work is marred by the fact that it was written in 1941 and that neither the author nor the publisher felt it necessary to change tenses in discussions of what were then current unresolved problems but which are now past history. This is particularly noticeable in the chapter on Palestine."

Current Hist 27:388 D '54 130w

Foreign Affairs 33:166 O '54 20w

UPTON, MONROE. Electronics for everyone. 370p $6 Devin-Adair

621.34 [621.38] Electronics 54-9298

"The story of electricity in action: television, radio, radar, high fidelity, and other phases—what they are and how they work." Subtitle

Booklist 51:8 S 1 '54

Reviewed by John Pfeiffer

N Y Times p34 N 28 '54 450w

"The point about Mr. Upton's book is that, excepting where technical terms (chiefly names for new things) are absolutely necessary, he sticks to simple, non-expert language. He has an admirable talent for keeping the whole thing on the simplest possible level." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 21 '54 320w

UPTON, WILLIAM TREAT. William Henry Fry, American journalist and composer-critic. 346p $5 Crowell

B or 92 Fry, William Henry 54-5533

A biography of the first American to write a publicly performed opera, Leonora, first presented in Philadelphia in 1845. As a journalist and music critic he spent three years in Paris. On his return to New York in 1852, he spent the remaining dozen years of his life composing, lecturing, and writing for the New York Tribune. Index.

"An important contribution to musical Americana." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:985 My 15 '54 140w

"It is in the discussion of Fry's chief musical works that Mr. Upton is at his best, that is, his most consecutive and judicious. The other four parts of the volume constitute rather a source book for a life than a finished biography. This defect may be due in part to the manner in which the material was collected, much of it coming by word of mouth from the grandnephew of the subject." Jacques Barzun

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 11:460 Je '54 430w

URMSTON, MARY. Twenty-five and Ann. 192p. $2.50 Doubleday

53-9136

A novel for older girls relating some of the experiences Ann Merrill went thru during her first year of teaching.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ja 31 '54 180w

"Firm and satisfying."

+ Kirkus 21:489 Ag 1 '53 160w

"Her interest in public affairs and the hint of romance is very appealing, and there is never a dull moment. A worthwhile book for vocational guidance and human relationships and ■ thoroughly good story for girls of 13-16." M. L. Turk

+ Library J 79:78 Ja 1 '54 80w

"The children are well done. It is both honest and charming, far out of the rut of the usual career book. We hope it encourages many girls like Ann to be teachers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 10 '54 90w

Wis Lib Bul 50:81 Mr '54

USHENKO, ANDREW PAUL. Dynamics of art; foreword by Stephen C. Pepper. 270p il $5; pa $3.75 Ind. univ. press

701 Art—Philosophy. Esthetics 53-9836

"Professor of Philosophy at Indiana University writes learnedly, possibly with a leaning toward philosophy rather than art of 'the nature of esthetic experience.' Brueghel's Winter is examined to make points in the elaboration of the statement that 'the effect of the work of art within the beholder's experience is an objective and imaginative reconstruction of perception.' Notes, chapter by chapter, and index." Library J

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 78:2216 D 15 '53 50w

"Dr. Ushenko presents here many provocative, interesting, and important remarks. This technical and able book is, as Stephen C. Pepper notes in his Foreword, one of the most searching analyses of the nature of a work of art that has yet appeared."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:37 Mr '54 170w

USKALI, GEORGE A., ed. How to restore antique and classic cars. See Popular mechanics magazine

V

VALENTINE, ALAN CHESTER. Age of conformity. 179p $3 Regnery

973 Democracy. U.S.—Civilization. National characteristics, American 54-10442

A study of American culture in which the author points out that the cult of conformity is at present destroying the very ideals on which this country was founded.

Booklist 51:81 O 15 '54

"Valentine's book is a sober, solid job of analysis of what happens when majorities become tyrannical or tasteless or both." John Chamberlain

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 21 '54 550w

"Others (Alan Valentine is not the first) have looked at contemporary America and found it dreary. Others, too, have discovered a sovereign remedy for our evil times, a remedy simple to state and guaranteed to make us all happy. And others have tacitly admitted, in the final chapter, the large improbability of getting the beast to hold still while the remedy is administered. Few, however, have made quite such a clean sweep of all things American as has Mr. Valentine." Frank Getlein

Commonweal 61:99 O 29 '54 850w

"The heart of what Mr. Valentine has to say, is the reaffirmation of the standards of excellence, of individual conscience and moral rectitude, in the midst of a time that has undeniably given too much place to the shoddy and the second rate. As an educator (Mr. Valentine was for fifteen years president of Rochester University) he is especially effective in discussing the deterioration that has taken place in the training of young people." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 24 '54 450w

"That the United States began as a republic but has become a democracy is the favorite thesis of a certain minority group. This little treatise by a former president of Rochester University is perhaps the ablest attempt yet made to give the thesis a definite content, to explain precisely what it means, and to defend it in rational terms. . . The very frankness with which he takes up an unpopular position makes this an unusually stimulating book." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Times p6 O 10 '54 900w

"A shrewd and eloquent attack on the emptiness and mediocrity of modern American civilization."

+ New Yorker 30:193 N 6 '54 110w

Reviewed by William Barrett

Sat R 37:14 D 11 '54 700w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 550w

VALLENTIN, ANTONINA, (MME JULIEN LUCHAIRE) Drama of Albert Einstein; tr. by Moura Budberg [Eng title: Einstein, a biography]. 312p $3.95 Doubleday

B or 92 Einstein, Albert 54-5715

"Polish-born French writer adds to already considerable Einstein literature. Although living in Paris, she has been for several decades close friend of Einstein family. Not a biography in the usual sense. She describes Einstein's life and spiritual development, emphasizing his attitude to the world and the world's to him." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:40 S 15 '54

Reviewed by D. C. Murdock

Canadian Forum 34:189 N '54 420w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 22 '54 300w

"Written by a close friend of the Einstein family over the years, this biography of Einstein is a sensitive portrait and a loving tribute."

+ Kirkus 22:420 Jl 1 '54 160w

"Author and her subject both being European, some of earlier chapters perhaps not easily understandable to American reader. However, well translated book worth while reading and recommended for all larger public libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ — Library J 79:1398 Ag '54 140w

"It is understandable that the author of 'The Drama of Albert Einstein' should find herself confused as to the identities of Albert Einstein and his better known namesake. But the real man comes through despite her uncertainty. She has the good sense to recognize that no one speaks for him better than himself and quotes him often. And her dramatization does not obscure the clearly purposed course of his life." Gerard Piel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 22 '54 900w

"The biography of Einstein by Antonina Vallentin deals almost exclusively with the man, his family life, his friends, his personal habits, his personality and his activities outside the realm of science. Drawing heavily on her intimacy with the Einstein family, her presentation has the ring of authenticity. Many anecdotes—some new, some old—make the book entertaining and it succeeds, where many previous biographies fail, in conveying that gentle humor that is such an essential and charming aspect of Einstein's personality." I. B. Cohen

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 22 '54 850w

"Her tone is worshipful, which seems warranted, and she manages a difficult job with dignity and good taste."

+ New Yorker 30:81 Ag 28 '54 120w

"There is not one false or strained note in all of 'The Drama of Albert Einstein,' except in the title. 'Drama' is not the word for such a life, with its dramatic episodes, to be sure, but with a totality belittled by the word drama." Alvin Johnson

+ Sat R 37:18 Ag 21 '54 1350w

"The legends play a larger part in her story, and her impressionistic picture of the man throws little light on the development of his ideas. His personal habits and character are illustrated by little tales, often highly engaging, usually aimed at the motherly streak in the reader. The style is undistinguished, and in translation from the French of the original text scientific terms and names of learned journals tend to go astray. But Mrs. Vallentin succeeds in two things. She brings out the essentially philosophical character of Einstein's contribution to physical theory. . . And she gives us an attractive impression of a man whose intellectual powers are combined with great personal modesty, and with compassion for all who suffer, as he has done, from persecution by the brutal and the intolerant." Stephen Toulmin

+ — Spec p444 Ap 9 '54 360w

"The psychological struggles that have occasionally taken place in Dr. Einstein's life are well described. . . . There are some delightful anecdotes of other men of science with whom Dr. Einstein has been thrown into contact."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 19 '54 650w

Wis Lib Bul 50:208 O '54

VALMIKI. Adventures of Rama. See Gaer, J.

VALMIKI. Ramayana. See Menen, A.

VANCE, MARGUERITE. Elizabeth Tudor, sovereign lady; il. by Nedda Walker. 156p $2.75 Dutton

B or '92 Elizabeth I, queen of England—Juvenile literature 54-8854

"A biography of Elizabeth I [for grades seven to nine]. . . . Following Elizabeth's life closely from childhood on, it gives the picture of daily happenings, the routine of the 16th century royal household. But of equal importance is the account of the varied political ambitions kindling and aflame and the peculiar set of personal and historical circumstances that made Elizabeth queen." Kirkus

Booklist 51:140 N 15 '54

"The tale is told with warm sympathy. We see her majesty warped a little by betrayals, swayed by affections, but always predominantly the sovereign, whose first interest lies in her people. The illustrations fit the story, perfect in detail, beautiful in execution." I. L.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p44 N 14 '54 150w

Reviewed by M. J. Taylor

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54 120w

"Recommended."

+ Kirkus 22:682 O 1 '54 150w

"With its large type, romantic color portrait and many lovely soft black and white pictures [it] offers a revealing introduction to the great Queen and to the complicated political and religious situations that brought her to power. Most of the book is about her childhood and youth." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt2 p10 N 14 '54 230w

Reviewed by Isabelle Lawrence

+ N Y Times p11 D 26 '54 130w

"With her unusual ability to recreate a period, to picture a time and a place, and to make historical characters live again Mrs. Vance here presents a warm and lively Elizabeth I and the exciting era in which she lived." F. L. S.

+ Sat ■ 37:86 N 13 '54 120w

VAN DEUSEN, GLYNDON GARLOCK. Horace Greeley; nineteenth-century crusader (American historical association. Publications) 445p il $5 Univ. of Pa. press

B or '92 Greeley, Horace 53-9554

Full length biography of a notable figure in American politics in the nineteenth century. Horace Greeley, founder and editor of the New York Tribune.

"This biography of Horace Greeley is at times like the man himself: 'suggestive, inspiring and disappointing.' The best general study available, it has shortcomings due at least in part to ■ cantankerous and contradictory subject who often seems bent on frustrating his biographer." R. C. Haskett

+ — Am Hist R 60:129 O '54 600w

Reviewed by A. B. Miller

Ann Am Acad 295:159 S '54 400w

Booklist 50:296 Ap 1 '54

"The author's evocation of America in the 1840s is especially fine. There is humor, too, in the telling." John Randolph

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 31 '54 110w

"There are a round dozen biographies of Greeley that cover his career in its general aspects. Dr. Van Deusen's study may be regarded as a valuable documentary appendix to what has been previously written." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 6 '54 550w

Nation 178:117 F ■ '54 180w

"Mr. Van Deusen's is the fourth full-length study to appear within the last seven years, which demonstrates that the appeal of 'the Old White Coat' has by no means diminished. And this work is the most detailed, in many respects the most satisfactory of all. The author has already written lives of Thurlow Weed and Henry Clay, two of Greeley's political intimates, and his present book has won him the Albert J. Beveridge Memorial Prize of the American Historical Association."

Harry Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 20 '53 1000w

"Mr. Van Deusen is judicious, he is calm, he is patient and he looks at it all with good humor. He knows that in some curious fashion Greeley came to be more than he actually was—and he appreciates, too, what Greeley symbolized." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 11 '54 650w

"Professor Van Deusen has been in an ideal situation and has had a preparation for grasping the full scope of his subject, which all too few authors enjoy." R. F. Nichols

+ Sat ■ 37:22 Ja 30 '54 700w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:160 Je '54 200w

VAN DE WATER, FREDERIC FRANKLYN. Captain called it mutiny. 236p $3.50 Washburn

B or '92 Mackenzie, Alexander Slidell Somers (brig of war) 54-12523

"An account of the first and only mutiny in the U.S. Navy, a rather questionable affair which took place aboard the training ship 'Somers' in 1842. The Captain, Alexander Slidell Mackenzie, had three men hung and others placed in irons. In turn, his defense and explanation was accepted by a court of naval inquiry and a court martial. According to the author's thesis, a maladjusted teen-ager who had read too many books about pirates, and the Captain, a book writer with too much imagination, brought about a tragedy which should have been avoided." Library J

Booklist 51:107 N 1 '54

"It is a remarkable tale and Van de Water has done well with it." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 26 '54 380w

"Based on old records, including those of a great-uncle aboard the Somers, Van de Water's narrative shows spirit, and is attractively styled."

+ Kirkus 22:475 Jl 15 '54 240w

"Overwritten, limited interest." H. A. Wooster

Library J 79:1831 O 1 '54 120w

"As a study in fear and insecurity, the book is deeply interesting. As an appraisal of the total situation, more feeling of the period, more realization of the vast gulf that existed between the fore deck and the quarter deck might make Captain McKenzie's panic stricken attitude appear less completely irrational. One other analysis of this dark affair (not mentioned in the author's bibliography), Hanson Baldwin's 'Mutiny on the Brig,' presents a stronger case for the captain's ruthless act." Alfred Stanford

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 N 14 '54 600w

"Mr. Van de Water has done a skillful job. He presents the facts, and while his interpretation of the facts does not disguise his sym-"

VAN DE WATER, F. F.—Continued
 thies, he neither exaggerates nor distorts. A dramatic tale of a painful episode." Walter Hayward

+ N Y Times p47 O 17 '54 470w
 Time 64:108 O 4 '54 550w

VAN DOREN, MARK. Selected poems. 238p
 $5 Holt 54-9660
 811

"These poems are selected out of nine volumes published over the past thirty years: Spring Thunder and Other Poems, 1924; 7 P.M. and Other Poems, 1926; Now the Sky and Other Poems, 1928; A Winter Diary and Other Poems, 1935; The Last Look and Other Poems, 1937; Collected Poems, 1939 (for the pieces from 'America's Mythology'); The Seven Sleepers and Other Poems, 1944; New Poems, 1948; and Spring Birth and Other Poems, 1953. I have included no portions of Jonathan Gentry, 1931; The Mayfield Deer, 1941; or Mortal Summer, 1953, because of my conviction that long poems, particularly when they are narrative, should reappear in their entirety or not at all. 'A Winter Diary,' the longest poem here, and perhaps not the least known, is unabridged." (Pref) Indexes of titles and first lines.

Booklist 51:148 D 1 '54

Kirkus 22:513 Ag 1 '54 210w

"There is a nobility of spirit, a remarkable response to nature, and a special regard for young children expressed in Van Doren's poetry. Lyrical and simple, it is never 'modern,' never spellbinding. It is rather, the quiet low voice of the metaphysician, speaking of life with Emersonian wisdom." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:1593 S 15 '54 50w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 D 5 '54 50w

"If Van Doren is compared with Thomas, let alone with Hardy, one fault is immediately conspicuous. The older poets deliberately avoided facility. They made their verse hard. Hardy's rough rhymes and rugged metric are not there because he didn't know any better. He consciously put them there to give bones and muscle to his verse. The modern poets, like the lesser and once-so-popular Georgians, are too facile, and this facility is eventually deadly in its effect. It is possible to read a hundred pages of Hardy at a sitting with continually mounting excitement. Van Doren loses rather than gains if taken in quantity. It soon becomes obvious that too many formulas are operating in the verse, even formulas for roughening the prosody. In spite of this Van Doren at his best is a kind of Georgian record of the vanished rural life of the Midwest." Kenneth Rexroth

+ — N Y Times p40 O 17 '54 600w

"Mark Van Doren's poetic voice is quiet, sure, persuasive, and finally entrancing. His poetry is marked by a singular purity of diction and by an exact sense of proportion. His figures do their work cleanly without strain or posturing or eccentricity. Filled with the sights and sounds and smells of country living, his poems—it may be said without sentimentality—draw strength and beauty from Nature, and all her moods and creatures. Rooted in accurate observation, they flower in philosophical reflection." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 37:39 O 23 '54 140w

VAN DORP, JAN, pseud. See Godtsenhoven, O. van

VAN EVERY, DALE. Trembling earth. 310p
 $3.75 Messner 53-10515

A historical novel which takes place in 1811 in Southwestern Missouri, at the time of the great Mississippi valley earthquake. The chief characters are two brothers, one a minister, the other a lead mine operator, and the fiancée of one of them.

Booklist 50:2; 102 S 1 '53; N 1 '53

"The short, as historical novels go, 'The Trembling Earth' is extremely readable. Van Every has taken some care to be authentic in his background and in his history. He has not altered historical events to suit his narrative; his story moves rapidly, and is yet not foreshortened. He writes zestfully of the wilderness; he brings the frontier to life, integrating story with background to a degree that is not usually encountered in the average historical novel." August Derleth

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 18 '53 400w

Kirkus 21:496 Ag 1 '53 190w

"The novel is a success, though a mixed one. Contemporary fiction offers few pages to match Mr. Van Every's re-creation of those frightful days when the Mississippi ran north. . . . On the other hand, the author's picture of a group of people who experienced that mighty catastrophe, though they serve to hold the novel together, are something less than adequate. . . . The human characters don't count for much when put against the quakes, but read the novel for its brilliant history and it will be worth every minute you spend with it." V. P. Hass

+ — N Y Times p13 D 27 '53 360w

"A good story teller, though his yarn is not too fast-moving, Van Every should please a wide historical-fiction audience with this latest book." R. H. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 1 '53 160w

VAN METRE, THURMAN WILLIAM. History of the Graduate school of business, Columbia university. (Bicentennial history of Columbia university) 124p il $2.50 Columbia univ. press 650.7 Columbia university. Graduate school of business 54-5198

"Written as part of the bicentennial history of Columbia University, this is in reality also a history of collegiate business education in the United States. As is true of business library service, specialized professional business education is of comparatively recent origin. It has developed because the increase in the number, in the size, and in the complexity of business enterprises demands better means and methods of supervision, management, and control. Its introduction in American universities is the result of recognizing this need, not merely to provide means for a student to become an apprentice to a vocation, but rather 'the master of a profession.'" Library J

"Recommended as essential reading for all librarians who question the significance of business library service and for educators and business men for its penetrating perspective on business education." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:1061 Je 1 '54 110w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p28 Ap '54 70w

VANN, GERALD. Water and the fire. 187p
 $2.75 Sheed 54-6139

"The world of today is oppressed by fear and here Father Vann studies the causes of our being condemned to live in a world made, too often, hideous and menacing by man's brutality and stupidity. He shows us to how great an extent we have lost our roots and how a civilization which has lost its roots must wither and die. . . . Father Vann singles out for special attention the role of women in today's world, the problems which beset modern marriage, and the difficulties of educating children." Publisher's note

Reviewed by J. M. Oesterreicher

Commonweal 59:536 F 26 '54 650w

"Critics of our modern technological society are many, but few of them are healers as well as diagnosticians. Father Gerald Vann is both.

... Father Vann writes, of course, as a Roman Catholic priest, and some of his book, especially the chapter entitled "The Church's Daily Life," in which he interprets some of the symbols of his Church's ritual, will be of less interest to those who do not participate in it. But he is, in the larger sense of the word, catholic, and often enriches his meaning from sources other and more ancient than Christian."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p13 Ja 1 '54
1000w

VARNER, VELMA. Animal frolic. See Toba Sojo

VEALE, FREDERICK JOHN PARTINGTON. Advance to barbarism; how the reversion to barbarism in warfare and war-trials menaces our future; foreword by William Ralph Inge. 305p il $4.50 Nelson, C. C.

355 War 53-1910

"First published in England in 1948, this discussion presents a horrifying picture of mankind's future. Much of the work deals with the practices of modern warfare, as they were displayed in the last war, and the Nuremberg and Tokyo war-crimes trials." Current Hist

"This challenging, but possibly not fully objective, book deserves a wide reading if only as an offset to still less objective treatments of the war criminal trials." D. R. Taft

+ — Am Soc R 19:366 Je '54 410w

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 31 '53
550w

"Much of what the author says regarding the uncivilized warfare carried on by the British, the uncivilizing effects of America's entry into both world wars and the war-crimes trials will be unacceptable to most readers, yet his point of view should be presented."

Current Hist 26:318 My '54 110w

"The Nuremberg trials have been criticized before, but at no time with such logic and clarity."

+ New Yorker 30:135 My 22 '54 210w

"This book by an English lawyer was first published in England in 1948 under the nom de plume, 'A. Jurist.' In view of its contents, the book has, of course, suffered, and doubtless will continue to suffer, from the well-known, historical blackout that until recently has been accorded all but the 'official' history of the recent war. But truth, like murder (in this case closely related), will out; and it is only a question of time until the general population in both England and the United States will finally realize how thoroughly duped they were by their own government propaganda. Mr. Veale has made a valuable contribution to this end." G. A. Lundberg

+ Social Forces 32:303 Mr '54 500w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p18A Ag 2 '53
230w

VEDDER, CLYDE BENNETT, ed. Juvenile offender; perspective and readings. 510p $6 Doubleday

364.3 Juvenile delinquency 54-6239

"This book is a collection of readings drawn mainly from professional journals in the fields of corrections, criminal law, and casework. For the teacher of courses in juvenile delinquency it provides a body of materials produced by probation and parole workers, case-workers, legal experts, juvenile court judges, and others engaged day to day in dealing with young offenders. Introductory explication, briefly but soundly developed, prefaces each section and is intended to make the volume useful as a textbook in juvenile delinquency as well." Am Soc R

Reviewed by E. L. Koos

Am J Pub Health 44:947 Jl '54 270w

Reviewed by Solomon Kobrin

Am Soc R 19:638 O '54 440w

Reviewed by K. V. Lottick

Social Studies 45:309 D '54 340w

VEERASAWMY, E. P. Indian cookery for use in all countries. 230p $2.75 British bk. centre

641.5 Cookery, Indic

[54-11549]

"This is a 1936 edition of a well-known book, issued at last in U.S.A. Doubtless, UN has had something to do with this and it is to the advantage of those who like to experiment. Curries, curds, and fruit are offered in attractive ways. A good glossary of Indian cookery precedes the Index." Library J

Booklist 51:43 S 15 '54

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 79:1231 Je 15 '54 40w

"To the best of our knowledge, there has been no collection of authentic recipes for Indian cuisine put down in book form until now. E. P. Veerasawmy, the author of this one, is the man who established the famous Indian Restaurant in London, and is said to be one of the foremost Indian chefs of this century." Jane Friendly

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 20
'54 120w

VELAZQUEZ, DIEGO RODRIGUEZ DE SILVA Y. Velazquez [prepared under the direction of Alfred E. Herzer; selection of the reproductions by F. J. Sanchez Cantón; introd. and interleaving texts by José Ortega y Gasset; tr. by C. David Leyl. 105p 51pl 53 col pl $7.50 Random house

759.6 Paintings, Spanish

53-9707

Contains 104 full-page plates, 53 of them in color, showing the works of the Spanish painter, Velazquez. The introductory essay is by the Spanish writer José Ortega y Gasset. "The plates are gathered together according to various type-classifications—the genre scenes, the religious and mythological subjects, the Italian portraits, and so on. Largest and most important, of course, is the category of the court portraits." (San Francisco Chronicle) There is a catalog at the end of the book in which each picture is discussed.

Booklist 50:200 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 20 '53
100w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1060 Je 1 '54 30w

"There can be nothing but praise for this volume. It is well designed; of a handy size and weight, remarkably cheap, and contains exemplary illustrations, both in color and black-and-white, of the great Spaniard's finest paintings. For once one can agree with the blurb on the jacket. It is indeed a 'masterpiece of Swiss book manufacture.'" Stuart Preston

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 3 '54 550w

"'Velasquez,' which sells for $7.50, is one of the least expensive of this season's picture books, and one of the best... The color work is never less than excellent and in some cases it is sensationally beautiful... [The] commentary is not profound, but it does place Velasquez in proper historic perspective." Alfred Frankenstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 D 6 '53
550w

"[Many] inaccuracies, as well as some of Ortega's sweeping statements, will discomfort the knowledgeable reader. Few, however, will quarrel with the author's acceptance of the more familiar view that Velazquez 'spared all his energy for his artistic endeavors,' or with his well-reasoned rejection of the belief that Velazquez's palace duties prevented the artist from painting a larger number of pictures... It was perhaps unnecessary to include in a book directed to the layman pictures whose authenticity is admittedly dubious or has been convincingly rejected. The questionable works, however, have been so noted in the list of illustrations. As for the quality of the plates, fifty-three of which are in color, one may say that as a whole they meet today's standards." José López-Rey

+ — Sat R 37:35 F 6 '54 800w

VENABLES, BERNARD. Fishing; il. by the author. (British sports: past and present ser) 278p $3.50 British bk. centre

799.1 Fishing—Great Britain 53-35193

Chapters on fishing in England, dealing with all types of fresh water fish, and with the art of fishing past and present. Illustrated with drawings by the author. Index.

Reviewed by Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p42 D 6 '53 20w

"Delightful chapters... written in the right style for the armchair angler. Attractively illustrated by author." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:69 Ja 1 '54 30w

"The various types of fish and their life histories and food are all explained very clearly and with a degree of zoological accuracy which is not usually found in sporting books on fishing... The book throughout is very easy to read and each chapter is headed by a delightful black and white sketch by the author." H. G. Cannon

+ Manchester Guardian p4 J1 7 '54 200w
New Statesman & Nation 46:241 Ag 29 '53 50w

"An excellent book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p523 Ag 14 '53 300w

VENTURI, LIONELLO. Piero della Francesca; biographical and critical studies; tr. by James Emmons. 127p 54 col pl $4.95 Skira

B or 92 Franceschi, Pietro di Benedetto dei 54-7292

"The latest volume in Skira's Taste of Our Time series, this is a study of the life and work of the Italian painter and mathematician, Piero de' Franceschi, called Piero della Francesca (1418-1492). The book is illustrated with fifty-four color reproductions." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:402 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1832 O 1 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p35 My 16 '54 30w

"Venturi's commentary on Piero is admirably succinct for the lay reader." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p5 J1 4 '54 90w

"The choice of Piero is especially apt, for his art, so close to our modern abstraction in its impersonal gravity and strict design, has only recently come into full flavor. Venturi's text and the fifty-four reproductions, all in color, are handsomely handled."

+ New Yorker 30:140 Je 5 '54 170w

VERMA, AJIT RAM. Crystal growth and dislocations. 182p il $5 Academic press

548.5 Crystallography 53-11563

"Although there is some background material in the first three chapters, most of this book is devoted to descriptions of interferometry and phase contrast microscopy techniques of studying crystal growth and on results obtained with these techniques by the author and others... The author is Lecturer in Physics at the University of Delhi." N Y New Tech Bk

Chem & Eng N 31:5390 D 28 '53 20w

"The major contribution lies in the collection of photographs which supports the thesis that crystals grow by means of screw dislocations. This book should be of interest to all who concern themselves with understanding the structure and growth of crystals."

+ Chem & Eng N 32:2140 My 24 '54 500w

"The book is potentially of interest to physicists and chemists who wish to keep in touch with developments in the field of crystallography."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 39:6 Ja '54

VERNADSKY, GEORGE. Mongols and Russia. (History of Russia, v3) 462p $7.50 Yale univ. press

947 Russia—History

(A43-1903)

"Dr. Vernadsky treats here the important period from the middle of the thirteenth to the middle of the fifteenth centuries. During this time, East Russia was under Mongol rule, and the impact of this experience on Russian institutions is one of the most controversial problems in the history of that country. Owing to the nature of its subject, this volume is as much a history of the Mongols as it is of the Russians. Treated in some detail are the consolidation of the Mongol empire in the thirteenth century, the development of Mongol institutions, and especially the branch of the Mongol empire known as the Golden Horde that administered Russian affairs. Dr. Vernadsky also discusses at length the relations of East Russia, under Mongol rule, with Lithuania, Byzantium, and the Ottoman Turks." (U S Quarterly Bk R) For Volume II, Kievan Russia, see Book Review Digest 1948.

Reviewed by Bertold Spuler

Am Hist R 59:617 Ap '54 650w

"A volume distinguished by mature scholarship and based on thorough research and keen synthesis... While scholars may point to minor errors and differ here and there in their interpretations, it is doubtful whether they will be able to oppose successfully the fundamental conclusions reached by the author... It is doubtful whether any or all such criticisms or suggestions can detract from the truly outstanding character of Professor Vernadsky's achievement in this volume." R. J. Kerner

+ Sat R 36:19 S 19 '53 700w

"The third volume in the Yale History of Russia maintains the high standards of erudition of the earlier two. Professor Vernadsky writes for the most part, it would seem, for the post-graduate student, and his exhaustive and punctiliously annotated work on the Mongol period of Russian history, which draws upon a vast and diverse mass of primary and secondary source material, has the impressive qualities of its expository kind."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p560 S 3 '54 360w

"Of greatest interest to most readers are the conclusions regarding the profound impact of Mongol rule on Russia. The author stresses the direct influence of Mongol rule in strengthening the authority of the grand dukes at the expense of the towns, the boyars, and the provinces, and regards the consolidation of East Russia under the grand duchy of Moscow as an indirect result. The Russian tradition of autocracy was confirmed by later experience but, in Dr. Vernadsky's view, the first steps were taken under Mongol influence."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:402 D '53 220w

VERNANT, JACQUES. Refugee in the post-war world. 827p $6 Yale univ. press

323.1 Refugees, Political A53-5289

"The report of a survey of the number, location and condition of refugees in all parts of the globe. [The book] has been prepared by M. Jacques Vernant and a team of expert investigators." Times [London] Lit Sup

Am Pol Sci R 48:590 Je '54 110w

"Under a Rockefeller grant, this French author has compiled a valuable source-book about the refugee. Thus the first thorough collection of data on the refugee problem on a world-wide scale becomes available to social scientists. Indeed, since the outdated 1939 book by Sir John Simpson, this is the first comprehensive study of its sort. Scholars in the fields of social disorganization, social problems, mobility, and international tensions will find this volume a convenient and handy reference." Jiri Nehnevajsa

+ Am Soc R 19:235 Ap '54 270w

"As might be expected, the book is more valuable for the information it contains than for the tentative conclusions it reaches. Given the marked differences of circumstances, generalizations as to the state of the newcomers must necessarily be tentative and circumscribed. Nevertheless, this does not in the least diminish the utility of the work, which will serve students of international migration for years to come." Oscar Handlin

+ Ann Am Acad 294:199 J1 '54 750w

Foreign Affairs 32:507 Ap '54 20w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p559 S 4 '53 750w

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Real Americans. 309p il $5 Putnam

970.1 Indians of North America 54-5495

This book is written "for the purpose of conveying a better knowledge and understanding of our Indians of the United States, to tell of their lives, customs, arts and industries, their psychology and mental reactions, their religious myths and their legends." (Introd) Index.

Bookmark 13:218 Je '54 20w

"It is hardly to be expected that a book of only 300 pages trying to cover so much ground should be without fault, but there are far too many of these. Verrill's sketch of Sitting Bull, for example, recites all the old false legends and hostile propaganda. On the whole, however, the book is sound, interesting and readable." Stanley Vestal

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My ■ '54 250w

+ Kirkus 22:99 F 1 '54 120w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 J1 11 '54 20w

Reviewed by Angie Debo

N Y Times p12 Ag 1 '54 280w

"It is interestingly done and a real contribution to understanding." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54 280w

VETTER, MARJORIE (MEYN). Cargo for Jennifer; decorations by Peter Spier. 240p $3 Longmans

54-6160

Story of a young New York city girl who goes to visit her father's relatives in Cuba.

Booklist 51:66 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:14 O '54 30w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p36 N 14 '54 150w

"Steadily learning as she goes, Jen makes her mark on the family ■ they make theirs on her, and new understandings about different ways of life are interestingly if melodramatically achieved. Tinged with career-romance as well, this is good young fare." + Kirkus 22:537 Ag 15 '54 180w

"Here is a junior novel for girls with style and love story only average, and with ■ serious purpose emphasized to show young people of two races slowly coming to understand each other." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 29 '54 240w

"Mrs. Vetter knows Cuba well, and the background of life there is graphically portrayed. This convincing story makes good reading for older girls." Eugenia Garson

+ N Y Times pt 2 p8 N 14 '54 180w

VICKERY, RONALD CLARENCE. Chemistry of the lanthanons. 296p il $6 Academic press

546.6 Rare earth metals 53-11564

"A treatise on ■ group of elements usually discussed—especially in older chemical books—under the heading 'Rare Earths.' The scope is 'that series of elements whose atomic numbers range from 57 to 71 inclusive and whose properties endow them with a location in the sixth period of group IIIA of the Periodic System.' Yttrium, not a member of this group, is discussed in an appendix because its chemical properties are analogous to the chemical properties of the elements of the group. Chemical and physical properties and separation techniques are emphasized. Each chapter is in effect a compact digest of previously published literature, with all data and important statements keyed to the accompanying bibliography." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by B. B. Cunningham

Am Chem Soc J 76:3359 Je 20 '54 800w

"The 'Chemistry of the Lanthanons' will be useful to those desiring a closer acquaintance with the field and should be in the libraries of students and teachers of advanced inorganic chemistry." L. F. Yntema

+ Chem ■ Eng N 32:966 Mr 8 '54 470w

"The present book written by an Australian scientist of repute will be welcomed ■ a report on this rather complex and perplexing field which has been treated much like a step-child." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem Eng 61:394 Ap '54 250w

"The book is addressed to graduate chemists and is comprehensive enough to serve as a reference manual of the accumulated knowledge on the elements covered."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 39:10 Ja '54

VIDAL, GORE (EDGAR BOX, pseud). Death likes it hot. 187p $2.75 Dutton

54-6825

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:168 Mr 1 '54 50w

"Much of the book is a first-rate comedy of manners, with nice sardonic observations on the various levels of Social-Register and artistic sets; but as ■ pure puzzle-detective story (which seems to be its intention), it's merely untidy." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p14 My 23 '54 80w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 4 '54 50w

"Spillane in mink." Sergeant Cuff

Sat F 37:29 Je ■ '54 20w

"The author weaves a fascinating yarn enhanced by sparkling repartee." B. F. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p8C J1 25 '54 40w

VIDAL, GORE (EDGAR BOX, pseud). Messiah. 254p $3.50 Dutton

54-5053

A satire on the possible future of mankind. It is the story of the coming of ■ new Messiah, promoted and publicized by radio and television, who preaches the doctrine of the satisfaction of the death-wish in man.

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 25 '54 270w

Kirkus 22:130 F 15 '54 160w

"Of the same genus as 'Brave New World' and '1984,' but thinner than either, 'Messiah' is a mordant, cleverly conceived account of the credulity of the masses and the genius of their exploiters. . . . Unconcerned with the many who are victims of false gods, cynical about those who hail or use them, 'Messiah' is diverting rather than affecting, ingenious rather than profound." Milton Rugoff

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p16 Ap 25 '54 600w

"There is no question of Gore Vidal's talent, his promise, or the possibility, still, of his development. The prelude to 'Messiah' is an attractive essay on modern times, witty and discerning. But I am sorry to say that the novel itself is a flat disappointment." Maxwell Geismar

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 25 '54 450w

"Mr. Vidal, who has written seven previous novels, is far too skillful a writer not to have made a fairly good story out of this. As a satire on massman's desperate credulity, or as a warning about modern techniques of communication, it is effective in many ways. Yet one cannot help feeling that the book as a whole is not quite a success." Lewis Vogler

VIDAL, GORE—Continued

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 23 '54
600w

Reviewed by Jerome Stone
Sat R 37:34 My 22 '54 230w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Springf'd Republican p7C Je 13 '54
80w

VIDLER, ALEXANDER ROPER. Prophecy and papacy; a study of Lamennais, the Church and the Revolution. 300p $3.75 Scribner

B or 92 Lamennais, Hugues Félicité Robert de, France—Church history. Catholic church in France 54-9320

"The substance of the Birkbeck Lectures for 1953 has been here expanded and annotated. It is a study of Church history as seen through the life and activities of the Abbé de Lamennais. The story in this book sets Lamennais' thought against the background of the French Revolution, and in the context of the relations between the Vatican and the Church of France during the critical decades of the early nineteenth century." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Aside from Laski's chapter in Authority and the Modern State, there has been surprisingly little good scholarly work done on Lamennais in English. For this reason it may be said that this book 'fills an important gap,' but it would be unfortunate to conclude with this cliché, for the book does much more than this. Using the same objective but sympathetic approach that characterized his Modernist Movement in the Roman Church, Canon Vidler has provided a new and stimulating interpretation of Lamennais written with unusual literary grace." Charles Breunig
+ Am Hist R 60:88 O '54 600w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey
Christian Century 71:1335 N 3 '54 800w

"[The lectures] worthily uphold the high standard of previous lectures delivered on this foundation and that which we have come to expect from the author of 'The Modernist Movement in the Roman Church.' As a result of several years of preparatory study and a deep knowledge of the French sources and literature of the subject he has produced the definitive Life of Lamennais in English. In the course of it he corrects many errors of fact repeated by previous writers." C. W. Dugmore
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 9 '54 360w

Reviewed by John Raymond
New Statesman & Nation 47:606 My 8 '54 230w

"Very little has been published about Lamennais in England whereas an immense amount has been written in France; it is appropriate, therefore, that Dr. Vidler's study should have been published in time for the centenary of Lamennais's death, and all the more so since this book, in contrast to much of the French literature, which is unreliable, is a scholarly and well documented work by an ecclesiastical historian." Douglas Johnson
+ Spec p334 Mr 19 '54 450w

"In this story of mingled piety, compassion, and revolt, Dr. Vidler has found a theme near to his heart. He too, believes that the Church has a duty to promote social betterment. His book is the fruit of years of inquiry, and sums up the abundant fresh information that has come to light in recent years. It is most scrupulously documented."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup pxiv Ap 30 '54
850w

VIERECK, PETER ROBERT EDWIN. Dream and responsibility. 65p $1.50 Univ. Press of Wash, D.C., Washington 4, D.C.

808.81 Poetry. Pound, Ezra Loomis, George, Stefan Anton 53-12584

"Four test cases of the tension between poetry and society." (Subtitle) "Deals really with two rather than four 'test cases,' illuminating the relation of art to social and political responsibility. The two test cases are the Bollingen award to Ezra Pound; and the similar and yet so different case of the German romantic poet, Stefan George. The other two of his four chapters are devoted to essays on 'art versus propaganda' and 'the poet in a machine age.'" (New Repub)

"In his latest book, Viereck seeks a clearly conceived poetic ideal by offering a revaluation of the tension between poetry and society. . . Throughout this penetrating and provocative contribution to the literature of criticism Viereck emphasizes the goal of human individuality." L. L. Snyder

+ Ann Am Acad 293:196 My '54 550w
Booklist 50:201 Ja 15 '54

"Himself both a highly sensitive poet and a professional historian deeply concerned with the totalitarian challenge, [Viereck] treads a delicate but lively path between ivory-tower aestheticism and social-consciousness pamphleteering. The opening essay on the Ezra Pound controversy sparkles with the electric common sense that marks Peter Viereck at his best. Inevitably in the thick of the fight, he has nevertheless made the most lucid and balanced comment on the issue to date." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 24 '53
340w

"These four essays are offered as so many test cases of the tension between poetry and society. Despite this clue, it requires a considerable effort in abstraction to put the four pieces together, see them as a whole, and decide what they collectively say. It is not a dull book, and yet what does it come to?" P. F. Quinn

Commonweal 59:336 Ja 1 '54 600w
Nation 178:76 Ja 23 '54 160w

"Stimulating little book." Reinhold Niebuhr
+ New Repub 130:18 F 1 '54 700w

Reviewed by Marshall McLuhan
Poetry 84:93 My '54 800w

VILMORIN, MME LOUISE DE. Julietta; tr. from the French by Alison Brothers; the translation edited and inspired by Violet Schiff. 147p $3 Messner

54-10597

"The adolescent heroine, Julietta, 'spent her life in a world of her own invention.' Escaping from her mother (a bourgeois lady) and her 54-year-old fiancé (a prince), Julietta takes refuge in the attic of Landrecourt (an intellectual). Here, she invents a world of her own so splendid that Landrecourt is dazzled and won." N Y Times

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:98 N '54 60w

Booklist 51:134 N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:543 Ag 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 My 16 '54 80w

"Julietta is one of the most delicious fantasies ever invented; unfortunately, its translation here is less than perfect." Sylvia Stallings

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 14 '54
370w

"Her novel 'Julietta' suggests that she is less gifted for bigger books; characterizations which seemed delightfully transparent in 'Madame de' become opaque in a longer novel." Patricia Blake

N Y Times p4 O 10 '54 130w

"Skillful light entertainment, and thoroughly literate entertainment as well." Anthony West
+ New Yorker 30:176 O 9 '54 210w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong
Spec p684 My 23 '52 90w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Springf'd Republican p9C N 21 '54
240w

Time 64:132 O 11 '54 120w

"It may be said that the book is a little masterpiece of wit in its own particular manner, and that the comments on life and love are highly enjoyable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p309 My 9 '52 420w

VILMORIN, MME LOUISE DE. Madame de; tr. from the French by Duff Cooper. 54p $2.50 Messner

54-10596

"A story in the French classical tradition. It concerns a lady of great position and charm, her husband, the Ambassador with whom she falls in love, and a pair of ear-rings which, as each successive crisis unfolds, the husband has to purchase afresh." New Statesman & Nation

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:98 N '54 60w

Booklist 51:134 N 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

"These contes, which owe a little to de Maupassant, even more to the graces with which Mme. de Vilmorin endows them, have a worldly innocence, a rustling elegance, and a fragile charm."

+ Kirkus 22:543 Ag 15 '54 100w

"The economy of its style is as delightful as the ingenuity of its plot, and both depend upon an acceptance of the conventions of a highly civilised society. It is at once simple and sophisticated, artificial, and, within the limits of its artifice, completely satisfying." H. I.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 21 '52 70w

"The story is clever enough, although it achieves some of its effect by the blandness with which it relies upon coincidence, but its element of classical pastiche makes its complete lack of passion—without which the classical tradition is nonsense—its watery prettiness, more striking." J. D. Scott

+ — New Statesman & Nation 45:45 Ja 10 '53 100w

Reviewed by Sylvia Stallings

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 14 '54 210w

"Madame de Vilmorin is at her best in this airy fantasy of manners." Patricia Blake

+ N Y Times p4 O 10 '54 500w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 30:176 O 9 '54 210w

Reviewed by Tangye Lean

+ Spec p642 N 14 '52 60w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Spring'd Republican p9C N 21 '54 240w

"The story is a tiny wonder, perfect and trivial as a Japanese miniature tree."

Time 64:132 O 11 '54 130w

VINCENT, MRS IRENE VONGEHR. Sacred oasis; Caves of the Thousand Buddhas, Tun Huang; with a pref. by Pearl Buck. 114p il $5 Univ. of Chicago press

709.516 Rock drawings and paintings. Tun-huang, East Turkestan A53-5284

"Mrs. Vincent, an American woman living in Peking, visited the Tunhuang caves in Sinkiang in 1948. She has now published the account of what she saw, together with nearly fifty photographs. The caves have a long history. . . From the time of the Han dynasty to the eleventh century Tunhuang was the main point of entry to China. Next to traders, the chief travellers were Buddhist pilgrims. It was natural that Tunhuang should become a monastic centre. The monks congregated in an oasis about twelve miles to the south. Here, beginning in the year A.D. 366 and continuing over seven centuries, they hollowed out about 450 caves, decorating them with sculpture and painting." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by Guy Wint

Manchester Guardian p4 O 30 '53 500w

"Mrs. Vincent has given us a delightful book in her simple story of her visit to the oasis of Tun Huang and its nearby cave chapels." H. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 F 14 '54 700w

"Mrs. Vincent writes with gusto that is most appealing and gives us, from the few scholarly publications, much that the layman requires to know. Her illustrations are clearer than Pelliot's great albums and she has managed to secure some in color which will provide an important addition to our conception of early Chinese painting and our knowledge of the history of Oriental art." Langdon Warner

+ Sat R 36:21 D 19 '53 750w

"Hers is a travel book with a historical background illustrated by her own photographs in which enthusiastic admiration and scholarly curiosity have an equal share. As this is undoubtedly one of the most prolific centres of religious art in the world, any record of its treasures is most welcome; especially as the few publications in a Western language dealing with it at length are difficult to come by and very much out of date." H. H.

+ Spec p82 Ja 15 '54 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p142 F 26 '54 1200w

VINSON, PAULINE. Willie goes to the seashore; story and pictures. [28p] $2.25 Macmillan (N Y)

54-8908

"The irresistible mouse who first appeared in 'Willie Goes to School' [Book Review Digest 1953] now discovers the pleasures of the beach. For an entire summer Willie explores the shore with his new friends, plays and picnics and goes fishing with Daddy. In short, he and his very active companions do all the things that human children do." (N Y Times) Ages three to six.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 My 16 '54 120w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 16 '54 70w

"His experiences will help children who have been to the seashore to relive their own experiences. Those who haven't been there will want to go right away." A. V. Weiner

+ N Y Times p26 My 2 '54 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 16 '54 30w

VINTON, IRIS. Story of John Paul Jones; il. by Edward A. Wilson. 179p $1.50 Grosset

B or 92 Jones, John Paul—Juvenile literature 52-13748

This fictionalized biography of a naval hero carries John Paul from childhood days in Galloway, thru early years at sea and the disaster in the West Indies to the years of his brilliant career in the American revolution.

Kirkus 21:487 Ag 1 '53 80w

"Excellent characterization, exciting incidents, and natural dialogue. Recommended for ages 8-12." C. W. Field

+ Library J 78:2228 D 15 '53 30w

"Youngsters fond of sea stories will find this life of the American naval hero a special treat." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times pt2, p30 N 15 '53 40w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 13 '53 40w

VOELKER, JOHN DONALDSON (ROBERT TRAYER, pseud). Small town D.A. 253p $3 Dutton

B or 92 Lawyers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-9310

"From his files as a prosecutor in the mining, farming, lumbering district of Michigan's Upper Peninsula, this is a generally active account of Trayer's fourteen year offensive against offenders of all kinds and in and out of court." Kirkus

"'Small Town D. A.' is a book for all those who like courtroom drama, and also that wider audience which can never get enough of the essential stuff of life. Traver's microcosmos reflects the larger world, sometimes with unforgettable impact." August Derleth

VOELKER, J. D.—Continued

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 15 '54 180w

"A successor to his earlier Troubleshooter [Book Review Digest 1943] these tribulations as well as trials of a local vigilance have a rambunctious recap here and will appeal largely to a masculine audience."

Kirkus 22:325 My 15 '54 120w

"Traver handles the dialect (mainly of Scandinavian woodsmen) in simple phonetics—even the infrequent 'four-letter words'—and good taste. Recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1309 J1 '54 100w

"Robert Traver is a born raconteur and unlike most tale-tellers he can do his stuff in print. . . If one of the stories strangely resembles one of Irvin Cobb's old jests, although it concerns a horse rather than a mule—we'll we guess a good story-teller is entitled to a little borrowing."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Ag 15 '54 270w

VOGEL, ALFRED ANTON. Papuans and pygmies; ill. with photographs by Douglas Baglin and tr. from the Swedish by M. A. Michael. 159p $4 Roy pubs.

995 [919.5] Dwarfs and dwarfism. Papuans 54-5224

"The Papuans and Pygmies of New Guinea are still living in the Stone Age: they are polygamous races, superstitious and extremely primitive. Australia's policy towards its mandate has been a jealous one and few people, apart from missionaries and government authorities, have been allowed entry. Captain Vogel, however, was fortunate, and at the invitation of Sir Edward Hallstrom, who financed the experimental farm at Nondugl where natives are taught improved methods of agriculture, went as a member of an expedition to search for the white bird of paradise and to study the Pygmies. The bird proved to be mythical, but the author had time to observe the customs of both these races and in this book he has recorded his impressions of his journey in their territories." Spec

Booklist 50:254 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by Gilbert Twiss

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 11 '54 110w

Kirkus 22:25 Ja 1 '54 170w

"Written with enthusiasm and a good sense of drama." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:632 Ap 1 '54 60w

"This book should be a welcome addition to the library of anyone who is at all interested in anthropology." B. W.

+ Spec p311 S 18 '53 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p495 J1 31 '53 300w

VOGUE (periodical). Arts of living [by] Ernest Dimnet [and others] with biographical profiles by [Vogue's] eds, and a pref. by Gilbert Highet. 190p $3 Simon & Schuster

179 [170] Conduct of life 54-5470

"An attractive collection of essays on the various arts of living. Contributors include some unusual people—Ernest Dimnet, James A. Pike, Jean Stafford, Allistair Cooke, and Charles Morgan are only a few." Wis Lib Bul

"Since they are interesting people, their thoughts are sometimes provocative, sometimes stimulating, sometimes enlightening."

+ Kirkus 22:324 My 15 '54 90w

"Perhaps it is John Mason Brown's remark that gives the tone of 'The Arts Of Living.' Although the writers in this book refer often to today's world, their preoccupation with man's life is timeless, their conversation classic." Gouverneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 J1 4 '54 600w

"Their ideas make inspiring and satisfying reading, especially for the bookish person."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:201 O '54

VOLBACH, WALTHER RICHARD. Problems of opera production. 196p il spir pa $3 Tex. Christian univ. press, T.C.U. station, Fort Worth, Tex.

792.9 Opera 53-2309

"A practical handbook by the Director of Theatre School of Fine Arts and Professor of Drama at Texas Christian University for civic and educational groups which produce opera; in fact, for any and all who contemplate entering the field or who are learning their trade." Library J

"Interested outsiders, even, could profit by study of this well-organized, succinct volume—the first considerable treatment of the subject to be published in the U.S., to this appraiser's knowledge. . . Occasional fluffs, probably a matter of proof-reading; e.g. 1883, not 1833 (p.1) is the date of the opening of the Metropolitan Opera House." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 78:1540 S 15 '53 150w

"In the preface to Problems of Opera Production, Mr. Volbach remarks that the chapters of his book 'deal not alone with purely practical topics, but in addition touch upon esthetic and historical questions which ought to be understood by everyone participating in operatic productions.' This rather large order has not been met. In attempting too much, the author offers too little." Frederic Cohen

Music Lib Assn Notes 11:311 Mr '54 220w

VOLCKMANN, RUSSELL W. We remained: three years behind the enemy lines in the Philippines. 244p il maps $3.75 Norton

940.548 Guerrillas. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 54-11921

"Author, a U. S. Army colonel, relates his experiences as an early participant, and later leader of guerilla forces in Northern Luzon. Volckmann decided before the fall of Bataan to escape when it should come; after making his way north he organized the guerillas into an effective fighting force." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:59 O 1 '54

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 O 17 '54 480w

"The author does not pretend to be a polished writer; indeed, his epic experiences are so unique, colorful, and intense that the mere chronological entries in Volckmann's diary would have been adequate." Gordon Walker

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 15 '54 550w

"Problems involved (chiefly supply and security) and techniques employed constitute the book's most interesting part, but unfortunately this section has not been written in enough detail. Recommended for libraries specializing in history of the war." Donald Wasson

Library J 79:1501 S 1 '54 90w

"Colonel Volckmann, unfortunately, must have just barely passed English Composition I at West Point. His account of this dramatic footnote in American history is without warmth, without flavor, without force. The stanchest story will suffer from the hammer thud of the stock phrase. Occasionally we do get brief insights into dramatic events and into the hearts of the Americans and the Filipinos. . . 'We Remained' is, nevertheless, informative; it could have been, and should have been, exciting and impressive." George Barrett

+ N Y Times p40 S 26 '54 420w

New Yorker 30:184 O 11 '54 190w

Spring'd Republican p9C N 21 '54 240w

VOLUME library; an encyclopedia of practical and cultural knowledge. 1952 ed 2424p il maps $21.95; $23.95; de luxe ed $25.95; $27.95 Educators assn.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"According to the Editorial Preface, The Volume Library has a 'combination of the values first of a dictionary and second of a cyclopedia or a series of textbooks.' The selecting of material is 'limited for the most part to topics met in the curriculum of American grammar schools and high schools.' The work is designed also to 'help make better American citizens . . . of those with little or no schooling who are trying to get an education.' The book is adapted to this purpose, since most of the articles are of a general nature, the coverage is probably as comprehensive as can be expected in a single volume, and the style on the whole is simple. . . . As in earlier editions, the volume is 'Topically Arranged for Ready Reference and Home Study' under 16 main sections, such as Education, Literature, Geography, History, Science, Industry and Trade, Multiplex Dictionary, Useful Miscellany, Atlas, etc. . . . Much new material has been inserted; in most instances, where necessary, information has been brought up to date. . . . In certain sections of the volume more revision is needed." Subscription Bks Bul

"Although the entire Index has been reset, it has not been sufficiently revised, and is quite inadequate. Many references to information in the older edition but no longer in the new are still included. . . . In spite of its limitations, The Volume Library contains much general information. The Volume Library may be useful in the home where the cost of a multi-volume encyclopedia would be prohibitive. Attention should be called to the fact that there are other good one-volume encyclopedias at approximately the same price, however. . . . The Volume Library is not recommended for libraries."

— + Subscription Bks Bul 24:73 O '53 1950w

VON BAUMANN, CYRIL, and HARRIS, BEULAH PHELPS. Four winds cookbook. 292p $3.95 Crowell

641.5 Cookery

53-8442

"Offers a collection of recipes from the files of the late explorer and archeologist Cyril Von Baumann. Mr. Von Baumann traveled from Albania to Zanzibar taking notes on all the dishes that pleased his palate. Beulah Harris has deftly adapted the recipes to the American kitchen. . . . The spicy Mexican favorite, Turkey With Chocolate Sauce, may seem a bit exotic. But the Roast Duck from the Pacific Islands or the Japanese Calf's Liver with Cucumbers or the Bulgarian Eggplant Salad are intriguing ideas for varying a summer menu." N Y Times

Booklist 51:77 O 15 '54

"This is definitely for the exotic epicure. For while with few exceptions the ingredients are available, it is rather the preparation and combination of unusual elements which distinguish these dishes."

Kirkus 22:375 Je 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 79:2453 D 15 '54 30w

"The variety is so great and the quality high, there is surely something to please everyone." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 22 '54 140w

VON FISCHER, WILLIAM, and BOBALEK, EDWARD GEORGE, eds. Organic protective coatings. 387p il $7.50 Reinhold

667.6 Paint, Finishes and finishing 53-8707

"Sixteen signed chapters on such topics as 'Paint as an engineering material,' 'Luminescent coatings,' 'New Pigments in modern color design,' 'Vinyl resins for organic protective coatings,' 'Hot spray lacquers,' and 'Silicone resins in heat-resistant paints,' constitute this volume. The level of treatment assumes a knowledge of basic physical and chemical terminology such as graduate engineers would possess. Each chapter contains a bibliography." (Library J) Index.

"It is written in such a style as to be of primary interest to paint chemists and formulators. It has little to offer in details of manufacturing equipment and operation to paint plant engineers. While most of its 16 chapters are of practical value only to the formulator, by judicious selection much worthwhile information can be gained by the user of protective coatings." Kenneth Tator

+ Chem Eng 61:340 D '54 400w

"The book will be valuable to engineers in industry who design metal products that require finishing before marketing, to industrial engineers concerned with the protection of equipment from corrosion and above all to chemists and technicians in the paint and varnishing manufacturing industries who want an authoritative survey of recent developments in theory and in products." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:387 F 15 '54 140w

"Although there is little in the book that will be new to specialists in organic coatings it does contain much information of value to technicians and graduate chemists already established in the paint industries who have not made a specialty of these coatings."

N Y New Tech Bks 39:12 Ja '54

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:272 Je '54 240w

VON HILDEBRAND, DIETRICH. See Hildebrand, D. von

VOORHEES, MELVIN B. Show me a hero. 311p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

54-8647

"[The subject is the] Panmunjon impasse. Fate frowns on most characters including three Americans. Gen. Lark Logan, Eighth Army commander, successively approves (knowingly) his incognito son's court-martial, loses his wife, is recalled, passed over for promotion. Crack journalist Tosser suffers 'breaking' professionally while serving as counterspy. Overage chaplain Dakin wheedles front line position, serves gallantly." Library J

Booklist 51:111 N 1 '54

"Voorhees writes with an aggressive vitality, and his novel, if you stay with it, takes hold and makes its point."

+ Kirkus 22:348 Je 1 '54 230w

"A powerful, longish first novel, one of season's best. . . . Highly recommended for general purchase." H. L. Leet

+ Library J 79:1400 Ag '54 100w

Reviewed by Stanley Cooperman

Nation 179:194 S 4 '54 120w

"'Show Me a Hero' is long on press conferences, court martial procedure and the externals of army life, but regrettably short on natural dialogue and three-dimensional characterization. Mr. Voorhees is fertile in inventing incident, and refreshingly honest in demolishing handout legends, but his style tends to circumlocution and occasionally lapses into officialese. . . . The result is good journalism but superficial novel writing." Taliaferro Boatwright

+ — N Y Herald Tribune BK R p6 Ag 8 '54 500w

"Some vivid reporting, several individual scenes of considerable tension, a solitary front-line episode that rises like a star shell—and a lot of thinly disguised personal opinions on the way the war and the concurrent peace negotiations were waged. The virtues are the virtues of non-fiction, the faults are those of a writer wandering in the no man's land between fiction and fact." Burke Wilkinson

N Y Times p14 Ag 8 '54 700w

Springf'd Republican p10D Ja 17 '54 70w

VOSS, CARL HERMANN. Palestine problem today; Israel and its neighbors. 64p il maps $1.50; pa 75c Beacon press

956.94 Palestine—Jewish Arab problem. Israel 53-12778

"Dr. Voss, who has studied Palestine on many trips to the Middle East, has set himself a difficult task in this compact little book. It is to pose, and answer, more than half a hundred nubby questions about Israel, the Arab states, the conflicts between Jew and Arab, American Zionism and its influence, the interests of the big powers—in short, the basic political, economic, and racial issues in the area." (Nation) Index.

VOSS, C. H.—Continued

"A refreshingly concise and impartial approach to the ever thorny and heated problem of Palestine. . . . While a book of this length must necessarily omit many of the refinements which longer volumes can afford, it is particularly well adapted to bringing those unacquainted with the problem up to date quickly and easily." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 18 '54 90w

"An intelligent man's guide to a complex subject, written from the point of view of a liberal Christian churchman who is interested in the spread of democratic ideas in the Middle East and feels that Israel points the way."

+ Nation 178:115 F 6 '54 220w

VOSS, CARL HERMANN, ed. Universal God; the eternal quest in which all men are brothers; an interfaith anthology of man's search for God. 306p $5 World pub.

208 God. Religious literature—Collections 53-6645

"The title practically explains the book. Under fifteen chapter headings, ranging from creation to the life everlasting, the editor has arranged hundreds of brief excerpts from the thinkers of many lands and religions. A good many of the philosophers and theologians are represented, but more space is given to writers who do not belong professionally to either of these groups." Christian Century

Christian Century 71:337 Mr 17 '54 70w

"A prodigious amount of labor has been devoted by the author and his wife to the collection and selection of the material included in this valuable anthology. . . . It is not intended as a reference book, although it will be valuable as such. Nor is it meant to be a ready aid for ministers, priests and rabbis, although they should welcome it. Rather it is hoped that uncertain, confused people may find new courage by reading a few pages at a time in the midst of their crowded days. Highly recommended for that purpose."

+ Kirkus 21:794 D 15 '53 180w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 3 '54 20w

"These pieces are not of the capsule dose variety. They are for the moment of leisure or for the sleepless hour when only long thoughts are satisfying." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 Mr 7 '54 200w

"Designed to be read not at one sitting, nor in five or 10, but rather a page at a time, it will provide food for thought for all who seek the truth." H. P. A.

+ Springf'd Republican p10D Ja 17 '54 80w

"This book is a valuable aid to the minister, the editor, the public speaker, and any other person who is of a reflective, serious nature."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:22 Ja '54

VUCINICH, WAYNE S. Serbia between East and West; the events of 1903-1908. (Stanford univ. University ser; History, economics, and political science) 304p pa $4.75 Stanford univ. press

949.7 Serbia 53-6447

"The first two chapters of this well-documented study, The Turn of the Century, and Foreign Relations, 1901-3, present the background of political factions at work within Serbia leading to 'the events of 1905-1908.' The personal politics of Belgrade and the rivalry between ex-King Milan and his son King Alexander are shown in considerable detail, and the competition of Austria and Russia for influence with Serbian political parties and politicians is clearly presented. Conversely, proper emphasis is also given to the eagerness with which Serbian politicians of this period sought the favors of a foreign court." U S Quarterly Bk R

"After the outbreak of the Second World War, interest in the origins of the First World War waned almost to the point of vanishing. Since that war was precipitated by the conflict between Austria-Hungary and Serbia, a fresh study of Serbian history is very welcome. If little has been written in English on this subject, it is probably because few scholars are familiar with the Serbo-Croatian language. Professor Vucinich of Stanford University has accordingly rendered an unusual service by writing a book based primarily on materials in Serbian and Croatian (as well as Bulgarian) and doing so in such detail as to satisfy the most curious." B. E. Schmitt

+ Am Hist R 59:926 Jl '54 480w

"Note should be made of the first-rate documentation which characterizes this book, together with its excellent bibliography and the detailed index. Experts may disagree with some of the author's conclusions, but they cannot deny that this work is a real contribution to historical scholarship." A. N. Dragnich

+ Ann Am Acad 294:226 Jl '54 600w

"In his new book, Professor Vucinich has made a distinguished contribution to our knowledge of Serbia's relations with foreign powers, particularly with Austria-Hungary, Russia and the Balkan states. His erudition is just as workmanlike as his bibliography, although we can wonder why some well-known titles covering this area have been left out. . . . This is, indeed, a remarkable book!" J. S. Roucek

+ Current Hist 26:375 Je '54 500w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:164 Je '54 240w

W

WADE, HENRY, pseud. See Aubrey-Fletcher, H. L.

WAER, JACK. 17 and black. 241p $2.75 Viking 54-9879

Mystery story.

Kirkus 22:415 Jl 1 '54 70w

"Mr. Waer, billed as a professional gambler (present assistant to the owner of El Rancho Vegas), has done a lively and tumultuous job in this muddle of mystery and thriller with an inclination to muscle and a smudge of Communist complication. Giddy amusement." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 12 '54 90w

"The book is hardly recommended even to white Nordic Americans, who seem to be the only people of whom Mr. Waer approves." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p40 S 12 '54 70w

"You have to be passionately interested in strip-tease and gambling techniques in order to get through this book since that's about all there is in it. Plot doesn't even begin for 50 pages, and is then feeble and incredible." L. G. Offord

— San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 3 '54 70w

"Background unusual, well blocked in; pace and dimes fast. Nice novelty number." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:64 O 2 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 10 '54 120w

WAGENKNECHT, EDWARD CHARLES. Preface to literature. 381p $4; college ed $2.90 Holt

809 Literature—History and criticism 54-6623

"Presents the values and delights of reading and considers the various forms of writing with frequent examples from modern and classical authors. Index." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:218 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 9 '54 240w

"For the casual reader who may wish to become more adept in making intelligent use of his reading time, Professor Edward Wagenknecht of Boston University supplies a long-felt need in his recently published A Preface to Literature. Dr. Wagenknecht's approach is in the spirit of 'Come now, let us reason together,' affably addressed to the college freshman or to the general reader who would like to develop his own critical sense and to clarify his understanding of the what and why of literature." O. D. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 15 '54 360w

Wis Lib Bul 50:176 Jl '54

WAGONER, DAVID. Man in the middle. 248p $3.50 Harcourt

54-9716

Mystery story.

"The chase is excellent. Chicago smells. It glitters and bristles and rattles. Charlie rides the elevated, hides in a theater, flees out a rest-room window and finally, trapped in Union Station, slides feet first into a twenty-five cent luggage locker and pulls the door nearly to behind him. At this point we might expect Alfred Hitchcock to be near. But no, it is Senator Taggart, crawling out of his bed, bruised with a hangover, and from here the story goes quickly downhill." J. A. Lynch

+ — Commonweal 60:518 Ag 27 '54 700w

"A first novel of a sober cut."

Kirkus 22:402 Jl 1 '54 190w

"It's clean, humorless, unnecessary." H. L. Leet

Library J 79:1400 Ag '54 30w

"Don't mistake this for a thriller. It's a novel. Has a very neat ironical ending in place of the comic discovery which seems to have been pending. 'The Man in the Middle' is Mr. Wagoner's first novel and a good deal more interesting than routine works." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 15 '54 290w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p15 Ag 15 '54 120w

"Wagoner's style, at once hard and compassionate, gives the story great power. The suspense is actually painful." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 12 '54 60w

"The author frequently displays an ambivalent attitude toward his material which gives his story a rather disconcerting unevenness. But when he is describing Charlie on the lam he delineates the feelings, emotional and physical, of a hunted human animal with a sweat-drenched, observant realism which leaves the reader panting with an exhaustion that hardly seems vicarious." J. S.

+ — Sat R 37:38 Ag 21 '54 250w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 120w

WAIN, JOHN. Born in captivity [Eng title: Hurry on down]. 300p $3.50 Knopf

53-9484

A picaresque novel about the troubles of a young Englishman, just out of the university, who has a number of odd jobs and meets some very odd people before he settles down.

Booklist 50:280 Mr 15 '54

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 28 '54 250w

"A first novel that has wit and observation but which is not consistently deft; nor always palatable."

+ — Kirkus 22:76 F 1 '54 190w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:775 Ap 15 '54 160w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 O '53 120w

"'Born in Captivity' has its amusing pages—quite a few of them—but the total effect is dispiriting."

+ Nation 178:264 Mr 27 '54 200w

"A satirist's best friend is his paranoia; it is at once his stock-in-trade and his driving force; and one hopes fervently that Mr. Wain will cherish and coddle his with loving care."

Walter Allen

+ New Statesman ■ Nation 46:496 O 24 '53 180w

"Although the author may owe a little to Anthony Powell, and certainly owes something to his coarser, more extrovert eighteenth-century models, he has written a highly original novel. His sinewy prose, full of strong verbs and fresh, witty images, is a joy to read."

Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p3 Mr 21 '54 500w

"In this young Englishman's first novel we run into the problem of what happens when a notable comic talent addresses itself to a subject that isn't funny. The result is a book occasionally hilarious, always interesting, but essentially unsatisfactory. . . Mr. Wain writes well, but failed to decide clearly what kind of book he was writing." Edmund Fuller

N Y Times p5 Mr 21 '54 450w

"A bright, wry, intelligent, and generally amusing book."

+ New Yorker 30:125 Mr 20 '54 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 22 '54 270w

"Mr. Wain's first novel, an up-to-date essay in the comic picaresque, is inventive, impulsive, cogitative and often very funny. . . The fooling is sometimes a little weak, the wit of the dialogue is not always in character, and here and there, rotating on the axis of school and university, Mr. Wain stretches the long arm of coincidence, but he has made a very good comic start." R. D. Charques

+ — Spec p380 O 2 '53 170w

"A fresh and amusing novel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O '53 400w

WAKELEY, SIR CECIL PEMBREY GREY, 1st bart, ed. Macmillan medical dictionary [Eng title: Faber medical dictionary]. 471p $6.95 Macmillan (N Y)

610.3 Medicine—Dictionaries and encyclopedias 54-2751

"This, dictionary, which has been published in England under the title the Faber Medical Dictionary, aims to be a concise and comprehensive medical dictionary primarily for the use of persons administering the National Health Service. Comparison with frequently used American medical dictionaries indicates somewhat fewer definitions and a more abbreviated text. Cuts and tables are notable by their absence. Much emphasis is placed on the derivation of terms." Am J Pub Health

"Specialists in each field will wish to test such a dictionary for special terms. The definition for 'epidemiology' as the science of epidemics leaves much to be desired, but the wider connotation seems not to have made its way into any current dictionaries. No attempt is made to provide information on incubation periods and such facts relating to the communicable diseases. . . On the whole, this seems to be an acceptable dictionary and to have achieved its purpose of a concise and accurate volume." R. M. Atwater

+ — Am J Pub Health 44:1370 O '54 200w

"Hitherto, the reader and writer of British medicine in search of a word had a choice of two comparable dictionaries. Both are excellent, but both suffer from the same defect of being American in spelling and usage. A warm welcome therefore was assured to the new-comer if only because its arrival meant bringing this paradoxical situation to an end."

A. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 29 '53 230w

WAKSMAN, SELMAN ABRAHAM. My life with the microbes. 364p $5 Simon & Schuster

B or M Scientists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Antibiotics 54-8648

"[This] is the autobiography of one of the leading investigators in antibiotic research—Selman Waksman, director of the Institute for Microbiology at Rutgers University. He is best known for his discovery of streptomycin, the first drug to show definite value in curbing the tuberculosis germ. Although his book is not addressed primarily to the general reader, he writes clearly and avoids technical jargon. He has prepared a sober record rather than a moving story, but that record is well worth preserving." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:131 N 15 '54

"A book for doctors, research workers, scientists, for libraries, particularly in medical schools, rather than a general market."
+ Kirkus 22:475 J1 15 '54 210w

Reviewed by J. M. Scherr

Library J 79:1501 ■ 1 '54 170w

"The book should interest fellow biologists and serve as a reference for historians of science. It provides important evidence for the fact that scientific research rarely proceeds according to the best Hollywood scripts. Discovery is a subtle blend of unexciting detail work, insight and good luck." John Pfeiffer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 10 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Berton Roueche

N Y Times p3 O 10 '54 1200w

"A plain, straightforward success story about the poor Ukrainian immigrant who, with nothing but his honesty, integrity, perseverance, and intelligence, managed to play a major part in the establishment of a special science, microbiology. . . There is no discernible deviation from the Horatio Alger pattern. Maybe things do work that way. There is, however, much interesting material in this life with the microbes, material that kept me reading despite the tedious and stilted prose." Marston Bates

+ — Sat R 37:13 O 30 '54 700w

WALDEN, AMELIA ELIZABETH (MRS J. W. HARMON). All my love. 314p $2.95 Morrow

54-9254

Novel for girls about a freshman year at college. In high school Gretchen had been popular and was considered the most brilliant student and the best athlete. In Claremont college she was just another freshman. The story is of Gretchen's difficult period of readjustment.

Booklist 51:154 D 1 '54

"Amelia Walden deals honestly and wisely with the problems of a girl in love and paints a lively picture of college life which has its basis in solid research and first hand knowledge." P. A. W.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p38 N 14 '54 100w

"The romance is unconvincingly told. Only periodical mention is made of intelligent Gretchen's studies and though she rediscovers true values with another boy, there is no explanation for Gary's rottenness. Light reading."

Kirkus 22:537 Ag 15 '54 170w

"Many girls over twelve, even some over fourteen, will enjoy it, for Gretchen is real, and the way her love affair affects her college life, her studies, even her success in the swimming meets, is put down thoughtfully." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 24 '54 240w

WALDMAN, MORRIS DAVID. Nor by power. 473p $6 Int. univs. press

301.451 [296] Jews—Charities 53-12845

"Reminiscences of Morris Waldman's professional career as social worker and secretary of organizations." (Nation) "Instead of writing a chronological account of his experiences, the author has preferred to treat the three principal areas of his activities, the fiery furnace of Europe, the seething cauldron of Palestine and the melting pot of America. Moreover, instead of retelling his life story from the vantage point of the present, he has found it expedient, like Winston Churchill, to incorporate into his narrative many of the letters, memoranda and articles written at the time the various events took place." (N Y Times)

"Anyone interested in the operation of voluntary organizations will find in it useful side lights on the relationship between the volunteer and the professional in such activities."

+ Nation 177:473 D 5 '53 40w

"Its principal value lies in the documents incorporated in its pages. They make it a valuable source book for the history of American Jewish philanthropy during the present century, the desperate battle against religious bigotry and group hostility as a world-wide menace and the struggle to build a viable Jewish commonwealth in Palestine on the foundations of justice and peace." Robert Gordis

+ N Y Times p30 Ja 17 '54 950w

WALDO, EDWARD HAMILTON (THEODORE STURGEON, pseud). More than human. 233p $2 Farrar, Straus; pa 35c Ballantine

53-11211

Science fiction.

Booklist 50:280 Mr 15 '54

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 29 '54 120w

Kirkus 21:702 O 15 '53 80w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson

New Statesman & Nation 48:554 O 30 '54 240w

"This is—surprisingly for so generally prolific a writer—only Sturgeon's second novel. One fears to toss about words like 'profoundity' and 'greatness' in connection with the literature of entertainment; but it's hard to avoid them here. And one hastens to add that purely as entertainment, the book is a masterpiece of provocative storytelling." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 22 '53 250w

"One of the best science fiction novels of the year." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p34 N 22 '53 140w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 27 '53 300w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 37:14 Ag 7 '54 60w

Reviewed by Kingsley Amis

Spec p350 S 17 '54 180w

WALDO, MYRA (MRS ROBERT SCHWARTZ), ed. Complete round-the-world cookbook. 479p il $4.95 Doubleday

641.5 Cookery

54-10769

A collection of over six hundred recipes from the eighty-four countries served by Pan American Airways. The recipes were collected locally but have been translated into American terms. Index.

Kirkus 22:568 Ag 15 '54 130w

"Because of their great scope, the book is almost a reference library in itself of international cooking. Yet, in a sense, it is also a tantalizing appetizer, for each country is represented by so few recipes. There are, however, enough to make one complete meal typical of each country's cuisine." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p26 N 28 '54 110w

WALDO, MYRA. Serve at once; the souffle cookbook. 249p $3.50 Crowell

641.5 Cookery (eggs)

54-8720

"A Souffle Cookbook does this dish to a turn and takes it through its many enticing variations, and after setting down some general ground rules, has a full selection of fish, cheese, poultry, meat, vegetable and dessert souffles. Special sections on low calorie and cold souffles, and sauces as the fitting accompaniment, close the book." Kirkus

Booklist 51:77 O 15 '54

Kirkus 22:427 J1 1 '54 40w

"What a good book to own!" K. T. Willis
+ Library J 79:2453 D 15 '54 30w

Reviewed by Charlotte Turgeon

N Y Times p41 O 17 '54 50w

WALKER, AUGUSTA. Around a rusty god; drawings by Jeanyee Wong. 121p $3 Dial press

54-6001

"In present-day China, Beng Gow, a small goose-boy, was catapulted into tending two small goats given him as compensation by the gentle Teacher at the Big School in the nearby town. With help from the Teacher's housekeeper and his friends, he raised them to be the clean, black-silky-haired pride of this village. This undertaking in the teeth of war forced Beng Gow to consider adult problems of survival for himself and his beautiful pets." Library J

Booklist 50:343 My 1 '54

Reviewed by La Tourette Stockwell

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 15 '54 350w

"First novel, alive and warm with understanding; highly recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 79:452 Mr 1 '54 90w

"'Around a Rusty God' is delightful in its freshness and originality. Miss Walker has been known to a few through her distinguished short stories. It is to be hoped that this tale, and succeeding books, will find a welcome in the wider circles of readers her wisdom and artistry deserve."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 30 '54 160w

"The story, written in an admirable close-knit singing prose, recounts the desperate love of the boy for these starvelings entrusted to his care. . . A rare book, beautifully printed and bound, to be set beside 'The Hunter Gracchus' and those other fables which are perhaps the only stories worth reading in this disastrous time." Robert Payne

+ N Y Times p24 My 2 '54 500w

New Yorker 30:101 My 29 '54 60w

"'Around a Rusty God' shows an ability to write about children without sentimentality. Miss Walker knows that life can be both terrible and wonderful. But her tale is too slight and her subject too remote to do full justice to ideas and feelings that are far from commonplace today." Robert Minton

+ — Sat R 37:37 J1 17 '54 320w

WALKER, DAVID ESDAILE (DAVID ESDAILE, pseud). Diamonds for danger [Eng title: Diamonds for Moscow]. 212p $2.50 Harper

53-11863

Humorous novel of international intrigue, involving professional smugglers, English minor diplomatic officials, and sundry journalists, in a chase after diamonds in Portugal.

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

"Half the charm of the story lies in the fact that the reader never knows until the end who is on whose side and why. The author, a well known British correspondent, might well have lived every episode, which places his first novel several notches above the average whodunit." Pat Patten

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 F 21 '54 240w

Kirkus 21:803 D 15 '53 60w

"Mr. Walker writes a comic thriller and a pretty successful one on those tricky terms. He lets Mr. Beddoes in for all sorts of rabby agitations while the other pair romp more actively, assisted by an ebullient gentleman named Antonio de Conceicao Carvalho da Silva who is a little larkier than any of them and the particular glory of this cheering absurdity." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 14 '54 140w

"A novel which sounds like Oppenheim re-plotted by Elliot Paul and rewritten by—well, with refreshing individuality by D. E. Walker." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p28 F 28 '54 130w

"Mr. Walker's style is a little arch, but his invention is lively enough, and if a thorough and complicated chase on foreign soils is the sort of thing you like, this sample will probably suit you nicely."

New Yorker 30:135 Mr 13 '54 120w

"Narration ambles along lightheartedly, and the effect is highly amusing." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 21 '54 50w

"Jolly and jaunty job." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 20w

Spring'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p329 My 22 '53 120w

WALKER, ERNEST PILLSBURY. Monkey book. 153p il $6.50 Macmillan (N Y)

599.8 Monkeys

54-451

"The purpose of this book is to give a brief over-all picture of monkeys and their close relatives in the primate group and to provide basic information regarding their habits and care, to enable the reader to decide whether he really wants a monkey as a pet, and what kind he would prefer. . . This book therefore lists all the genera of Primates, except man (Homo), gives a brief description of the types of animals in each genus and certain facts that one may need in considering an animal as a pet." (Pref) The author is Assistant Director of the National Zoological Park, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:273 Mr 15 '54

Kirkus 21:688 O 1 '53 90w

Reviewed by E. M. Cole

Library J 79:62 Ja 1 '54 90w

WALKER, FRANK. Geography from the air. 111p il $7.50 Dutton

910.7 Geography, Aerial. Photography, Aerial 53-12391

"This book is addressed to the mature general reader. By relating the techniques of photogrammetry to the geographical interpretation of landscapes, the author has succeeded in making an understanding of this relatively new technique available to general readers, especially those with an interest in geography. The book is beautifully illustrated with approximately 100 plates of reproductions of aerial photographs. The photographs all depict British landscapes." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 38:91 N '53

"Dutton has been bringing out some excellent geographical studies, of late, and this latest is a pioneer study of a new field." R. H. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 8 '53 110w

WALKER, HAROLD BLAKE. Upper room on Main street. 191p $2.50 Harper

252 Sermons

53-10981

A book of sermons by the pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Evanston, Illinois.

Bookmark 13:130 Mr '54 30w

"These excellent sermons illustrate the ability of preaching to span the distance between the biblical word and the contemporary moment." Clarence Seidenspinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 F 28 '54 170w

Wis Lib Bul 50:62 Mr '54

WALKER, KENNETH MACFARLANE. Living your later years. 196p il $3.50 Oxford

618.97 Old age 54-5296

A distinguished British surgeon considers the biology of growing old and adds his own philosophy of aging. "He enjoys the double advantage of having a definite philosophy as well as a scientific training, and of having himself entered (though not very far) into the period of life which he is discussing." (Christian Century)

"Except for the urbanity of expression and the easy flow of language, the book offers little to devotees of medical science and the arts of the associated professions. The author has doubtless made many patients thoughtful, content, and happy. His words will win elders to a gentle philosophy without any sting in it." Haven Emerson

Am J Pub Health 44:947 Jl '54 320w

Bookmark 13:231 Jl '54 10w

"There is a certain type of wise old doctor who seems to be about the closest modern approximation to what the ancients called a 'sage.' I have a feeling that the author belongs in this class. . . His personal philosophy has a decidedly Oriental tinge, but it is presented in such a way as to be not unacceptable to the Western mind."

Christian Century 71:612 My 19 '54 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 My '54

"A book that stands on its own values."

+ Kirkus 22:90 F 1 '54 160w

"A distinctive contribution to the large literature of geriatrics. . . Highly recommended for the sensitive." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:556 Mr 15 '54 100w

WALKER, MARIAN C. Dahlias for every garden; photographs by Roche. 128p $2.95 Barrows

635.93 Dahlias 54-5377

Instructions for both beginner and expert on how to grow dahlias, where to buy them for different purposes, dahlia classification, control of pests, how to give a dahlia show, etc. Index.

Booklist 50:314 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:154 Ap '54 20w

"Dahlia enthusiasts—and there is a multitude of them—will discover helpful ideas and suggestions in this authoritative book, whether amateurs or experts." A. K.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 4 '54 60w

Kirkus 22:185 Mr 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 4 '54 60w

WALKER, RICHARD LOUIS. Multi-state system of ancient China. (Yale univ. Foreign area studies) 135p $3.50 Shoe String

951 China—History

"Basing his conclusions on extensive research in Chinese as well as European language materials, the author has completed a study of the state system in China during the Ch'un Ch'iu Period (722-481 B.C.), which he hopes will be useful for students of modern international relations as well as sinologists. Some may doubt whether such terms as 'sovereignty' or 'totalitarian' can be used to describe accurately Chinese feudal institutions of nearly three thousand years ago." Am Pol Sci R

"Stimulating study of an important and neglected subject. . . Despite [some] points on which issue could be taken by this reviewer, he feels very real gratitude to Professor Walker for giving us the results of his extensive and at times very ingenious researches in this difficult and little-known field. The notes alone are a gold mine of useful bibliography. It is to be hoped that in a future edition Professor Walker will make his material more available for reference by adding an index." H. G. Creel

+ Am Hist 60:189 O '54 400w

Am Pol Sci R 48:588 Je '54 60w

WALL, BERNARD. Alessandro Manzoni. (Studies in modern European literature and thought) 64p $2.50 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Manzoni, Alessandro A54-8889

A biographical and critical essay on Alessandro Manzoni. The author "exhibits Manzoni as the chronicler and celebrator of the humbler Italy which lies beneath the brilliance and conceit of the great, the elegant, and the learned world." (Manchester Guardian)

"For a flowingly composed and expressive appreciation of Manzoni as the artist of 'I Promessi Sposi' Mr Bernard Wall's sixty pages serve admirably." Cecil Sprigge

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 13 '54 120w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Brereton

New Statesman & Nation 48:273 S 4 '54 130w

Reviewed by A. J. Guerard

N Y Times p10 Ag 8 '54 370w

"Excellent little essay."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p330 My 21 '54 750w

WALLACE, EDWARD SECCOMB. General William Jenkins Worth; Monterey's forgotten hero. 242p il maps $5 S.M.U. press

B or 92 Worth, William Jenkins 53-12918

"This straightforward recital pays tribute to a 'vivid, naturally gifted, and superlative soldier,' who was born in Hudson, N.Y., distinguished himself in the Mexican War and was buried in Madison Square, New York City. Map, photographs. Notes, bibliography, index." Bookmark

Reviewed by C. G. Sellers

Am Hist R 59:1024 Jl '54 210w

Bookmark 13:184 My '54 40w

"The biography is badly proportioned and one-sided. Essentially, it is an account of Worth's battles and bickerings in the Mexican War. . . Mr. Wallace bases his brief for Worth primarily upon George W. Kendall's manuscript history of the Mexican War. Perhaps the biography will serve a useful purpose if it leads to a serious, objective reexamination, in the light of the new evidence presented here, of the quarrel between Worth and Scott." J. M. England

Sat 37:42 My 1 '54 320w

WALLACE, WILLARD MOSHER. Traitorous hero; the life and fortunes of Benedict Arnold. 394p il $5 Harper

B or 92 Arnold, Benedict 54-6033

A fully documented biography of Benedict Arnold by a member of the history department of Wesleyan University. The book analyses all phases of his career, as business man, soldier, and traitor. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:357 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:218 Je '54 30w

"This judicious, penetrating, well written biography explores every facet of this dramatic story with clarity and understanding." Clarence Ver Steeg

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 28 '54 290w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 14 '54 450w

Kirkus 22:58 Ja 15 '54 220w

"In his psychological analysis of Arnold and the motives for his treason the author has not penetrated deeply, nor with especial success, but the surface man, egocentric and impulsive, emerges clearly. Unusually good reading; recommended not only for special collections, but for general libraries as well." James Heslin

+ Library J 79:549 Mr 15 '54 160w

Reviewed by R. P. Sonderegger

New Eng Q 27:421 S '54 350w

"If Arnold's latest biographer does not yet show the ease and grace of a fully practiced writer, his style is sufficiently clear and his subject is so continually absorbing ■■ to carry you comfortably along. But what ■ title—"Traitorous Hero!" Certainly Mr. Wallace doesn't think Benedict Arnold was ■ hero. . . . Despite the present morbid climate of history, the subtitle, 'The Life and Fortunes of Benedict Arnold,' would have been the better-fitting title." S. F. Bemis

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 4 '54 850w

"It is a great pleasure to be able to hail the appearance of a sound biography of Benedict Arnold, one which supersedes all earlier full-length studies of that remarkable man. The extraordinary career of Arnold will doubtless lead to the production of more biographies concerning him. However, unless hitherto unexploited documents casting new light upon the great traitor are discovered, such volumes will add little to learning. Willard M. Wallace has written in 'Traitorous Hero' a life of Arnold as nearly definitive as may now be." J. R. Alden

+ Sat R 37:17 My 29 '54 800w

WALLACH, IRA JAN. Gutenberg's folly (the literary debris of Mitchel Hackney) il. by the author. 160p $3 Abelard-Schuman

817

54-7855

Collection of humorous parodies on modern writers—Proust, Steinbeck, Ashley Montagu, and others.

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p15 Je 6 '54 30w

"To sum it all up, the literary parody is a parlous art form, frail as a soufflé in a stiff breeze and subject to all manner of melancholy distempers, including the nuance manqué and the palpable over-reach. The man who undertakes it is much in the position of the parlor comic who goes into his act at the precise moment his wife announces that they should be getting home—if he scores, he does so in the face of determined opposition. In 'Gutenberg's Folly,' Wallach appears to have made it about half the time." Gilbert Millstein

N Y Times p26 My 23 '54 450w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 40w

WALLIS, CHARLES LANGWORTHY. Stories on stone; a book of American epitaphs. 272p il $5 Oxford

808.8 Epitaphs

54-5297

A collection of epitaphs and graveyard lore amounting to some 750 inscriptions from all the forty-eight states. Bibliography. Index of names. Index of places.

Bookmark 14:8 O '54 20w

"A delightful 'dipping-into' book. Reference librarians and other constant users will rejoice at the indexes of names and places and the good list of book sources. Essential for all public and general reference libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:859 My 1 '54 140w

"This collection reveals for the most part a good deal of illiteracy and a surprising lack of imaginative or ennobling sentiment. Interspersed among the inscriptions are short paragraphs giving bits of historical background and pertinent information about many of them. Written in less pedestrian style, this text could have relieved the monotony and pointed up the interest of the over 750 epitaphs listed."

Nation 178:428 My 15 '54 240w

Reviewed by Stewart Holbrook

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p2 Je 27 '54 500w

"Mr. Wallis has done an astonishing piece of research and a most able editorial job." Walter Hayward

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 29 '54 550w

"An entertaining bauble."

+ New Yorker 30:140 Je ■ '54 80w

"A curiously interesting book which reflects very well, as the author meant it to, the crotchety, cranky, highly individual American of the past three centuries or so. If today's epitaphs seem a bit less individual and far less startling, well, after all, so is today's society." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 My ■ '54 700w

"The author wisely maintains a neutral air, judiciously permitting the humor and drama to come forth largely unaided. He has divided the volume into logical sections and has supplied well-written background accounts for many of the inscriptions which add to the value of the book. Here is a consistently interesting, frequently fascinating, and intermittently significant collection of Americana." H. M. Hyman

+ Sat R 37:37 J1 31 '54 270w

Spec p657 N 19 '54 450w

WALLOP, DOUGLASS. Year the Yankees lost the pennant. 250p $2.95 Norton

54-11922

A novel of the future—a "swift, wondrous, and hilarious tale about the wildest year never to have happened in baseball—the year 'the Yankees lost the pennant'" (here given as 1958).

Booklist 51:42 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:9 O '54 20w

"A light hearted and delightful fantasy." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 12 '54 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p32 S '54

Kirkus 22:295 My 1 '54 170w

Reviewed by G. P. Slocum

Library J 79:2503 D 15 '54 40w

"So far as is known, there never has been a big-league outfielder who sold his soul to the devil, hit .545, averaged nearly two home runs a game and single-handedly beat the Yankees out of a pennant. But there is going to be one. . . . All this will be good news to baseball fans who dislike the Yankees and have been waiting for just this sort of thing to happen to them. It also will be good news to people who can't tell a ball from a strike but who can appreciate a novel that is as fanciful as 'Faust' and a lot funnier." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 S 12 '54 600w

"In an era when the handling of humorous fantasy is, with a dozen exceptions named Perelman, White, Thurber and de Vries, pretty generally humorless and almost certainly fantastic, 'The Year the Yankees Lost the Pennant' stands out as authoritatively as a .400 hitter would on the Pittsburgh Pirates. Through the extremely complex devices of writing well and refusing to make his point more than once, the author has avoided the excessive archnesses and the groaning in-junctions to laugh usually associated with a project of this kind." Gilbert Millstein

+ N Y Times p4 S 12 '54 600w

"Mr. Wallop is a writer of modesty and tact, but these are qualities that some of his readers might gladly trade for, say, audacity and spirit."

New Yorker 30:151 S 11 '54 90w

"There are some moments of fun and a few sections when Mr. Wallop's real ability to create characters and involve his readers in his story almost peep through. But the whole thing would have been much better boiled down to a few paragraphs and traded to Bennett Cerf for a good switch-hitter." Al Hine

+ Sat R 37:37 S 18 '54 270w

"Fun to read—even for Yankee fans." J. N.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C S 12 '54 170w

WALSH, CHAD. Eden two-way. 75p $2.50 Harper

811

54-9000

"A book of almost free verse by the Professor of Beloit College who has written several books along the lines of practical and analytical Christianity." Kirkus

WALSH, CHAD—Continued

"The poems are rather mediocre. . . . Not difficult reading, they exert a certain spiritual challenge."

Kirkus 22:419 J1 1 '54 120w

"This is a warm book which portrays a poet delightful and easy to read, for whom all knowledge, as it has always been, is fuel for the flame of patterned speech." D. M. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 31 '54 320w

"It must be noted that his most striking lines have a way of being preceded by lines of lesser impact—they often seem like mountains rising suddenly out of a barren plain. His experimentalism, too, on occasion leads Mr. Walsh perilously close to prosiness, or metrical imperfection, on the one hand—to shallowness of wit, or questionable metaphor, on the other. Sometimes, too, the writing seems so private that it is next-to-impossible to discover where the 'hints, goads, and lures' lead to. But never—or rarely—is it dull." G. P. M.

Sat R 37:32 N 27 '54 350w

WALTARI, MIKA TOIMI. Moonscape, and other stories; tr. by Naomi Walford. 310p $3.50 Putnam

54-10493

Five short stories by the author of The Egyptian (Book Review Digest 1949). Contents: Moonscape; An island of ice; The tie from Paris; Goldilocks; Before the twilight of the gods.

Booklist 51:64 O 1 '54

Reviewed by Warren Beck

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 19 '54 450w

"Five stories—four novella-length, one almost a short short—and all bearing witness to Waltari's rare gift as a spinner of tales. Unpleasant as most of them are, violent, sometimes obscene, they are never negligible."

+ Kirkus 22:453 J1 15 '54 170w

"Actually Waltari provides solid physical and social backgrounds—from Helsinki to Berlin—and characters as substantial as those who live in your block, though unfortunately most of them do not fit, any better than do the themes, into the short-story form as we know it. Otherwise, highly recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1506 S 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Stanley Cooperman

Nation 179:346 O 16 '54 50w

Reviewed by Peter Girvin

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 S 19 '54 650w

"Most of these stories of Mr. Waltari's end raggedly, in a smother of resignation to the transiency and meaninglessness of life, almost as if the author were himself weary of their negations and pathos. Perhaps that is why they seem so much like truncated novels, dwarfed by their own dreariness, chilling even to their creator." Charles Lee

N Y Times p4 S 19 '54 500w

"If Naomi Walford's translation captures the true quality of these Finnish originals one must conclude that Mr. Waltari's taproot is the same which fed Flaubert and Dickens. For here is the misanthropic idea, the unsparing portrayal of degeneracy, the morose exploration of human dilemmas from which there can be no escape. It's a black mood which sweeps the reader along by the cumulative effect of narrated details. . . . Mr. Waltari writes as a poet, exactly and feelingly, when he explores human motives. But it is poetry narrowed by a fixed point of view, hedged in by disillusion, with the warm colors ruthlessly pruned out." James Kelly

Sat R 37:17 S 18 '54 650w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 420w

"This time round, Author Waltari badly misses the ghostwriter of his best books; history."

— Time 64:122 S 20 '54 160w

WALTER, EUGENE. Untidy pilgrim. 253p $3.50 Lippincott

53-5417

A quiet story of upper class Southerners living in present-day Mobile. The narrator describes how his "little world took form before my eyes and played its little golden age, then scattered forever."

"The novel has its moments of great pathos and a vein of poetry, too; much superbly comic dialogue and comic incident. After the three-quarter mark, the story loses some of its bounce, but all in all it is unusually good fun." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:86 Ap '54 300w

Booklist 50:241 F 15 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:73 Ap '54 180w

"He follows this up by pitching his writing style in the authentic vein of this southern conversation he has overheard: seamed with overloaded sentences, run-in expressions, and all manner of vocalizations gleaming with fanciful flights of the stream-of-consciousness school. It's occasionally a bit tedious, but generally the interest holds up." Henry Caven-dish

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ja 31 '54 420w

Reviewed by Gerald Weales

Commonweal 59:653 Ap 2 '54 400w

"There's a friendliness in all the characters; the dialogue effervesces with spirit and imagery; there are daffy surprises as episode follows episode but this world of whims is elementally true."

+ Kirkus 21:713 N 1 '53 160w

"In relaxed, colloquial writing Walter avoids all the tobacco-road-chaotic-adolescent stereotypes; he hasn't left sermons to the stones—God forbid—but has himself given one, on security. Superb, casual imagery. . . . Obviously, a novel for the sensitive." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:146 Ja 15 '54 130w

"A pleasure to read and easy to forget."

Nation 178:204 Mr 6 '54 80w

"With all its timeless lushness, Eugene Walter has made his South as typically American as baseball, and as tuned to our age as jet planes and bobby socks. And even if his story, at times, is slow, it provides the opportunity to enjoy the delightful universe he has created in this promising first novel." Ferdinand Moltke-Hansen

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 7 '54 420w

"From the first line of the book, one believes him. One becomes more convinced as the story advances, for a zanier bunch of characters has seldom been collected between the covers of a novel. And yet, eccentric though they may be, it is impossible not to love them." Robert Tallant

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 31 '54 550w

"Sets out to be a parody of the recent forms of Southern fiction, but as it lacks wit, the essential engine of parody, it reads more like an example of the school that doesn't quite believe in itself." Anthony West

New Yorker 30:122 Mr 20 '54 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 25 '54 390w

WALTERS, ANNE, and MARUGG, JAMES KEATING. Beyond endurance. 178p $2.50 Harper

616.9 Infantile paralysis

54-6019

"Gripping autobiography of a thirty-year-old sports writer [Jim Marugg] struck down by polio. For months he had to live in an iron lung, first in a Los Angeles hospital, later in a special institution, then gradually he emerged to a more normal existence with his wife and small children. Through steadfast determination and a belief in the miracle of the human spirit he discovered something beyond endurance—and so is able to face the future though he may never have the full use of his feet and legs." Library J

Booklist 50:213; 293 F 1 '54; Ap 1 '54
 Bookmark 13:158 Ap '54 30w
 Cleveland Open Shelf p24 Ag '54
 Kirkus 22:91 F 1 '54 180w

"Book should be most helpful to polio patients and their relatives for its inspirational value and sound common sense. Highly recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 79:546 Mr 15 '54 130w

"Dramatic and moving record." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 21 '54 400w

"For his courage in fighting to live against high odds, for his courage in telling afterward of a struggle for survival which cannot but inspire the rest of us, Jim Marugg deserves our deep thanks. So does Anne Walters, his mother-in-law, who helped him write this dramatic story." Lucy Freeman

+ N Y Times p22 My 16 '54 450w

"One assumes Ann Walters wrote the story very much as Marugg recounted it to her, but she obviously does some of the thinking, too. She has written with skill, and with a simplicity becoming to Marugg's own honest and uncomplicated make-up. For the families of the nearly 50,000 victims of polio each year who search in the public libraries for 'the book' on the disease, this is it." E. D. Paterson

+ Sat ■ 37:21 Ap 24 '54 800w

Wis Lib Bul 50:129 My '54

WALTERS, MRS THORSTINA (JACKSON). Modern sagas; the story of the Icelanders in North America; introduction by Allan Nevins. 229p il $3.75 N.D. inst. for regional studies, N.D. agric. college, Fargo, N.D.

325.2491 Icelanders in the U.S. 54-8826

"The story of the Icelanders on the mainland of North America through ten centuries, from the late tenth to the middle twentieth. . . 'Modern Sagas' is in the main the story of Icelandic pioneering in the nineteenth-century development of the North American Middle West, but its first chapter reviews the first three centuries of contact, from 982 to 1342." Sat R

"Many Americans do not realize that Iceland is ranked as the most 'literate' country in all Europe. And many Catholics do not realize that Iceland, having been first evangelized by Irish monks, held fast to its religion, until robbed both of its faith and its independence by Danish invaders. The present book is concerned with neither of these phenomena, but it does convey an adequate knowledge of an important, even though comparatively small, element in our national growth—the fine contribution made by Icelandic settlements in North Dakota."

+ Cath World 179:320 Jl '54 140w

"Her interesting history is well documented, it has a memoir quality about it." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 4 '54 40w

Reviewed by Vilhjalmur Stefansson
 Sat ■ 37:18 Ag 14 '54 950w

WALWORTH, ALICE. Indigo Bend. 314p $3.95 Doubleday

54-5218

"Scene of this novel is Natchez and a plantation, Indigo Bend, twenty-two miles down the river. Alan Hamilton, shattered spiritually and physically, returns from the Civil War determined to save the family plantation—a sentiment shared by his courageous sister Louise, widowed by the war." Library J

"Because the author is at home in her locale—the big houses of the river, the smell and look of white covered fields at dusk, the air of a deserted street—'Indigo Bend' has flavor and authenticity. . . Her central story, tho now and then slow moving, has point and sustained interest." H. T. Kane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 7 '54 350w

Kirkus 21:746 N 15 '53 160w

"All the ingredients we have grown to expect of this type of novel are present—genteel Southerners, Yankee carpet-baggers, and Negroes struggling to adjust to their new freedom. Characters seem a bit unreal, types rather than actual people. Story unfolds slowly and will have a limited appeal. Recommended for moderate purchase by those libraries whose readers enjoyed author's Natchez Woman and Romantic Lady." H. P. Bolman

+ — Library J 79:385 F 15 '54 140w

"The most successful of this author's Natchez romances, 'Indigo Bend' projects its protagonists against an interesting period in Southern history, less familiar than the stirring days of war, but no less harrowing." Charlotte Capers

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 24 '54 360w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Spring'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54 240w

WANKLYN, HARRIET GRACE (MRS JAMES ALFRED STEERS). Czechoslovakia. 445p il maps $6.25 Praeger

943.7 Czechoslovakia

52-11993

"The work deals with the geography of Bohemia, Moravia-Silesia, Slovakia and Sub-Carpathian Russia. Treats of regional geography, climate, vegetation and soils, farming and industry, communications, and population and settlement. In addition, the history of the country is given in outline, and the many problems which Czechoslovakia now faces behind the Iron Curtain are clearly indicated. The book is illustrated with maps and photographs." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Although the all-embracing title would seem to indicate that this might be an all-embracing survey of Czechoslovakia, actually the coverage is limited mostly to a detailed survey of the physical geography of the pre-Communist Czechoslovakia and Carpathian Russia. In this respect Wanklyn has produced an excellent reference book. . . The chapters on history are weakest. . . The maps and drawings are mostly excellent and obviously reprinted from expert sources. But many of the photographs are really poor." J. S. Roucek

+ — Ann Am Acad 295:197 S '54 400w

"A scholarly and encyclopaedic work on a country about which there is too little such documented material, written by a Cambridge geography lecturer. . . The book will be indispensable to anyone taking a serious interest in the country, especially to members of intelligence services, diplomatists, and historians. Many of the maps and photographs are the author's original work." G. E. R. G.

+ Manchester Guardian p6 My 28 '54 200w

WARBURG, JAMES PAUL. United States in a changing world; an historical analysis of American foreign policy. 496p $5.75 Putnam

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy 54-10506

A study of American foreign policy and the influences behind it from colonial times to the present. The author was one of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's early economic advisers. Index.

Booklist 51:165 D 15 '54

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 17 '54 400w

"A valuable book for those who want a thoughtful approach to better understanding of the trends."

+ Kirkus 22:464 Jl 15 '54 280w

"Recommended." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 79:1588 S 15 '54 100w

"Effective critics of foreign policy in the Age of Suspicion must be (1) impeccably anti-Communist, (2) financially independent, (3) possessed of a distinguished record of public service, both military and civilian, (4) capable of objectivity regarding the official 'line' and (5) well-informed, keenly analytical, and able to present an argument with lucidity and eloquence. Among the few writers who fill the bill the ablest by far is James P. Warburg." F. L. Schuman

WARBURG, J. P.—Continued

+ Nation 61:389 O 30 '54 360w

"The Cold War and the continuing world crisis are the fault of the United States as much, if not more, than that of any other nation. Such is the impression one might get from 'The United States in a Changing World.' . . . In various particulars Mr. Warburg seems to this reviewer to be more lenient toward Russia than toward the United States." S. F. Bemis

N Y Times p10 O 17 '54 550w

"A grain of caution is called for in considering the book. Essay is easier than decision, and criticism less exacting than performance. This is something worthy of general understanding. Mr. Warburg's book does not clearly bring this out, though one must give the author credit for discussing the tribulations of the recent past without the accusatory pose, the recriminatory revisionism, characteristic of so much current writing in this field." C. B. Marshall

+ — Sat 37:22 N 20 '54 750w

WARD, ARCHIE, ed. Greatest sports stories. See Chicago Tribune

WARD, BARBARA (MRS ROBERT GILLMAN ALLEN JACKSON). Faith and freedom. 308p $3.75 Norton

901 Civilization, Occidental, Liberty

54-4459

"Barbara Ward is already known to millions on both sides of the Atlantic who have heard her lecture or have read 'The West at Bay' and 'Policy for the West.' Her new volume, 'Faith and Freedom,' restates some of the propositions she previously advanced, and it may in a sense be classified as the third of a trilogy. . . . The argument, of course, as in her preceding volumes, is the defense and justification of Western civilization and its values. Although she describes her book as merely 'one writer's attempt to wrestle with the angel of history,' she speaks for all thoughtful people in Western Europe and America who are troubled by the anomalies between Western ideals and Western practices." Sat R

Booklist 51:172 D 15 '54

"Closely reasoned on a presumption of ability to read for ideas alone, this is not for casual consumption, but for facing up to the need for a renewed philosophical base."

+ Kirkus 22:652 S 15 '54 300w

"Primarily for the larger public, college and university libraries." H. C. Whitford

+ Library J 79:2328 D 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 48:544 O 30 '54 360w

"Writers, especially political writers, usually have one book they want to write because it will say everything for them. With the book behind them, all else can be mere refinement or elaboration. Few writers ever actually turn out the book, but I suspect that in 'Faith and Freedom' Miss Barbara Ward has done it." John Cogley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 7 '54 700w

"The author's canvas is vast, but her lines are clean and strong. The shadings are careful and delicate. She writes as one who (although confessedly a layman in realms which confound the scholars and often confuse their audiences) has been at pains to familiarize herself with the best attested conclusions of the experts." H. P. Van Dusen

+ N Y Times p6 N 7 '54 1050w

New Yorker 30:237 D 4 '54 300w

Reviewed by G. G. Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 5 '54 550w

"To merit leadership, Miss Ward concludes, the West must accept the responsibility that wealth confers, must belie its detractors by continuing to correct internal abuses, and must aid that large fraction of the global population that live in economically retarded areas. There is no space here to analyze her sane proposals along these lines. The most intelligent comment a reviewer can make on a book of such wisdom, eloquence, and timeliness is: Read it!" Geoffrey Bruun

+ Sat R 37:21 N 20 '54 750w

"There is much both in the design and execution of her book which calls for warm praise. She is well read in history, economics, and in political philosophy, and she does try to combine fairness and clarity of factual exposition with an underlying feeling for the tragic and mysterious elements of human destiny. . . . Her essay is a warning, a political tract for the times. . . . If her metaphysical obiter dicta are somewhat naïve, and if she sometimes belittles the sharpness of theological conflict, she does at least bring out the sort of problem that is sooner or later raised when men think seriously, in the context of contemporary society, about the spiritual reality and nature of freedom." D. M. Mackinnon

+ Spec p714 D 3 '54 700w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas

Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '54 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p771 D 3 '54 2300w

WARNE, JAMES DOUGLAS. N.A.T.O. and its prospects. 110p $3 Praeger

355 North Atlantic treaty organization

54-6693

"A comprehensive and detailed analysis of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization by a British officer whose experience as staff member of Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers, Europe accredits him to speak with authority on the subject. He first sketches the origins and history of the Atlantic Treaty; next he explores the political and command structure of NATO. After estimating the military forces and resources of the Atlantic Community, he goes on to compare the Organization with Soviet strength. Finally he maps out a possible course of action for NATO to adopt in the future." Booklist

"Commander Warne's open-mindedness is revealed when he attempts to hypothesize on the crucial issue as to whether Soviet hostility to the West is based upon Russian traditional national interest or upon Communist ideology that views capitalism and Communism as incompatible. His personal ambivalence on this point does not, however, detract from the fact that it is heartening to find a military man deeply concerned about political objectives and political methods. Our own Chiefs of Staff could well emulate this author's example." A. J. Hotz

+ Ann Am Acad 296:164 N '54 500w

Booklist 50:393 Je 15 '54

"Timely is the word for this compact book. . . . The first two-thirds of his book will provide a valuable and compact guide to the facts about NATO and about Soviet strength in Europe for any who wish to be well-informed." J. A. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 3 '54 650w

Foreign Affairs 33:157 O '54 30w

WARNER, ESTHER SIETMANN. Seven days to Lomaland; with woodcuts by Jo Dendel. 269p $3.50 Houghton

966.6 [916.6] Liberia—Social life and customs 54-9603

Describes a seven-day trek thru the jungle to Lomaland, taken by the author-artist with a group of natives. The journey had two purposes: to establish the innocence of Comma, a native accused of stealing; and to re-establish the ascendancy of Zabogi, whose wife had proved "frisky."

Booklist 51:105 N 1 '54

